

DUE DATE SLIP*GOVT. COLLEGE, LIBRARY

KOTA (Raj.)

Students can retain library books only for two weeks at the most.

BORROWER'S No.	DUE DATE	SIGNATURE

ALL INDIA REPORTER

[Registrar of Newspapers for India—R. N. 1753/57]

Editor: S. APPU RAO, B.A., B.L., ADVOCATE (Madras).

57] 1970 DECEMBER [Part 684

CONTENTS

Notes on Case Law ...	1	Calcutta ...	513—560
Nominal Table ...	2—4	Delhi ...	241—272
Subject Index of Reports ...	5—37	Goa ...	129—144
List of Cases Overruled reversed etc. ...	38—42	Gujarat ...	257—288
Comparative Table ...	43—44	Jammu & Kashmir ...	177—192
... 177—192		Kerala ...	289—320
Supreme Court ...	2001—2192	Madhya Pradesh ...	257—288
Supreme Court ...	81—96	Madras ...	481—512
... 609—656		Manipur ...	81—96
Uttar Pradesh ...	401—448	Mysore ...	289—320
... & Nagaland ...	129—144	Orissa ...	209—240
... 417—448		Patna ...	401—448
		Punjab and Haryana ...	513—560
		Rajasthan ...	257—288
		Tripura ...	81—96

by Publisher

All India Reporter, Ltd.,

Head Office : Meadows House, Nagindas Master Road, Fort Bombay (India).

Local Office : Congressnagar, Nagpur (India).

For correspondence : —

All India Reporter Ltd., (Post Box No. 56), NAGPUR.

REPORTERS

Supreme Court of India

Shri Surjit Singh Chadha, Advocate,
Supreme Court of India.

Allahabad

Shri A. D. Prabhakar, M.A., LL.B., Advocate.

LUCKNOW BENCH

Shri Kashi Prasad Saxena, M.Sc., LL.B., Advocate.

Andhra Pradesh

Shri P. Sitarama Raju, B.A., B.L., Advocate.

Shri M. Ranga Raju, B.A., B.L., Advocate.

Assam & Nagaland

Shri Nagendra Mohan Ganguly, Advocate, Gauhati.

Bombay

Shri K. J. Kale, B.A., LL.B., Advocate.

Calcutta

Shri Subodh Chandra Basak, M.Sc., LL.B., Advocate.

Shri H. N. Ghosh, M.A., LL.B., Bar-at-law.

Shri Amiya Lal Chatterji, Advocate.

Shri Gauri Prasad Mukherji, Advocate.

Shri Janendra Kumar Datt, Advocate,
Supreme Court of India.

Delhi

Shri Surjit Singh Chadha, Advocate,
Supreme Court of India.

HIMACHAL PRADESH BENCH

Shri A. C. Mehta, B.A., LL.B., D. G. P., Advocate, Supreme Court of India.

Goa

Shri Shridhar Tamba, Advocate.

Gujarat

Shri Damodar Khimchand Shah, B.Sc., LL.B., Advocate.

Jammu & Kashmir

A. — JAMMU

Shri Bakshi Ishwar Singh, Advocate,
Supreme Court of India.

B. — SRINAGAR

Shri Baij Nath Dhar, Advocate.

Kerala

Shri K. V. B. Shenoi, B.A., B.L., Advocate

Shri K. A. Nayar, M.A., (Madr.), B.A., Hons. (Oxon), Bar-at-law.

Madhya Pradesh

A. — JABALPUR

Shri A. N. Mukherjee, Advocate.

B. — GWALIOR

Shri G. S. Garg, Advocate.

C. — INDORE

Shri M. P. Avadhoot, B.Sc., LL.B., Advocate.

Madras

Shri C. Hanumantha Rao, B.A., B.L., Advocate.

Manipur

Shri Kojam Robini Kumar Singh, Advocate, Imphal.

Mysore

Shri G. S. Ullal, M.A., B.L., Advocate,
Supreme Court.

Shri Avant V. Albal, Advocate,
Supreme Court.

Orissa

Shri Jagat Bandhu Kar, B.A., B.L., Advocate.

Patna

Shri Sushil Kumar Mazumdar, Advocate.

Punjab and Haryana

Shri Brij Mohan Khanna, Advocate.

Rajasthan

Shri Manakmal Singhvi, Advocate.

Tripura

Shri Monoranjan Chaudhury, M.A., B.L.,
Advocate.

NOTABLE CASE LAW

Constitutional Law

1. Can the members of legislatures created for Union Territories be treated as members of legislative assemblies of States for the purpose of electing the President of India under Article 54 (b) of the Constitution? (No)

AIR 1970 SC 2097 (Pt. M.)

Co-operative Societies

2. Whether powers of receiving reference given to Registrar, Co-operative Societies under Section 71 can be exercised by persons appointed to assist him, and can the Government confer on them such powers? (Yes)

AIR 1970 Orissa 227

Criminal Procedure Code

3. Can an Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner try an offence under Section 147 Penal Code occurring within the limits of United Khasi-Jaintia Hills Autonomous District? (Yes)

AIR 1970 Assam & Nagaland 130

Income-tax

4. The premium received from the lessee by the owner of a forest leasing out the right to cut and remove trunks of forest trees leaving the roots and stumps intact capable of regeneration is income in the nature of revenue receipt and not a capital receipt. See Head Note

AIR 1970 SC 2051

5. Where a partner of a registered firm earning agricultural as well as other income receives salary from the firm, can the whole of the salary be included in his total income under Section 16 (1) (b) Income-tax Act? (No. Only 40 per cent of such salary can be so included by application of Rule 24 of the Income-tax Rules.) See Head Note

AIR 1970 Mad 497 (Pt. A) (FB)

Land Acquisition

6. Whether the Land Acquisition proceedings commenced either under the Travancore Land Acquisition Act (1089) or the Cochin Land Acquisition Act or the Central Land Acquisition Act (as amended by Mad. Acts 21 of 1948 and 22 of 1953) in force in Malabar area can be

Land Acquisition (contd.)

continued under the Kerala Land Acquisition Act 1961 (21 of 1962)? (Yes)

AIR 1970 Ker 301 (Pt. A) (FB)

Limitation

7. Where a sale of tarwad property by the Karnavan of the tarwad to a mortgagee in possession is found to be invalid, does the mortgagee's possession become adverse to the tarwad so as to bar its suit for redemption after 12 years from the date of sale? (Yes)

AIR 1970 Ker 305 (FB)

Partnership

8. Whether a salary drawn by a partner for his services rendered to the firm partake of the same character as his share of profits of the firm? (Yes)

AIR 1970 Mad 497 (Pt. B) (FB)

Penal Code

9. Does threat to electors of serious consequences if they do not change their decision to nominate a certain person as their candidate in an election amount to an offence of interference with their right to vote at the election under Sec. 171-A, Penal Code. (No)

AIR 1970 SC 2097 (Pt. A)

10. Is the offence of undue influence at an election under Section 171-C, Penal Code committed where the members of the Legislative Assembly of a State are threatened with President's Rule if they elected a certain candidate to the office of the President? (No)

AIR 1970 SC 2097 (Pt. B)

11. Does mere carrying or wearing of deadly weapon amount to "using" deadly weapon within the meaning of Section 397, Penal Code? (No)

AIR 1970 Punj 532 (FB)

Wages

12. Does Section 5 (1) of the Minimum Wages Act confer unguided and uncontrolled discretion on the Government to follow either of the alternative procedures prescribed in Clauses (a) and (b) of that sub-section and violate Article 14 of the Constitution? (No)

AIR 1970 SC 2042 (Pt. A)

- Abdul Chani v. V. V. Ciri
SC 2097 (G N 446)
- Additional Director(I) Consolidation of Holdings, Punjab v. Raghwant Singh Curbachan Singh
Punjab 554 (C N 92)
- Alex Beets v. M. A. Urmese
Ker 312 (C N 52)
- All Mysore Hotels Assocn. v. State of Mysore
SC 2042 (G N 435)
- Annu alias Kallappa v. Sheshu Cundappa
Mys 318 (C N 78)
- Anthony Pillai S. C. C. v. V. R. Nedanchezian
Mad 509 (C N 149)
- Appanna Setty and Sons A. K. v. State of Mysore
Mys 289 (C N 69)
- Arjun Shankar Naik v. Sumitra
Coa 140 (C N 25)
- Ashok Singh Dr. v. Chief Secretary, Jammu and Kashmir Govt.
J. and K 184 (C N 40)
- Baidhar Das v. State
Orissa 220 (C N 73)
- Baldev Raj v. Pushpa Rani
Punjab 515 (C N 82)
- Bal Mukund v. Munna Lal Ramji Lal
Punjab 516 (C N 63)
- Bauribandhu Misra v. I. C. of Police
Orissa 213 (C N 70)
- Bhagwana v. Divisional Canal Officer
Punjab 539 (C N 89)
- Bhagwan Swarup v. Municipal Board, Ujhani
All 652 (C N 94) (FB)
- Bhagwat Singhji v. Kesar Singhji
Raj 281 (C N 68)
- Bhavani Devi S. R. Y. v. Commissioner, Corporation of Madras
Mad 507 (C N 148)
- Bhawani Shanker v. State of Rajasthan
Raj 269 (C N 63)
- Birakumar Singh v. Sagolsem Mera Singh
Manipur 81 (C N 25)
- Bishan Dass v. Union of India
Delhi 267 (C N 58)
- Certificate Officer, Berhampur v. Kasturi Chand Malu
Orissa 239 (C N 79)
- Chamma v. Laxmichand
Mys 316 (C N 76)
- Chandra Bhawan Boarding and Lodging, Bangalore v. State of Mysore
SC 2042 (C N 435)
- Chhotalal Vaghjibhai v. Vivekanand Mills Co., Ltd., Ahmedabad
Cuj 277 (C N 42)
- Chidambaram Pillai R. M. v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras
Mad 497 (C N 145) (FB)
- Colaco C. Mrs. v. Urban D'Silva
Mys 297 (C N 70)
- Commissioner of Income-tax, M. P. Nagpur and Bhandara, Nagpur v. Bhopal Sugar Industries Ltd., Sehore
Madh Pra 286 (C N 49)
- Commissioner of Income-tax, Punjab, Jammu and Kashmir and Himachal Pradesh, Patiala v. Kartar Singh
Punjab 558 (C N 94)
- Commissioner of Income-tax, West Bengal v. Indian Molasses (Private) Ltd
SC 2067 (C N 440)
- Commissioner, Sales Tax, U. P. v. Sugan Chand Shyam Lal, Agra
All 641 (C N 90) (FB)
- Debarchan Pradhan v. Bhagirathu Pradhan
Orissa 231 (C N 76)
- Des Raj v. Vinod Kumar Lal Chand
Punjab 539 (C N 95)
- Devaraja Rao J. v. Income Tax Officer, Anantapur
Andh Pra 426 (C N 69)
- Devinder Singh v. Smt. Shiv Kaur
Punjab 549 (C N 91)
- Dhanpal Singh v. State
Punjab 514 (C N 81)
- Dinkar Bandhu Deshmukh v. State
Bom 438 (C N 74)
- Cajanan v. Seth Brindaban
SC 2007 (C N 430)
- Cajula Abdul Jabbar v. Rayachoty Co-operative Society
Andh Pra 446 (C N 74)
- Cangadhar Shivalingappa Nagmoti v. State of Mysore
Mys 309 (C N 74)
- Canga Ram v. Union of India
SC 2178 (C N 447)
- Copalan R. V. In re
Mad 503 (C N 146)
- Copalan Thanthri K. v. Ittira Kelan
Ker 305 (C N 50) (FB)
- Coswami Shri Mahalaxmi Vahuji v. Shah Ranchhoddas Kalidas
SC 2023 (C N 432)
- Cowardhandas Rathl v. Corporation of Calcutta
Cal 539 (C N 107)
- Habibullah Majumder v. Nikhil Poddar
Tripura 93 (C N 26)
- Harnam Singh v. Mohan Lal
J. and K. 181 (C N 45)
- Harumal Dr. v. Smt. Sahjadi Bibi
Raj 272 (C N 65)
- Hasamad Mia v. State
Manipur 82 (C N 26)
- Hoffmann-La Roche and Co. Ltd. F. v. Geoffrey Manners and Co. Private Ltd.
SC 2062 (C N 439)
- Hussain M. A. v. Panchamal Vasudev Ganapath Kamath and Bros.
Mys 299 (C N 71)
- Inderjeet Singh v. Maharaj Raghunath Singh
Raj 278 (C N 67)
- Indian Detonators Ltd., Kukatpalli v. Indian Detonators Ltd., Workers Union
Andh Pra 432 (C N 70)

- J. and K. Co-operative Bank v. Shams-ud-din Bacha J. and K. 190 (C N 47)
- James Turner v. United States USSC 82 (C N 12)
- Jatindra Kr. Bhattacharjee v. State Tripura 91 (C N 25)
- Jose Fillipe Menezes v. Krishna Shiva Kambli Goa 142 (C N 26)
- Kaja Sudhir v. Principal, Guntur Medical College Andh Pra 404 (C N 65)
- Kandha Das v. Indumati Devi Orissa 215 (C N 71)
- Karanjia R. K. v. Krishnaraj M. D. Thackersey Bom 424 (C N 73)
- Kartar Kaur v. Dhan Kaur Punj 556 (C N 93)
- Kasturi Lakshmibayamma v. Sabnvis Venkoba Rao Andh Pra 440 (C N 73)
- Kiritsinghji Bhagwatsinghji v. Pharamroj Pirojshah Wadia Guj 284 (C N 43)
- Kirpal Singh v. Surjan Singh Punj 519 (C N 84)
- Krishnabai Babulal Mishra v. Smt. Laxmibai Madh Pra 280 (C N 47)
- Krishna Chandra Naik v. Sk. Makbul Orissa 209 (C N 69)
- Kunjayamma Kartaiyayani Amma v. Kunchali Karthiyayani Madakkavil Ker 289 (C N 48)
- Kunjbehari Lal v. Regional Assistant Labour Commissioner, Jaipur Raj 265 (C N 62)
- Lakshminarain Ramnarain v. Shree Krishna Gyanodaya Sugar Ltd. See SC 2041 (C N 434)
- Lakshmi Vilas Bank Ltd., Barug v. L. S. Pattabhi Chettiar Mad 487 (C N 142)
- Lal Mohammed v. Regional Transport Authority, Jodhpur Region, Jodhpur Raj 276 (C N 66)
- Laxmi Narain Ram Narain v. State of Bihar See SC 2041 (C N 434)
- Life Insurance Corporation of India v. United Bank of India Ltd. Cal 513 (C N 103)
- Lakhmi Chand v. Smt. Sukhdevi Raj 285 (C N 69)
- Madan Mohan Prasad v. Government of Bihar Pat 432 (C N 78) (FB)
- Madhavan Pillai v. Mrs. Katherine M. Pillai Ker 316 (C N 53)
- Madhava Rao G. v. Regional Transport Authority, Kurnool Andh Pra 419 (C N 68)
- Mahommed Ismail v. Ashiq Hussain All 648 (C N 92)
- Mahomed Mansour v. N. Abdul Cader alias Ibrahim Mad 510 (C N 150)
- Manicka Achari In re Mad 491 (C N 143)
- Mano Ranjan Paul v. State of Assam Assam 142 (C N 35)
- Mishra Bandhu Karyalaya v. Shivanlal Koshal Madh Pra 261 (C N 46)
- Monoranjana Chakraborty v. State Tripura 84 (C N 22)
- Mulchand Dasumal Pardasani v. Union of India Guj 257 (C N 40)
- Municipal Committee, Amritsar v. State of Punjab SC 2182 (C N 448)
- Municipal Corporation of Delhi v. Laxmi Narain Tandon Delhi 244 (C N 53) (FB)
- Nagin Chand v. Shadi Lal Punj 522 (C N 85)
- Nandu Noorani v. Humberto Cirilo D'Cruz Goa 143 (C N 27)
- Nathusingh v. Sukhrum Madh Pra 283 (C N 48)
- Navalkha and Sons v. Ramanya Das SC 2037 (C N 433)
- Netrananda Barik v. State of Orissa Orissa 227 (C N 75) (SB)
- Nishi Kumar Das v. Durga Charan Saha Roy Tripura 82 (C N 21)
- Nrusinghanath Deb v. Banamali Panda Orissa 218 (C N 72)
- Padam Chand Jain v. Chief Controlling Revenue Authority All 644 (C N 91) (SB)
- Patel Madegowda v. State of Mysore Mys 317 (C N 77)
- Phul Singh v. Union of India See SC 2097 (C N 446)
- Prabhati Chuni v. State Delhi 264 (C N 57)
- Premnath Sitaram Raut v. Dr. Leao Pinto Goa 137 (C N 24)
- Priyalal Barman v. State Assam 137 (C N 34)
- Raghunandan Prasad Mohan Lal, Bareilly v. Income Tax Appellate Tribunal All 620 (C N 89) (FB)
- Rajasthan State Electricity Board, Jaipur v. Shrikishan Raj 261 (C N 61)
- Ramakrishniah G. v. Dasaratharama Reddiar Mad 484 (C N 141)
- Ramakrushna Mohanty v. Radhakrushna Mohanty Orissa 237 (C N 78)
- Rameshwarlal Harlalka v. Union of India Cal 520 (C N 104)
- Ramji Lal v. Ram Babu Maheshwari SC 2075 (C N 442)
- Ram Kumar and Co. v. The Commissioner of S. T., U. P. All 650 (C N 93) (FB)
- Ram Kumar Jhunjunwala v. State of Orissa Orissa 233 (C N 77)
- Ramprasad Chhotalal v. Bai Reva Guj 269 (C N 41)
- Rana Hemant Singhji, Dholpur v. Commissioner of Income-tax Rajasthan, Jaipur Raj 270 (C N 64)

Rangapalli Basamma v. Gift Tax Officer, Hindupur

Andh Pra 434 (C N 71)

Rangayya Kananthan v. Covinda Chatra

Mys 314 (C N 75)

Sachindra Mohan Das Gupta v. Chief Commissioner of Govt. of Tripura

Tripura 94 (C N 27)

Sanahal Singh R. K. v. Minor R. K. Priyakumar Singh

Manipur 93 (C N 29)

Sankaran Nambodripad E. M. v. T. Narayanan Nambiar

SC 2015 (C N 431)

Saraswati Industrial Syndicate Ltd. v. Union of India

Delhi 257 (C N 55)

Sant Sadhu Singh v. State of Punjab

Punj 528 (C N 87)

Satish Chandra Chosh v. Smt. Sarba Mangala Dutta

Tripura 89 (C N 24)

Sayaji Mills Ltd. v. P. A. Bhaskar

Bom 418 (C N 72)

Seetharamaiah v. Ramakrishnaiah

Andh Pra 407 (C N 66)

Shan Manik U. v. Ka Brie Nongrum

Assam 130 (C N 32) (FB)

Shanti Ranjan Bhattacharya v. State

Cal 557 (C N 111)

Sharma D. S. v. Union of India

Delhi 250 (C N 54)

Shiv Kirpal Singh v. V. V. Ciri

SC 2097 (C N 440)

Shiv Saran Dass v. Union of India

Delhi 261 (C N 56)

Shree Krishna Cyanodaya Sugar Ltd. v. State of Bihar

SC 2041 (C N 434)

Special Tahsildar for Land Acquisition Kozhikode-I v. F. Shamsudin and Bros.

Ker 301 (C N 49) (FB)

Srinivasa Iyengar K. v. Noor Muhammad Rowther

Mad 504 (C N 147)

Srinivasan In re

Mad 512 (C N 151)

Sri Rama Reddy v. V. V. Ciri

See SC 2097 (C N 440)

Srivastava S. K. v. Vullubhdas Kalyanji and Co. (P) Ltd.

Cal 527 (C N 105)

State v. Chand Singh Mit Singh

Punj 532 (C N 85) (FB)

State of Assam v. Amalgamated Tea Estates Co. Ltd.

SC 2072 (C N 441)

State of Assam v. D. C. Choudhuri

SC 2057 (C N 435)

State of Kerala v. Very Rev. Mother Provincial

SC 2070 (C N 443)

State of Madras v. M. A. Noor Mohamed and Co.

Mad 494 (C N 144) (FB)

State of Punjab v. Dewan Chuni Lal

SC 2086 (C N 444)

State of Punjab v. Shamsher Singh, Sucha Singh

Punj 514 (C N 90)

State of U. P. v. Kunji Lal

All 614 (C N 88)

State of U. P. v. Sushil Chandra

SC 2191 (C N 449)

State of West Bengal v. Ruttonjee and Company

Cal 548 (C N 110)

Sudhakar Chadei v. State of Orissa

Orissa 224 (C N 74)

Sujit Kantha Neogi v. Union of India

Assam 131 (C N 33)

Sunil Roy v. Controller of Estate Duty

Cal 542 (C N 108)

Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, West Bengal v. Satyen Bhowmik

Cal 535 (C N 106)

S. Surat Singh J. C. 13018 v. Chief Engineer Project (Beacon)

J. and K. 179 (C N 44)

Thiruvanchan Sankaran v. Kunjipillai Amma Couri Amma

Ker 310 (C N 51)

Union of India v. R. K. Binodo Singh

Manipur 90 (C N 28)

Union of India v. R. D. Gupta

Tripura 86 (C N 23)

Union of India v. Sashi Bhushan Biswas

Cal 545 (C N 109)

Union of India v. Vasant Jayaram

SC 2092 (C N 415)

Vanajakshamma v. P. Copala Krishna

Mys 305 (C N 73)

Venkatarama Chetty v. Ramchandria Chetty

Andh Pra 411 (C N 67)

Venkata Narasimha Rao v. State of Andhra Pradesh

Andh Pra 438 (C N 72)

Venugopala Varma Rajah V. v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Kerala

SC 2051 (C N 436)

Verghese George v. Officer Commanding, T. T. W. A. F. Station Yalanka, Bangalore North

Mys 302 (C N 72)

Virsa Singh v. State of Punjab

Punj 525 (C N 86)

Vishnudatta Andhijanani A. K. T. K. M. v. Commissioner of Agricultural Income Tax, Trivandrum

SC 2055 (C N 437)

Yunnam Amudombi Singh v. Channabham Maipak Singh

Manipur 86 (C N 27)

Administration of Evacuee Property Act (31 of 1950)

—Ss. 4 (2), 9, 12, 56 (2) — Administration of Evacuee Property Rules, Rule 14 (2) and (4) — Power of Custodian to cancel allotment or to terminate lease is subject to restrictions — Powers are administrative and for managing properties — Powers do not get transferred to purchasers of such properties — Custodian's power to eject persons without notice under Section 106. T. P. Act cannot be availed of by the purchaser — (T. P. Act (1882), Section 106)

Raj 272 D (C N 65)

—S. 9 — Custodian's powers only administrative and for managing properties — Transferees cannot claim those powers — See Administration of Evacuee Property Act (1950), Section 4 (2)

Raj 272 D (C N 65)

—S. 12 — Custodian's powers only administrative and for managing properties — Transferees cannot claim those powers — See Administration of Evacuee Property Act (1950), S. 4 (2)

Raj 272 D (C N 65)

—S. 56 (2) — Custodian's powers only administrative and for managing properties — Transferees cannot claim those powers — See Administration of Evacuee Property Act (1950), S. 4 (2)

Raj 272 D (C N 65)

Administration of Evacuee Property Rules (1950)

—R. 14 (2) and (4) — Custodian's powers only administrative and for managing properties — Transferees cannot claim those powers — See Administration of Evacuee Property Act (1950), Section 4 (2)

Raj 272 D (C N 65)

Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Co-operative Societies Act (6 of 1932)

See under Co-operative Societies.

Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Co-operative Societies Rules 1932

See under Co-operative Societies.

Andhra Pradesh Rules for Selection of Candidates for Admission to the Integrated M. B. B. S. Course

See under Education.

Arbitration Act (10 of 1940)

—S. 45 — Arbitration contemplated by Section 29 (3) of West Bengal Security Act (19 of 1950) is subject to Arbitration Act Ss. 45 and 46 — See West Bengal Security Act (19 of 1950), Section 29 (3) (b)

Tripura 94 B (C N 27)

—S. 46 — Arbitration contemplated by S. 29 (3) of West Bengal Security Act (19 of 1950) is subject to provisions of Arbitration Act by virtue of Ss. 45 and 46 — See West Bengal Security Act (19 of 1950), S. 29 (3) (b)

Tripura 94 B (C N 27)

Army Act (46 of 1950)

—S. 160 — Army Rules (1954), Rule 70 — Revision of finding or sentence — General

Army Act (contd.)

Court Martial reaffirming its finding on revision and transmitting the proceedings for confirmation — Confirming authority is dissatisfied with the finding can refer the case to its superior authority but cannot withhold confirmation and order retrial by another General Court Martial

J. and K. 179 A (C N 44)

Army Rules (1954)

—R. 70 — General Court Martial reaffirming its finding on revision — Confirming authority cannot withhold confirmation and order retrial by another General Court Martial — See Army Act (1950), Sec. 160

J. and K. 179 A (C N 44)

Assam Agricultural Income Tax Act (9 of 1939)

—S. 19 (1) and (2) — See Assam Agricultural Income Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 30 SC 2057 (C N 438)

—S. 20 (4) — See Assam Agricultural Income Tax Act (9 of 1939), Section 30 SC 2057 (C N 438)

—Ss. 30, 19 (1), 19 (2) and 20 (4) — Best judgment assessment of escaped income cannot be made without notice under — Section 19 (2) or a notice under Section 30 SC 2057 (C N 438)

Assam Co-operative Societies Act (1 of 1950)

See under Co-operative Societies.

Assam Municipal Act (15 of 1957)

See under Municipalities.

Assam Police Manual, Part V, (1968-Edition)

—R. 188 — Case diary without pagination — Various stages of investigation not correctly entered — Diary held not in conformity with Rule 188 and created suspicion

Assam 137 C (C N 34)

Assam Settlement of Forest Coupes and Mahals by Tender System Rules (1967)

—Rr. 6 and 10 — Setting authority settling mahal in favour of A, not on his tender, but on price mentioned in B's tender — Acceptance of A's tender (after allowing him to raise his price stated in B's tender) is not in conformity with the Rules — Order of settlement set aside in writ petition — (Constitution of India, Article 226)

Assam 142 (C N 35)

—R. 10 — Settling authority settling mahal in favour of A, not on his tender, but on price mentioned in B's tender — Acceptance of A's tender after allowing him to raise his price is not in conformity with the Rules — Order of settlement set aside in writ petition — See Assam Settlement of Forest Coupes and Mahals by Tender System Rules (1967), R. 6

Assam 142 (C N 35)

Bengal Co-operative Societies Act (21 of 1940)

See under Co-operative Societies.

Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909)

—S. 8 (1) (as amended in 1965), and Sections 13, 44A, 85, 86 — Rules under Sections 85, 86, Rules 58 (d), 87 — 'Control' contemplated by Section 8 (2) — Control may be exercised by issuing general instruction or direction — It cannot authorise State Government to issue specific instructions about disposal of particular application (Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes) — (Constitution of India, Art. 14)
Cal 548 B (C N 110)

—S. 13 — 'Control' contemplated by Section 8 (2) — Control may be exercised by issuing general instruction or direction — It cannot authorise State Government to issue specific instructions about disposal of particular application — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), Section 8 (1) (as amended in 1965)
Cal 548 B (C N 110)

—S. 44A — 'Control' contemplated by Section 8 (2) — Control may be exercised by issuing general instruction or direction — It cannot authorise State Government to issue specific instructions about disposal of particular application — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), Sec. 8 (1) (as amended in 1965)
Cal 548 B (C N 110)

—S. 44A — Applicability — It cannot be said that section has no application at all to brewing licence
Cal 548 C (C N 110)

—S. 85 — 'Control' contemplated by Section 8 (2) — Control may be exercised by issuing general instruction or direction — It cannot authorise State Government to issue specific instructions about disposal of particular application — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), Section 8 (1) (as amended in 1965)
Cal 548 B (C N 110)

—Ss. 85, 86 — Rules under Section 85, Section 80, Rule 87 (3) — Renewal of brewing licence — Applicant is entitled to have application dealt with in accordance with law if conditions are similar to conditions when original grant was made, in material respects. (Obiter)
Cal 548 E (C N 110)

—Ss. 85 (2) (e), 86 (3) — Rules under Sections 85, 86, Rules 58, 87, 207, 208, 209 — Brewing licence is of more permanent nature than vending licence
Cal 548 D (C N 110)

—S. 86 — 'Control' contemplated by Section 8 (2) — Control may be exercised by issuing general instruction or direction — It cannot authorise State Government to issue specific instructions about disposal of particular application — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), Sec. 8 (1) (as amended in 1965)
Cal 548 B (C N 110)

—S. 86 — Renewal of brewing licence — Applicant is entitled to have application dealt with in accordance with law if conditions are similar to conditions when original grant was made, in material respects. (Obiter) — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), S. 85
Cal 548 E (C N 110)

Bengal Excise Act (contd.)

—S. 86 — Rule 87 (as amended on 23-2-1967) — Amendments made to Rule 87 do not affect application for renewal for the year 1966-67
Cal 548 F (C N 110)

—S. 86 (3) — Brewing licence is of more permanent nature than vending licence — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), Section 85 (2) (e)
Cal 548 D (C N 110)

—Rules under Rule 58 — Brewing licence is of more permanent nature than vending licence — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), S. 85 (2) (e)
Cal 548 D (C N 110)

—Rules under Rule 58 (d) — 'Control' contemplated by Section 8 (2) — Control may be exercised by issuing general instruction or direction: It cannot authorise State Government to issue specific instruction about disposal of particular application — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), S. 8 (1) (as amended in 1965)
Cal 548 B (C N 110)

—Rules under Rule 87 — 'Control' contemplated by S. 8 (2) — Control may be exercised by issuing general instruction or direction — It cannot authorise State Government to issue specific instruction about disposal of particular application — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), Sec. 8 (1) (as amended in 1965)
Cal 548 B (C N 110)

—Rules under Rule 87 — Brewing licence is of more permanent nature than vending licence — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), S. 85 (2) (e)
Cal 548 D (C N 110)

—Rules under Rule 87 — Amendments made to R. 87 do not affect application for renewal for the year 1960-07 — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), Section 86
Cal 548 F (C N 110)

—Rules under Rule 87 (3) — Renewal of brewing licence — Applicant is entitled to have applications dealt with in accordance with law if conditions are similar to conditions when original grant was made, in material respects. (Obiter) — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), Section 85
Cal 548 E (C N 110)

—Rules under Rule 207 — Brewing licence is of more permanent nature than vending licence — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), Section 85 (2) (e)
Cal 548 D (C N 110)

—Rules under Rule 208 — Brewing licence is of more permanent nature than vending licence — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), S. 85 (2) (e)
Cal 548 D (C N 110)

—Rules under R. 209 — Brewing licence is of more permanent nature than vending licence — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), S. 85 (2) (e)
Cal 548 D (C N 110)

Bihar Superior Judicial Service Rules (1916)
See under Civil Services.

Bombay Agricultural Debtor's Relief Act (28 of 1947)

See under Debt Laws.

Bombay Industrial Relations Act (11 of 1947)

—Ss. 27-A, 32, 33 — Union representing a workman filing application to Labour Court and further filing appeal — Withdrawal of appeal — Individual cannot reagitate grievance
Guj 277 C (C N 42)

—S. 32 — Union representing a workman and filing application to Labour Court — Further filing appeal to Industrial Court — Union withdrawing appeal — The individual concerned has no locus standi to reagitate the grievance — High Court cannot grant relief even under Order 41, Rule 33, Civil P. C. as this provision is not made applicable — See Bombay Industrial Relations Act (11 of 1947), Section 27-A Guj 277 C (C N 42)

—S. 33 — Union representing a workman and filing application to Labour Court — Further filing appeal to Industrial Court — Union withdrawing appeal — The individual concerned has no locus standi to reagitate the grievance — High Court cannot grant relief even under Order 41, Rule 33, Civil P. C. as this provision is not made applicable — See Bombay Industrial Relations Act (11 of 1947), S. 27-A Guj 277 C (C N 42)

Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951)

See under Municipalities.

C. P. and Berar Money-lenders Act (13 of 1934)

See under Debt Laws.

Central Services (Temporary Service) Rules (1934)

See under Civil Services.

Civil Procedure Code (5 of 1908)

—Pre — Interpretation of Statutes.
See also Interpretation of Statutes.

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes
—Fiscal statutes — Retrospective operation of amendment will not readily be inferred, so as to impose or enhance liability of citizen ex post facto — Rule applies even where statute is expressly retrospective in which case no greater retrospectivity than expressly given by statute will be given — This principle applies with greater force where transaction has been completed prior to amendment
Cal 527 C (C N 105)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes
—Penal statute — Amendment — Not to be construed retrospectively in absence of express words — Act legal at time when done — Cannot be made unlawful by construing subsequent amendment retrospectively — Such retrospective construction would be wider than immunity conferred by Art. 20 (1) of Constitution
Cal 527 D (C N 105)

Civil P. C.-(contd.)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes
—Rules under the Act — Harmonious construction should be striven for — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), S. 8 (1) (as amended in 1965)
Cal 548 B (C N 110)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes
—Harmonious construction — Legislative entries are to be harmoniously construed Punj 528 F (C N 87)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes
—Legislative entries — Words used therein must receive widest interpretation Punj 528 I (C N 87)

—Preamble — Judicial precedents — Principle of stare decisis stated — See Precedents
SC 2007 B (C N 430)

—Pre — Precedents — See also Precedents.

—Pre. — Precedents — Two consistent rulings of one High Court were preferred to one contrary F. B. ruling of another High Court
Orissa 237 C (C N 78)

—S. 2 (2) — Decree — Nullity — Since plaintiff did not institute lis, in proper sense and there was no defendant on record, decree is a nullity and has to be set aside
Mad 503 B (C N 146)

—S. 2 (17) (h) — Commissioner of Corporation of Calcutta is not Government servant — See Civil P. C. (1908), Section 80
Cal 539 B (C N 107)

—Ss. 9, 47 — Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Co-operative Societies Act (6 of 1932), Sections 51 and 151 — Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Co-operative Societies Rules (1932), Rule 22 (12) — Registered Society purchasing debtor's immovable property in enforcement of award — Debtor's failure to deliver possession — Suit for recovery of possession is maintainable — Section 47, Civil P. C. is no bar — Rule 22 (12) has no relevancy
Andh Pra 446 (C N 74)

—S. 9 — Suit for eviction of tenant — Suit need not be filed in Mamlatdar's court only, under Goa Daman and Diu Mamlatdar's Court Act but in civil court also — See Goa, Daman and Diu Mamlatdar's Courts Act (1960), S. 4
Goa 142 B (C N 26)

—S. 9 — Jurisdiction — Articles 59 and 69 of Procedure Code of Pondicherry — Fraud during liquidation proceedings on Foreign Court having jurisdiction — Fraud part of affairs of firm before its liquidation — Proper forum for seeking redress is Foreign Court or its successor court — Court of domicile will not exercise jurisdiction over matters which earlier were the subject of proper decision by a Foreign Court
Mad 510 (C N 150)

—S. 11 — Res judicata — Previous Rent suit under Section 228 (1), Orissa Tenancy Act — Decision does not bar fresh suit for contribution when defendants in fresh suit had not participated in Rent suit and had no opportunity of being heard and issue of fraud was not involved in the former.

Civil P. C. (contd.)

Orissa 237 A (C N 78)

—S. 11 — Res judicata — Principles of — Suit for pre-emption decreed with direction to deposit balance of pre-emption money by particular date — Delay of two days in depositing money — No objection taken either in trial Court or in lower appellate Court or even in second appeal — Objection to late deposit is deemed to have been waived and objection to framing of decree contrary to the directions in the judgment is res judicata. Punj 559 (C N 95)

—S. 11 — Res judicata — Issue of law

Tripura 86 C (C N 23)

—S. 35 — Defamation — Damages — Costs of the litigation cannot be included in damages — See Torts

Bom 424 G (C N 73)

—S. 35 — Costs — Appeal on two grounds — On one ground arguments going on for 22 days and appellant failing — Appellant succeeding partially on the other ground — Held if appellant had confined his arguments only to second ground appeal would have been disposed of in not more than five or six days — Hence appellant should pay four-fifth of the costs of appeal to respondent and bear his own costs. Bom 424 J (C N 73)

—S. 47 — Registered Society purchasing debtor's immovable property in enforcement of award — Debtor's failure to deliver possession — Suit for recovery of possession is maintainable — Section 47 Civil P. C. is no bar — See Civil P. C. (1908), Section 9. Andh Pra 446 (C N 74)

—S. 47 — Questions to be considered by executing Court — Validity of decree — Question as to, can be raised only on the ground that Court passing decree lacked inherent jurisdiction as to subject-matter or over parties arrayed before it —

Manipur 86 A (C N 27)

—S. 47 — Execution proceedings — Objection as to defect in plaint or application cannot be raised

Manipur 86 C (C N 27)

—S. 66 — Benami. See Benami.

—S. 73 (2) — Rateable distribution — One decree-holder attaching property not realising dues for want of bidders at execution sale — Other decree-holder attaching property belonging to same judgment-debtor, succeeding in realization of dues — Former decree-holder having knowledge of execution by the latter — Former decree-holder is entitled to share rateably the realization by the latter. Mad 504 (C N 147)

—S. 80, 2 (17) (h) — Notice under Section 80 — Commissioner of Corporation of Calcutta is not Government servant — Notice to him is not necessary. Cal 539 B (C N 107)

—S. 80 — Notice — Is condition precedent for maintainability of suit even for injunction. Orissa 239 A (C N 79)

Civil P. C. (contd.)

—S. 80 — Expression "any act purporting to be done by such public officer" — Expression refers to past as well as future acts of public officer — AIR 1961 Guj 85 and AIR 1960 Pat 530, Dissented from. Manipur 90 (C N 90)

—S. 100 — Plea as to pecuniary jurisdiction of trial Court — Appellate Court refusing permission under Order 41, Rule 2 to raise question of jurisdiction — High Court refused to allow it to be raised again in second appeal. Orissa 215 B (C N 71)

—Section 100 — Second appeal — Intention behind executing document — It is question of fact. Punj 516 B (C N 83)

—Section 100 — Suit for ejectment — Second appeal lies. Raj 272 A (C N 65)

—S. 107 — Evidence — Appreciation — See Evidence — Appreciation.

—Section 115 — Order passed by Single Judge in exercise of his revisional jurisdiction is not appealable under Cl. 12, Letters Patent (J. & K.) — See Letters Patent (Jammu and Kashmir), Cl. 12.

J. & K. 190 A (C N 47)

—Section 115 — Revisional jurisdiction — Suit for bare declaration — No lis — Only one party (plaintiff) — Decree as prayed for obtained — Appeal not maintainable, there being no unsuccessful party — Exercise of revisional jurisdiction was justified. Mad 503 A (C N 146)

—Section 115 — Trial Court holding that appointment of Commissioner under O. 26, Rule 9 would amount to abdication or delegation of powers of Court to Commissioner — By such erroneous view Court held declined to exercise jurisdiction to appoint Commissioner — Failure justified interference in revision — See Civil P. C. (1908), Order 26, Rule 9. Mys 314 B (C N 75)

—Section 115 — Application under O. 41, Rule 33 filed before appellate Court — Dismissal of — Appeal not maintainable — Relief is by way of revision petition — See Civil P. C. (1908), Order 41, Rule 33.

Punj 519 B (C N 81)

—Section 115 — Jurisdiction — Question of limitation — Decision though it relates to question of jurisdiction of Court, order of Court based on wrong decision on limitation or absence of decision not an order without jurisdiction. Punj 554 D (C N 92)

—Order 1, Rule 9 — Non-joinder of parties — Persons interested in suit impleaded — Persons not interested not impleaded — Suit cannot be dismissed — See Constitution of India, Article 226. Punj 559 A (C N 89)

—Order 2, Rule 2 — Suit for partition by co-shurrs — No objection taken by defendant for partial partition — Subsequent suit for partition of certain property left out in earlier suit on ground that existence of this property was not known to plaintiff was not

Civil P. C. (contd.)

barred by Order 2, Rule 2

Orissa 231 (C N 76)

—Order 2, Rule 6 — Consolidation of suits — Essentials Tripura 89 A (C N 24)

—Order 3, Rule 1 — Pleader can move application on behalf of client

Tripura 82 B (C N 21)

—Order 6, Rule 2 — Plea that suit properties were private properties and that there was no trust private or public — Case argued before Supreme Court that properties were partly of private trust and partly private property — Defendant cannot be allowed to set up a case wholly inconsistent with that pleaded SC 2025 B (C N 432)

—Order 6, Rule 2 — Suit claiming exemption under Sec. 16 (1) Provident Funds Act — Allegations of material facts in plaint without proof not sufficient to claim exemption as pleadings are not evidence — See Employees' Provident Funds Act (1952), Section 16 (1) Bom 418 (C N 72)

—Order 6, Rule 2 — Claim on entirely new grounds — Not sustainable — Claim implicitly founded in pleadings, is however, maintainable Guj 284 C (C N 43)

—Order 6, Rule 4 read with Order 7, Rule 6 — Particulars to be given where necessary — Fraud — Plea of, as a ground for exemption from limitation as required by Order 7, Rule 6 — Plaintiff must set forth particulars of fraud alleged — Mere general words such as fraud or collusion are quite ineffective to give legal basis for plea in absence of particular statements of fact

Andh Pra 440 A (C N 73)

—Order 6, Rule 17 — Amendment of plaint — Suit for eviction of trespasser from land belonging to Association — Amendment application to incorporate in plaint history of Association and details of acquisition of land by it from Government — By proposed amendments neither new case nor new cause of action would be introduced — Rejection of amendment on ground that it would change basic structure of suit held not proper Manipur 81 (C N 25)

—Order 7, Rule 7 — Events happening during pendency of suit — See Civil Services — Fundamental (6th Amendment) Rules (1965), Para 3, Clause (c)

Guj 257 G (C N 40)

—Order 17, Rules 2 and 3 — Case adjourned because Presiding Officer was on leave — Date adjourned is not for hearing of case — Decree passed on such date will fall under Rule 2 and not under Rule 3

Tripura 82 A (C N 21)

—Order 17, Rule 3 — After filing of plaintiff's evidence on commission case adjourned because Presiding Officer was on leave — Defendant absent on adjourned date — Decree passed is not one on contest — See Civil P. C. (1908), Order 17, Rule 2

Tripura 82 A (C N 21)

—Order 18, Rule 9 — Compliance with — Option to be exercised before other party

Civil P. C. (contd.)

enters evidence — AIR 1956 San 52, Dissented from Raj 278 B (C N 67)

—Order 21, Rule 35 — Suit for possession of vacant land — Buildings put up pendente lite — Removal in execution — Building put up prior to institution of suit — Remedy suggested All 648 B (C N 92)

—Order 21, Rule 92 — Sale subject to confirmation — Property does not vest in Auction-purchaser unless sale is confirmed — See Companies (Court) Rules (1959), R. 273 SC 2037 A (C N 433)

—Order 22, Rule 4 — Procedure in case of death of one of the respondents — Application for bringing L. Rs. of deceased long after limitation — Prayer for condonation of delay on the ground that appellants did not know of his death — Held that appeal had abated as ignorance of death of a party was no sufficient cause for condonation of delay

Punj 556 A (C N 93)

—Order 22, Rule 4 — Death of one of the respondents — Second appeal against judgment and decree in suit for possession by plaintiffs as appellants — Abatement of appeal against one respondent — Appeal became incompetent as a whole and could not be proceeded with as against surviving respondents Punj 556 B (C N 93)

—Order 23, Rule 1 (2) (b) — Withdrawal of suit — Want of notice under Section 80, Civil P. C. is a technical defect, and plaintiff ought to be allowed to withdraw suit with permission for a fresh suit

Orissa 239 B (C N 79)

—Order 26, Rule 5 — Commission to examine witness not resident in India — No reciprocal arrangement recognised by High Court existing between country in which witness resides and India — Party has no right to issue of Commission Tripura 93 (C N 26)

—Order 26, Rule 8 — Evidence on commission when may be read as evidence in suit — Party must satisfy Court that its case falls within ambit of Rule 8 (a) or must secure specific order from Court under Clause (b) — Where this is not done, suit cannot be decreed on basis of evidence recorded on commission. Tripura 82 C (C N 21)

—Order 26, Rule 9 — Object of local investigation under — Investigation is merely to assist Court Mys 314 A (C N 75)

—Order 26, Rule 9, Section 115 — Trial Court holding that appointment of Commissioner under Order 26, Rule 9 would amount to abdication or delegation of powers of court to Commissioner — By such erroneous view Court held declined to exercise jurisdiction to appoint Commissioner — Failure justified interference in revision

Mys 314 B (C N 75)

—Order 26, Rule 9 — Suit for partition and possession — Defendant's claim for improvements — Issue of commission — Directions to defendant and plaintiff

Mys 314 C (C N 75)

Civil P. C. (contd.)

—Order 26, Rule 9 — Suit for partition and possession — Defendants' claim for improvements on the suit properties — Claim can be decided by taking evidence by Court and matter is not to be ascertained by Commissioner — Local investigation by Commissioner however will be useful in decision of the question Mys 314 (C N 75)

—Order 29, Rule 1 — Reference of dispute to Registrar under Assam Co-operative Societies Act (1950) — Form of — See Co-operative Societies — Assam Co-operative Societies Act (1 of 1950) (as extended to Manipur), Section 85 Manipur 88 D (C N 27)

—Order 33, Rule 5 (d-1) (as amended in Madras and adopted in Andhra Pradesh) — Rejection of application on ground of limitation — Enquiry should be confined only to allegations in plaint — (Deletion of Rule 5 (d-1) and amendment in Rule 5(d) so far as Andhra Pradesh is concerned, suggested.) AIR 1948 Mad 433 and AIR 1949 Mad 591 and AIR 1956 Mad 271 and AIR 1956 Mad 677, Dissented from

Andh Pra 411 A (C N 67)

—Order 33, Rule 6 (as amended in Madras and adopted in Andhra Pradesh) — Enquiring into pauperism — Enquiry is confined only to prohibition contained in R. 5 which has reference only to allegations in pauper petition and not de hors the said allegations — Enquiry on basis of pleas raised by defendant is not permitted — (To avoid confusion and uncertainty it is suggested that Rule 6 as amended in Madras should be deleted so far as Andhra Pradesh is concerned) — AIR 1956 Mad 271 & AIR 1956 Mad 677, Dissented from Andhra Pra 411 B (C N 67)

—Order 41, Rule 2 — Point not raised in trial Court either in pleading or in argument — Not considered in appeal

Cal 539 (C N 107)

—Order 41, Rules 4 and 33 — Defamation — Damages — One decree against all defendants — Variation in appeal must be even against defendant not appealing

Bom 424 I (C N 73)

—Order 41, Rule 22 — Provision of Order 41, Rule 22 applies to appeals under Letters Patent (Cal.) Cl. 15 — See Letters Patent (Calcutta), Cl. 15 Cal 518 A (C N 110) —Order 41, Rule 33 — Defamation — Damages — One decree against all defendants — Variation in appeal must be even against defendant not appealing — See Civil P. C. (1908), Order 41, Rule 4

Bom 424 I (C N 73)

—Order 41, Rule 33 — Power of Court of appeal — Power may be exercised in favour of respondents or parties who have not filed appeal or cross-objection — Two suits for pre-emption filed by two persons — Both suits consolidated by trial Court — Dismissal of both suits — Appeal against, preferred by one — Other implied as respondent who filed application under Order 41, Rule 33 —

Civil P. C. (contd.)

Application is liable to be rejected — The rights and interests of both were quite different and distinct Punj 519 C (C N 84) —Order 41, Rule 33 — Union representing a workman and filing application to labour Court — Further filing appeal to Industrial Court — Union withdrawing appeal — The individual concerned has no locus standi to reargue the grievance — High Court cannot grant relief even under O. 41, Rule 33, Civil P. C., as this provision is not made applicable — See Bombay Industrial Relations Act (11 of 1947), Section 27-A

Cuj 277 C (C N 42)

—Order 41, Rule 33, Section 115 — Application under Order 41, Rule 33 filed before appellate Court — Dismissal of — Appeal not maintainable — Relief is by way of revision petition Punj 519 B (C N 84)

CIVIL SERVICES

—Bihar Superior Judicial Service Rules (1946)

—Rule 3 (2) — Amendment of Schedule appended to Rules — Upgradation of post amounts to amending Schedule — Can be done retrospectively — Publication in Gazette is not necessary Pat 432 C (C N 78) (FB)

—Rule 16 (e) — Seniority — Determination of — Officer working on special post — Upgradation of post — Officer deemed to have officiated in promoted post from date of upgradation — Recourse to upgradation of post is valid if done without violating any law or principle Pat 432 B (C N 78) (FB)

—Rule 16 (e) — Expression "may have been allowed to officiate continuously" means actual and continuous officiation and not fictional or notional one — Seniority cannot be given on basis of notional or fictional officiation Pat 432 A (C N 78) (FB)

—Central Services (Temporary Services) Rules (1965)

—Rule 5 (1) (a) — Temporary Government Servant — Notice of termination of service under Rule 5 (1) (a) without any adverse remark — Servants junior to him retained in service — Notice challenged on grounds that it is only a cloak for actual punishment of dismissal without giving opportunity and that it violates his rights under Article 16 — Held, such a notice could not be regarded as amounting to any type of punishment or even a stigma — Nor did it offend Article 16

Mys 302 (C N 72)

—Fundamental (6th Amendment) Rules (1965)

—F. R. 56 (b) (i) amended by substitution of new Rule 56 (a) — Amendment Rules made by President under Article 309, Proviso and Clause 5 of Article 143 — Amended rule only clarifies scope of original rules increasing age of retirement as amended by office memorandum which memorandum had come into force ex proprio vigore on their issuance

Civil Services — Fundamental (6th. Amendment) Rules (contd.)

— The new rule does not bring them into force for first time and does not bring about any new change in the matter of age of superannuation or premature compulsory retirement
Guj 257 F (C N 40)

— Para 3, Clause (c) — Pre-April 1938 ministerial Central Government servant falling within purview of Rule 56 (b) (i) of unamended F. R. as it stood on relevant date held entitled to benefit of 6th Amendment and is entitled to be retained in service till his attainment of 60 years of age—The civil servant held could invoke the new rule, which had come into force during pendency of proceeding in which he had claimed to continue in service upto 60 years of age under original F. R. 56 (b) (i) — Civil P. C. (1908), Order 7, Rule 7
Guj 257 G (C N 40)

—Fundamental Rules

—Rule 56 (b) (i) — Pre-April 1938 appointment of Ministerial Central Government Servant — Age of compulsory retirement raised from 55 to 58 years pre-condition being efficiency and physical fitness — By subsequent memorandum dated 31-12-1963 superannuation age raised to 58 years without annual orders and made applicable to pre-April 1938 servants — Government's right to retire servant after reaching 55 years age, upon three months' notice, not abolished — Pre-April 1938 servants put on par with other Government servants — Memorandum of 31-12-1963 created substantive rights and liabilities irrespective of the fact that the changes were not incorporated in F. R. 56 (b) (i) and were not gazetted and were not in usual form — Memorandums not being contrary to any provisions of Constitution, were rules under Article 309 made by the President
Guj 257 A (C N 40)

—Rule 56 (b) (i) — Retirement age extended to 58 years by Presidential Memorandum — Pre-April 1938 servant on leave preparatory to retirement on age of 55 years as per original rule when memorandum came into force is entitled to its benefit — He could not be said to have retired before expiry of leave.
Guj 257 B (C N 40)

—Rule 56 (b) (i) — Absolute right of Government to retire Government servant on 3 months' notice after he has attained age of 55 years is restriction on normal right of Government servant to continue in service till he attains age of 58 years — Order of retirement served on 28-12-1963 giving option to retire on 14-3-1964 date on which the Government servant attained age of 55 years or proceed on leave admissible preparatory to retirement — Government servant going on leave of 22 months as admissible — Notice held not in pursuance of Government's absolute right, not being 3 months'

Civil Services — Fundamental Rules (contd.) notice — No instruction for procedure for review issued — Order cannot be said to be one of compulsory retirement in exercise of Government's absolute power — Order is illegal and unconstitutional

Guj 257 C (C N 40)
—Rule 56 (j) (as amended by Fundamental (6th Amendment) Rules (1965)) — Compulsory retirement — Notice — Impugned order passed on 18-12-1963 — Amended rule cannot be relied upon to canvass the view that notice was given under Clause (j)
Guj 257 H (C N 40)

—Rule 56 (j) (as amended by Fundamental 6th Amendment) Rules (1965) — Power to compulsorily retire Government servant after attainment of 55 years is exercisable only if the authority is of opinion that it is in public interest to do so

Guj 257 I (C N 40)

—Indian Audit and Accounts Department (Accountant General Posts and Telegraphs) Transfer of Officers and other Staff Rules, 1968

—Rule 2 — Rules relate to conditions of services — Rules do not confer unfettered discretion in their implementation
Delhi 250 A (C N 54)

—Rule 6 — Validation of invalid promotion made under previous Rules — Validation is legal and so not mala fide
Delhi 250 C (C N 54)

—Jammu and Kashmir Civil Services (Temporary Service) Rules (1961)

—Rule 3 — Status of quasi permanent Government servant — Essentials J and K 184 D (C N 46)

—Orissa Administrative Services Class II (Recruitment) Rules (1959)

—Rule 6 and Regulations framed under Rule 6 — Reg. 10 — Reservation for Scheduled Castes — Competitive examination by State Public Service Commission — Public Service Commission recommending 33 candidates for 'A' Class posts and 53 for B class posts — Scheduled Caste candidate standing 105th in order of merit recommended for 'B' class post — Candidate appointed to 'B' class post cannot claim appointment to 'A' class post on the basis of reservation in 'A' class posts
Orissa 224 A (C N 74)

—Orissa Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1930)

—R. 15 — 'Reasonable opportunity' — Opportunity contemplated is same as contemplated in Article 311 (2) of Constitution — Compliance with each of requirement laid down in rule must normally be insisted upon
Orissa 220 A (C N 73)

—Rule 15 — Reasonable opportunity — Right of cross-examination — Delinquent not given opportunity of knowing contents of

Civil Services — Orissa Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (contd.)
documents which were going to be utilized against him in enquiry — Realising this infirmity delinquent called upon after enquiry was over to offer another explanation against charges — But enquiry not reopened — Held enquiry proceedings were liable to be quashed as delinquent was denied right of cross-examining witnesses in support of charges — (Constitution of India, Article 311 (2))
Orissa 220 B (C N 73)

—Punjab Civil Services (Judicial Branch) Rules (1951)

—Rule 7 — Who can dismiss — See Constitution of India, Article 311(1)
Punjab 544 A (C N 89)

—Punjab Civil Services (Punishment and Appeal) Rules (1952)

—Rule 9 — Termination of probationer's services for unsuitability — Regular enquiry not essential Punjab 544 C (C N 90)

—Railway Establishment Code

—Vol. 1 R 1713 — Disciplinary authority — Duty of
Cal 345 C (C N 109)

—Vol. 1, Rule 1713 (2) — Right of delinquent employee to get assistance of defence helper is statutory — Examination of defence-helper as prosecution witness — No substitute given neither employee made aware that he can nominate another person — Punishment order is invalid for non-compliance with Rule 1713 (2)
Cal 545 D (C N 109)

—Vol. 1, Rule 1731 — Order removing employee from service — Punishing authority not filling date of giving effect to removal order — Date filled in by other officer — Propriety
Cal 545 B (C N 109)

—Vol. 1, Rule 1731 (ii) (a) — Appeal against order of punishment to General Manager — Complaint about procedure followed — Appellate order not dealing with question whether procedure under this Rule was followed or such non-compliance resulted in failure of justice — Appellate order is invalid
Cal 545 A (C N 109)

—Rajasthan Service Rules (1951)

—Rule 17 (b) — Power of Government to suspend him of servant on his substantive post — Provisional transfer of Government servant to State Electricity Board — Failure to suspend him does not result in termination of services under the State
Raj 261 C (C N 61)

—Rule 18 — Government servant's lien on his post — Government if employee provisionally transferred to State Electricity Board — Loss of service cannot be inferred simply because Government failed to mention specific permanent post on which he could be retained — 1969 Lab IC 513 (Raj) Reversed
Raj 261 A (C N 61)

Civil Services — Rajasthan Service Rules (contd.)

—Rule 141 (as in force in 1958) — Bar on transfer of Government Servant to foreign service without his consent — In absence of express or implied orders of Government transfer without consent does not result in termination of services. 1969 Lab IC 513 (Raj). Reversed
Raj 261 B (C N 61)

Companies Act (1 of 1956)

—Sections 2 (7), 6 — A co-operative society is specifically excluded from definition under Section 2 (7) — Companies Act, under Section 6, not being applicable to co-operative societies, co-operative society cannot be classified as a corporation
Cal 557 B (C N 111)

—Section 6 — A co-operative society is specifically excluded from definition under Section 2 (7) — Companies Act, under Section 6, not being applicable to co-operative societies, co-operative society cannot be classified as a corporation — See Companies Act (1956), Section 2 (7) Cal 557 B (C N 111)

Companies (Court) Rules (1959)

—Rule 273 — Sale subject in confirmation — Property does not vest in auction purchaser unless sale is confirmed — Before confirmation Court must satisfy itself that price fetched is reasonable — Sale confirmed without being so satisfied — Confirmation is not proper exercise of jurisdiction — (Civil P. C. (1905), Order 21, Rule 92)
SC 2037 A (C N 433)

—Rule 273 — Sale held not by public auction and without due publicity — Confirmation of such sale — Prejudice is inherent — Court in appeal will set aside confirmation
SC 2037 B (C N 433)

Constitution of India

—Pre — Interpretation of Statutes. See Interpretation of Statutes.

—Art. 14 — Power conferred under Section 5(1), Minimum Wages Act is not arbitrary or unguided
SC 2042 A (C N 433)

—Art. 14 — State can fix different rates of minimum wages for different industries or different localities
SC 2042 G (C N 433)

—Arts. 14, 16 — Equality before law and equality of opportunity in matters of public employment — Determination of seniority of Grade I Accounts Clerks of Railway Establishment — Procedure for contained in provisions of Indian Railways Establishment Manual is not violative of Arts. 14 and 16
SC 2178 (C N 437)

—Art. 14 — Income-tax Act (1931) Section 297(2) (a), (b) — Classification between Clauses (a) and (b) — Being based on date of filing return, it is well defined — No violation of Article 14
All 623 C (C N 69) (FD)

—Art. 14 — Income-tax Act (1961) Section 297 (2) (f) and (g) — Classification

Constitution of India (contd.)

between Cls. (f) and (g) — It is based on date of completion of assessment — No nexus with object to be achieved — Clause (g) is ultra vires — (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All), Overruled; (1967) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) and AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 and C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), Dissented from

All 620 D (C N 89) (FB)

—Art. 14 — Equality before law — Rule 3 (a) and Appendix 1 of Rules for selection of candidates for admission to the integrated M.B.B.S. Course, in Medical Colleges in Andhra Area of Andhra Pradesh for year 1968-69 are not unconstitutional — Categorisation of several N.C.C. Certificates in order of preference is based on rational differentia and is not discriminatory Andh Pra 404 A (C N 65)

—Art. 14 — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (1954), Pre. Ss. 12, 19 — Act does not violate Article 14

Cal 520 C (C N 104)

—Art. 14 — Statute conferring unbridled and unguided power — It would be ultra vires Art. 14 — See Bengal Excise Act (5 of 1909), S. 8(1) (as amended in 1965)

Cal 548 B (C N 110)

—Art. 14 — Equality before law — Condition 7 of Mysore Foodgrains Wholesale Licence and Retail Licence — No criteria for determining what transactions are speculative — Condition No. 7 (i) in the licence is void on account of vagueness and uncertainty.

Mys 289 D (C N 69)

—Art. 16 — Equality before law and equality of opportunity in matters of public employment — Determination of seniority of Grade I Accounts Clerks of Railway Establishment — Procedure for, contained in provisions of Indian Railways Establishment Manual not violative of Arts. 14 and 16 — See Constitution of India, Art. 14

SC 2178 (C N 447)

—Art. 16 — Person not an aspirant to the post cannot challenge appointment as contravening Art. 16 — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Ker 312 C (C N 52)

—Art. 16 — Termination of temporary Government servant though juniors retained — Art. 16 if violated — See Civil Services — Central Services (Temporary Services) Rules (1965), R. 5(1) (a)

Mys. 302 (C N 72)

—Art. 16(1) — Equality of opportunity in matters of employment — Seniority list — Selection for promotion on the basis of seniority-cum-merit — List contrary to the rules governing seniority — Public servant in that list entitled to claim relief on footing that he is denied equality of opportunity

SC 2092 (C N 445)

—Art. 19(1) (a) — Freedom of speech and expression — Right is subject to law of contempt — See Contempt of Courts Act (1952), S. 3

SC 2015 (C N 431)

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art. 19(1) (f) — Kerala University Act (9 of 1969), S. 63 — Provisions of S. 63 which affect both minority institutions and majority institutions are ultra vires Art. 19(1) (f) in respect of both

SC 2079 C (C N 443)

—Arts. 19(1) (g), 226 — Statute prohibiting trade in dangerous commodity or activity — Challenge to constitutionality of — Grounds

Cal 520 D (C N 104)

—Art. 19(1) (g) — Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (1954), Pre. Section 2(i) (f) — Act or Section 2 (i) (f) in particular is not violative of Article 19 (1) (g) on ground of vagueness

Cal 520 E (C N 104)

—Art. 19(1) (g) — Collection of customs duty on exports and imports is restriction upon fundamental right, guaranteed by Article 19(1) (g) — Such restriction can only be justified under authority of law — Imposition or collection of customs duty ultra vires — Fundamental right is infringed — Refund can be ordered in writ proceedings

Cal 527 I (C N 105)

—Art. 19 (1) (g) and (6) — Right to carry on business — Condition No. 2 (a) in Form-B of the wholesale licence, is invalid in so far as it prohibits a wholesale dealer from purchasing foodgrains at places other than those specified in such licence for carrying on business

Mys 289 B (C N 69)

—Art. 19 (1) (g) and (6) — Right to carry on business — Condition No. 9 in Licence as prescribed by Mysore Foodgrains (Wholesale) Dealers Licencing Order, 1964, is reasonable

Mys 289 F (C N 69)

—Art. 19 (1) (g) and (6) — Right to carry on business — Conditions 3, 4 and 10 of wholesale and retail licences under Licencing Orders, 1964 of Mysore are not unreasonable restrictions

Mys 289 H (C N 69)

—Art. 19 (1) (g) and (6) — Clause 11 (d) of Licencing Orders of Mysore, 1964 are arbitrary, unguided and uncontrolled and violative of Article 19

Mys 289 J (C N 69)

—Art. 19 (1) (g) and (6) — Power of search under Cl. 11 (b) of Licencing Orders of Mysore of 1964 is valid

Mys 289 L (C N 69)

—Art. 20 — Penalty proceedings under Section 297 (2) (g) of Income-tax Act (1961) — Article 20 is not applicable

All 620 B (C N 89) (FB)

—Art. 20 (3) — Conviction on presumption arising out of possession of heroin — Accused's right to be convicted upon finding of guilt beyond reasonable doubt is not infringed — No impermissible pressure on accused to testify in his defence — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 114, Illus (a)

USSC 82 (C N 12)

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art. 30(1) — Kerala University Act (9 of 1969) — Validity — S. 48(2), (4) and (6), S. 49 (2), (4) and (6), S. 53(1), (2), (3) and (9), S. 56 (2) and (4), S. 58 and S. 63 are ultra vires Art. 30(1) in respect of minority institutions

SC 2079 A (C N 443)

—Arts. 31 (2), (2A), 31-A (1) (b) — Kerala University Act (9 of 1969), S. 63(1) — Is ultra vires Art. 31.

SC 2079 B (C N 443)

—Art. 31 (2) — Taking over aided schools of local bodies — It is compulsory acquisition — Article must be satisfied — Section 3 (2) of Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959) and Section 52 (1) (a) of Punjab Municipal Act are void AIR 1966 Punj 232, Reversed

SC 2182 F (C N 448)

—Art. 31-A — Saving of laws for acquisition — Punjab Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Ordinance (1969) — Punjab Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Act (1969) — Ordinance and Act are not violative of Arts. 14 and 19, as being protected by Art. 31-A Punj 528 B (C N 87)

—Art. 31-A (1) (b) — Kerala University Act (9 of 1969), S. 63 — Is ultra vires Art. 31 — See Constitution of India, Article 31 (2) (2A) SC 2079 B (C N 443)

—Art. 32 (2-A) (as applied to Jammu and Kashmir) and Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir Section 103 — Other remedy open — Order of confirming authority under Army Act — Order manifestly invalid being unwarranted by any provisions of the Act or Rules — High Court will not refuse to grant relief under its writ jurisdiction on the ground that alternative remedy available under Act was not availed of — (Constitution of India, Article 226) J & K 179 B (C N 44)

—Art. 32 (2A) (J & K) — Existence of alternative remedy — Effect — See Constitution of Jammu & Kashmir, S. 103

J &amp; K 184 A (C N 46)

—Art. 54 (b) — 'Legislative Assemblies of the States' — Union territories are not States — Legislatures created under Art. 239A are not legislative assemblies of States SC 2037 M (C N 446)

—Art. 58—Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), S. 5 (2) — Validity — Cannot be considered as curtailing rights under Article 58

SC 2097 N (C N 446)

—Art. 71 — Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), Part III — Validity — Not ultra vires Article 71 (1) of the Constitution SC 2097 G (C N 446)

—Arts. 71, 245 — Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), S. 21 — Validity — Not ultra vires on ground that rule-making power suffers from vice of excessive delegation of legislative powers SC 2097 H (C N 446)

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art. 71 (1) — Part III of Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952) containing S. 18 not being ultra vires Art. 71 (1), petitioners cannot challenge election of President on grounds other than those mentioned in S. 18

SC 2097 O (C N 446)

—Art. 77(2) — Authentication — Authorities empowered to authenticate, duties of Delhi 250 E (C N 54)

—Art. 77(2) — Authentication — Every type of Order of President has to be authenticated Delhi 250 F (C N 54)

—Art. 133 (1), Cls. (a) and (c) — Grant of certificate under Clause (a) on ground that subject matter of dispute is incapable of valuation — Erroneous, C. W. J. C. Nos. 197 and 234 of 1968 (Pat), Reversed

SC 2041 (C N 434)

—Art. 133(1) — Final Order — Meaning of — Question is not whether order has far-reaching consequence adversely affecting rights of parties but whether, by itself, it has determined rights of parties — Order in writ appeal reversing order in writ petition that delay in filing an application was not condonable is not a final order

Andh Pra 438 (C N 72)

—Art. 133(1) — Final order — Meaning of Tripura 86 A (C N 23)

—Art. 133(1) — Civil Proceeding — What is Tripura 86 B (C N 23)

—Art. 133(1) (c) — Substantial question of law Tripura 86 D (C N 23)

—Arts. 134(1) (c) and 136(1) — Point of law not argued before High Court — Cannot be raised for first time before Supreme Court in appeal under Art. 134 (1) (c) though it can be raised in appeal under Art. 136(1) — High Court cannot grant certificate for urging the point not argued before it

Manipur 82 A (C N 26)

—Art. 134(1) (c) — Leave to appeal — Power to grant Certificate — Nature and exercise of Manipur 82 B (C N 26)

—Arts. 136 and 226 — Appeal to Supreme Court — Ad interim injunction granted by High Court in petition challenging validity of order of State Government regarding sale of liquor — High Court reserving liberty of State to move High Court for vacating order — Petition by State for vacating order — High Court directing all remaining applications in proceedings to be listed for hearing and confirming its previous order granting stay — Held that the order of the High Court granting ad interim injunction was purely temporary made with a view to investigate whether the petitioners had right to the relief claimed and the appeal by the State Government was not maintainable. SC 2191 (C N 449)

—Art. 135 (1) — Powers under Arts. 136 (1) and 134(1) (c) — Distinction between — See Constitution of India, Art 134 (1) (c) Manipur 82 A (C N 26)

Constitution of India (contd.)

 —Art. 141 — Precedent — High Court not competent to distinguish a Supreme Court decision on facts — Doctrine of "Obiter per incuriam" (Obiter of the Court) or distinguishing case on facts applies to concurrent courts

Guj 277 D (C N 42)

—Art. 162 — Power to issue writs — Writ of Quo Warranto — Rules referable to article relating to appointment not having force of law — Violation of, cannot sustain writ — See Constitution of India, Art. 226 Ker 312 A (C N 52)

—Art. 162 — Power under Art. 162 is subject to Art. 235 — See Constitution of India, Art. 235 Pat 432 H (C N 78)

—Art. 166 (1) — Conduct of Government business — Officer working on special post — Upgradation of that post — Order need not be expressed in the name of Governor Pat 432 E (C N 78) (FB)

—Art. 226 — Natural Justice — Principles of — See Natural Justice

—Art. 226 — Natural justice — Principles apply to exercise of administrative power as well SC 2042 C (C N 435)

—Art. 226 — Notification under Section 334(4) of Assam Municipal Act — It can be challenged on ground of absence of authority or that it was made for collateral purpose — See Municipalities—Assam Municipal Act (1956) (15 of 1957), S. 334 (1) & (4) SC 2072 A (C N 441)

—Art. 226 — "Speculative petition" — Objection not raised to preliminary notification under Section 334 (1) of Assam Municipal Act signifying intention to provide improved arrangements in a specified area — Petition challenging validity of notification filed after years of constitution of Notified Town Committee and only after tax was demanded — Held, that it was a speculative petition and the High Court was in error in allowing it and declaring the notification as illegal. Decision of High Court of Assam, Reversed SC 2072 B (C N 441)

—Art. 226 — Order of High Court granting ad interim injunction — Appeal to Supreme Court — Not maintainable — See Constitution of India, Art. 136 SC 2191 (C N 449)

—Art. 226 — Extraordinary jurisdiction — Exercise of — Writ petition challenging penalty proceedings — Validity of assessment order cannot be challenged — Statutory remedy cannot be allowed to be by-passed — Income-tax Act (1922), Section 66 All 620 A (C N 89) (FB)

—Art. 226 — Natural justice — Institution of penalty proceedings under inapplicable or unconstitutional law — Proceedings must be quashed — Plea that penalty imposed is less than minimum prescribed under law is not tenable —

Constitution of India (contd.)

Income-tax Act (1961), S. 297(2) (g) All 620 F (C N 89) (FB)

—Art. 226 — Regional Transport Authority abusing its powers by granting temporary permits in quick succession under Motor Vehicles Act — Its action is liable to be corrected by grant of writ — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 62(c)

Andh Pra 419 B (C N 68)

—Art. 226 — Discretionary power vested in settling authority to accept or refuse tender under Assam Settlement of Forest Coupes and Mahals by Tender System Rules 1967 — Settlement not contemplated by the Rules — Settlement set aside in writ petition — See Assam Settlement of Forest Coupes and Mahals by Tender System Rules (1967), R. 6

Assam 142 (C N 35)

—Art. 226 — Petition, under — Omission to state in petition about existence or prosecution of alternative remedy — Effect Cal 520 A (C N 104)

—Art. 226 — Petition under Article 226 — Challenge to unconstitutionality of Act — Locus standi of petitioner to maintain petition Cal 520 B (C N 104)

—Art. 226 — Grounds to challenge constitutionality of statute — See Constitution of India, Art. 19(1) (g)

Cal 520 D (C N 104)

—Art. 226 — Findings arrived at by Customs Authorities in the absence of procedural irregularity cannot be disturbed in writ petition Cal 527 E (C N 105)

—Art. 226 — Relief under — Government passing certain order without jurisdiction — Reliance cannot be placed on undertaking given by petitioner to abide by decision of Government — Petitioner is not thereby disentitled to relief under Article 226 Cal 548 G (C N 110)

—Art. 226 — Who can apply — Person aggrieved — Writ petition by mere dealers in katha challenging validity of Rule prescribing certain standards of quality for manufacture of katha on ground that they were impossible of attainment — Petitioners cannot make such grievance which concerns only persons engaged in manufacture of katha

Delhi 267 B (C N 58)

—Art. 226 — Other remedy not availed of — No appeal filed against order granting temporary permit — Writ petition to quash order on ground of illegality apparent on face of record — Writ petition is maintainable even if remedy of appeal is not availed of Goa 137 B (C N 24)

—Art. 226 — Natural justice — Judge or adjudicator with a bias is disqualified Guj 277 B (C N 42)

—Art. 226 — Other remedy open — Order of confirming authority under Army Act — Order manifestly invalid being unwarranted by any provisions of the Act or Rules — High Court will not refuse to grant relief under its writ jurisdiction on the ground that alternative remedy available under Act was not availed of — See Constitution of India, Art 32(2A) (as applied to Jammu and Kashmir) J & K 179 B (C N 44)

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art 226 — Writ of quo warranto — Rules relating to appointment not having force of law — Violation of, cannot sustain writ — (Constitution of India, Article 162) Ker 312 A (C N 52)

—Art 226 — Power to issue writs — New grounds — Motion for writ of Quo Warranto — Illegality of appointment on the ground of contravention of Article 16 not put forward in the petition cannot be urged at the final hearing

Ker 312 B (C N 52)
—Art 225 — Quo Warranto — Person not an aspirant to the post cannot challenge appointment as contravening Article 16 — (Constitution of India Art 16)

Ker 312 C (C N 52)
—Art 226 — Quo Warranto — Order of appointment though violating Article 16 constitutes sufficient answer to motion for writ — Reason is possession of public office under Government order is not usurpation of office for which alone Quo Warranto lies — Hence ground under Art. 16, though it may be heard in motion for certiorari or prohibition cannot be heard in Quo Warranto Ker 312 D (C N 52)

—Art. 226 — New point on certain facts not mentioned in petition — Though ordinarily such contention not to be permitted, accuracy of factual basis of statement not being disputed it was allowed to be urged

Orissa 213 A (C N 70)
—Art. 226 — New plea — Omission to raise jurisdictional point before departmental authority — No bar to urging that point in writ proceedings

Punj 525 B (C N 86)
—Art. 226 — Joinder of parties — Only persons really interested need be joined — Allegation that certain right-holders whose fields would be irrigated by disputed water-course not joined as parties — No record before Court to verify the fact — Petition cannot be dismissed

Punj 539 A (C N 89)
—Art. 226 — Claim for dismissal of petition on ground of suppression of facts — Prior suit on similar grounds filed by petitioner against one of the respondents in petition and others asking for a different relief — Non-mention of suit in petition does not amount to suppression

Punj 539 B (C N 89)
—Art. 226 — Certiorari — Order without jurisdiction — Decision on question of limitation though relating to jurisdiction of deciding court, an order passed on basis of erroneous decision about limitation or without suo motu noticing bar of limitation is not an order without jurisdiction — Order not a nullity so as to be liable to be

Constitution of India (contd.)

quashed in certiorari

Punj 551 A (C N 92)
—Art 226 — Writ of Certiorari — Order passed without considering question of limitation — Order not liable to be set aside on ground of relative application having been filed beyond limitation

Punj 554 B (C N 92)
—Art 226 — Writ of certiorari — New point — Question of limitation not raised before tribunal — Question cannot be raised for first time in writ petition

Punj 554 C (C N 92)
—Art 226 — Certiorari — Tribunal's order on question of limitation, when liable to be quashed

Punj 554 E (C N 92)
—Art. 226 — New point — New ground requiring investigation of facts cannot be raised Raj 276 A (C N 66)

—Art 226 — Limitation — Limit by which party can come to writ court is date by which he could have brought suit for relief claimed in petition

Tripura 94 A (C N 27)
—Art 227 — Section 104 of Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir corresponds to Art 227 — See Letters Patent (Jammu & Kashmir), Cl. 12

J & K 190 A (C N 47)
—Art. 233 — Post of Additional District and Sessions Judge although not subordinate to, is of grade lower than that of District and Sessions Judge — Vacancy in post of District Judge cannot be equated with vacancy in post of Additional District Judge Pat 432 F (C N 78) (FB)

—Arts 233, 235 — Appointment of District Judge — Power vests in Governor — Prior consultation with High Court necessary Pat 432 G (C N 78) (FB)

—Art. 233 — Word "posting" — Meaning of Pat 432 I (C N 78) (FB)

—Art. 235 — Disciplinary proceedings against judicial officers — High Court alone is competent to hold enquiry — Appointment of High Court Judge as enquiring authority by Governor though made at instance of Chief Justice could not be regarded even in substance an appointment made at instance of High Court when under resolution of High Court only full Court was empowered to make such appointment — Report and punishment recommended also not considered by High Court — Punishment based on report of such enquiry is void

Mys 309 A (C N 74)
—Art 235 — Appointment of District Judges — Power vests in Governor and not in High Court — See Constitution of India Art. 233 Pat 432 G (C N 78)

—Arts 235, 161 — Seniority of officers employed in State Judicial Service — Determination of — Power vests solely in High Court — Exercise of power is subject to Rules framed under Article 304

Constitution of India (contd.)

— State Government cannot fix seniority in exercise of power under Article 162 as it is subject to power under Article 235

Pat 432 H (C N 78) (FB)

—Art. 245 — See Constitution of India, Art. 71

SC 2097 H (C N 446)

—Art. 246 — Punjab Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Ordinance (1969) — Punjab Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Act (1969) — Act and Ordinance are not a colourable exercise of power

Punj 528 A (C N 87)

—Art. 246 — State Legislature can regulate functioning of Co-operative Societies engaged in business of banking by virtue of Entry No. 32 of List 2 of Sch. 7 — Entries 43 and 45 of List 1 of Sch. 7 not attracted

Punj 528 C (C N 87)

—Art. 304 (a) — Tax on goods imported — Permissibility

Mad 494 B (C N 144) (FB)

—Art. 309 — Rule-making powers — President and the Legislatures can respectively make rules and statutes to validate retrospectively invalid administrative actions and invalid statutes

Delhi 250 B (C N 54)

—Art. 309 — Rule-making powers not restricted to rules which are administrative in nature — Authentication of statutory instruments can also be done under Art. 77(2)

Delhi 250 D (C N 54)

—Art. 309, Proviso — Framing of rules — Power of authority under Proviso — Can be exercised both prospectively and retrospectively in absence of appropriate legislation

Pat 432 D (C N 78) (FB)

—Art. 311 — Departmental enquiry against Police Sub-Inspector who was allowed to cross efficiency bar — Charges of inefficiency and dishonesty — Charges based on adverse confidential reports of superior Officers — Reports relating to period earlier than the year in which he was allowed to cross efficiency bar should not be considered in enquiry

SC 2086 B (C N 444)

—Art. 311 — Temporary Railway servant having no lien on post — Termination of service in exercise of power under R. 149 Railway Establishment Code — Nothing to show that any slur or stigma was cast on petitioner — Order is valid

Assam 131 E (C N 33)

—Art. 311 — Notice terminating temporary Government servant — Validity — See Civil Services — Central Services (Temporary Services) Rules (1965), Rule 5(1) (a)

Mvs 302 (C N 72)

—Art. 311 — Disciplinary proceedings against judicial officers — High Court alone competent to hold enquiry — See Constitution of India, Art. 235

Mvs 309 A (C N 74)

—Art. 311 — Disciplinary proceedings — Natural justice — In the absence of a

(December) 1970 Indexes/2

Constitution of India (contd.)

rule successor Enquiring Officer can submit report on evidence recorded by his predecessors — No violation of principles of natural justice — AIR 1961 Guj 63, Dissented from Orissa 213 B (C N 70)

—Art. 311(1) — Termination of service of Subordinate Judge appointed by Government in the name of the Governor — Chief Minister can dismiss because he is not subordinate to the appointing authority

Punj 544 A (C N 90)

—Art. 311 (2) — Departmental enquiry — Dismissal of Police Sub-Inspector — Charges of inefficiency and dishonesty based on adverse reports of superior Officers — Such Officers, though available, not examined to enable Police Sub-Inspector to cross-examine them — Refusal of the right to examine such witnesses amounted to denial of reasonable opportunity of showing cause against the action of dismissal — Dismissal not legal

SC 2086 A (C N 444)

—Art. 311(2) — Duty of punishing authority under Article 311(2) and under Rule 1713 of Railway Establishment Code compared — See Railway Establishment Code, Vol. I, R. 1713

Cal 545 C (C N 109)

—Art. 311(2) — Illegal order of compulsory retirement in apparent exercise of Government's absolute power — Order mentioning unsuitability as reason in attempt to bring order within terms of Fundamental Rules — Compulsory retirement however, has no stigma attached to it — Held no express words in order throwing any stigma — Order not one of 'removal' within meaning of Art. 311(2)

Guj 257 D (C N 40)

—Art. 311(2) — Permanent Government servant — Compulsory retirement — Three months' notice as required by rules not given — Notice held illegal and ineffective — Defect cannot be cured by paying three months' salary in lieu of notice, since this would amount to introducing concept of relationship between the master and servant — Employee being a permanent Government servant has right to security of his service tenure as guaranteed by Constitution, subject of course to the rule of superannuation and rule of compulsory retirement — Moreover there is no service rule that upon payment of salary in lieu of notice a servant can be compulsorily retired

Guj 257 E (C N 40)

—Art. 311 (2) — Reasonable opportunity — Right of cross-examination — Delinquent not given opportunity of knowing contents of documents which were going to be utilised against him in enquiry — Realising this infirmity delinquent called upon after enquiry was over to offer another explanation against charges — But enquiry not reopened —

Constitution of India (contd.)

field enquiry proceedings were liable to be quashed as delinquent was denied right of cross-examining witnesses in support of charges — See Civil Services — Orissa Civil Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1930), R. 15

Orissa 220 B (C N 73)
— Art. 311 (2) — Reasonable opportunity — What is Orissa 220 C (C N 73)

— Art. 311 (2) — Reasonable opportunity — Representation by lawyer — Delinquent not having knowledge relating to cross-examination — Charges serious and documents bulky and many — Witnesses in support of charges too many — Held disciplinary authority acted contrary to spirit of Article 311(2) in denying representation by lawyer at enquiry, enquiry was thus vitiated

Orissa 220 D (C N 73)
— Art. 311(2) — Show cause notice — Termination of Subordinate Judge's services — Chief Secretary to Government is proper authority to issue it

Punjab 544 B (C N 90)
— Art. 335 — Reservation in services for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes — Candidates found unfit cannot claim appointment despite reservation

Orissa 224 B (C N 74)
— Arts. 362, 363 — Art. 362 does not restrict powers of legislature — Ex-ruler is not exempted from personal appearance in Court in absence of express provision in Criminal P. C. Raj 281 (C N 68)

— Art. 363 — Art. 362 does not restrict powers of legislature — Ex-ruler is not exempted from personal appearance in Court in absence of express provision in Cr. P. C. — See Constitution of India, Art. 362 Raj 281 (C N 68)

— Sch. 7, List 1, Entry 43 — Co-operative Societies doing banking business are taken out of Entry 43 of List 1 and deliberately put in Entry 32 of List 2 — State Legislature is competent to regulate functioning of such Co-operative Societies

Punjab 528 D (C N 87)
— Sch. 7, List 1, Entry 43 — On harmonious construction, business of banking falls within Entry No. 45 whereas corporations and matters relating to them fall within Entry No. 43

Punjab 528 G (C N 87)
— Sch. 7, List 1, Entry 45 — Banking — On harmonious construction, business of banking falls within Entry No. 45, whereas Corporations and matters relating to them fall within Entry No. 43

Punjab 528 H (C N 87)
— Sch. 7, List 2, Entry 32 — Incorporation etc — Co-operative Societies doing banking business are taken out of Entry 43 of List 1 and deliberately put in Entry 22 of List 2 — State Legislature is competent to regulate functioning of such Co-operative Societies

Punjab 528 E (C N 87)

Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir

— S. 45 — Order terminating service issued for and on behalf of Governor — Order signed by Secretary to Government — It is, by virtue of R. 13 of Jammu and Kashmir Government Business Rules to be deemed to have been properly authenticated — Its validity cannot be questioned J & K 184 B (C N 46)

— S. 103 — Wrongful termination of service — Existence of right to claim damages — Does not deprive the person to have a declaration that termination was unlawful — In appropriate cases court may order that he should be treated as lawfully in service — (Constitution of India (J & K), Art. 32 (2-A))

J & K 184 A (C N 46)
— S. 104 — Order passed under by Single Judge, is nothing but an order made in exercise of supervisory jurisdiction and hence not appealable under cl. 12, Letters Patent (J. & K.) — See Letters Patent (Jammu & Kashmir), Clause 12 J & K 190 A (C N 47)

— S. 104 — Jurisdiction conferred under, is not an original jurisdiction

J & K 190 B (C N 47)
— S. 126 — Contract authorising Government to terminate service without assigning any reasons by giving three months' notice — Order not mentioning that service to stand terminated at expiry of three months from its receipt — No benefits accrued to servant nor taken away nor aspersion cast on him — Order cannot be said to have been passed by way of penalty — Incumbent is not entitled to protection of S. 126

J & K 184 C (C N 46)

Contempt of Courts Act (32 of 1952)

— S. 3 — Acts or words spoken tending to obstruct administration of justice — Amounts to contempt of court SC 2015 (C N 431)

Contract Act (9 of 1872)

— S. 10 — Deed — Construction — See Deed — Construction.

— Ss. 39, 73 — Copyright Act (1957). S. 55 — Agreement between author and publisher — Breach in respect of payment of royalties and rendition of accounts — Discharge by breach can be implied — Remedy after discharge is only for damages

Madh Pra 261 G (C N 46)
— S. 64 — "Benefit under the contract" — Meaning of Punjab 549 (C N 91)

— S. 69 — Joint liability — Contribution suit for — Joint wrong-doers not entitled to sue for contribution AIR 1951 All 774 (FB), Dissented from

Orissa 237 B (C N 73)
— S. 73 — Publishing agreement between assignee of author and publisher — Held, rendition of accounts of royalties and payment thereof by publisher were fundamental obligations of contract, upon

Contract Act (contd.)

breach of which, assignee was entitled to treat contract as discharged by breach — After discharge assignee's remedy was in damages for alleged infringement of his copyright for the subsequent period and not for royalty — Quantum of damages would be the loss of business profits — See Contract Act (1872), S. 39

Madh Pra 261 G (C N 46)

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES

—Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Co-operative Societies Act (6 of 1932)

—S. 51 — Award under — Executability — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9

Andh Pra 446 (C N 74)

—S. 151 — Award under — Not executable as a decree — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9

Andh Pra 446 (C N 74)

—Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Co-operative Societies Rules (1932)

—R. 22 (12) — Registered Society purchasing debtor's immovable property in enforcement of award — Debtor's failure to deliver possession — Suit for recovery of possession is maintainable — Rule 22 (12) has no relevancy — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9

Andh Pra 446 (C N 74)

—Assam Co-operative Societies Act (1 of 1950)

—S. 63 — Jurisdiction of Registrar to entertain disputes — Registrar can entertain disputes concerning such properties if it touches business of society

Manipur 86 B (C N 27)

—Ss. 85 and 100 (as extended to Manipur) — Manipur Co-operative Societies Rules (1959), Rule 61, Form No. 5 — Reference of dispute by society to Registrar — Signing of, by Chairman and Secretary of Society by adopting Form 5 is not in contravention of S. 85 or O. 29, R. 1 — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 29, R. 1

Manipur 86 D (C N 27)

—S. 100 — See Co-operative Societies — Assam Co-operative Societies Act (1950), S. 85

Manipur 86 D (C N 27)

—Bengal Co-operative Societies Act, 1940 (21 of 1940)

—S. 19 — Secretary of a Co-operative Society is not a public servant either under Cl. (10) or under Cl. (12) or Cl. (11) — See Penal Code (1860), S. 21

Cal 557 A (C N 111)

—Manipur Co-operative Societies Rules (1959)

—R. 61 — Reference of dispute to Registrar — Signing of, by Chairman and Secretary of Society by adopting Form 5 is not in contravention of S. 85 or O. 29, R. 1 — See Co-operative Societies — Assam Co-operative Societies Act (1 of

Co-operative Societies — Manipur Co-operative Societies Rules (contd.)

1959) (as extended to Manipur), S. 85

Manipur 86 D (C N 27)

—Orissa Co-operative Societies Act, 1951 (11 of 1952)

—Ss. 8, 71 — Government empowered to confer all powers of Registrar on persons appointed to assist him under subsection (1) of Section 8 — Powers exercisable under Section 71 by Registrar can also be exercised by officers appointed to assist him, when such power is conferred on them by Notification under S. 8 (2) — O. J. C. No. 104 of 1967 (Orissa), Overruled

Orissa 227 (C N 75) (SB)

—S. 71 — Government empowered to confer all powers of Registrar on person appointed to assist him under subsection (1) of S. 8 — Powers exercisable under Section 71 by Registrar could also be exercised by officers appointed to assist him, when such power is conferred on them by Notification under S. 8(2) — See Co-operative Societies — Orissa Co-operative Societies Act, 1951 (11 of 1952), S. 8

Orissa 227 (C N 75) (SB)

—Punjab Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Ordinance (10 of 1969)

—Pre. — Punjab Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Act (1969), Pre. — Ordinance and Act are constitutionally valid

Punj 528 J (C N 87)

Copyright Act (3 of 1914)

—S. 1, Sch. 1 — Original work — Tests — Originality in text books on arithmetic lies in skill and labour of author — Copyright Act (1957), S. 13

Madh Pra 261 B (C N 46)

—Ss. 1, 2 and Sch. 1 — Infringement of copyright — Tests to determine — Copyright Act (1957), Ss. 13, 51

Madh Pra 261 F (C N 46)

—S. 5, Sch. I — Assignment of copyright in writing — Court has to give effect to actual bargain unless words therein do not convey correct intention of parties

Madh Pra 261 C (C N 46)

—S. 7 — Remedies under — Damages — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch. 1, S. 6

Madh Pra 262 H (C N 46)

—Sch. 1, S. 1 — Copyright Act (1957), Ss. 13, 45 — Acquiring copyright in a book — Difference between two Acts — Under 1957 Act registration is a condition

Madh Pra 261 A (C N 46)

—Sch. I, S. 2 — Copyright — Infringement — Tests — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch. 1, S. 1

Madh Pra 261 F (C N 46)

—Sch. I, S. 5 — Assignment of copyright — Whether benami — Tests for determination

Madh Pra 261 D (C N 46)

—Sch. I, S. 5 — Agreement between author and publisher — Copyright whether vests in publisher or he is only a licensee — Determination of — Copyright Act (1957), S 18

Copyright Act (1914) (contd.)

Madh Pra 261 E (C N 46)

—Sch I, Ss 6 and 7 — Damages under are cumulative

Madh Pra 261 H (C N 46)

Copyright Act (14 of 1957)

—S 13 — Original Work — Tests — Held, Book 'Saral Middle School Ank Ganeet' was original work — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch I, S 1

Madh Pra 261 A (C N 46)

—S 13 — Original work — Tests — Originality in text books on arithmetic lies in skill and labour of author — See Copyright Act (1914), S 1 Sch I

Madh Pra 261 B (C N 46)

—S 13 — Copyright — Infringement — Tests — See Copyright Act (1914) Sch I, Section 1

Madh Pra 261 F (C N 46)

—S 18 — Assignment of copyright — Duty of Court — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch I, S 5

Madh Pra 261 C (C N 46)

—S 18 — Assignment of copyright — Burden of proving that transaction is benami is on person alleging it — Decision of court must rest not on mere suspicion but only on legal evidence including testimony of witnesses — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch. I, S 5

Madh Pra 261 D (C N 46)

—S. 18 — Agreement between author and publisher — Duty of Court — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch. I, S 5

Madh Pra 261 E (C N 46)

—S. 45 — Acquiring copyright in a book — Difference between Act of 1937 and Act of 1914 — Under 1957 Act registration is a condition — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch. I, S 1

Madh Pra 261 A (C N 46)

—S. 51 — Copyright — Infringement — Tests — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch. I, S 1

Madh Pra 261 F (C N 46)

—S. 55 — Publishing agreement between assignee of author and publisher — Held, rendition of accounts of royalties and payment thereof by publisher were fundamental obligations of contract, upon breach of which contract stands as discharged by breach — After discharge assignee's remedy was in damages for alleged infringement of his copyright for the subsequent period and not for royalty — Quantum of damages would be the loss of business profits — See Contract Act (1872), S 59

Madh Pra 261 G (C N 46)

—S 55 — Remedies under — Damages — See Copyright Act (1914) Sch I, S 6

Madh Pra 261 H (C N 46)

—S. 55 — Remedies under — Damages — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch. I, S 6

Madh Pra 261 H (C N 46)

COURT-FEES AND SUITS
VALUATIONS

—Court-fees Act (7 of 1870)

—S. 7 (iv-A) (Orissa) — Suit for declaration that plaintiff was not bound by sale deed executed by her father in favour of defendant — Plaintiff not party to sale deed — Suit is not one for cancellation falling within S. 7 (iv-A)

Orissa 215 A (C N 71)

Criminal Procedure Code (5 of 1898)

—S. 68 and Sch V — Form of summons — Effect of non-observance of formalities

Tripura 84 A (C N 22)

—S. 145 — Affidavit evidence in proceeding — Magistrate having seisin over the proceeding has no power to authorise another Magistrate to take affidavits intended to be used before him, because the Magistrate so authorised would not be a person who can be deemed to have been validly authorised to administer oaths and affirmations which are quite unrelated to any matter pending before him

Orissa 209 A (C N 69)

—S. 145 — Affidavit evidence in proceeding under S. 145 — Affidavits must be sworn to before the Magistrate before whom such proceeding is pending — Only if evidence of person is of formal character affidavit may be sworn to before any other Magistrate. AIR 1966 Puni 528 & AIR 1969 Manipur 3, Dissented from

Orissa 209 D (C N 69)

—S. 156(3) — Private complaint — Magistrate forwarding it to Police not bound to examine complainant — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S 190(1) (b)

Mys 316 (C N 75)

—S 172(2) — Case diary of Police investigation — Its use and value

Assam 137 D (C N 34)

—Ss 190(1) (b), 156(3), 200 — Private complaint — Magistrate forwarding it to Police for investigation is not bound to examine complainant.

Mys 316 (C N 76)

—S. 196 — Prosecution for offence under S. 500 — Magistrate has jurisdiction to proceed with complaint without sanction though facts of complaint disclose offence under S 171-G for which sanction is necessary — See Penal Code (1860), S. 171-G

Mad 509 (C N 149)

—S 200 — Private complaint — Magistrate forwarding it to Police is not bound to examine complainant — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S 190(1) (b)

Mys 316 (C N 76)

—S 204 (1-B) — Issue of process — Copy of complaint to accompany process — Provision however directory

Tripura 84 (C N 22)

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

—S. 242 — Maintenance under S. 488, granted to wife without examining husband under S. 242 — No contention by husband that he was prejudiced — There was no failure of justice — Proceedings were not vitiated Goa 140 B (C N 25)

—S. 339(1) Proviso — Joint trial of accused forfeiting pardon

Delhi 264 A (C N 57)

—S. 367 — Evidence — Appreciation — See Evidence — Appreciation

—S. 438 (Report to High Court) — District Magistrate in revision on examination of records of subordinate Magistrates must make reference to High Court except in cases falling under Ss. 436 and 437 Tripura 91 A (C N 25)

—S. 488 — Proceedings under — Nature of Goa 140 A (C N 25)

—S. 488 — Maintenance proceedings — Summary nature — Marriage — Standard of proof — Not so high as in prosecution for bigamy or under Divorce Act — Opinion expressed by conduct of persons having special means of knowledge is sufficient — (Evidence Act (1872), S. 50)

Mys 305 A (C N 73)

—S. 488 — Rate of maintenance — Petitioner claiming maintenance at Rs. 150/- per month for herself and her minor children — Respondent husband owning 14 acres of land and doing contract work and was also income-tax payer — Petitioner held should be granted maintenance at Rs. 35/- per month for herself and Rs. 25/- each for her minor children

Mys 305 E (C N 73)

—S. 488(4) — Maintenance of wife — Decree against wife for judicial separation — She cannot claim maintenance having no reasonable ground to live apart. 1964 (1) Cri LJ 242 (Mad), Diss. from

Punjab 515 (C N 82)

—S. 488 (6) — Procedure laid down is not that-prescribed for summons case — When summons was served on respondent but he did not appear or he appeared but did not file his counter, Magistrate is empowered to determine case ex parte and entire procedure of summons case is not applicable — Where maintenance was granted after following procedure under S. 488(6) the proceedings were not vitiated. Ref. No. 101 of 1966 (Goa), Dissented from Goa 140 C (C N 25)

—S. 489(2) — Finality of finding as to relationship of husband and wife — Subsequent Civil Court decision — Effect — Magistrate can cancel or vary order

Mys 305 B (C N 73)

—S. 510 — Report of Chemical Examiner used as evidence to convict accused — No oral evidence given by analyst — No opportunity to accused to cross-examine analyst — Infirmary sufficient to vitiate conviction Mad 512 (C N 151)

—S. 510-A — Affidavit may be sworn to before any Magistrate only if evidence of person is of formal character — But affidavit in proceedings under S. 145 must be sworn before the Magistrate having seizin over the proceedings — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 145

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

Orissa 209 D (C N 69)

—S. 537 — Failure of justice

Delhi 264 B (C N 57)

—S. 539-AA — Affidavit may be sworn to before any Magistrate only if evidence of person is of formal character — But affidavit in proceedings under S. 145 must be sworn before Magistrate having seizin over proceeding — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 145 Orissa 209 D (C N 69)

—S. 548 — Right of accused to copies of any part of record of trial — Right available even during committal proceedings Cal 535 A (C N 106)

—S. 548 — Right of accused to copies of any part of record of trial is controlled by order under Section 14 of Official Secrets Act (1923) Cal 535 B (C N 106)

—S. 561-A — Stay of proceeding — Criminal trial cannot be stayed solely on ground that a civil suit involving identical dispute is pending — Criminal trial should not be stayed if civil suit is likely to drag on Tripura 91 B (C N 25)

Customs Act (52 of 1962)

—S. 135 — Illegal possession of heroin — Heroin not produced in country — Presumption of illegal importation — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 114, Illus. (a)

USSC 82 (C N 12)

Dangerous Drugs Act (2 of 1930)

—S. 32 — Possession of heroin — Presumption — See Evidence Act (1872), Section 114, Illus. (a)

USSC 82 (C N 12)

DEBT LAWS

—Bombay Agricultural Debtors Relief Act (28 of 1947)

—S. 4 — Suit for recovery of possession — Proceedings taken by plaintiff in B. A. D. R. Court are beyond scope of Section 14 of Limitation Act — See Limitation Act (1908), S. 14 Mys 318 A (C N 78)

—S. 52 — Exclusion of period of proceeding under the Act — Benefit under Sec. 52 is conferred on creditor whose ordinary remedies either by way of suit or otherwise get incapable of being pursued by him

Mys 318 B (C N 78)

—C. P. and Berar Moneylenders Act (13 of 1934)

—S. 2 (v) — Moneylender — Does not include person who has entered into isolated transaction of moneylending — See Debt Laws — C. P. and Berar Moneylenders Act (13 of 1934), S. 11F

SC 2007 A (C N 430)

Debt Laws — C. P. & Berar Moneylenders Act (contd.)

—Ss. 11F, 11H and 2 (v) — Absence of registration as moneylender — Does not prohibit and invalidate isolated transaction of moneylending SC 2007 A (C N 430)

—S. 11H — Suit on isolated transaction of moneylending — Absence of registration Certificate is no bar — See Debt Laws — C. P. and Berar Moneylenders Act (13 of 1934), S. 11F SC 2007 A (C N 430)

Divorce Act (4 of 1869)

—S. 22 — Judicial separation — Decree for, on ground of cruelty

Ker 316 (C N 53)

Displaced Persons (Compensation and Rehabilitation) Rules (1955)

—R. 102, Cls. (a) to (d) and Proviso — Excess land allotted to B — Notice to show cause against cancellation issued to B who was by then dead — Appellants, heirs of B not served with notice nor appeared before Managing Officer — Order nullity — Appearance by appellants before appellate and revisional authorities incapable of validating order. C. W. No. 2917 of 1965, D/- 23-10-1969 (P and II), Reversed

Punj 525 A (C N 86)

Easements Act (5 of 1882)

—S. 15 — Easement against Government — 60 years' rule applicable to easement against Government is not applicable to easements over bhumiswami lands

Madh Pra 283 (C N 48)

EDUCATION

—Andh. Pra. Rules for Selection of Candidates for Admission to the Integrated M. B. B. S. Course, in Medical Colleges in Andhra Area of Andhra Pradesh for year 1968-69

—Rule 3 (a) and Appendix 1 — Not unconstitutional — Categorisation of several N.C.C. Certificates in order of preference is based on rational classification and is neither discriminatory nor unintelligible — Object being to compensate the candidates having taken part either in Sports or in extra-curricular activities, authority concerned is justified in giving preference to persons having taken part in those activities for a longer period than those who have taken part for a comparatively shorter period

Andh Pra 404 B (C N 65)

Kerala University Act (9 of 1969)

—Validity — Section 45 (2), (4) and (6) Section 47 (2), (4) and (6), Section 53 (1), (2), (3) and (9), Section 59 (2) and (4), Sec. 69 and Section 63 are ultra vires Article 30 (1) in respect minority institutions — See Constitution of India, Article 30 (1)

SC 2070 A (C N 443)

—S. 63 — Provisions of Sec. 63 which affect both minority institutions and majority

Education — Kerala University Act (contd.)

institutions are ultra vires Article 19 (1) (f) — See Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (f)

SC 2079 C (C N 443)

—S. 63 (1) — Is ultra vires Article 31 of the Constitution — See Constitution of India, Art. 31 (2) (2A)

SC 2079 B (C N 443)

Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959)

—Ss. 3, 6 — Taking over Government Aided Schools of Local Bodies — This is nothing short of compulsory acquisition — Article 31 (2) must be satisfied — Section 3 (2) and amendments in respect of Sections 52 (1) (g) and 59 of Punjab Municipal Act are void. AIR 1966 Punj 232, Reversed

SC 2182 A (C N 448)

—S. 5 — For applicability of Section 5 there must be emergency — Actual emergency which had arisen need not be mentioned in notification — State need not show by placing material before Court that it was a case of emergency justifying action under proviso to Section 5 where no foundation for this has been laid in this behalf in writ petition

SC 2182 B (C N 449)

—S. 5 — Notification D/- 26-9-1960 of Government has no retrospective effect. AIR 1966 Punj 232, Reversed

SC 2182 C (C N 448)

—S. 5 — Notification not retrospective — Amendment of Sections 52 and 59 Punjab Municipal Act would be effective only after date of notification — Provisions of Section 52 (1) (g) Punjab Municipal Act are however void

SC 2182 D (C N 448)

—S. 6 — See Education — Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959), S. 3

SC 2182 A (C N 445)

Employees' Provident Funds Act (19 of 1952)

—S. 10 (1) — Suit claiming exemption under — Burden of proof — Factory whether entitled to exemption depends on facts of each case — Setting up of new factory — What constitutes — Allegations of material facts in plaint without proof not sufficient to claim exemption — (Evidence Act (1872), Sections 101 to 101) — (Civil P. C. (1908), Order 0, Rule 2)

Bom 418 (C N 72)

Essential Commodities Act (10 of 1955)

—S. 3 — Mysore Foodgrains (Wholesale) Dealers Licensing Order (1964) — Condition No. 2 (a) in Form B of the Wholesale licence, is invalid in so far as it prohibits a wholesale dealer from purchasing foodgrains at places other than those specified in such licence for carrying on business

Mys 269 A (C N 69)

—S. 3 — Mysore Foodgrains (Wholesale) Dealers Licensing Order (1964) — Mysore

Essential Commodities Act (contd.)

Foodgrains (Retail) Dealers Licensing Order 1964 — No criteria for determining what transactions are speculative — Condition No. 7 (i) in the licence in both orders is void on account of vagueness and uncertainty
Mys 289 C (C N 69)

—S. 3 — Mysore Foodgrains (Wholesale) Dealers Licensing Order (1964) — Condition No. 9 in Licence of Form B is reasonable
Mys 289 E (C N 69)

—S. 3 — Mysore Foodgrains (Wholesale) Dealers Licensing Order (1964) — Mysore Foodgrains (Retail) Dealers Licensing Order 1964 — The restrictions imposed by Conditions Nos. 3, 4 and 10, of the wholesale and retail licences, are not unreasonable restrictions
Mys 289 G (C N 69)

—S. 3 — Mysore Foodgrains (Wholesale) Dealers Licensing Order (1964) — Mysore Foodgrains (Retail) Dealers Licensing Order, 1964 — Clause 11 (d) violates Article 19 of Constitution
Mys 289 I (C N 69)

—S. 3 — Mysore Foodgrains (Wholesale) Dealers Licensing Order, 1964 — Mysore Foodgrains (Retail) Dealers Licensing Order 1964 — The power of search under sub-clause (b) of Clause 11 of both these Orders is valid
Mys 289 K (C N 69)

—S. 3, Sub-s. (3C) (as inserted by Act 86 of 1967) — Orders for sale of sugar issued by Central Government under Clause (f) of sub-s. (2) — Producer is entitled to price which stands determined on date an order is made
Delhi 257 (C N 55)

Estate Duty Act (34 of 1953)

—S. 10 — Gift — Bona fide possession and its retention by donee — Donor's stay at premises for few days prior to his death — No benefit given to donor by contract or otherwise — Section not attracted Cal 542 (C N 108)

Evidence

—Appreciation of — Particulars regarding distribution of pamphlet and evidence of witnesses — Conflict between — Held witnesses could not be disbelieved only because particulars were at variance with the evidence — But fact could be taken into consideration while appreciating evidence of witnesses
SC 2097 E (C N 446)

Evidence Act (1 of 1872)

—S. 3 — Evidence — Appreciation — See Evidence — Appreciation

—S. 3 — Benefit of doubt — Dying declaration not satisfactory — Police investigation inadequate and defective — Evidence not conclusive — Benefit of doubt given to accused
Assam 137 B (C N 34)

—S. 3 — Credibility of witness — Partisan witness — Witness having respect or loyalty to same religious institution as the victim does not make him partisan
Bom 438 C (C N 74)

Evidence Act (contd.)

—S. 8 — Complaint by deceased widow, some days prior to her murder that she apprehended trouble from accused in her sowing operation — Prosecution case not that making of complaint was cause of her murder — Complaint held not admissible under Section 8 showing motive — Held, however, that previous litigation between deceased and accused formed motive for the murder
Bom 438 H (C N 74)

—S. 8 — Evidence of subsequent conduct — Absconding of accused — Nature of evidence required stated
Bom 438 I (C N 74)

—Ss. 11 and 101 — Criminal trial — Evidence of alibi — Onus of proof is on accused Bom 438 J (C N 74)

—S. 21 — Proof of admission — Concession of facts recorded in judgment — No challenge in grounds of appeal — Statement in judgment to be accepted as correct unless properly challenged — Mere incorporation as a ground in memo of appeal not sufficient challenge
Orissa 218 B (C N 72)

—S. 27 — Discovery evidence is not substantive evidence but only corroborative evidence Bom 438 F (C N 74)

—S. 32 (1) — Dying declaration — Evidentiary value of Assam 137 A (C N 34)

—S. 32 (1) — Deceased widow asking for police protection on account of apprehension of trouble from her brothers-in-law at the time of undertaking sowing operation — Two months later deceased found murdered — Her application for police protection held admissible under Section 32 (1)
Bom 438 G (C N 74)

—S. 50 — Maintenance proceedings — Marriage — Standard of proof — Opinion expressed by conduct of persons having special means of knowledge is sufficient — See Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 488
Mys 305 A (C N 73)

—Ss. 74 and 77 — Public document — Register of births maintained by municipality is a public document — Certified copy of extract is admissible to prove contents of such public document
Mys 305 D (C N 73)

—S. 77 — Public document — Register of births maintained by municipality is a public document — Certified copy of extract is admissible to prove contents of such public document — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 74
Mys 305 D (C N 73)

—S. 101 — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 11
Bom 438 J (C N 74)

—S. 101 — Criminal trial — Accused relying on particular fact to discredit prosecution witness — Fact should be brought out in cross-examination of prosecution witness
Bom 438 B (C N 74)

—S. 101 — Burden of proof — Property suit
Raj 278 A (C N 67)

—Ss. 101 to 104 — Suit claiming exemption under S. 16 (1) Provident Funds Act

Evidence Act (contd.)

— Burden of proof — See Employees' Provident Funds Act (1952), S 16 (1)

Bom 418 (C N 72)

— Ss. 101-104 — Assignment of copyright — Burden of proving that transaction is benami is on person alleging it — See Copyright Act (1914), Sch. 1, S 5

— S. 114 — Presumption that possession goes with title — Applies to all kinds of land — Ker 310 (C N 51)

— S. 114 — Marriage — Presumption from continuous and long cohabitation — Rebuttable — Mys 303 C (C N 73)

— S. 114, Illus (a) — Case from America — Illegal possession of heroin and cocaine in large quantities — Presumption as to illegal importation — (Customs Act (1962), Section 135) — (Constitution of India, Article 20 (3)) — (Dangerous Drugs Act (1930), Section 82) — USSC 82 (C N 12)

— S. 114, Illus (g) — Question in issue whether temple and its property was defendant's private property or public trust — Previous Goswamis maintaining accounts — Defendant Goswami not producing accounts — Documents from Registers of temple property appearing to be deliberately torn — Inference adverse to defendant could be drawn — SC 2025 A (C N 432)

— S. 123 — Evidence as to affairs of State — Documents marked as annexure to petition — Waiver of privilege

Assam 131 A (C N 33)

— S. 123 read with Section 162 — Evidence as to affairs of State — Documents claimed to be privileged — Court has to determine question without inspecting documents on basis of collateral evidence

Assam 131 B (C N 33)

— S. 123 read with Section 162 — Documents annexed to petition already in Court — Claim of privilege under Section 123 by respondent after service of Rule nisi — Court may adopt judicial blindness to these documents and proceed in accordance with law — Petitioner taking no step to direct respondent to produce originals before Court — No question of taking collateral evidence to determine validity of objection arises — Court justified in excluding these documents from consideration in arriving at its decision in case on merits

Assam 131 C (C N 33)

— S. 123 — 'Affairs of State' — Administrative instructions and guidance notes secretly given to various departments of Government can claim status of being documents relating to affairs of State

Assam 131 D (C N 33)

— S. 134 — Conviction on basis of evidence of single witness — Corroboration, when necessary — Bom 438 A (C N 74)

— S. 135 (1) — Applicability — Bom 438 E (C N 74)

— S. 157 — Statement made "at or about" the time when fact took place — Tests indicated — Bom 435 D (C N 74)

Foreign Exchange Regulation Act (7 of 1947)

— S. 12 (1) as amended by Amendment Ordinance 1969 on 13-11-69 — Amendment requiring declaration under Section 12 (1) to be true in all material particulars as to amount representing full export value or when it is not ascertainable the value which exporter expects to receive on sale of goods in course of international trade — Notification G. S. R. 2641, D/- 14-11-69 superseding previous notification — Both the amendment and the notification have no retrospective operation, and will not affect declaration made prior to amendment

Cal 527 B (C N 105)

— S. 12 (1) — Charge under for misstatement in declaration by exporter — Offence under Section 167 (37), Sea Customs Act held committed — Non-mention of S. 29 or 137, Sea Customs Act in charge held did not vitiate conviction — See Sea Customs Act (1878), Section 167 (37)

Cal 527 F (C N 105)

— S. 12 (1) — Order of confiscation founded both on items (8) and (37) of Sec. 167, Sea Customs Act — Charge of violation of Section 12, Foreign Exchange Regulation Act failing — Confiscation order cannot be struck down — See Sea Customs Act (1878), Section 167 (S)

Cal 527 G (C N 105)

Fundamental Rules

See under Civil Services.

Fundamental (6th Amendment) Rules 1965

See under Civil Services.

Gift Tax Act (18 of 1958)

— Ss. 13, 16 and 19 (3) — Sections 13 and 16 are applicable to legal representatives — Gifts made by deceased person escaping assessment — Notice to all legal representatives necessary — Assessing Officer must make diligent efforts to find them out — Only then notice on few would represent the estate — Failure to find out legal representative — Notice on one legal representative only is invalid

Andh Pra 434 (C N 71)

— S. 16 — Sections 13 and 16 applicable to legal representatives — Gifts made by deceased person escaped assessment — Notice to all legal representatives necessary — Assessing officer must make diligent efforts to find them out — Only then notice on few would represent the estate — Failure to find out legal representative — Notice on one legal representative only is invalid — See Gift Tax Act (1958), Section 13

Andh Pra 431 (C N 71)

— S. 19 (3) — Sections 13 and 16 applicable to legal representatives — Gifts made by deceased person escaped assessment — Notice to all legal representatives necessary — Assessing officer must make diligent efforts to find them out — Only then notice on few would represent the estate — Failure to find out legal representative — Notice on one legal representative only is

Gift Tax Act (contd.)

invalid — See Gift Tax Act (1958), S. 13
Andh Pra 434 (C N 71)

Goa, Daman and Diu (Administration) Act
(1 of 1962)

—S. 5 (1) — Under Section 5 (1), Goa Daman and Diu (Administration) Act (1962) laws in force in the territories were saved — However under Section 4 (1), Goa, Daman and Diu (Laws) No. 2 Regulation (1963) corresponding laws stood repealed — Reading of the two provisions show that law relating to pre-emption under Section 1566 was saved as neither Section 44 nor any other section in T. P. Act dealt with right of pre-emption — See Portuguese Civil Code, Section 1566
Goa 143 (C N 27)

Goa, Daman and Diu (Administration) Removal of Difficulties Order (1962)

—Cl. 2 (as amended on 19-12-1963) — President of Portugal or Overseas Minister or Governor General of State of India could have had no power to pass Protection of Rights of Tenants (Cashewnuts and Arecanuts) Order 1965 — Lt. Governor of Goa, Daman and Diu therefore has no power to pass that order by virtue of Clause 2 — Order of 1965 is, therefore, ultra vires and invalid — See Protection of Rights of Tenants (Cashewnuts and Arecanuts) Order, 1965
Goa 142 A (C N 26)

Goa, Daman and Diu (Laws) No. 2, Regulation 1963

—S. 4 (1) — Under Section 5 (1), Goa, Daman and Diu (Administration) Act (1962) laws in force in the territories were saved — However under Section 4 (1) Goa, Daman and Diu (Laws) No. 2 Regulation (1963) corresponding laws stood repealed — Reading of the two provisions show that law relating to pre-emption under Section 1566 was saved as neither Section 44 nor any other section in T. P. Act dealt with right of pre-emption — See Portuguese Civil Code, Section 1566
Goa 143 (C N 27)

Goa, Daman and Diu Mamlatdar's Court Act (9 of 1936)

—S. 4 — Suit for eviction of tenant — Suit need not be filed in Mamlatdar's court only but in civil court also — Defendants seeking protection under Protection of Rights of Tenants (Cashewnuts and Arecanuts) Order, 1965 — Court can consider validity of the Order of 1965 when found essential for just disposal of suit
Goa 142 B (C N 26)

HIGH COURT RULES AND ORDERS

—Mysore High Court Rules (1959)

—Chapter III, Rule 6 — Power conferred on Chief Justice is only in regard to judicial work and not administrative matters
Mys 309 B (C N 74)

High Court Rules & Orders (contd.)

—Tripura (Courts) Order, 1950

—Para 34 (3) and Para 34 (1) (b) — Revision petition against order directing consolidation of two suits is maintainable under Section 115, Civil P. C. — Although Section 115 is not applicable to Tripura by virtue of Para 34 (3) in fit case court can interfere in revision under Para 34 (1) (b)
Tripura 89 (C N 24)

Hindu Law

—Debts — Father — "Pious obligation" of son — Income-tax arrears in respect of father's separate business prior to partition between father and son — Son is bound to pay under doctrine of pious obligation
Andh Pra 426 A (C N 69)

—Debts — Father — Pious obligation of son — Tax debts — Income-tax arrears — Debt binding on son
Andh Pra 426 C (C N 69)

—Joint family — Onus — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 101
Raj 278 A (C N 67)

—Minority and guardianship — De facto guardian has in certain circumstances competence to transfer ward's estate — Alienation is only voidable in same manner as alienation made by de jure guardian
Andh Pra 440 E (C N 73)

—Pious obligation — Trade debts — Karta member of firm — Members of his family are liable to discharge liability of firm to the extent of their interest in coparcenary property
Guj 269 B (C N 41)

—Religious endowment — Public trusts — Tests — Temple belonging to Vallabha Sampradayeys — Common feature of such temple is that the ground floor is used as the place of worship and the first floor as the residence of Goswami Maharaj — Fact that a temple had the appearance of a residential house does not militate against the contention that the temple is a public temple
SC 2025 C (C N 432)

—Religious endowment — Public trust — Tests — Custom that public are asked to enter temple only after Goswami has finished worship — This is no circumstance to show that temple is private one — Power to manage temple includes power to maintain discipline within its precincts
SC 2025 D (C N 432)

—Religious endowment — Public trust — Public temple — Tests to see whether temple is public — Criteria indicated
SC 2025 E (C N 432)

—Religious endowment — Public trust — Haveli (Temple) at Nadiad of Shree Gokulnathji and the properties attached thereto are properties of public religious trust created by followers of Vallabh cult residing in Nadiad — The Goswami Maharaj is not a mere manager, but has an important place — He is the Maha Prabhu — Vallabh devotees

Hindu Law (contd.)

worship their deity through him — Income from temple properties has to be primarily used for the expenses of the sevās and utsavas in the temple, the upkeep, renovation and improvements of the temple premises but subject to these demands, the Maharaj has a right to utilise the temple income in maintaining himself and his family in a reasonably comfortable manner

SC 2025 F (C N 432)

—Self-acquired property — Blending — Question whether self-acquired property was thrown into the joint stock and treated as a joint family property is a question of fact and must be proved

J and K 181 B (C N 45)

—Texts — Interpretation of "Smritis" — Unwise to apply dictionary meaning to words in text of "smritis"

Andh Pra 426 B (C N 69)

—Will — Construction — Nature of interest given

J and K 161 A (C N 45)

Hindu Succession Act (30 of 1936)

—S. 14 (2) — Property of female Hindu — Hindu widow, having no title in joint family properties, allotted properties under agreement for residence during her lifetime — Case falls under Section 14 (2) and widow will not become full owner of property after coming into force of the Act. AIR 1965 Andh Pra 88, Dissented from

Raj 285 (C N 69)

—S. 23 — His conviction for the offence of murder or attempt of murder under Section 302, I. P. C. not necessary for disqualification — Conviction under Sec. 324, I. P. C. is enough to disqualify

Andh Pra 407 B (C N 66)

HOUSES AND RENTS

—Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act (41 of 1961)

—S. 12 — Striking out of the defence under Section 13 (6) — Section 12 does not become inapplicable — See Houses and Rents — M. P. Accommodation Control Act (41 of 1961), Section 13 (6)

Madh Pra 280 (C N 47)

—Ss. 13 (6), 12 — Suit for eviction — Striking out of the defence — Effect — S. A. No. 910 of 1965, D/- 3-3-1969 (M. P.), Overruled

Madh Pra 280 (C N 47)

—Mysore Rent Control Act (22 of 1961)

—S. 21 (1) (d) — Ground for eviction — Nuisance to neighbouring occupiers — Sound of sewing machine does not by itself constitute a nuisance

Mys 297 B (C N 70)

Income-tax Act (11 of 1922)

—S. 2 (1-A), Cl. (ii) — Capital assets — Personal effects — Test — Use of article must be of personal nature — Mere placing of treasure before Goddess while performing

Income-tax Act (1922) (contd.)

pūja does not make treasure item of personal use

Raj 270 (C N 64)

—S. 4 — Revenue receipt — Sale of tree trunks — Trees capable of regeneration — Receipt from sale is in the nature of income and subject to special exemption under Section 4 (3) (viii) is liable to tax — By sale of trunks assessee does not realise part of his capital

SC 2051 (C N 436)

—S. 10 (2) (xv) — Amount set apart to provide pension on retirement of or death of Director — Amount becomes expended only on retirement or death of Director and not before that event — For applicability of Section 10 (2) (xv) other requirements of the section and of Section 10 (4A) must be complied with

SC 2067 B (C N 440)

—S. 10 (2) (xv) — Expenditure not in nature of capital expenditure — Assessee Company manufacturer of sugar as well as owner of farms growing sugar-cane — Assessee paying commission to Managing Agents, fees and travelling expenses to Directors — Expenses not apportionable between agricultural and business activities of assessee — Held expenses were admissible as deductions in their entirety in computing income of assessee

Madh Pra 268 (C N 49)

—Ss. 10 (4) (b) and 16 (1) (b) — Read with Income-tax Rules (1922), R. 24 — Assessee, partner of firm — Firm deriving agricultural as well as business income — Salary received by partner for services continue to bear same character as part of total income of firm — Forty per cent of such salary can only be taken in computation of total income of partner under Section 16 (1) (b) by virtue of Rule 24 — (1964) 51 ITR 467 (Madh), Overruled

Mad 497 A (C N 145) (FB)

—S. 16 (1) (b) — Read with Income Tax Rules (1922), Rule 24 — Assessee, partner of firm — Firm deriving agricultural as well as business income — Salary received by partner for services continue to bear same character as part of total income of firm — Forty per cent of such salary can only be taken in computation of total income of partner under Section 16 (1) (b) by virtue of Rule 24 — See Income Tax Act (1922), Section 10 (4) (b)

Mad 497 A (C N 145) (FB)

—S. 52 — Proceedings contemplated by Article 20 must be criminal — Penalty proceedings under Section 297 (2) (g) of Income-tax Act (1961) — Article 20 is not applicable — See Constitution of India, Article 20

All 620 B (C N 59) (FB)

—S. 68 — Extra-ordinary jurisdiction — Exercise of — Writ petition challenging penalty proceedings — Validity of assessment order cannot be challenged — Statutory remedy cannot be allowed to be by-passed — See Constitution of India, Article 226

All 620 A (C N 89) (FB)

—S. 68 (1) — "Question of law arising out of such order" — Question raised before Tribunal — Aspect of it not raised can be

Income-tax Act (1922) (contd.)

urged before High Court — Decision of High Court at Calcutta, Reversed

SC 2067 A (C N 440)

—S. 66 (2) — Power of High Court to direct Tribunal to state case — Exercise of Punj 558 (C N 94)

—S. 66 (4), (5) — Supreme Court directing Tribunal to submit supplementary statement — Tribunal is restricted to evidence on record and is not entitled to take additional evidence — Not taking such evidence may result in injustice — Tribunal left to dispose of case under Section 66 (5) in the light of observations of Supreme Court

SC 2067 C (C N 440)

Income Tax Act (43 of 1961)

—S. 10 — Capital or revenue receipt — See Kerala Agricultural Income Tax Act (22 of 1950), Section 2 (a) —Ss. 271, 297 (2) (g) — Institution of penalty proceedings on basis of assessment under Income-tax Act (1922) — Case falling under Clause (g) of Section 297 (2) — Section 271 is, however, inapplicable — Section 297 (2) (g) is not charging section — Expression "any proceeding under this Act" in Section 271 — Interpretation — (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All), Overruled; (1967) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) and AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 and C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), Dissented from

All 620 E (C N 89) (FB)

—S. 297 (2) (a), (b) — Classification between Clauses (a) and (b) — Being based on date of filing return, it is well defined — No violation of Article 14 — See Constitution of India, Article 14

All 620 C (C N 89) (FB)

—S. 297 (2) (f) and (g) — Classification between Clauses (f) and (g) is based on date of completion of assessment — No nexus with object to be achieved — Clause (g) of Section 297 (2) is ultra vires — 70 ITR 293 (All), Overruled; 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) and 72 ITR 417 and C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), Dissented from — See Constitution of India, Article 14

All 620 D (C N 89) (FB)

—S. 297 (2) (g) — Penalty proceedings under Section 297 (2) (g) of Income-tax Act (1961) — Article 20 is not applicable — See Constitution of India, Article 20

All 620 B (C N 89) (FB)

—S. 297 (2) (g) — Institution of penalty proceedings on basis of assessment under Income-tax Act (1922) — Case falling under Clause (g) of Section 297 (2) — Section 271 is, however, inapplicable — Section 297 (2) (g) is not charging section — 70 ITR 293 (All), Overruled; 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) and 72 ITR 417 and C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1969, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), Dissented from — See Income-tax Act (1961), Section 271

All 620 E (C N 89) (FB)

—S. 297 (2) (g) — Institution of penalty proceedings under Section 297 (2) (g) —

Income-tax Act (1961) (contd.)

Proceedings must be quashed, Clause (g) being ultra vires — Plea that penalty imposed is less than minimum prescribed under law is not tenable — See Constitution of India, Article 226

All 620 F (C N 89) (FB)

—Chapter 22 — Proceedings contemplated by Article 20 must be criminal — Chapter 22 provides such proceedings — See Constitution of India, Article 20

All 620 B (C N 89) (FB)

Income Tax Rules (1922)

—R. 24 — Assessee, partner of firm — Firm deriving agricultural as well as business income — Salary received by partner for services continues to bear same character as part of total income of firm — Forty per cent of such salary can only be taken in computation of total income of partner under Section 16 (1) (b), I. T. Act by virtue of Rule 24 — See Income Tax Act (1922), Section 10 (4) (b) Mad 497 A (C N 145) (FB)

Indian Audit and Accounts Department
(Accountant General Posts and Telegraphs)
Transfer of Officers and other Staff Rules (1968)

See under Civil Services.

Industrial Disputes Act (14 of 1947)

—S. 2 (oo) — Retrenchment — Meaning of — Termination of service in accordance with service rule is not retrenchment for purposes of Section 25-F

Assam 131 F (C N 33)

—S. 2 (p) — Settlement — Procedure to be followed — Parties arriving at settlement and reporting same to Tribunal — Act prescribes no procedure to be followed in such case

Andh Pra 432 B (C N 70)

—S. 19 (3) — Period of operation of settlement — Award cannot be award for one purpose and settlement for another purpose — Settlement merging into award ceases to be settlement and operates as award — It will be in operation for period provided by statute — Expression "subject to the provisions of this section" refers to provisions applicable to award and not to settlements

Andh Pra 432 A (C N 70)

—S. 25-F — Retrenchment — See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 2 (oo)

Assam 131 F (C N 33)

—Sch. 2, Item 3 — Dismissal — Fair trial — Allegation against disciplinary authority by delinquent servant — Inquiry held by Labour Officer — Final order of dismissal by disciplinary authority — He being interested party, order is illegal

Guj 277 A (C N 42)

Insurance Act (4 of 1938)

—S. 2 (11) — Life insurance — Definition — Proposal to effect life insurance — Terms of policy providing for payment of single premium and for payment of secured

Insurance Act (contd.)

sum on fixed date — Insurance is not life insurance — Cal 513 A (G N 103)

—S 39 — Nomination of policy — Policy must be of life insurance — Insured purporting to nominate policy other than life insurance — Legal consequences of nomination under Section 39 do not attach to such nomination — Cal 513 B (C N 103)

—S 39 — Nominee — Status of — Proceeds of policy though payable to nominee do not vest in him — He cannot assign policy — AIR 1962 All 355, Dissented from — Cal 513 C (C N 103)

Interpretation of Statutes

See also Civil P. C (1908), Preamble

—Expression "without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-sec. (1)" — Generality of preceding provision not cut down — See Penal Code (1860), S. 171G (2) — SC 2097 G (G N 446)

—Statute creating special liability — Special definition will supersede ordinary connotation — All 644 A (G N 91) (SB)

Jammu and Kashmir Civil Services (Temporary Service) Rules (1961)

See under Civil Services.

Kerala Agricultural Income Tax Act (22 of 1950)

—S 2 (a) — Receipt from trees cut from roots and removed — Not income but capital, and exempt from taxation. ILR (1969) 1 Ker 329, Reversed

SC 2055 (G N 437)

Kerala Interpretation and General Clauses Act (7 of 1125)

—Ss. 2 (2) and 23 — Word "Act" must mean any Act which Kerala Legislature has power to replace — Definition of "Act" so far as it excludes Central Act would be repugnant to subject and context of S. 23

Ker 301 B (C N 49) (FB)

—S. 4 — Acquisition proceedings commenced under replaced Acts can be continued under the Act — See Kerala Land Acquisition Act, 1961 (21 of 1962), S. 62

Ker 301 A (C N 49) (FB)

—S. 23 — Acquisition proceedings commenced under replaced Acts can be continued under the Act — See Kerala Land Acquisition Act, 1961 (21 of 1962), S. 62

Ker 301 A (C N 49) (FB)

—S. 23 — "Act" meaning of — See Kerala Interpretation and General Clauses Act (7 of 1125), S. 4

Ker 301 B (C N 49) (FB)

—S. 23 — "Repeal" — Includes supersession of one Act by another

Ker 301 C (C N 49) (FB)

—S. 62 — Acquisition proceedings commenced under replaced Acts can be continued under the Act — Kerala Interpretation and General Clauses Act (7 of 1125), Ss. 4, 23

Ker 301 (C N 49) (FB)

Kerala University Act (9 of 1969)

See under Education.

Land Acquisition Act (1 of 1894)

—Ss. 3 (c) and 4 (as amended in Mysore) — Notification under Section 4 can be issued by Government or Deputy Commissioner — Notification by Deputy Commissioner appointing Assistant Commissioner to function as Deputy Commissioner under Act — Notification is illegal — Such appointment can be made only by the State Government

Mys 317 (C N 77)

—S 4 (as amended in Mysore) — Notification under, can be issued by Government or Deputy Commissioner — See Land Acquisition Act (1894), Section 3 (c)

Mys 317 (C N 77)

—S 6 — Notification by State Government issued in pursuance of request made by municipal authorities — Municipal authorities requiring the land for the purpose of constructing road to link up some plots with nearby municipal road — Acquisition is for public purpose — Orissa 233 (C N 77)

Letters Patent

—(Bombay) Cl. 15—Defamation—Damages — Exemplary damages awarded by trial court when not due — High Court in appeal has power and duty to interfere with the decree for damages — See Torts

Bom 424 E (C N 73)

—(Calcutta) Cl. 15 — Provision of R. 22 of Order 41 of Civil P. C. is applicable — AIR 1920 Cal 776, held no longer good law in view of AIR 1921 PC 80 — (Civil P. C. (1908), Order 41, Rule 22)

Cal 548 A (C N 110)

—(Jammu and Kashmir), Cl. 12 — Clause excludes appeal from orders passed by single judge in exercise of his revisional jurisdiction or in exercise of his powers of superintendence — Order under Section 104, Constitution of I. and K., which corresponds to Article 227, Constitution of India is nothing but an order made in exercise of supervisory jurisdiction and hence not appealable

J and K 190 A (G N 47)

Limitation Act (9 of 1908)

—S. 3 — Bar of limitation not pleaded — Court is not bound to speculate upon possible questions of limitation that may arise in the case and apply the section

Cuj 284 B (C N 43)

—S. 14 — Exclusion of time — Suit for recovery of possession filed beyond limitation — Proceedings taken by plaintiff in B. A. D. R. Court are beyond scope of Section 14 — (Debt Laws — Bombay Agricultural Debtors Relief Act (28 of 1947), S. 4)

Mys 318 A (C N 78)

—S. 16 — Plea of fraud as a ground of exemption from limitation — It is necessary for plaintiff to give particulars of fraud alleged — General allegations not enough — Particulars should be such as to make out that plaintiff was kept in dark about her right to sue — Held on allegations in plaint that there was nothing to sustain plea that there were fraudulent representations so as to prevent plaintiff having knowledge of her right to sue — Andh Pra 440 B (C N 73)

Limitation Act (1908) (contd.)

—S. 18 — Plea of fraud as a ground from exemption from limitation — Suit to set aside transfer by guardian — Relief of partition claimed only against alienees — Fraud relevant to sustain claim against transferees can only be a fraudulent design of concealment on their part or alternatively that they were accessory to fraud committed by guardian or that they were not transferees in good faith and for valuable consideration — Plaint not disclosing any of these allegations — Held that so far as alienees were concerned plaintiff was not entitled to invoke benefit of Section 18 — Andh Pra 440 C (C N 73)

—S. 18 read with Section 8 and Art. 44 — Starting point — Sale by de facto guardian of minor's property in 1938 — Plaintiff attaining majority in 1942 — Suit by plaintiff in 1954 to set aside sale on ground that it was not for necessity or for benefit on allegation that she was kept concealed of her right to sue by fraud of defendant — Plaintiff getting knowledge of right to sue in 1947 when she obtained certified copies of sale deed — Held that in the absence of any specific plea that there was fraudulent representation in 1942 or thereafter, no question of extension of time under Sec. 18 can really arise and suit filed more than three years after attaining majority was barred by time under Article 44 read with Section 8 — At any rate suit should have been filed within three years after 1947 when plaintiff obtained knowledge of his right to sue assuming that plaintiff was kept from his knowledge of right to sue till 1947 due to fraud of defendant

Andh Pra 440 G (C N 73)

—Art. 10 — Suit for pre-emption — Part of property sold included share in Shamlat Deh Patti — Property not capable of physical possession within the meaning of Article — Limitation for filing suit will commence from the date of registration of the sale-deed and not from the date of sale

Punj 519 A (C N 84)

—Art. 44 — Article applies not only to transfers of Hindu minor's property by legal guardian but also to transfers by de facto guardian — Observation in AIR 1949 FC 218 held obiter and dissented from

Andh Pra 440 D (C N 73)

—Art. 44 — Transfer of minor's property by de facto guardian with concurrence of minor's lawful guardians amounts virtually to a transfer by lawful guardians themselves — Suit to set aside transfer is governed by Article 44 — Andh Pra 440 F (C N 73)

—Arts. 56 and 115 — Contract for completed work — Work completed on 23-4-

Limitation Act (1908) (contd.)

1955 — Plaintiff protesting against final bill but department not altering it — Payment under final bill accepted on 10-2-1956 — Suit for recovery of money filed on 13-4-1959, after serving notice under Section 80, C. P. C. held was barred by limitation — Article applicable held was 56 and not 115 — Even assuming Article 115 to be applicable the suit was barred by limitation

Raj 268 (C N 63)

—Art. 60 — Loan or deposit — Determination of — Guj 269 (C N 41)

—Art. 60 — Partial receipt from deposit of firm — Does not amount to demand

Guj 269 D (C N 41)

—Art. 115 — Contract for completed work — Article applicable held was 56 and not 115 — See Limitation Act (1908), S. 56

Raj 268 (C N 63)

—Art. 120 — Suit for price of goods supplied — No fixed period of credit fixed — Transaction including various items — Transaction though falling under different heads, treated as parts of single transaction — Dealing showing a sort of composite agreement — Defendant not putting up any positive case — No plea of limitation raised — Held that moneys payable due to plaintiff at foot of accounts were payable on demand — Mere giving of debit memos did not amount to making demand — Article 120 applied and not Article 52 or 56

Guj 284 A (C N 43)

—Art. 144 — Suit for possession against redeeming co-mortgagor time-barred — Plaintiffs claiming to be in possession of a house on a portion of suit property — If the plaintiffs succeed in establishing that they were actually in possession of the house as on the date of the institution of the suit, they are entitled to the relief of injunction notwithstanding that their suit for recovery of possession of the remaining portion of the suit property is barred

Ker 289 E (C N 48)

Limitation Act (36 of 1963)

—S. 4 — Section 4 does not extend the time — See Limitation Act (1963), S. 12

All 652 A (C N 94) (FB)

—S. 5 — Condonation of delay — Delay due to conflicting decisions misleading the party in filing appeal is good ground for condoning delay

All 652 B (C N 94) (FB)

—Sections 12, 14, 4 — Mode of computing period — Sections 12 and 14 provide for extension of limitation — Periods provided under Sections 12 and 14 are to be added to the period prescribed — If such periods taken together expire during vacation appeal may be filed on day on which Court reopens — Section 4 does not extend time — Period for filing appeal expiring during vacation — Copy of judgment not obtained before closing of court — Application for copy on date of reopening of Court

Limitation Act (1963) (contd.)

— Appellant is not entitled to exclusion of time taken in obtaining copy. 1962 All LJ 1149 and S. A. No. 420 of 1967, D/- 19-4-1968 (All) and 1956 All WR (HC) 737, Overruled; (1901) ILR 25 Bom 534 and (1901) ILR 25 Bom 586 and (1897) ILR 19 All 342 and AIR 1914 All 303 and AIR 1929 Rang 96 (1) and AIR 1931 Pat 60, held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85. AIR 1954 Cal 569 and (1904) ILR 27 Mad 21 and AIR 1922 Oudh 89 and AIR 1937 Oudh 26, Discontinued from. All 652 A (C N 94) (FB)

— Section 14 — Period under Section 14 is to be added to period prescribed — See Limitation Act (1963), Section 12

All 652 A (C N 94) (FB)

— Article 48 — Suit for contribution — 'A' making deposit in Court for B on behalf of himself and others — 'A' filing suit for contribution against others — Period of 3 years commences to run not from the date of deposit but from the date of the appropriation of the deposit by B

Oonssa 237 D (C N 78)

— Article 61 — Invalid transfer by Karna-van of equity of redemption in tarwad property to mortgagee in possession — Possession by mortgagee becomes adverse to tarwad — Suit for redemption barred after 12 years — (Travancore-Erhava Act (3 of 1100 M. E.) Section 21) — (Travancore Nayar Act (2 of 1100 M. E.), Section 25)

Ker 305 (C N 50) (FB)

— Articles 64 and 65 — Possession of co-owners — Ouster of co-heir by adverse possession — Proof Manipur 93 (C N 29)

— Article 65 — See Limitation Act (1963), Section 64 Manipur 93 (C N 29)

Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act (11 of 1951)

See under Houses and Rents.

Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code (2 of 1935)

— S. 145 — Bhumiswami lands — Easement over, by prescription — Period is 20 years and not 60 years — Land does not belong to Government — See Easements Act (1882), S. 15

Madh Pra 283 (C N 46)

Madras City Municipal Act (4 of 1919)

See under Municipalities.

Madras General Sales Tax Act (3 of 1939)

See under Sales Tax.

Madras General Sales Tax Turnover Rules

See under Sales Tax.

Madras Shops and Establishments Act (36 of 1947)

See under Shops and Establishments.

Manipur Co-operative Societies Rules 1959

See under Co-operative Societies.

Married Women's Property Act (3 of 1874)

— S. 6 — Section applies only to life insurance policies and not to policies of any other description

Cal 513 D (C N 103)

Minimum Wages Act (11 of 1948)

— S 3(3) — Fixing of different rates of minimum wages for different industries or in different localities by dividing State into zones is not opposed to S. 3(3) or scheme of the Act — (Zones held made on rational basis) SC 2042 F (C N 435)

— S. 5 — Government can fix different minimum wages for different industries or in different localities — The fixation of minimum wages depends on the prevailing economic conditions, the cost of living in a place, the nature of the work to be performed and the conditions in which the work is performed SC 2042 E (C N 435)

— S. 5 — Notification fixing minimum wage saying that if employer supplies free meals to employees, he may deduct the sum mentioned in notification — It is only option given and not duty imposed — Supplying food is amenity — Notification does not fix minimum wages in kind

SC 2042 H (C N 435)

— S. 5(1) — Power conferred under, is not arbitrary or unguided — Article 14 of Constitution is not violated

SC 2042 B (C N 435)

— S. 5(1) — Whether power given to fix minimum wages is administrative or quasi judicial, rules of natural justice apply — Reasonable opportunity held had been given before fixing minimum wages to parties concerned — Order was not vitiated by failure to constitute committee under S. 5(1) (a)

SC 2042 D (C N 435)

— S. 20 — Claims — Fixation of minimum wages by notification under S. 3 — Employer failing to recognise rights of employees accrued to them by virtue of notification — Dispute can be raised before Authority appointed under S. 20(1) only within six months from date of notification Raj 265 B (C N 62)

Motor Vehicles Act (4 of 1939)

— S. 47 — Temporary permits under S. 62 — Opportunity to existing operator to make representations must be given — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 62

Andh Pra 419 C (C N 68)

— S. 47(1) — Right of representations — Right of persons providing transport facilities near proposed route — Under S. 47(1) representations of persons providing passenger transport facilities not only along the proposed route but also near the proposed route have to be taken into consideration Andhra Pra 419 E (C N 68)

— S. 47(3) — Limiting number of stage carriages — Section 47(3) does not render it obligatory on the part of the authority to limit number of stage carriages though

Motor Vehicles Act (contd.)

if such limit is fixed, grant of permit has to be subject to that limit

Andh Pra 419 D (C N 68)
—S. 60(3) (as inserted in 1956) — Power to recover composition fee instead of cancelling permit — Passing of simultaneous order both under S. 60(3) and (1) not contemplated Raj 276 B (C N 66)

—Ss. 62, 47 — Temporary permits — Grant of — Provisions of S. 47 apply — Opportunity must be given to existing operators to make representations against issue of temporary permits

Andh Pra 419 C (C N 68)
—S. 62(c) — Temporary permits — Particular temporary need — Scheme for nationalisation of bus transport in the particular District pending consideration for a considerable time — Representations from public for increase of buses on existing routes and for plying of buses on new routes — Held there was sufficient temporary need justifying grant of temporary permits

Andh Pra 419 A (C N 68)
—S. 62(c) — Temporary permits — Successive grants of temporary permits — (Constitution of India, Art. 226)

Andh Pra 419 B (C N 68)
—S. 62(c) — Temporary permit — Permanent and temporary needs do not necessarily co-exist Goa 137 A (C N 24)

MUNICIPALITIES

—Assam Municipal Act, 1956 (15 of 1957)

—S. 334(1) and (4) — Constitution of notified area — Conclusion of Government that improved arrangements are required not conclusive — Notification can be challenged on ground of absence of authority or that it was made for collateral purpose — Decision of Assam High Court, Reversed SC 2072 A (C N 441)

—Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951)

—S. 586(1), (4) — Notice — Suit for declaration and permanent injunction against Corporation not to enforce invalid order for demolition of structures — Permanent injunction though claimed as additional relief suit held, in essence one for permanent injunction — Absence of notice not fatal to suit — Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 54 Cal 539 A (C N 107)

—Madras City Municipal Act (4 of 1919)

—S. 105 — Vacancy remission — Allowable only if building is entirely vacant Mad 507 (C N 148)

—Punjab Municipal Act (3 of 1911)

—S. 52(1) (g) — Clause (g) inserted by S. 6 of Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (12 of 1959) is void as contravening Art. 31(2) of Constitution SC 2182 E (C N 448)

Mysore High Court Rules 1959

See under High Court Rules and Orders.

Mysore Rent Control Act (22 of 1961)

See under Houses and Rents.

Natural Justice

—Domestic enquiry — Fair trial — See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Sch. 2, Item 3 Guj 277 A (C N 42)

Negotiable Instruments Act (26 of 1881)

—S. 4, Illustration (b) — Promissory note — Essentials of — AIR 1938 All 619, Dissented from Punj 516 A (C N 83)

Northern India Canal and Drainage Act (8 of 1873)

—S. 30-A(2) (as in force in Punjab in 1964) — Scheme under — Scheme not complying with all requirements of the section — Is liable to be quashed

Punj 539 C (C N 89)

—S. 30-B(1) (as in force in Punjab in 1964) — Publication of scheme and 30 days' time for filing objection — Provision mandatory — Non-compliance of the provision cannot be cured by hearing given by Divisional Canal Officer

Punj 539 D (C N 89)

Oaths Act (10 of 1873)

—S. 4 — Authority to administer oaths and affirmations — Magistrate's power of delegation of — Power can only be exercised in favour of an officer subordinate to him as distinguished from another Magistrate which is a Court

Orissa 209 B (C N 69)

—S. 4 — Authority to administer oaths and affirmations — Courts and persons referred in the section — They must have connection with the matter to which the affidavits relate and must be discharging their duties or exercising their powers in connection therewith

Orissa 209 C (C N 69)

Official Secrets Act (9 of 1923)

—S. 14 — Right of accused under Section 548 of Criminal P. C. to copies of any part of record of trial is controlled by order under S. 14 — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 548 Cal 535 B (C N 106)

Orissa Administrative Services Class II (Recruitment) Rules 1959

See under Civil Services.

Orissa Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1930)

See under Civil Services.

Orissa Co-operative Societies Act (11 of 1952)

See under Co-operative Societies.

Partnership Act (9 of 1932)

—S. 4 — Partnership firm — Nature of — Relationship between firm and its partners — Salary received by partner partakes

Partnership Act (contd.)

- of same character as his share of profits
 Mad 497 B (C N 145) (FB)
 —S 42(c) — Dissolution of partnership by death of partner — Rights of strangers in firm not affected — Guj 269 C (C N 41)
 —S 55 — Sale of goodwill after dissolution — Right to quota of controlled raw material is no part of goodwill — Second Appeal No 725 of 1962, D/-6-9-1963 (Pun) Reversed — Punj 522 (C N 85)
 —S 69(2) — Suit by firm against third party — Proof, that persons suing are partners — Modes of — Mys 299 (C N 71)

Payment of Wages Act (4 of 1936)

- S 15(2) — Claims arising out of deductions from wages — Authority appointed under S 15 is to determine the actual wages to be paid and not the potential wages — Raj 265 A (C N 62)

Penal Code (45 of 1860)

- S 21 — Secretary of a Co-operative Society is not a public servant either under Cl. 10 or under Cl. (12) or Cl. (11) of S. 21 — Cal 557 A (C N 111)

- S. 21, Explanation 2—Public servant under suspension — Does not cease to be public servant — Punj 514 (C N 81)

- S. 147 — Case occurring in autonomus district of United Khasi-Jaintia Hills — Both parties belonging to Schedule Tribes — Case is triable by Assistant to Dy. Commissioner — See United Khasi-Jaintia Hills Autonomous District (Administration of Justice) Rules 1953, R 21 — Assam 130 (C N 32) (FB)

- S. 171-A — Electoral right — Interference with — Electors threatened with serious consequences with object of unduly influencing them for changing their decision to nominate certain person as their candidate — This does not constitute any interference with the right to vote or refrain from voting at an election — SC 2037 A (C N 446)

- S. 171-C — Undue Influence at election — Threat to members of Legislative Assembly of Bengal that if certain candidate was elected he would enforce President's rule in Bengal — Held this did not amount to undue Influence — SC 2037 B (C N 446)

- S. 171-C — Undue Influence — What constitutes — There can be undue influence even at the stage when elector goes through mental process of weighing merits and demerits of candidates and makes his choice — (Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), S. 18) — SC 2037 D (C N 446)

- S 171-C(2) — Expression "Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1)" — Meaning — SC 2037 C (C N 446)

- Ss. 171-G, 499, 500 — Distinction between Ss 171-G and 499 — Prosecution for offence under S. 500 — Magistrate has

Penal Code (contd.)

- jurisdiction to proceed with complaint without sanction though facts of complaint disclose offence under S. 171-G for which sanction is necessary — (Criminal P C. (1898), S 196) — Mad 509 (C N 149)
 —S. 292 — Obscenity — What constitutes — Tests laid down — All 614 (C N 88)

- S. 302 — Accused creating false sense of security and confidence in their widowed sister-in-law, a helpless woman who had gone to work on her field — Sister-in-law taken unawares and pounced upon by accused and murdered — No extenuating circumstance — Maximum penalty of law held rightly inflicted — Bom 438 K (C N 74)

- S 397 — "Uses deadly weapon" — There must be overt act in relation with weapon involving more than mere wearing or carrying it, even though such wearing or carrying may be for the purpose of overawing others. (1912) 13 Cri LJ 267 (Low Bur); AIR 1933 Lah 35 & AIR 1926 Sind 150, Dissented from — Punj 532 (C N 88) (FB)

- S. 499 — Distinction between Sections 171-G and 499 — Prosecution for offence under S. 500 — Magistrate has jurisdiction to proceed with complaint without sanction though facts of complaint disclose offence under S 171-G for which sanction is necessary — See Penal Code (1860), S. 171-G — Mad 509 (C N 149)

- S. 500 — Distinction between Section 171-G and 499 — Prosecution for offence under S. 500 — Magistrate has jurisdiction to proceed with complaint without sanction though facts of complaint disclose offence under S. 171-G for which sanction is necessary — See Penal Code (1860), S. 171-G — Mad 509 (C N 149)

Portuguese Civil Code

- Art. 1566 — Under S 5(1) Goa, Daman and Diu (Administration) Act (1962) laws in force in the territories were saved — However under S. 4(1), Goa, Daman and Diu (Laws) No 2 Regulation (1963) corresponding laws stood repealed — Reading of the two provisions show that law relating to pre-emption under Art. 1566 is saved even after coming into force of T. P. Act (1882) as neither S 44 nor any other section in T. P. Act deals with right of pre-emption — Goa 143 (C N 27)

Precedents

- Principle of stare decisis — SC 2037 B (C N 446)

Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (31 of 1952)

- S. 5(2) — Nomination paper signed by proposer and seconder after candidate had done so — Candidate subsequently

Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (contd.)

presenting nomination paper before Returning Officer — Held by such step candidate indicated his assent to being nominated by the particular proposer and seconder — Nomination not invalid — The Legislature, when enacting the Act, must be presumed to know that this was the law as interpreted in India and, consequently, when the language incorporated in S. 5(2) of the Act was used, it must have been intended that nomination papers would not be invalid by reason of the candidate making his signature before the proposer and the seconder

SC 2097 L (C N 446)

—S. 5(2) — Nomination paper signed by proposer and seconder after candidate had done so — Not invalid

SC 2097 M (C N 446)

—S. 5(2) — Validity — Cannot be considered as curtailing rights under Art. 58 of the Constitution — See Constitution of India, Art. 58

SC 2097 N (C N 446)

—S. 17(2) — Election petition — Respondent succeeding — However both sides being responsible for putting into witness box large number of persons deliberately giving evidence which was not true — Held proper course was not to award costs even to successful party

SC 2097 R (C N 446)

—S. 18 — There can be undue influence even at the stage when elector goes through mental process of weighing merits and demerits of Candidates — See Penal Code (1860), S. 171-C

SC 2097 D (C N 446)

—S. 18(1) (a) — Bribery — Proof — A general allegation that bribery was rampant in the elections could not be made the subject-matter of a specific charge of commission of offence of bribery

SC 2097 P (C N 446)

—S. 18(1) (a) — Bribery — Licence granted to a private limited company with specific purpose of obtaining vote of an elector and a Member of Parliament, for a candidate — That would constitute bribery

SC 2097 Q (C N 446)

—S. 18(1) (b) — Undue influence by stranger — Effect — It should materially affect election — Burden of proof is on petitioner

SC 2097 F (C N 446)

—S. 21 — Validity — Not ultra vires on ground that rule making power suffers from vice of excessive delegation of legislative powers — See Constitution of India, Art. 71

SC 2097 H (C N 446)

—Part III — Validity — Not ultra vires Article 71 (1) of the Constitution — See Constitution of India, Art. 71

SC 2097 G (C N 446)

Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Rules (1952)

—R. 4(1), (2) — Validity — Is intra vires S. 21 of Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952) — (December) 1970 Indexes/3

Presidential and Vice-Presidential Rules (contd.)

dential Elections Act (1952)

SC 2097 I (C N 446)

—R. 4(1) — Requirement of certified copy — Every Government servant having custody of document can issue copy

SC 2097 K (C N 446)

—Rr. 4(3) and 6(3) (e) — Validity — Rule 4(3) is validly made under S. 21 of Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952) — Is not in derogation of S. 5(2) of the Act — Rule 6(3) (e) which is consequential is also valid

SC 2097 J (C N 446)

—R. 6(3) (e) — Validity — Rule 6(3) (e) is validly made under S. 21 of Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952) — See Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Rules (1952), R. 4(3)

SC 2097 J (C N 446)

Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (37 of 1954)

—Preamble — Act does not violate Article 14 of Constitution — See Constitution of India, Art. 14

Cal 520 C (C N 104)

—Pre. — Act is not violative of Art. 19 (1) (g) of Constitution — See Constitution of India, Art. 19(1) (g)

Cal 520 E (C N 104)

—S. 2(i) (f) — Section is not violative of Art. 19(1) (g) of Constitution — See Constitution of India, Art. 19(1) (g)

Cal 520 E (C N 104)

—S. 2(v) — 'Food' — Test to determine — Definition wide enough to include Katha (Catechu)

Delhi 267 A (C N 58)

—S. 2(xiii) — Sale — Supply of food by hotelier to resident guest on consolidated charge — There is no sale

Delhi 244 A (C N 53) (FB)

—Ss. 7, 16 — Store — Meaning of — Means storing for sale — Criminal Appeal No. 100-D of 1964, D/-13-6-1969 (Delhi), Overruled. AIR 1967 Cal 110 & AIR 1966 Cal 51 & AIR 1963 Assam 28, Dissented from

Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB)

—S. 12 — Act does not violate Art. 14 of Constitution — See Constitution of India, Art. 14

Cal 520 C (C N 104)

—S. 13 — Report signed by Public Analyst after issue of notification regarding his appointment — Sample of food received in office before issue of notification — Evidentiary value of report

Delhi 244 C (C N 53)

—S. 16 — Store — Meaning of — Means storing for sale — See Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (1954), S. 7

Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB)

—S. 19 — Act does not violate Art. 14 of Constitution — See Constitution of India, Art. 14

Cal 520 C (C N 104)

Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules (1966)

—R. 5, Appendix B, Item A-21 — Standard prescribed for katha cannot be said to be impossible of attainment — Rule is not ultra vires on ground that it is unreasonable and high

Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules (contd.)

Delhi 267 C (C N 58)

Protection of Rights of Tenants (Cashew-nuts and Arecanuts) Order, 1965

—Validity — President of Portugal or Overseas Minister or Governor General of State of India could have had no power to pass Order of 1965 — Lt Governor of Goa, Daman and Diu, therefore, has no power to pass that Order by virtue of Cl 2 of Goa, Daman and Diu (Administration) Removal of Difficulties Order 1962). Cl. 2 (as amended on 19-12-1963) — Order of 1965 is, therefore, ultra vires and invalid — (Goa, Daman and Diu (Administration) Removal of Difficulties Order (1962), Cl. 2 (as amended on 19-12-1963) Goa 142 A (C N 26)

PUBLIC SAFETY

—West Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts Act 21 of 1919)

—S 4 — Offences triable by Special Courts—Secretary of co-operative society not being a public servant cannot be tried under S. 409, Penal Code by special court Cal 557 C (C N 111)

—West Bengal Security Act (19 of 1950)

—S. 29(3) (b) — Determination of compensation by Arbitrator is subject to Sections 45 and 46 of Arbitration Act (1940) (10 of 1940) — It is open for claimant, therefore, to move appropriate authority for referring matter of compensation payable to him to arbitration — (Arbitration Act (1940), Ss 45 and 46)

Tripura 94 B (C N 27)

—S 29(3) — Section 37 has nothing to do with enforcement of right to compensation by individual whose property has been requisitioned — See West Bengal Security Act (19 of 1950), S 37

Tripura 94 C (C N 27)

—S. 37 — Section 37 has nothing to do with enforcement of right to compensation by individual whose property has been requisitioned

Tripura 94 C (C N 27)

Punjab Civil Services (Judicial Branch) Rules (1951)

See under Civil Services.

Punjab Civil Services (Punishment and Appeal) Rules (1952)

See under Civil Services.

Punjab Co-operative Societies (Amendment) Ordinance (10 of 1963)

See under Co-operative Societies.

Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959)

See under Education.

Punjab Municipal Act (3 of 1911)

See under Municipalities

Railway Establishment Code

See under Civil Services.

Railways Act (9 of 1890)

—S. 73 (New) (as amended in 1951) — Effect of amendment — Liability of railway for loss of goods — When onus of proof shifts on railway

Delhi 261 A (C N 50)

—S. 77-C (as amended in 1951) — Section does not refer to loss or non-delivery — Railway administration when can be absolved of its liability for short delivery

Delhi 261 B (C N 55)

Rajasthan Service Rules (1951)

See under Civil Services

Registration Act (16 of 1908)

—S 17(1) (b) — Documents of which registration is compulsory — Partition deed — Effect of non-registration — Though inadmissible in evidence for ascertaining terms of partition and tracing source of title, the factum of partition can be proved by other evidence

Andh Pra 407 A (C N 65)

Representation of the People Act (32 of 1951)

—Ss 116-A and 123 — Jurisdiction of Supreme Court under S. 116-A — Charge of commission of corrupt practice — Finding as to, is one of fact — No interference with finding of High Court merely on ground that different view on evidence is reasonable

SC 2075 A (C N 417)

—S 116-A — Election petition, alleging commission of corrupt practice by returned candidate, rejected — Dismissal of appeal to Supreme Court — Court however disallowed cost of returned candidate in appeal in view of the fact that he had raised several false pleas

SC 2075 B (C N 417)

—S 123 — Jurisdiction of Supreme Court under S. 116-A — Charge of commission of corrupt practice — Finding as to is one of fact — No interference with finding of High Court merely on ground that different view on evidence is reasonable — See Representation of the People Act (1951), S 116-A SC 2075 A (C N 417)

SALES TAX

—Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939)

—Ss. 3(1), 5 — Madras General Sales Tax Turnover Rules, R. 16 — Unlicensed dealer in hides and skins — During 1933-34 such dealer was liable to multiple taxation — No case of discrimination

Mad 494 A (C N 146) (1933)

Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (contd.)

—S. 5 — Unlicensed dealer in hides and skins — During 1953-54 such dealer was liable to multipoint taxation — No case of discrimination — See Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), Section 3(1) Mad 494 A (C N 144) (FB)

—Madras General Sales Tax Turnover Rules

—R. 16 — Unlicensed dealer in hides and skins — During 1953-54 such dealer was liable to multipoint taxation — No case of discrimination — See Sales Tax — Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939), S. 3(1) Mad 494 A (C N 144) (FB)

—U. P. Sales Tax Act (15 of 1948)

—S. 2(c) — Dealer — Assessee carrying on business in Calcutta dispatching goods on orders from U. P. on railway receipts in name of self which were endorsed by assessee's bankers at Calcutta — Price realised from purchasers on endorsement and delivery of receipts from Banker's branches in U. P. — Assessee not a 'dealer' All 650 (C N 93) (FB)

—Ss. 7(3) and 21 — Failure to furnish return — Proceeding under S. 7(3) not without jurisdiction — Assessment under S. 7(3) cannot be considered as one under S. 21 All 641 (C N 90) (FB)

—S. 21 — Assessment under S. 7(3) cannot be considered as one under S. 21 — See Sales Tax — U. P. Sales Tax Act (1948), S. 7(3)

All 641 (C N 90) (FB)

Sea Customs Act (8 of 1878)

—S. 137 — Findings arrived at by Customs Authorities in the absence of procedural irregularity cannot be disturbed in writ petition — See Constitution of India, Art. 226, Cal 527 E (C N 105)

—S. 167(8) — Declaration under S. 12 (1), Foreign Exchange Regulation Act 1947, by exporter containing incorrect information on points on which S. 12 (1), Foreign Exchange Regulation Act not requiring declaration — Exporter cannot be penalised under S. 167(8) — Authorities may proceed under other provisions but not under S. 167(8) Cal 527 A (C N 105)

—Ss. 167 (8), 167 (37) — Foreign Exchange Regulation Act (1947), S. 12 (1) — Order of confiscation founded both on Items (8) and (37) of S. 167 — Charge of violation of S. 12, Foreign Exchange Regulation Act failing — Confiscation order cannot be struck down

Cal 527 G (C N 105)

—S. 167(8) — Personal penalty under, can exceed lower alternative of Rs. 1,000 and penalty up to three times of value of goods concerned can be imposed where amount exceeds Rs. 1000 — Since it was held that Customs Authorities had no

Sea Customs Act (contd.)

jurisdiction to proceed under S. 167(8), the order imposing penalty of Rs. 35,000 was quashed — Refund ordered in proceedings under Art. 226

Cal 527 H (C N 105)

—S. 167(37) — Findings arrived at by Customs Authorities in the absence of procedural irregularity cannot be disturbed in writ petition — See Constitution of India, Art. 226 Cal 527 E (C N 105)

—S. 167(37) — Charge under S. 12(1), Foreign Exchange Regulation Act for misstatement in declaration by exporter — Though S. 29 or 137 of the Sea Customs Act was not specifically mentioned held that by understating the value of exported goods accused had committed offence under S. 167(37) — Section 167(37) has to be read with Ss. 29 and 137 of Sea Customs Act — Defence and proceeding for adjudication proceeding on this twofold basis — Held that it was not correct to say that petitioner was charged only with violation of S. 12(1) of Foreign Exchange Regulation Act Cal 527 F (C N 105)

SHOPS AND ESTABLISHMENTS

—Madras Shops and Establishments Act (36 of 1947)

—S. 41(1) — Procedure under — Employee reaching superannuation age — Procedure under S. 41(1) need not be followed Mad 487 (C N 142)

Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877)

—S. 54 — Relief for perpetual injunction sought only as additional relief to relief of declaration that order of Commissioner of Calcutta is illegal, invalid and mala fide — Suit is nevertheless suit for permanent injunction — See Municipalities — Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), S. 586(1) Cal 539 A (C N 107)

—S. 54 — Injunction — See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 144

Ker 289 E (C N 48)

Stamp Act (2 of 1899)

See under Stamp Duty

STAMP DUTY

—Stamp Act (2 of 1899)

—S. 2 (17) — Definition of mortgage deed in — Is wider than in Section 58 (a), T. P. Act All 644 B (C N 91) (SB)

—Sch. 1B, Articles 6 (1) and 40 (b) (as amended by U. P. Stamp (Amendment) Act, 1962) — Mortgage deed or agreement relating to deposit of title deeds — Deed held evidenced agreement pledging goods and also agreement purporting to create mortgage by deposit of title deeds

All 644 C (C N 91) (SB)

—Sch. 1B, Art. 40(b) (as amended by U. P. Stamp (Amendment) Act, 1962) —

Stamp Duty — Stamp Act (contd.)

Mortgage deed or agreement relating to deposit of title deeds — Deed held evidenced agreement pledging goods and also agreement purporting to create mortgage by deposit of title deeds — See Stamp Duty — Stamp Act (1899), Sch 1B, Art. 6(1) All 644 C (C N 91) (SB)

Suppression of Immoral Traffic in Women and Girls Act (104 of 1956)

—Ss. 4(1), 8 — Conviction for — Prosecution must prove that accused was knowingly living wholly or in part on earnings of prostitution Mad 491 A (C N 143)

—S. 8 — Earnings referred to in S. 4 are outcome of state of things embodied in Section 8 — See Suppression of Immoral Traffic in Women and Girls Act (1956), S. 4(1) Mad 491 A (C N 143)

—S. 8 — Seducing for purpose of prostitution — In absence of corroboration regarding solicitation it is not safe to convict merely on testimony of person alleged to have been seduced

Mad 491 B (C N 143)

Torts

—Defamation — Damages — Damages are compensatory and not punitive

Bom 424 C (C N 73)

—Defamation — Damages — Damage to reputation — Diminution in esteem and extent of mental distress to be considered

Bom 424 D (C N 73)

—Defamation — Damages — Exemplary damages awarded by trial Court when not due — High Court in appeal has power and duty to interfere with the decree for damages — (Letters Patent (Bom), CL 15) Bom 424 E (C N 73)

—Defamation — Damages — Power of appellate Court to interfere

Bom 424 E (C N 73)

—Defamation — Damages — Costs of the litigation cannot be included in damages — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 35)

Bom 424 G (C N 73)

—Defamation — Damages — Plea of justification entirely given up — Evidence relating to justification cannot be reconsidered for purposes of mitigation of damages Bom 424 H (C N 73)

—Libel — Qualified privilege — Privileged occasion — Fact that subject-matter is of general public importance not sufficient — Party must have duty to communicate to the public

Bom 424 A (C N 73)

—Libel — Qualified privilege — Malice — Burden of proof — Burden is on plaintiff Bom 424 B (C N 73)

Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (43 of 1955)

—S. 2 (1) (d) — Mark whether deceptively similar to another mark — Test

SC 2062 A (C N 439)

Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (contd.)

—S. 9 (1) — Registration of trade mark — Delayed plea that word used in trade mark is deceptive and not invented — Inference that it did not strike even the legal adviser of party etc., that the trade mark is deceptive can be drawn — Finding by High Court also against plea — Plea rejected by Supreme Court

SC 2062 B (C N 439)

Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882)

—S. 8 — Deed — Construction — See Deed — Construction

—S. 11 — Restriction repugnant to interest created — Settlement deed — Conveyance of absolute interest — Restriction as to joint enjoyment with settlor and as to alienation is void and cannot be given effect to Orissa 215 C (C N 71)

—S. 14 — Settlement — Evasion of rules against perpetuities

Mad 484 (C N 141)

—S. 41 — Benami — See Benami

—S. 44 — Under S. 5(1) Goa, Daman and Diu (Administration) Act (1962) laws in force in the territories were saved — However under S. 4(1) Goa, Daman and Diu (Laws) No. 2 Regulation (1963) corresponding laws stood repealed — Reading of the two provisions shows that law relating to pre-emption under S. 1566 was saved as neither S. 44 nor any other section in T. P. Act dealt with right of pre-emption — See Portuguese Civil Code, S. 1566 Goa 143 (C N 27)

—S. 52 — "Otherwise dealt with" — Includes raising of constructions wrongfully — Suit for possession of vacant land — Defendant putting up superstructure after filing of suit — Cannot claim advantage out of the buildings wrongfully put up All 648 A (C N 92)

—S. 54 — Sales of immovable property — Passing of consideration not condition precedent for transfer of title

Orissa 218 A (C N 72)

—S. 58 — Definition of mortgage deed in Section 2 (17) Stamp Act — Is wider than in Section 58(a), T. P. Act — See Stamp Duty — Stamp Act (1899), S. 2(17) All 644 B (C N 91) (SB)

—Ss. 58, 100 — Mortgage by deposit of title deeds — Effect — Effectuates transfer of right to properties — Hence creation of charge separately on properties becomes unnecessary

All 644 D (C N 91) (SB)

—S. 60 — Right of redemption — Mortgagee in possession to pay michavaram — Non-payment — Mortgage debt wiped off — Suit by mortgagor is not suit for redemption Ker 289 C (C N 48)

—S. 92 — Equitable doctrine of subrogation — Applicability — Mortgage amount wiped off by adjustment against arrears of michavaram — Plaintiff-mortgagor not required to make any payment to mortgagee — Doctrine does not apply — Plaintiff-Mortgagor gets no right to be reimbursed by other co-mortgagors

T. P. Act (contd.)

Ker 289 B (C N 48)

—S. 100 — Mortgage by deposit of title deeds — Effect — Effectuates transfer of right to properties — Hence creation of charge separately on properties becomes unnecessary — See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 58

All 644 D (C N 91) (SB)

—Ss. 106 and 109 — Date of commencement of tenancy is when tenant has been originally let in — Transfer of the property does not affect it — Tenancy cannot be deemed to have commenced on the date of transfer — Notice terminating tenancy with the expiry of date of transfer invalid — Section 109 supports the view

Raj 272 B (C N 65)

—S. 106 — Tenancy at will, what is — Section 106 does not apply to such tenancy

Raj 272 C (C N 65)

—S. 106 — Power of Custodian of Evacuee Property to eject without notice under Section 106 cannot be availed of by purchaser of property from him — See Administration of Evacuee Property Act (1950), S. 4(2)

Raj 272 D (C N 65)

—S. 108, Cl. (o) — Lease of premises for residential purposes to businessman — Carrying on some business work during spare time in small portion of premises without running a shop — User not inconsistent with purpose of lease

Mys 297 A (C N 70)

—S. 109 — Date of commencement of tenancy — Date when tenant has been originally let in is decisive — Notice terminating tenancy with the expiry of date of transfer invalid — S. 109 supports the above — See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 106

Raj 272 B (C N 65)

Travancore-Cochin High Court Act (4 of 1125 ME)

—S. 23 — Finality as regards matter on which Judges of Division Bench are in agreement — Difference as to reasons not material

Ker 289 (C N 48)

Travancore-Ezhava Act (3 of 1100 ME)

—S. 21 — Invalid transfer by Karnavan of equity of redemption in tarwad property to mortgagee in possession — Possession by mortgagee becomes adverse to tarwad — Suit for redemption barred after 12 years — See Limitation Act (1963), Art. 69

Ker 305 (C N 50) (FB)

Travancore Limitation Act (6 of 1100 ME)

—Art. 136 — Mortgage amount wiped off by adjustment against arrears of michavaram — Redeeming co-mortgagor is not subrogated to the position of mortgagee — Suit by some of the co-mortgagors claiming recovery of their share in the suit property in such a case from redeeming co-mortgagor cannot be regarded as suit for redemption — Article 136 does not apply

Ker 289 D (C N 48)

Travancore Nayar Act (2 of 1100 ME)

—S. 25 — Invalid transfer by Karnavan of equity of redemption in tarwad property to mortgagee in possession — Possession by mortgagee becomes adverse to tarwad — Suit for redemption barred after 12 years — See Limitation Act (1963), Art. 69

Ker 305 (C N 50) (FB)

Tripura (Courts) Order 1950

See under High Court Rules and Orders

United Khasi Jaintia Hills Autonomous District (Administration of Justice) Rules, 1953

—Rr. 21 and 22 — Under R. 21 the Subordinate District Council Court is not competent to try an offence under S. 147 Penal Code — Jurisdiction of Assistant to Dy. Commissioner to try such offence is saved by R. 22

Assam 130 (C N 32) (FB)

—R. 22 — Under R. 21 the Subordinate District Council Court is not competent to try an offence under S. 147 Penal Code — Jurisdiction of Assistant to Dy. Commissioner to try such offence is saved by R. 22 — See United Khasi Jaintia Hill Autonomous District (Administration of Justice) Rules, 1953, R. 21

Assam 130 (C N 32) (FB)

U. P. Sales Tax Act (15 of 1948)

See under Sales Tax

West Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act (21 of 1949)

See under Public Safety

West Bengal Security Act (19 of 1950)

See under Public Safety

Words and Phrases

—"Civil Proceeding" — Proceeding which involves assertion or enforcement of a civil right is a civil proceeding — See Constitution of India, Art. 133(1)

Tripura 86 B (C N 23)

SUBJECTWISE LIST OF CASES OVERRULED, REVERSED AND DISSENTED FROM, ETC. IN A. I. R. 1970 DECEMBER

DISS.=Dissented from in; NOT F.=Not followed in; OVER.=Overruled in;
REVERS.=Reversed in

Civil Procedure Code (5 of 1908)

- S 2 (17) (h) — (1960) 64 Cal WN 60 — Not F. in view of AIR 1959 SC 589 as interpreted AIR 1970 Cal 539 B (C N 107)
- S 80 — (1960) 64 Cal WN 60 — Not F. in view of AIR 1959 SC 589 as interpreted AIR 1970 Cal 539 B (C N 107)
- S 80 — AIR 1961 Guj 85 — Diss. AIR 1970 Manipur 90 (C N 28)
- S. 80 — AIR 1960 Pat 530 — Diss. AIR 1970 Manipur 90 (C N 28)
- O 18, R 3 — AIR 1956 Sau 52 — Diss. AIR 1970 Raj 278 B (C N 67)
- O 33 R 5(d-1) — AIR 1948 Mad 433 — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 A (C N 67)
- O 33, R 5(d-1) — AIR 1949 Mad 591 — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 A (C N 67)
- O 33 R 5(d-1) — AIR 1956 Mad 271 — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 A (C N 67)
- O 33, R 5(d-1) — AIR 1956 Mad 677 — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 A (C N 67)
- O 33, R 6 — AIR 1956 Mad 271 — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 B (C N 67)
- O 33, R 6 — AIR 1956 Mad 677 — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 B (C N 67)

CIVIL SERVICES

—Rajasthan Service Rules (1951)

- R. 18 — 1969 Lab IC 513 (Raj) — Revers. AIR 1970 Raj 261 A (C N 61).
- R 141 — 1969 Lab IC 513 (Raj) — Revers. AIR 1970 Punj 261 B (C N 61).

Constitution of India

- Art. 14 — ('68) 70 ITR 293 (All)— Over. AIR 1970 All 620 D (C N 89) (FB).
- Art. 14 — ('69) C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi) — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 D (C N 89) (FB).
- Art. 14 — ('67) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 D, E (C N 89) (FB).
- Art. 14 — AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 D (C N 89) (FB).
- Art. 31(2) — AIR 1966 Punj 232 — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 2182 F (C N 448).
- Art. 133(1) (a) (c) — ('68) C. W. J. C. Nos. 197 & 234 of 1968 (Pat) — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 2011 (C N 434).
- Art. 311 — AIR 1961 Guj 63 — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 213 B (C N 70).

Contract Act (9 of 1872)

- S 60 — AIR 1951 All 774 (FB) — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 237 B (C N 78).

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES

- Orissa Co-operative Societies Act 1951 (II of 1952)
- S 8 — ('67) O. J. C. 104 of 1967 (Orissa) — Over. AIR 1970 Orissa 227 (C N 75) (SB).

Co-operative Societies — Orissa

Co-operative Societies Act (contd.)

- S 71 — ('67) O. J. C. No. 104 of 1967 (Orissa) — Over. AIR 1970 Orissa 227 (C N 75) (SB).

Criminal Procedure Code (5 of 1898)

- S. 145 — AIR 1969 Manipur 3 — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 209 D (C N 69).
- S. 145 — AIR 1966 Punj 523 — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 209 D (C N 69).
- S 483 (4) — 1964 (1) Cri LJ 242 (Mad) — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 515 (C N 82).
- S 483 (6) — ('66) Ref. No 101 of 1966 (Goa) — Diss. AIR 1970 Goa 140 C (C N 25)

Displaced Persons (Compensation and Rehabilitation) Rules (1955)

- R. 102, Cls (a) to (d) and Proviso — ('69) C. W. No 2917 of 1965, D/- 23-10-1969 (P & H) — Revers. AIR 1970 Punj 525 A (C N 86)

EDUCATION

—Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959)

- S. 3 — AIR 1966 Punj 232 — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 2182 A (C N 448).
- S. 5 — AIR 1968 Punj 232 — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 2182 C (C N 448).
- S. 6 — AIR 1966 Punj 232 — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 2182 A (C N 448).

Evidence Act (1 of 1872)

- S. 114 — 1966 Ker LT 86 — Held no longer good law as interpreted AIR 1970 Ker 310 (C N 51).
- S. 114 — 1966 Ker LT 93 — Held no longer good law as interpreted AIR 1970 Ker 310 (C N 51).

Hindu Succession Act (30 of 1956)

- S 14(2) — AIR 1965 Andh Pra 66 — Diss. AIR 1970 Raj 285 (C N 69).

HOUSES AND RENTS

—M. P. Accommodation Control Act (41 of 1961)

- S. 12 — ('69) S. A. No. 940 of 1965, D/- 3-3-1969 (Madh Pra) — Over. AIR 1970 Madh Pra 200 (C N 47).
- S 13(6) — ('69) S. A. No 940 of 1965, D/- 3-3-1969 (Madh Pra) — Over. AIR 1970 Madh Pra 200 (C N 47).

Income-tax Act (11 of 1922)

- S. 19(4) (b) — (1964) 51 ITR 467 (Mad) — Over. AIR 1970 Mad 497 A (C N 145) (FB).
- S. 16(1) (b) — (1964) 51 ITR 467 (Mad) — Over. AIR 1970 Mad 497 A (C N 145) (FB).

Income-tax Act (43 of 1961)

- S. 271 — ('68) 70 ITR 293 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 620 E (C N 89) (FB).
- S. 271 — ('69) C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi) — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 E (C N 89) (FB).
- S. 271 — ('67) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 E (C N 89) (FB).
- S. 271 — AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 E (C N 89) (FB).
- S. 297 (2) (g) — ('68) 70 ITR 293 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 620 E (C N 89) (FB).
- S. 297 (2) (g) — ('69) C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi) — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 E (C N 89) (FB).
- S. 297 (2) (g) — ('67) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 E (C N 89) (FB).
- S. 297 (2) (g) — AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 E (C N 89) (FB).

Insurance Act (4 of 1938)

- S. 39 — AIR 1962 All 355 — Diss. AIR 1970 Cal 513 C (C N 103).

Kerala Agricultural Income-tax Act (22 of 1950)

- S. 2 (a) — ILR (1969) 1 Ker 329 — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 2055 (C N 437).

Kerala Land Acquisition Act 1961 (21 of 1962)

- S. 62 — 1968 Ker LJ 1 — Over. AIR 1970 Ker 301 A (C N 49) (FB).
- S. 62 — 1969 Ker LJ 389 — Over. AIR 1970 Ker 301 A (C N 49) (FB).

Limitation Act (9 of 1908)

- Art. 44 — AIR 1949 FC 218 — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 440 D (C N 73).

Limitation Act (36 of 1963)

- S. 4 — (1897) ILR 19 All 342 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — AIR 1914 All 303 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — AIR 1922 Oudh 39 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — AIR 1937 Oudh 26 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — 1956 All WR (HC) 737 — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — 1962 All LJ 1149 — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

Limitation Act (1963) (contd.)

- S. 4 — ('68) S. A. No. 420 of 1967, D/- 19-4-1968 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — (1901) ILR 25 Bom 584 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — (1901) ILR 25 Bom 586 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — AIR 1954 Cal 569 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — (1904) ILR 27 Mad 21 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — AIR 1931 Pat 60 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 4 — AIR 1929 Rang 96 (1) — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — (1897) ILR 19 All 342 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — AIR 1914 All 303 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — AIR 1922 Oudh 39 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — AIR 1937 Oudh 26 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — 1956 All WR (HC) 737 — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — 1962 All LJ 1149 — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — ('68) S. A. No. 420 of 1967, D/- 19-4-1968 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — (1901) ILR 25 Bom 584 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — (1901) ILR 25 Bom 586 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — AIR 1954 Cal 569 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — (1904) ILR 27 Mad 21 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — AIR 1931 Pat 60 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 12 — AIR 1929 Rang 96 (1) — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- S. 14 — (1897) ILR 19 All 342 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

Limitation Act (1963) (contd.)

—S. 14 — AIR 1914 All 303 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — AIR 1922 Oudh 39 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — AIR 1937 Oudh 26 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — 1956 All WR (HC) 737 — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — 1962 All LJ 1149 — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — ('68) S. A. No. 420 of 1967, D/- 19-4-1968 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — (1901) ILR 25 Bom 584 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — (1901) ILR 25 Bom 586 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — AIR 1954 Cal 569 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — (1904) ILR 27 Mad 21 — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — AIR 1931 Pat 60 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

—S. 14 — AIR 1920 Rang 96 (1) — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

Negotiable Instruments Act (26 of 1881)

—S. 4 Illustration (b) — AIR 1938 All 619 — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 516 A (C N 83).

Partnership Act (9 of 1932)

—S. 35 — ('63) S. A. No. 725 of 1962, D/- 6-9-1963 (Punj) — Revers. AIR 1970 Punj 522 (C N 85).

—S. 69 (2) — AIR 1952 Nag 57 — Partly Diss. AIR 1970 Mys 299 (C N 71)

Penal Code (45 of 1860)

—S. 397 — AIR 1933 Lah 35 — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 532 (C N 88) (FB).

Penal Code (contd.)

—S. 397 — AIR 1926 Sind 150 — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 532 (C N 88) (FB).

—S. 397 — (1912) 13 Cri LJ 267 (Low Bur) — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 532 (C N 83) (FB).

Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (37 of 1954)

—S. 7 — AIR 1963 Assam 28 — Diss. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 7 — AIR 1966 Cal 51 — Diss. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 7 — AIR 1967 Cal 110 — Diss. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 7 — ('69) Criminal Appeal No. 109D of 1964, D/- 13-6-1969 (Delhi) — Over. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 16 — AIR 1963 Assam 28 — Diss. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 16 — AIR 1966 Cal 51 — Diss. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 16 — AIR 1967 Cal 110 — Diss. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 16 — ('69) Criminal Appeal No. 100D of 1964, D/- 13-6-1969 (Delhi) — Over. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

SALES TAX

—Madras General Sales Tax Act (9 of 1939)

—S. 3(1) — (1966) 17 STC 284 (Mad) — Over. AIR 1970 Mad 494 A (C N 144) (FB).

—S. 5 — (1966) 17 STC 284 (Mad) — Over. AIR 1970 Mad 494 A (C N 144) (FB).

—U. P. Sales Tax Act (15 of 1918)

—S. 7(3) — ('63) S. T. Ref. No. 397 of 1961, D/- 30-7-1963 (All) — Held overruled by AIR 1968 SC 565 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 641 (C N 90) (FB).

—S. 21 — ('63) S. T. Ref. No. 397 of 1961, D/- 30-7-1963 (All) — Held overruled by AIR 1968 SC 565 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 641 (C N 90) (FB).

Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882)

—S. 60 — AIR 1943 Bom 191 — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1973 SC 1041 as interpreted AIR 1970 Ker 287 (C N 48).

COURTWISE LIST OF CASES OVERRULED, REVERSED AND DISSENTED FROM ETC. IN A. I. R. 1970 DECEMBER

DISS.=Dissented from in; NOT F.=Not followed in; OVER.=Overruled in; REVERS.=Reversed in

FEDERAL COURT

Observation in AIR 1949 FC 218 = (1950)
1 Mad LJ 586, Sriramulu v. Pundarikakshayya — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 440 D (C N 73).

ALLAHABAD

- {1897} ILR 19 All 342 = 1897 All WN 76, Siyadat-Un-Nissa v. Muhamad Mahmud — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- AIR 1914 All 303 = 23 Ind Cas 874, Budhu v. Sultan — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- AIR 1922 Oudh 39 = 25 Oudh Cas 71, Abdul Ghaffor v. Mt. Rasulunnisa — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- AIR 1937 Oudh 26 = ILR 12 Luck 531, Sukhanandan Prasad Shukla v. Raja Ahmad Ali Khan — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- AIR 1938 All 619 = 1938 All LJ 907, Firm Ratanji Bhagwanji and Co. v. Prem Shanker — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 516 A (C N 83).
- AIR 1951 All 774 = 1951 All LJ 521 (FB), Dharni-Dhar v. Chandra Shekhar — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 237 B (C N 78).
- {1956} All WR (HC) 737, Udairaj Singh v. Jugal Kishore Mehra — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- AIR 1962 All 355 = 1962 All LJ 265, Kesari Devi v. Dharma Devi — Diss. AIR 1970 Cal 513 C (C N 103).
- {1962} All LJ 1149 = 1962 All WR (HC) 902, Ganga Prasad v. Raghubir Prasad — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- {1963} Observation of Desai, J., Sales Tax Ref. No. 397 of 1961, D/- 30-7-1963 (All), Kishan Lal Gopi Krishna v. Commr. of Sales Tax — Held overruled by AIR 1968 SC 565 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 641 (C N 90) (FB).
- {1968} 70 ITR 293 (All), Income-tax Officer v. Firm Madan Mohan Damma Mal — Over. AIR 1970 All 620 D, E (C N 89) (FB).
- {1968} Second Appeal No. 420 of 1967, D/- 19-4-1968 (All), Dudhnath Dubey v. Erabhu Dube — Over. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).

ANDHRA PRADESH

AIR 1965 Andh Pra 66 = (1964) 2 Andh WR 470, Gadam Redayya v. Venkataraju — Diss. AIR 1970 Raj 285 (C N 69).

ASSAM

AIR 1963 Assam 28 = 1963 (1) Cri LJ 120, Narain Das v. State — Diss. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

BOMBAY

- (1901) ILR 25 Bom 584 = 3 Bom LR 143, Tukaram Gopal v. Pandurang Sadaram — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- (1901) ILR 25 Bom 586 = 3 Bom LR 244, Pandharinath Sakharan v. Shankar Narayan — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- AIR 1943 Bom 191 = 45 Bom LR 253, Raghavendra Charya Appa Charya Katti v. Vaman Srinivas Deshpande — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1963 SC 1041 as interpreted AIR 1970 Ker 289 C (C N 48).
- AIR 1952 Nag 57 = ILR (1952) Nag 764, Firm Kapurchand Bhagaji v. Laxman Trimbak — Partly Diss. AIR 1970 Mys 299 (C N 71).

CALCUTTA

- AIR 1954 Cal 569 = ILR (1953) 2 Cal 144, Smt. Kamala Sundari Dasi v. Sridhar Chandra — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
- (1960) 64 Cal WN 60, Shivadhar Sukla v. Corporation of Calcutta — Not F. in view of AIR 1959 SC 589 as interpreted AIR 1970 Cal 539 B (C N 107).
- AIR 1966 Cal 51 = 1966 Cri LJ 135, Gopalpur Tea Co. Ltd. v. Corpn. of Calcutta — Diss. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).
- AIR 1967 Cal 110 = 1967 Cri LJ 329, Shipping and Clearing (Agents) Pvt. Ltd. v. Corporation of Calcutta — Diss. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

DELHI

- {1969} Civil Misc. Writ No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), M/s. Jain Brothers v. Union of India — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 D, E (C N 89) (FB).
- {1969} Criminal Appeal No. 100-D of 1964, D/- 13-6-1969 (Delhi), Municipal Corpn. of Delhi v. Jethanand — Over. AIR 1970 Delhi 244 B (C N 53) (FB).

GOA

{1966} Reference No. 101 of 1966 (Goa) — Diss. AIR 1970 Goa 140 C (C N 25).

GUJARAT

AIR 1956 Sau 52, Motibhai v. Umedchand — Diss. AIR 1970 Raj 278 B (C N 67).

AIR 1961 Gui 63, Hemraj Singhji v. I. G.

Gujarat (contd.)

- of Police — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 213 B (C N 70)
 AIR 1961 Guj 85, Bai Jilekhabai v. Competent Officer — Diss. AIR 1970 Manipur 90 (C N 28)

KERALA

- (66) 1966 Ker LT 86 = ILR (1966) 1 Ker 689, Pennunnamma Vally v. Achuthan Unni — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1970 Ker 310 (C N 51)
 (66) 1966 Ker LT 93 = 1966 Ker LR 183, Varkey v. Joseph — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1970 Ker 310 (C N 51)
 (63) 1968 Ker LJ 1 = 1968 Ker LT 205, Gopinatha Pillai v. State of Kerala — Over. AIR 1970 Ker 301 A (C N 49) (FB).
 ILR (1969) 1 Ker 329, Vishnudatta Anthar-anam v. Commr. of Agricultural Income-tax, Trivandrum — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 2035 (C N 437).
 (69) 1969 Ker LJ 339, State of Kerala v. Padmanabhan Asari — Over. AIR 1970 Ker 301 A (C N 49) (FB).

MADHYA PRADESH

- (67) 64 ITR 283 = 1966 MPLJ 1113, Kishanlal v. Commr. of Income-tax — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 D, E (C N 89) (FB).
 AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 = (1969) 72 ITR 417, Commr. of Income-tax, M. P. v. Champalal Sukhrum — Diss. AIR 1970 All 620 D E (C N 89) (FB).
 (69) S A No. 940 of 1965, D/-3-3-1969 (Madh Pra), Hajara Begum v. Guljar Khan — Over. AIR 1970 Madh Pra 280 (C N 47)

MADRAS

- (1904) ILR 27 Mad 21 = 13 Mad LJ 300, Somnath Ayyar v. Venkata Subba Ayyar — Diss. AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
 AIR 1948 Mad 433 = (1948) 1 Mad LJ 400, Mythili Ammal v. Mahadeva Ayyar Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 A (C N 67).
 AIR 1949 Mad 591 = (1949) 1 Mad LJ 61, Ponuswami v. Alamelammal — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 A (C N 67).
 AIR 1956 Mad 271 = ILR (1956) Mad 1035, Anganna v. Angammuthu — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 A, B (C N 67).
 AIR 1956 Mad 677 = 69 Mad 555, In re. K. Annamalai Chettiar — Diss. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 411 A, B (C N 67).
 1964 (1) Cri LJ 242 = (1963) 2 Mad LJ 82, Meliappa Chettiar v. Sivagami Achi — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 515 (C N 82).

Madras (contd.)

- (1964) 51 ITR 467 = (1963) 2 Mad LJ 33, Mathew Abraham v. Commr. of I. T. — Over. AIR 1970 Mad 497 A (C N 145) (FB).
 (1966) 17 STC 284 (Mad), Hajee Abdul Wahab and Sons v. Govt. of Madras — Over. AIR 1970 Mad 494 A (C N 144) (FB).

MANIPUR

- AIR 1969 Manipur 3 = 1969 Cri LJ 124, Leithanthem Bidhu Singh v. Khangrakpam Ibobi Singh — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 209 D (C N 69).

ORISSA

- (67) O J C 104 of 1967 (Orissa) — Over. AIR 1970 Orissa 227 (C N 75) (SB).

PATNA

- AIR 1931 Pat 60 = 14 Pat LT 91, Ramchandra Shukul v. Sri Thakurjee Mandil Darkadhis — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
 AIR 1960 Pat 530 = 1960 BLJR 432, State of Bihar v. Raghunandan Singh — Diss. AIR 1970 Manipur 90 (C N 28).
 (68) C. W. J. C. Nos 197 & 234 of 1968 (Pat) — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 2041 (C N 434).

PUNJAB

- AIR 1933 Lah 35 = 34 Cri LJ 45, Nagar Singh v. Emperor — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 532 (C N 80) (FB).
 (63) Second Appeal No. 725 of 1962, D/-6-9-1963 (Punj) — Revers. AIR 1970 Punj 522 (C N 85).
 AIR 1966 Punj 232, Municipal Committee, Amritsar v. State of Punjab — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 2182 A, C, F (C N 448).
 AIR 1966 Punj 528 = 1966 Cri LJ 1479, Ahmad Din v. Abdul Salem — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 209 D (C N 69).
 (69) C. W. No. 2917 of 1965, D/-23-10-1969 (P & H) — Revers. AIR 1970 Punj 525 A (C N 86).

RAJASTHAN

- 1969 Lab IC 513 (Raj), Shrikishan v. State of Rajasthan — Revers. AIR 1970 Raj 261, A, B (C N 61).

MISCELLANEOUS

- (1912) 13 Cri LJ 267 = 6 Low Bur 41, Nga l v. Emperor — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 532 (C N 80) (FB).
 AIR 1929 Rang 96 (1) = ILR 6 Rang 743, Ma Dan v. Tan Chong Sen — Held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 PC 85 as interpreted AIR 1970 All 652 A (C N 94) (FB).
 AIR 1926 Sind 150 = 27 Cri LJ 334, Nazar Shah v. Emperor — Diss. AIR 1970 Punj 522 (C N 80) (FB).

( 10-11-1970 )

41R	Other Journals
259	(1970) 1 Mys L J 512
297	(1970) 2 Mys L J 50 1970 Rcn C R 733
299	(1970) 2 Mys L J 27
303	(1970) 2 Mys L J 55 1970 Serv L R 735
305	(1970) 2 Mys L J 15 1970 Mad L J (Gr) 552
309	(1970) 2 Mys L J 59 1970 Serv L R 716
314	(1970) 1 Mys L J 532

AIR 1970 Mysore		AIR 1970 Orissa		AIR 1970 Punjab		AIR 1970 Rajasthan
AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals
816	(1970) 2 Mys	233	35 Cat L T 82	528	---	251	---
	L J 118	237	---	531	FB1970 Cur L J 467	255	---
	1970 Mad L J	239	---		72 Pan L R 515	268	---
	(Cti) 833				ILR (1970) 2	270	77 I T R 1007
817	(1970) 2 Mys	AIR 1970 Patna			Pan J 103	272	1969 Ben C R 1086
	L J 102			539	1962 Pan J L J 443	276	1970 Raj L W 193
818	(1970) 3 Mys L J 73	AIR	Other Journals	544	1970 Cur L J 810	278	---
		432	FB1969 B L J R 1033		72 Pan L R 841	281	---
AIR 1970 Orissa				549	---	285	---
AIR	Other Journals	AIR 1970 Punjab		554	1970 Pan L J 134	AIR 1970 Tripura
202	35 Cat L T 250	AIR	Other Journals		1970 Rev L R 175	AIR	Other Journals
	ILR (1970) Cat 131	514	---		1970 Cur L J 318	82	---
213	12 Orissa J D 14	515	1970 Cur L J 157		72 Pan L R 838	84	---
215	---		72 Pan L R 231	556	---	86	---
218	---	516	72 Pan L R 495		(1970) 2 I T J 25	89	---
220	ILR (1969) Cat 1089	519	1970 Pan L J 225	559	77 I T R 338	91	---
224	---	522	1970 Cur L J 313		1970 Pan L J 214	93	---
237	SE35 Cat L T 812	525	1970 Cur L J 370		1970 Cur L J 393	94	---
231	56 Cat L T 839				1970 Rev L R 556

Telephone: 23097

For Expert Opinion & Evidence*ON*Handwriting & Finger Prints*CONSULT :*EX. LIEUT. A. D. CHITALEY, I. N.*R.C., M.L.A.S. (U.S.A.)Handwriting & Finger Print Expert"MATRU KUTIR" DHANTOLI.NAGPUR-1.Enquiries Solicited.

A NEW A. I. R. COMMENTARY

ON

The Indian Penal Code, 1860

In Four Volumes

By D. V. CHITALEY

AND

S. APPU RAO

This long awaited commentary is now nearing completion.

Special Features :

- |   |   |
|---|---|
| 1. Exhaustive and up-to-date case-law.  | 4. Useful notes on matters of practice and procedure under the respective Sections. |
| 2. Clear, analytical and critical exposition of the subject.                          | 5. Exhaustive Topical Index.  |
| 3. Systematised treatment with synopsis, appropriate headings, cross-references, etc. | 6. Useful Appendices.   |
|   | 7. Excellent printing and get-up.   |

Price Rs. 30/- (Inland Price) per volume, post free

OR

Rs. 120/- (Inland Price) for the entire set, freight free.

A cash discount of 5% allowed on full payment of the price for the whole set in advance.

For further particulars, please contact our travelling Representatives

or

Write directly to —

The Sales Manager,

ALL INDIA REPORTER LTD.,

Post Box No. 56, Congressnagar, NAGPUR-1.

Rules regarding contributions.

1. The A. I. R. and Cri. L. J. are essentially and primarily law reports and have to find space for judgments of Courts in preference to all other matters. It should also be noted that the number of judgments which the A. I. R. has to report is ever-increasing and leaves very little space available for articles, etc. Contributions and articles cannot, therefore, be expected to be published as a matter of course.
2. Contributors are requested to note that the failure of the A.I.R. to publish any article sent to it for publication should not be construed as a reflection on the merit of the article.
3. The question as to the publication of any article or other matter is entirely within the discretion of the Editor and he is not bound to give reasons for accepting or not accepting any article or other matter.
4. There is no undertaking to publish articles within any particular time.
5. Until actually published, the acceptance of an article does not mean an undertaking to publish it.
6. The Editor may print extracts or a condensed version of the article, instead of rejecting it completely or printing it in extenso.
7. Articles are accepted on the understanding that no remuneration will be due for them.
8. No correspondence can be entered into regarding the publication or non-publication or delay in publication of any article or other matter.
9. There is no obligation on the A. I. R. to return unpublished articles. Usually, they are returned on request by the contributor within a reasonably short period. But this is done purely as a matter of courtesy. Nor can the A. I. R. accept any legal responsibility for the safe custody of the article etc., or for the loss of the article etc. in transit.
10. The Editor reserves to himself the right of making verbal corrections in the matters sent for publication but otherwise the responsibility for the views expressed or statements made will be exclusively that of the contributors.
11. As the space available in the journal section for articles is very limited, shorter articles have, subject to availability of space, relatively a greater chance of being published than longer ones.
12. It will be an implied assurance underlying every contribution that the contributor has not infringed the copyright of any other person and that he will be liable for breach of such assurance.
13. An article sent for publication in the A. I. R. may be published in the Cri. L. J. and vice versa, at the discretion of the Editor.
14. The matter sent for publication should always be type-written, on one side of the paper only, with a wide margin on the left side, and at least two spaces between lines, and should be free from mistakes of typing, grammar, etc.

Chief Editor,

ALL INDIA REPORTER, NAGPUR-1.

Labour and Industrial Cases

A Monthly Journal Started from January 1968.

A Journal devoted to Labour and Industrial decisions. Besides Judgments of the Supreme Court and all the High Courts, the journal will contain illuminating articles by legal luminaries and Labour Law experts, Labour Acts of our Parliament and State Legislatures and Statutory information like rules, regulations, orders, authorisations, and delegations, made, issued, or promulgated by the Central as well as State Governments, in Digest form.

Yearly subscription of the Journal is Rs. 36/- (Inland subscription) plus postage and packing charges. Rs. 51.10 for the present.

Annual subscription is payable either by money order or by cheque. When payment of subscription is made by cheque please add 50 paise to the subscription amount towards Bank collection charges. It can also be recovered per V. P. P. with January part.

For the convenience of subscribers, subscription can also be accepted in half-yearly instalments in January and July, of Rs. 18/- (Inland subscription) plus postage and packing charges. Monthly subscription will be realised per V. P. P. for Rs. 3/-, (Inland subscription) plus postage & packing charges Rs. 4.35 p. m. for the present.

For further information and details contact our travelling or local representatives, or

Write to: — The Sales Manager,

ALL INDIA REPORTER, LTD.

P. O. Box No. 55, Congress Nagar,

NAGPUR-1 (Maharashtra).

A. I. R. PUBLICATIONS

By

CHITALEY & RAO

BOOKS

Under Print

- (1) CONSTITUTION OF INDIA 2nd Edn. (In Five Volumes)
Vol. 1 already despatched. Vol. II in Press.
- (2) INDIAN PENAL CODE (XLV of 1860) (1st Edn. in 4 Vols.)
Vols. I to III already despatched. Vol. IV in Press.
- (3) A. I. R. MANUAL 3rd Edn. 22 Volumes
Vols. 1 to 7 already despatched. Vol. 9 in Press.
Vol. 8 under despatch.

Ready for Despatch

1. LIMITATION ACT — (4th — 1965 Edn.) (2 Vols.)
2. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE — (6th — 1966 Edn.)
(3 Vols.)
3. TRANSFER OF PROPERTY ACT — (4th — 1968 Edn.)
(in 3 Vols.)
4. FIFTEEN YEARS' DIGEST (1951 to 1965) (Includes also cases of 1950) (Civil, Criminal & Revenue) (in 14 Volumes.)

JOURNALS:

ALL INDIA REPORTER

CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL

LABOUR & INDUSTRIAL CASES

A. I. R. Back sets (only available sets)

Cr. L. J. Back sets (only available sets)

L. I. C. Back year sets.

Quotations on request.

*Supply will be made subject to previous engagements.
Money payable at Nagpur.*

Sales Manager,

All India Reporter Ltd.,

(Post Box No. 56) NAGPUR 1.

---

NOT AVAILABLE FROM ANY BOOKSELLER

---

RECENT LEGAL PUBLICATIONS

LAND AND CONSTITUTION IN INDIA, By H. C. L. MERILLAT

The primary aim of this book is to provide the readers with an introduction to the constitutional structure and problems of the world's largest democracy. It focuses attention on two of the most controversial constitutional issues: property rights in land, especially farm land, and taxation of farm incomes.

1970

Special Indian Price Rs. 45.00

A CRITIQUE OF MODERN HINDU LAW, By J. D. M. DERRETT

This systematic critique is the first of its kind. It is based on principles which are carefully set out and justified with full documentation. The book provides illustrated talking-points, one to every paragraph. There are caustic comments on the way matrimonial causes are developing, and a useful suggestion for their amelioration. The Bar and the Bench will find the book invaluable for appeal cases.

1970

Demy 8vo

504 pp.

Rs. 35.00

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW IN INDIA, By S. P. SATHE

This book contains an exposition of the principles of administrative law as they have been developed by Courts, Legislatures and Government Departments in India. The object of this book is to evoke in the reader a critical curiosity about the subject so that he can undertake an enquiry as to the validity, legitimacy and desirability of the law from the standpoint of social policy and the need for administrative justice.

1970

Demy 8vo

322 pp.

Rs. 22.00

HINDU LAW OF ADOPTION, MAINTENANCE, MINORITY & GUARDIANSHIP

By S. V. GUPTA

This book gives a commentary on two of the codifying statutes—one relating to adoption and maintenance, and the other to minority and guardianship. The pattern of the earlier books — Hindu Law of Marriage and Hindu Law of Succession — giving first the old law and then a running commentary on the provisions of the Acts — has been followed. Supreme Court decisions have been brought up-to-date. It is hoped that this book would prove of immense value to the legal world.

1970

Royal 8vo

480 pp.

Rs. 35.00

IDENTIFICATION OF HANDWRITING AND CROSS EXAMINATION OF EXPERTS

By M. K. MEHTA 4th Edn.

The present edition contains an exhaustive exposition of the science of handwriting identification, profusely illustrated. The book deals with all types of disputed document problems and the various characteristics of handwriting have been explained in a clear and simple manner.

1970

Royal 8vo

424 pp.

Rs. 32.50

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW : by S. RAJAGOPALAN

Administrative Law has now come to occupy a vital place in jurisprudence—an emergent reality in the legal systems of the countries wedded to the observance of the Rule of Law. Crammed with references and information, each subject is dealt with in the light of its history and evolution in India and various foreign countries.

1970

Demy 8vo

462 pp.

Rs. 25.00

THE FRAMING OF INDIA'S CONSTITUTION, Edited by B. SHIVA RAO (in 5 Vols.)

In these 5 volumes is unfolded the fascinating story of the framing of India's Constitution by the Constituent Assembly, through all the rapid changes that the country experienced at the end of World War II.

1968

Set : Rs. 300.00

Deluxe Edn. Rs. 350.00

'OTHER BOOKS'

MY LIFE—Law and Other Things : By M. C. Setalvad	1970	Rs. 30.00
	(Paper) 1970	Rs. 22.00
Principles of Hindu Law : By D. F. Mulla, 13th Edn. 1966, reprinted	1970	Rs. 26.00
Public Service Law Through the Cases : By Madan Bhatia	1969	Rs. 30.00
The Supreme Court on Criminal Law : By J. K. Soonawala, 2 Vols. 2nd Edn.	1969	Rs. 80.00
Constitutions of Asian Countries. (Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee) :	1968	Rs. 55.00
Cheques In Law and Practice : By M. S. Parthasarathy	1969	Rs. 25.00
The Common Law in India : By M. C. Setalvad, 2nd Edn. (Indian)	1970	Rs. 11.00
Constitutional Law of India : By H. M. Seervai, 1967 ; R/P. with Suppl.	1968	Rs. 65.00
The Law of Industrial Disputes : By O. P. Malhotra	1968	Rs. 60.00
Muslim Law : By F. B. Tyabji ; 4th Edn. by Muhsin Tayyibji	1968	Rs. 50.00

N. M. TRIPATHI PRIVATE LIMITED

Law Publishers : 164, Samaldas Gandhi Marg, Bombay-2. : Booksellers

(December) 1970 Indexes/4.

EASTERN LAW'S SELECTED PUBLICATIONS

The New JurisprudenceBy The Hon'ble Mr. P. B. MUKHARJIChief Justice, Calcutta High Court*

The above Tagore Law Lectures on the New Jurisprudence surveys the whole branch of modern law and legal development in India and abroad. It makes an entirely new approach to the concept of jurisprudence. According to the learned author's view expressed in lectures 'Jurisprudence includes whatever law sees and does in any field of human society . . .' This book has discussed such subjects as: (1) Legislative Jurisprudence, (2) Constitutional Jurisprudence, (3) Common Law Jurisprudence, (4) Equity Jurisprudence, (5) Company Jurisprudence, (6) Taxing Jurisprudence, (7) International Jurisprudence, (8) Administrative Jurisprudence, (9) Industrial Jurisprudence, (10) Matrimonial Jurisprudence, (11) Economic Jurisprudence and (12) Justice in theory and practice.

It presents for the first time the whole panorama of Law & Justice in theory and practice in modern age. It is indispensable to the lawyers, judges, bar libraries, law libraries, etc.

Edition 1970

Rs. 35.00

The Customs Act, 1962By B. C. MITRA*

The Author has dealt with this complicated and all important Act in his inimitable and usual precise, concise and lucid style, making very liberal references to important Case Law and setting out relevant extracts from the reports of most recent judicial decisions.

It contains the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill of this Act, the Sea Customs Act and various relevant Acts, Rules and Orders.

A handy book for busy businessmen, Judges, Lawyers etc., in everyday life.

Edition 1970

Rs. 25.00.

Contracts of EmploymentBy N. C. LAHIRI*

In this book the Author has dealt with the most significant area of development of special contracts viz., contracts of employment in respect of Government servants and employees of public sector undertaking and corporations. It contains (i) Government servants, (ii) Public Corporations and their Employees, (iii) Conditions of Service, (iv) Disciplinary Proceedings, (v) Powers of Removal and Dismissal, (vi) Judicial Review, (vii) Quasi-Judicial, (viii) Natural Justice, (ix) The Ghost Land of Art. 311 (2), etc., with Appendix and Forms.

It will be useful to the Government Departments, Public Corporations, Trade Unions, Lawyers and Research Scholars.

Edition 1970

Rs. 20.00.

The Life Insurance Corporation Act, 1956By A. K. BHATTACHARJEE*

The excellent book covers all the developments in case and statutes law including the latest amendments covering the entire field of Life Insurance Law. (The Insurance Act, 1936, has been recast and presented as the same should be, and as not done ever before. This, in a sense, has made the Life Insurance Corporation Act, along with the modified Sections of the Insurance Act, a self-contained statute on Life Insurance Law in India.

Edition 1970

Rs. 15.00.

EASTERN LAW HOUSE PRIVATE LTD.*BOOKSELLERS AND PUBLISHERS

55, Ganesh Chunder Avenue,

CALCUTTA-13.

RECENT AGENCY PUBLICATIONS

WYNE'S

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE AND JUDICIAL POWERS IN AUSTRALIA

Being a Treatise on the Distribution of Legislative and Judicial Powers of the Commonwealth and the States Under the Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act.

The present edition is based on the same logical objectivity and tells the full story of the working of the Constitution so far as those matters which have been litigated; it also presents "a coherent and in some places critical review of what has been decided over the past sixty-eight years." The whole work is a stamp of authority and an analysis of the judicial interpretation of the constitutional powers of the Commonwealth vis-a-vis the States, in the light of the social changes and developments over the year since 1900.

1970

4th Edn. 557 pages

Cloth Rs. 144.50

Paper Rs. 110.50.

BENJAFIELD, D. G. & WHITMORE, H.: Principles of Australian Administrative Law, 3rd Edn.	1966	63.75
LAWRANCE & NUTLEY: Compulsory Purchase and Compensation	1968	47.25
LAWRENCE, D. M., REES, W. H. & BRITTON, W.: Modern Methods of Valuation of Land Houses and Buildings	1969	56.70
MUSTOE, N. E. & WOOD, R. H.: Agricultural Law and Tenant Right, 5th Edn.	1959	94.50
ADKIN, B. W., WALTON, R. & ESSAYAN, M.: Adkin's Landlord and Tenant, 16th Edn.	1967	52.65
LEWIS, F. STURGE: The Town and Country Planning Act, 1968	1969	67.50
SAWER, G.: Cases on the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Australia: 3rd Edn.	1964	85.00
RAYMOND WALTON: The Law of Sales of Land, 3rd Edn.	1969	78.75
GLASS & McHUGH: The Liability of Employers	1966	76.50
O'CONNELL, D. P. (Ed.) & VARSANY, J.: International Law in Australia	1966	111.60
FLEMING, J. G.: The Law of Torts, 3rd Edn.	1965	102.00
EYRE, WILKS & SPENCE, M.: Rating Law and Valuation	1963	110.25
STONHAM, R. M. & McLELLAND: The Law of Vendor and Purchaser	1964	246.50
HUTLEY & WOODMAN: Cases and Materials on Succession	1967	127.50
MORISON SHARWOOD & PANNAM: Cases on Torts, 3rd Edn.	1968	148.75
McGARVIE PANNAM & HOCKER: Cases and Materials on Contract	1966	114.75
DEANE, BOHRINGER & FERNON: Australian Bankruptcy Law and Practice, 4th Edn.	1968	218.75
SYKES, E. I.: Cases and Materials on Private International Law, 2nd Edn.	1969	144.50
EDWARDS, E. J.: Cases on Evidence in Australia	1968	127.50
EDWARDS, HAYES & O'REGAN: Cases on the Criminal Code	1969	119.00
HOWARD, C.: Australian Federal Constitutional Law	1968	102.00
ELSE-MITCHELL: Essays on the Australian Constitution, 2nd Edn.	1961	59.50
MALOR, J. & BALLMAN: Outline of Law in Australia	1969	34.00
GYULA FAL: Space Law	1969	79.80
ROBERTO, R.: Law and Diplomacy in a Changing World	1965	56.25
MAHER, WALLER & DERHAM: Judicial Precedent and Statutory Interpretation	1969	19.13
WISDOM, A. S.: Water Rights Including Fishing Rights	1969	29.25
KLEIN & LEE: Selected Writings of Arthur, T. Vanderbilt, 2 Vols.	1965	112.50
CAREY JOHN: International Protection of Human Rights	1968	45.00
REGALA ROBERTO: World Peace Through Diplomacy and Law	1964	41.25
LUIS KUTNER: World Habeas Corpus	1962	60.00
EDWARDS, C. D.: Trade Regulations Overseas the National Laws	1966	195.00
SMITH, J. G. & FARRAND, J. T.: Emmet's notes on Perusing Titles and on Practical Conveyancing, 15th Edn.	1967	189.00
DAVIES, M. R. RUSSEL: The Law of Road Traffic, 4th Edn.	1967	78.75
FRAENKEL, O. K.: The Supreme Court and Civil Liberties, 2nd Edn. (with Supl.)	1963	33.75
IIMAR TAMMELO: Studies in Legal Method Series Treaty Interpretation and Practical Reason Towards a General theory of Legal Interpretation	1967	21.25
Supreme Court Practice, 2 Vols.	1970	288.00

We are now distributing copies of AUSTRALIAN LAW JOURNAL and COMMONWEALTH LAW REPORTS, from our Office in Bombay and subscription to AUSTRALIAN LAW JOURNAL Vol. No 44 is Rs. 140.00 including Postage and that to COMMONWEALTH LAW REPORTS Vol. No. 118 is Rs. 135.00 including Postage.

Both the above journals are now recognised for their merit and authoritativeness and so merit support from the legal world of India.

N. M. TRIPATHI PRIVATE LIMITED

LAW PUBLISHERS &amp; BOOKSELLERS

164, Samaldas Gandhi Marg,

BOMBAY-2.

READY SHORTLY

TWENTY-SECOND (1971) EDITION
OF
THE LAW OF CRIMES

By*RATANLAL RANCHHODDAS, B.A., LL.B.,*ADVOCATE (O.S.), BOMBAY HIGH COURT*AND*DHIRAJLAL KESHAVALAL THAKORE, B.A.*BARRISTER-AT-LAWEdited by : Manhar R. Vakil, Bar-at-Law. Editor : The Bombay Law Reporter.Assisted by : Amiya K. Sarkar, M.A., LL.B., Advocate, Asst. Editor : The Bombay Law Reporter.Royal 8vo. Pages about 1637. Full Cloth. Gilt title. Price Rs. 50.

This new edition of a standard commentary on the Indian Penal Code, 1860, is thoroughly revised in the light of the new decisions of the Supreme Court of India and the different High Courts reported since the last edition was published. This edition contains all amendments to the Code made by the Central and the State Legislatures.

SOME OPINIONS ON THE PREVIOUS EDITION.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. Hidayatullah, Judge of the Supreme Court of India : "The book is an accepted one already and I am sure it will continue to be a favourite."

The Hon'ble Mr. J. C. Shah, Judge of the Supreme Court of India : "I need hardly say that the Law of Crimes has acquired a well-earned reputation as a standard Commentary on the Indian Penal Code. I have always found the statement of the law full and precise."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. Bhargava, Judge of the Supreme Court of India : "I am quite certain that it will prove useful to me in my work here. This book has been very useful, particularly in the subordinate courts where cases are tried, and I am sure it will continue to serve the lawyers and the courts in their work of administering criminal justice."

The Hon'ble Mr. D. N. Sinha, Chief Justice of Calcutta : "One can say without hesitation that this is the standard book on the subject, and there is no doubt that the present edition will be helpful to all concerned, in future, as it has been in the past."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. Anantanarayanan, Chief Justice of Madras : "The present edition fully justifies the reputation already acquired by this standard treatise on 'The Law of Crimes.' From the point of view of Court-work and Reference, it is certainly the best single-volume commentary on the Indian Penal Code that I am aware of. The present Edition includes the latest case-law, exhibited with clarity, precision and easy reference."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. V. Dixit, Chief Justice of Madhya Pradesh : "The Law of Crimes by Ratanlal and Dhirajlal has been the standard text book on the law of Crimes for over 50 years. I find the new edition thoroughly revised and brought up to date. This work will find a place on the shelves not only of lawyers practising on the criminal side but also of general practitioner, students, Universities and Libraries throughout the country. For me the book has always been of great value and assistance."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. Jaganmohan Reddy, Chief Justice of Andhra Pradesh : "The new edition of The Law of Crimes by Ratanlal and Dhirajlal will form a valuable addition to my library. The Law of Crimes by Ratanlal and Dhirajlal has always been considered in this country to be a standard book, for nearly 60 years, and has served and is serving a useful purpose, not only for lawyers and judges, but also to students. There is particular significance in this edition that the onerous task of giving it a thorough and careful revision has been undertaken by the two editors, with great ability and rich experience and, if I may say so with respect, this endeavour of theirs has greatly added to the value of the book."

The Hon'ble Mr. D. S. Dave, Chief Justice of Rajasthan : "I have been using 'The Law of Crimes' by Ratanlal and Dhirajlal for more than two decades. It is undoubtedly one of the best books on the subject. The commentary is very concise, precise and reliable. The new edition has become more useful on account of inclusion of recent cases."

The Hon'ble Mr. Mehar Singh, Chief Justice of Punjab & Haryana : "The work needs no recommendation from anybody for it has by now become classical on the subject and one to which reference here is made often as an authoritative work."

THE BOMBAY LAW REPORTER (Private) LTD.,
"KRISHNA MAHAL", 53, MARINE DRIVE, BOMBAY 20

Apply to : —*N. M. TRIPATHI (Private) LTD., Samaldas Gandhi Marg, BOMBAY 2.

LATEST AND SELECTED LAW BOOKS

1. Beotra : Suppression of Immoral Traffic in Women and Girls Act (with States Rules)	2nd Ed.	1970	20.00
2. Achar : Motor Transport Workers Act (with States Rules)	2nd Ed.	1970	25.00
3. S. Chakraverti : Administrative Law		1970	20.00
4. Consul : Probation of Offenders Act (with States Rules)	2nd Ed.	1970	25.00
5. Katiyar : Easements and Licences	7th Ed.	1970	35.00
6. Bindra : Interpretation of Statutes	5th Ed.	1970	45.00
7. Sastri and Bagga : Criminal Manual, Minor Acts, Vols.	3rd Ed.	1970	75.00
8. Sethi : Police Acts (Central and States)	3rd Ed.	1970	30.00
9. Sethi : Hindu Succession Act	4th Ed.	1970	15.00
10. Singhal : Civil Court Practice and Procedure		1970	35.00
11. Bagga : Hundred Years Calendar (1901—2000)		1970	20.00
12. Singhal : Damages & Compensation		1970	40.00
13. Chaturvedi : Natural and Social Justice		1970	25.00
14. Aiyer : Contempt of Court, Parliament and Public Servants	4th Ed.	1970	30.00
15. Bagga : Labour Manual (containing Labour Acts and Rules)		1970	30.00
16. Hardless : Handwriting and Thumb-Prints Identification and Forensic Science (with Blocks & Illustrations)		1970	25.00
17. Beotra : Law of Forest (Central & States)	3rd Ed.	1970	20.00
18. Sastri and Bagga : Criminal Manual, Major Acts (I. P. C., Cr. P. C., and Evidence Act)		1970	15.00
19. Sastri and Bagga : Hindi Criminal Manual, Major Acts (I. P. C., Cr. P. C. and Evidence Act)		1969	15.00
20. J. P. Bhatnagar : Essential Commodities Act (with Central Orders)	2nd Ed.	1969	25.00
21. Consul : Law of Foreigners, Citizenship and Passport (with Rules, Notifications, Orders and Allied Laws)	2nd Ed.	1969	20.00
22. Mitter : Defamation and Malicious Prosecution	5th Ed.	1969	12.50
23. Venkiah : Law of Prints & Impressions (Finger, Thumb, Palm, Foot, etc.)		1969	12.50
24. Sethi : Prevention of Food Adulteration Act & Rules (Central & States)	6th Ed.	1969	25.00
25. Woodroffe and Ameer Ali : Criminal Evidence (1965 Ed. with Supp.)		1969	35.00
26. Aiyer : Law relating to Sessions Trial (1960 Ed. with Supp.)	2nd Ed.	1969	30.00
27. Sethi and Dwivedi : Law of Employees State Insurance	2nd Ed.	1969	25.00
28. Suranjan Chakarvarti : Workmen's Compensation Act and Rules (Central and States)		1969	30.00
29. Suranjan Chakarvarti : Law of Wrongful Dismissals in 2 Vols.	5th Ed.	1969	60.00
30. Suranjan Chakarvarti : Law of Railway Servants		1969	12.50
31. N. Lal : Law of Mines and Minerals		1968	14.00
32. Woodroffe & Ameer Ali : Law of Evidence, 4 Vols.	12th Ed.	1968-69	100.00
33. Umrigar : Journalists & The Law		1969	12.50
34. Anand : Law of Compromises (1965 Ed. with Supp.)	2nd Ed.	1969	13.50
35. Bindra : Pleadings and Practice (with 805 Model Forms)	4th Ed.	1969	50.00
36. Bagga : Constitution of India	3rd Ed.	1969	8.00
37. Gopalakrishnan : Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act	3rd Ed.	1969	12.50
38. Chandak : Gift Tax Act & Rules		1968	30.00
39. Dr. Nayyar : All Round Ready Reckoner	3rd Ed.	1968	15.00
40. Alfred Avins : Employees' Misconduct (as Cause for Discipline and Dismissals in India and Commonwealth)		1968	35.00
41. Iyengar : Copyright Act	2nd Ed.	1968	25.00
42. Rao : Law of Negligence		1968	30.00
43. Varshney : Bribery and Corruption (1963 Ed. with Supp.)	2nd Ed.	1968	15.00
44. Dhameja : Registration Act (with State Fees & Amendments)		1968	27.50
45. Das : Arbitration Act	2nd Ed.	1968	35.00
46. Subrahmanyam : Guardians and Wards Act, Majority Act, & Law of Minors		1968	30.00
47. S. Row : Negotiable Instruments Act	6th Ed.	1968	35.00
48. Subrahmanyam : Law of Minors		1968	10.00
49. Sastri : Co-operative Societies in India (Central & States) in 2 Vols.	2nd Ed.	1968	60.00
50. Bannerjee : Law of Execution		1968	50.00
51. Chandak : Law of Costs, Accounts and Valuation		1968	30.00
52. Subrahmanyam and Singhal : Contract Act in 2 Vols.		1968	60.00
53. Pillay : Law of Receivers (1964 Ed. with Supp.)	2nd Ed.	1968	35.00
54. Ram and Dev : Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1964 Ed. with Supp.)		1968	16.00

LAW BOOK COMPANY

Sardar Patel Marg., Post Box No. 4.

ALLAHABAD-1.

In cases of disputed documents please consult

Ugrasen Kashyap

B.A., LL.B., Examiner of Questioned Documents of Dayalbagh, Agra.

Courts, lawyers and clients, please note

1. Ugrasen Kashyap or Father Kashyap as he is called, is the first member of the Kashyap family who started his practice as Examiner of Questioned Documents at Delhi in 1935. He has to his credit the long experience of more than forty years including the period of study and practice all over India.

2. He has now settled at the address given below near the religious institution called the Dayalbagh Satsang at Agra.

3. All correspondence regarding old cases and new cases should be sent to him at the address given below. Fees should be sent by crossed bank drafts payable at the State Bank of India, Agra. Writs of commissions should be sent to the District Judge, Agra for recording his statements.

Address :

UGRASEN KASHYAP, B.A., LL.B.

Examiner of Questioned Documents

Pt. Hiralal Kashyap Goswasthram, Village Lalgarhi near Dayalbagh, Agra.

TWO LEGAL CLASSICAL WORKS

BY

OM PRAKASH AGGARWALA, Formerly of the Punjab Civil Service.

1. THE LAW OF SPECIFIC RELIEF IN INDIA

Sixth (1970) Edition (In Two Volumes)

A new book rather than a new edition of this most comprehensive and most popular book: thoroughly revised and rechecked; about 100 pages of additional matter added; a fairly substantial portion of the text rewritten; variations in the old Act of 1877 and the new Act of 1963 clearly pointed out so that the book is equally useful for cases under the old Act as well as under new Act; several useful appendices added.

Royal 8vo size

Pages 1534

Price: Rs. 60.00 per set.

2. THE INDIAN TRUSTS ACT, 1882

Sixth (1970) Edition

Aggarwala's commentary on the said Act is a classical work dealing with the subject most comprehensively and is couched in precise & lucid language. The book has stood the test of time well and has exclusively held this field from the year 1930 when it was first published. The fact that it has already undergone six editions during this short period speaks volume of its popularity. The book is recommended for the final examination of the Institute of Chartered Accountants for India and is the only book prescribed on the subject. It is on the approved list of various High Courts of India and also for law libraries. For the present edition, the book has been thoroughly revised and an additional matter of about fifty pages has been added covering a number of new reprints.

Royal 8vo size

Pages over 900

Price: Rs. 32.50.

METROPOLITAN BOOK CO., PRIVATE LIMITED

BOOKSELLERS & PUBLISHERS

I - Netaji Subash Marg, DELHI-6.

For disputed writings, signatures, thumb imprints, inks, firearms & allied subjects

CONSULT : P. R. MAHANT, B.A. (Pb.) M.I.A., E.Q.D. (Delhi), C.S.F.I., (Switzerland), GOVERNMENT EXAMINER OF QUESTIONED DOCUMENTS (Trained in Switzerland) V.P.

The only one in India, who has received practical training at a Government Institute in Europe. Especially skilled in deciphering blurred thumb imprints and age of documents. Successfully deciphered thumb imprints, described as blurred by Government Finger Print Bureaus and opinion appreciated by courts.

39 years' experience. Charges reasonable.

Head Office :—Bungalow 7, MALKAGANJ, DELHI, (Phone at Delhi 227864)

Branch Offices : Lohari Naka, KHANDWA      Chamber of S. M. Chawla, Advocate, Civil Courts, KANPUR.

TELEPHONE : 23113

TELEGRAMS : "EXPERT, NAGPUR"

For Expert Opinion & Evidence

CONSULT :

C. T. BHANAGAY

TRAINED IN ENGLAND

F.A. F.Sc., B.A., LL.B., F.E.M.S. (LONDON)

CONSULTANT TO GOVERNMENT OF RAJASTHAN

HANDWRITING, FINGER-PRINTS AND BALLISTICS EXPERT AND CRIMINOLOGIST

Ramdaspeth, NAGPUR-1.

Asst. Examiner deputed to photograph documents when required. IN URGENT MATTERS Mr. BHANAGAY can examine documents in court and give evidence on the following day. Questions for cross-examination or notes for arguments with relevant extracts of authorities can be supplied.

INDIAN INSTITUTE OF CRIMINOLOGY

"Swagat" RAMDASPETH, NAGPUR-1

OFFERS

EXPERT TRAINING

Postal Courses in Identification of
(1) Handwriting (2) Finger Prints
and (3) Fire Arms (Forensic Ballistics)

For prospectus please send Rs. 2/-

Miss P. K. SARASWATHI

Asst. Director (Admn.)

EXPERT SERVICES

Expert Opinion and evidence on
(1) Handwriting (2) Finger Prints
and (3) Fire Arms (Forensic Ballistics)
Fees moderate—Enquiries Solicited.

G. S. PRAKASA RAO

Asst. Director (Tech.)

Shortly coming

Limited Copies

In Press

COMPLETE CODE on POLICE, CRIME & LAW

By R. P. KATHURIA, Advocate, Supreme Court with up-to-date Law of Supreme Court & various High Courts.

Solitary book which deals all topics concerning Police Law including their duties, powers, Investigation, Arrest, Dismissal, Punishment, Remedies, with case Law, Criminal Law, Criminology, Ballistic and Forensic aspect of its finger prints and extracts from Medical Jurisprudence etc. etc. etc.

The book which has been prepared to equip the Police Officers and professional men with all information that could possibly be collected. This book contains complete, comprehensive & up-to-date Law with Chronological Index.

Fine Get Up.

Price: Pre-Publication—Rs. 32/-

Post Publication—Rs. 37/-

Kindly order :

1/12 West Patel Nagar, New DELHI-8.

Phone: 3441

Grams: Document Houses, SIMLA-3

(A. I. F. D. INVESTIGATION BUREAU) 1930 - 1970

For AUTHENTICATED, SKILLED, DEXTEROUSand More Than 40 (Forty) Years EXPERIENCEDCROSS EXAMINATIONS on Document Examiners and Ballistic Experts with NO EQUIVALENT — NOTHING PARALLEL*Refer to:—SENIOR CONSULTS. on EXAMINATION of QUESTIONED DOCUMENTS, INKS & PAPER
ANALYSTS, & BALLISTIC EXPERTS*Dr. BAWA R. SINGH, Ph. D., Gold Medallist,F. R. M. S., M. R. P. S. (Great Britain), etc.ALSO ACCEPTS Important Criminal & Civil CasesQUESTIONED DOCUMENT EXAMINER'S HOUSES, SIMLA-3*Consult:*PARMESHWAR DAYAL, M.A.
DOCUMENT EXAMINER 87 Yrs. in practice.*& Anil Kumar Mathur,*ASSOCIATE DOCUMENT EXAMINER*FORGERY DETECTION BUREAU*Office: Meadows House, Meadows St., Fort, BOMBAY-1. Phone: 251088.*Residence: 1/5 Kazi Blocks, near Bandra Talkies, Swami Vivekanand Rd., Bandra*BOMBAY-60. Phone: 688785;*Grams: Forgeries*Phone: 71182Consult on all disputed DocumentsK. S. RAMAMURTI*HAND-WRITING AND DOCUMENT EXPERT(of 40 years standing)8, III Main Road, Gandhi Nagar, Adyar, MADRAS-20.Hand-writing Expert evidence reviewed. Instructions for cross-examination of any expert on Technical Lines can be had.FOR DISPUTED DOCUMENTS &*CONSULT:*FINGER PRINT CASES*T. P. PATIL, B.A., LL.B. (Trained in England)*DOCUMENT EXAMINERBombay Office:READYMONEY MANSION*3rd Floor, 43, Veer Nariman Road, Fort, BOMBAY-1. Phone: 252646Akola Office:"NEELIMA"*Jathar Peth Road, AKOLA, (M. S.)*Tel.: 832

*Qualityas aDOCUMENT EXAMINERfor a BETTER Future, STATUS & SUCCESSFUL CAREER OF SECURITY VERY VALUABLE GENERAL TRAINING COURSE

at

COLLEGE OF DOCUMENTS SPECIALISTS

(Established : 1930)

Re-started after partition of the CountryProspectus for Postage stamps of only eighty-five paise.

QUESTIONED DOCUMENT EXAMINER'S HOUSE, SIMLA-3.

7/2 South Tukoganj,

INDORE

Phone : 5432

Office : — C-84, Shiyad House,

Prithviraj Road, JAIPUR-1 (Raj.)

Phone : 74636

A. N. Ganorkar

B.A., LL.B., F.R.M.S. (London), F.A.S.C. (U.S.A.)

EXAMINER OF QUESTIONED DOCUMENTS, FINGER-PRINTS, HANDWRITING AND FIRE ARMS EXPERT,
CONSULTANT TO THE GOVERNMENT OF RAJASTHAN.*THE ONLY EXPERT*TRAINED IN ENGLAND & AMERICAConsult him on all problems regarding Questioned Documents, Cross-Examinations of the Document Experts and Firearms Experts undertaken.Terms Reasonable

: :

Correspondence Invited

Phone : 31861

Grams : 'Documents' Indore City.

C. T. SARWATE, B.A., LL.B., F.R.M.S. (LONDON)Additional Govt. Examiner of Questioned Documents to MADHYA PRADESH and Consultant to Govt. of RAJASTHANHANDWRITING, FINGER-PRINTS AND FIRE-ARMS EXPERTConsult him on all matters pertaining to Hand-writing, Finger-Prints, Inks, Paper, Seal impressions, Fire-Arms etc. Cross-examination of experts undertaken.

Office photographer can be sent on request to take photographs in Court.

Charges are reasonable.

*Office & Residence :*4, Mal-Godown Road, Naya Pura, INDORE.*Branch Offices :*1968, Wright Town
JABALPUR Phone : 2520

TELEPHONE No. 33432

Tel. Add.: "DOCUMENTS, NAGPUR."

CONSULT: M. B. DIXIT, M.A., LL.B., (Trained in England)GOVERNMENT EXAMINER OF QUESTIONED DOCUMENTS, MADHYA PRADESH FINGER-PRINT, HANDWRITING AND FIRE-ARMS EXPERTOffice & Residence: 48, BEZONBAGH, NAGPUR-4.

PRIVATE PARTIES in Civil and ACCUSED PERSONS in Criminal Cases can consult him on all questions.

The Office Document Photographer can be sent on request to take photographs*DISPUTED DOCUMENTS?

Phone: 251143.

Consult:M. K. MEHTA,Examiner, Questioned Documents,

4091, Nai Sarak (New Name: Amirchand Marg), DELHI-6.

Author of: (1) IDENTIFICATION OF HANDWRITING & CROSS-EXAMINATION OF EXPERTS. (On the approved list of the High Courts of Allahabad, Calcutta, Patna & Cuttack).
4th enlarged & revised edition July 1970.

Price Rs. 32-50.

(2) IDENTIFICATION OF THUMB IMPRESSIONS & CROSS-EXAMINATION OF FINGER PRINT EXPERTS. (On the approved list of the High Courts of Allahabad & Rajasthan.)

2nd enlarged &amp; revised edition. Price Rs. 15/-.

(3) How to Cross-Examine Handwriting Experts.(4) Whether the identification of handwriting is a science?(5) The scientific analysis of handwriting.(6) Forged writings.(7) Expert testimony on typewriting.(8) Causes of divergent expert opinions on thumb impressions.Various Courts throughout India send original papers to M. K. Mehta for opinion.*

Phone: 72135

Internationally known Expert

Gram: 'Expert' Jaipur

Prof. B. B. Kashyap

DIRECTOR

INTERNATIONAL BLURRED FINGERPRINT BUREAUInvites*

Partially blurred, incompletes, faint and over-inked fingerprints for examination which are declared as undecipherable by Govt. Fingerprint Bureaus of several States of India

Latest methods of Infra-Red, Ultra-Violet, Transmitted Light and Filter Photography used. Various Courts from all over India send original documents for opinion

Reports usually submitted within a week (even 24 hours)

Address: Chitranjan Marg, C-Scheme, Jaipur-1 (Raj.)

Phone Resi. : 441281

Phone Office : 259683

GAJJAR & GAJJAR*Handwriting Experts Trained in U.S.A

T. J. Gajjar, B.A., Harvard Associate in Police Science (U.S.A.) Founder Expert of the Handwriting Branch of the Former Bombay State. (37 years of experience)
 Member of the Forensic Science Society (Lon.)

H. T. Gajjar, B.Sc. (Bom.), Trained at Police Training Centre of Indiana University and Identification Lab. of Post Office Dept. Washington D. C. (U.S.A.)

35, Dalal Street, Examiner Press Building, Fort, BOMBAY 1.

Residence : — 11/12 Jimmy Chambers, Parel Station Road, BOMBAY 12.

In disputed documents cases of all descriptions, such as forged documents, handwritings, signatures, fingerprints, alterations, additions, erasures, etc.,

Please Consult, your old, tried, tested, trusted and Telugu knowing handwriting & Finger Print Expert (Formerly of Guntur and Delhi),

PURUSHOTTAM KASHYAP,

B.Sc. (Hons.), LL.B., M.I.A.I. (U.S.A.)

*Government Constl. Examiner of Questioned Documents.84, Nehru Nagar, Agra - 5 (near Nehru Nagar Park)

Many Courts of law are regularly sending disputed documents for reports to this office from all over India. Reports are submitted in 10-15 days time usually.
 Trial cases solicited.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS*A BOOK on*HANDWRITING IDENTIFICATION

(92 figs., 100 Case Laws, Questions for Chief & Cross etc.,)

by, Purushottam Hathibhai Patel, Kothi, Cross Roads, BARODA-1.

Ed. 1970 Rs. 10/-, write to author.

Phone No. 5562

For Fingerprints, Type, or anything about a Contested Document . . . . CONSULT

H. L. BADHWAR*EXAMINER OF QUESTIONED DOCUMENTS,

31 Sir Hukamchand Bhawan, Nasia Road
 (near Janta Hotel) INDORE (M. P.)

*Consulted by Govt. — Experience over 22 years.WHEN ORDERING A LAW BOOK*FIRST ASK*HAS A. I. R. A PUBLICATION*IN THE FIELD ?*CONSULT

Phone : 29539

Documents Examination Bureau, U. P.

For Finger Prints, Writings & Fire Arms cases Awarded Several cash Rewards for Identifying Faint, Indistinct Finger, Foot & chance Prints
 (22 years Experience As U. P. Govt. Expert)

Director : — LILARAM JAGTIANI

108, Cantt. Rd. Near Odeon Cinema, LUCKNOW.

AN A. I. R. PUBLICATION

Entire set Ready

Commentary on Criminal Procedure Code

By CHITALEY & RAO

6th - 1966 Edn.

SPECIAL FEATURES

- * This Edition has been thoroughly revised and brought up-to-date.
- ** Thousands of New Cases have been incorporated. Clear presentation and style.
- *** Printing easy on eyes and arrangement of matter, an efficient aid to prompt and certain reference.

To avoid disappointment please book your orders early with A. I. R. Representatives
or Direct with

Sales Manager,

ALL INDIA REPORTER, LTD.,

P. O. Box No. 56, Congress Nagar,

NAGPUR-1 (Maha.)

Vols. 1 to 7 already despatched

Vol. 8 under despatch

Vol. 9 in Press

A. I. R. Manual

in 22 Volumes

A veritable encyclopedia of unrepealed

CENTRAL ACTS OF GENERAL APPLICATION

EDITED BY CHITALEY & RAO

With the texts of the Acts brought up-to-date, along with State Amendments wherever available, and the Supreme Court as well as State High Courts' decisions under those Acts, the Set is a Must have addition to your law library.

Price Rs. 31/- per volume, post free (Inland)

or

Rs. 682/- for the entire set, carriage free (Inland).

Advance full payment for entire set carries a cash discount of 5%, as usual.

For further particulars, please contact our Representatives,

or

Write directly to —

The Sales Manager,

ALL INDIA REPORTER LTD.,

Post Box No. 56, Congressnagar, N A G P U R-1.

AN A. I. R. PUBLICATION

Entire set Ready

FIFTEEN YEARS' DIGEST 1951-1965

(Inclusive of 1950 Case law)

(Civil, Criminal & Revenue)

(In 14 Volumes)

The Digest comprehensively covers the case law of the post-Constitution period up to 1965 and as such is

A "MUST BUY" FOR EVERY LEGAL PRACTITIONER

Price of the set in 14 volumes is Rs. 378/- (Inland) for the entire set, carriage free, or Rs. 27/- (Inland) per volume, post free.

Advance full payment for the entire set carries a cash discount of 5%.

Contact our local or travelling Representatives

OR

Write directly to

Sales Manager,

ALL INDIA REPORTER LTD.,

P. B. No. 56, Congress Nagar, NAGPUR.

You cannot do without this one

A. I. R. Commentary

ON

The Limitation Act

(Act 36 of 1963)

By CHITALEY & RAO

(4th—1965—Edition — 2 Vols.)

The first book to turn to for the new Limitation Act.

Law of Limitation has been newly enacted repealing the old Act of 1908. An exhaustive Commentary on the new Act, bringing out the differences between the old and the new, is an urgent requirement of the practising lawyer. A. I. R.'s Limitation Act will fully meet this requirement.

The new Statute is printed with the old relative sections underneath, explaining the differences between the old and new Acts. Exposition of law has been based on exhaustive study of the case law.

The Commentary is a sure and dependable interpretation of the new law, and embodies the various excellences and specialities which have now been recognized to belong to A. I. R. Commentaries. Some of them are :

1. Principles of law are deduced from vast mass of decisions.
2. Principles of law presented in a logical and cogent manner.
3. Commentary, a reasoned exposition of law.
4. Conflict of opinions in the decisions pointed out and discussed,
5. Remarks in the foot-notes amplify and illustrate the principles in the Commentary and indicate the distinguishing features of the case.
6. Topical Index locates the exact point required.

It will pay you to book your order early with A. I. R. representatives or please write direct to :

Sales Manager,

ALL INDIA REPORTER LTD.,

Post Box No. 56, Congressnagar, NAGPUR-1 (Maharashtra).

Manager's Notice

1. (a) Owing to the heavy cost of paper and printing now-a-days, we are printing only as many copies as are actually required and are not keeping a large stock of loose parts on hand.

(b) Moreover, when we send a duplicate part to a subscriber, whole year's set is made useless. Hence we are obliged to fix the price of duplicate parts at Rs. 15/- per part for A. I. R. and at Rs. 5/- per part for Cr. L. J. and Rs. 4/- for L. I. C.

All prices and charges mentioned in this notice are inland prices and charges.

2. Complaints as to non-receipt of A. I. R., Cr. L. J. or L. I. C. monthly parts sent under V.P.P. or Regd. Post will not be considered unless the complaint regarding A. I. R. reaches the office before 25th of the particular month and that of Cr. L. J. before 8th of next month and that of L. I. C. before 14th of next month. No duplicate copy of the part will be supplied free of cost on complaints received thereafter.

3. Despatch of monthly parts under Regd. Post ensures safe delivery.

4. Journal subscriptions are always payable in advance.

5. Subscriptions are payable at Nagpur. Payment by cheque should include Bank charges @ 50 P. per hundred.

6. When payments to A. I. R. are effected by cheque or drafts, it is requested that the same be made payable to "The All India Reporter Ltd." and not to "Manager, Secretary, Superintendent or Director" thereof.

7. Publications are not sold through any agency. No bookseller can book orders for A. I. R. You are requested to advise this office the name of any person (other than the duly authorised person) who attempts to supply or book orders for A. I. R. Authority card has been issued by this office to every representative of this institution. The names of Representatives appear in A. I. R. Parts occasionally.

Sales Manager : All India Reporter Ltd., NAGPUR 1.

OUR REPRESENTATIVES

- Below we give list of Representatives of the All India Reporter Ltd., who are working in the field.
- If any Representative ceases to represent us, the information will be published in these columns.
- Addresses of Representatives, who are stationary, are given.

Sales Manager, A. I. R. Ltd.

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| 1. Ahuja M. S., M. 3/9, Road No. 11, Rajendranagar, PATNA-10, (Bihar).Phone No. 50239. | 15. Seth J. K., 3, Ghosh Market, 28, Mahatma Gandhi Marg, ALLAHABAD-1 (U. P.)Phone No. 3907.   |
| 2. Das S. C.   | 16. Seth, K. K. 2nd Floor, Guru Nanak Niwas Ambawadi, AHMEDABAD-6 (Gujarat).   |
| 3. Erande V. R., 65, Xth Main Road, 13th Cross, Malleswaram, BANGALORE-3.                  | 17. Seth O. K., S-148, Greater Kailash New-DELHI-48, Phone No. 78052.  |
| 4. Hasin Ahmad, H. No. 17.9, 116/2, Karmaguda, HYDERABAD-35 (A. P.).Phone No. 52320.   | 18. Shrivastava N. G.  |
| 5. Khanna P. C.  | 19. Shaligram R. G., P-249, Purnadas Road, CALCUTTA-29 (W. B.) Phone No. 465975.   |
| 6. Khanna S. C., 10/2, Vidyarthi Market, Govindnagar, KANPUR (U. P.)                       | 20. Sharma P. N., 9-A, New Market, Begun Pali, MEERUT (U. P.)  |
| 7. Malhotra K. D.  | 21. Soinde, M. B.  |
| 8. Malhotra R. K.  | 22. Sushil S. K.   |
| 9. Malhotra S. L., House No. 330, Adarsha Nagar, JULLUNDUR City (Ph)                       | 23. Tahiliani L. C., C/o. All India Reporter Ltd., Medows House, Nagindas Master Road, BOMBAY-1 (B. R.) Phone No. Office : 253047, Residence : 475122. |
| 10. Mani R. S.   | 24. Verma H. R., 15/50, Char Su. Darraza Ghatia Azam Khan, AGRA-3 (U. P.)  |
| 11. Mehra, A. K.   | 25. Vithalrao K. A. 38, Sarojini Street, Ramnagar, COIMBATORE-9 (Tamil Nadu)   |
| 12. M. Saifuddin Khan.   |  |
| 13. Rajan O. P. 20-A, Panthady, 3rd Street MADURAI-1 (Tamil Nadu)                          |  |
| 14. S. Lal.  |  |

Shri P. Y. Malode has ceased to represent us from 23-7-1970.

JOURNAL SECTION

1970 DECEMBER

REVIEWS

LAW AND PRACTICE OF BUILDING CONTRACTS (including the law relating to Architects and Surveyors). By Donald Keating, B.A., Bar-at-law. 3rd Edition, 1969. With a Glossary of Building Terms by Paul Badcock, F.R.I.B.A. Sweet and Maxwell Ltd., London. Pp. xii & 558. Price, Rs. 94.50.

Here is another standard work on the law and practice of building contracts, which opens with a description of the nature of a building contract; it examines its relation to the general law of contract, the course of a typical building operation, and contract documents like Agreement, Conditions, Architect's plans, Bills of Quantities, Specifications, and other documents. The present publication is intended to deal in a practical and concise way with the most important of the legal problems which can arise when building works are carried out. It includes four recent decisions of the House of Lords and a statute which affect the law in many ways. Two of the cases explain the ordinary implied duties of the contractor as regards materials and, to a lesser extent, workmanship. These cases form the basis of an enlarged section (Ch. 3), and a detailed discussion of the liability of the contractor for nominated sub-contractors and nominated suppliers (Chs. 10 and 15). The two other cases have led to a reconsideration of damages (Ch. 9), of repudiation (Ch. 7) and of risk, indemnity and exclusion clauses (Ch. 8). The statute referred to is the Misrepresentation Act 1967, which is printed and discussed in Chapter 7.

There are several other alterations and additions in this new edition. There are new passages on design costs, lengthy negotiations, essential terms and the position where no price is fixed. There are references to an interesting recent decision which opens up the possibility of a new way of attacking the architect's final certificate. The relationship of such a certificate to defects clauses is considered and the barring of liability for defects by the Limitation Act, 1939 is discussed. The application to builders of the section of the Act relating to concealment by fraud is also referred to, as is also the difficulty which occurs when there is apparently one loss caused by breaches of several contracts. Some views are put forward on how far the terms of a sub-contract which the contractor is directed to enter into become part of the main contract. The possibility is examined of the employer having a claim in tort against a sub-contractor or supplier as well as the liability of architects in tort to contractors. The architect may not design everything, but what exactly is his liability in law is clarified in a recent judgment which is reported in the book. Chapters 13 and 14 dealing with arbitration and litigation have been brought up-to-date and include some revised sections. The official referee's Practice Direction of 8th July 1968 is printed in full. The latest (July 1968) revision of the R. I. B. A. Form of Contract has been printed in full with notes, and the author has expressed his views clearly on many points of doubt.

Chapter 13 deals with that part of the law of arbitration which affects building contracts. An arbitration agreement ousting the court's jurisdiction entirely is contrary to public policy and void. Although the arbitrator's decision is final as to facts, the court retains control over arbitration agreements and references and an aggrieved party may invoke its assistance, and an award may be enforced by leave of the High Court or a judge thereof in the same manner as a judgment or order. Three chapters in the book are devoted to the formation of a contract, construction of contracts and rectification, and the right to payment and the time for compensation. Employer's approval and architect's certificates, default of the parties and excuses for non-fulfilment, damages and equitable remedies, assignments, substituted contracts and sub-contracts, are the subject of some other chapters, followed by those on insolvency and death, architects, engineers and quantity surveyors, arbitration and litigation. In the appendices are included Definition of prime cost of day work carried out under a building contract, R. I. B. A. Conditions of Engagement, Code of Procedure for Selective Training, Form of direct contract and R. I. B. A. forms of warranty. There are tables of cases and of statutes, while the table of references to R. I. B. A. Forms in the text and the Index are highly useful. With the addition of recent cases, the intention is to state the law as at the beginning of July 1969. The author's aim has been to provide a book which will be as useful in practice as possible, and its contents have been selected and arranged with this end in view.

R.S.S.

AN INTRODUCTION TO LEGAL SYSTEMS. Edited by J. Duncan M. Derrett, D. C. L. (Oxon.), Bar-at-law. Sweet and Maxwell Ltd., London, 1968. (N.M. Tripathi Private Ltd., Bombay). Pp. xix & 203. Price, Rs. 18.

Coming after Prof. Derrett's 'Law, Religion and the State in India' (a series of studies, reviewed in these columns, on aspects of law and religion in India from early times to the present day, including the impact of European administration) and Prof. Sethna's 'Law and Morality' and 'Essentials of an Ideal Legal System' (University of Bombay 1968) the publication under review completes the picture of what an ideal legal system should be and how the different legal systems have evolved into what they actually are at the present day. The beginner needs to know where his own national system of law fits into the pattern created by the different systems. There is little point, observes the Editor of the volume, in exploring the minutiae of one's own system unless one has grasped that it is itself only one of a group of efforts to effectuate justice among human beings. The different systems of law and morality naturally induce conflicts between the different outlooks. India and England, for example, share the legal remedy known as 'restitution of conjugal rights'. While it is doubtful whether it has a useful function to perform in England, it is still a real remedy among Hindus in India. Hindus in England must understand it as it is understood in that country. A Hindu wife coming to England to enforce her rights against her erring husband, domiciled in that country, will discover, to her chagrin, the fact that a deserted wife, with a decree for restitution in her hand, has no right to her husband's society against his will and may be restrained by injunction from disturbing his peace and quiet. Basic information on such contrasts in outlook and allied matters should be more readily available to practitioners as well as students. The present book has chosen seven systems of jurisprudence for treatment, systems that are coherent, possess a unity and have made their marks on the world.

In the six sections which comprise this book, six specialists explain the leading characteristics of the major historic legal systems, each outline presenting an interesting account of the sources and development of the system concerned, its basic concepts of law and jurisprudence, and its capacity for growth and change in relation to changing social and economic conditions. Prof. J. A. Thomas, for example, shows the virtue of Roman Law and the qualities which survive in modern civilian jurisprudence. Dr. Z. D. W. Falk explains the nature and history of the Jewish law, which is one of the world's monuments of juridical science and forms the basis of Israeli legal thinking today. N. J. Coulson considers the law of the 400 million Muslims the world over and Prof. Derrett explains the equally important, but older, Hindu law. Chinese law is described by H. McLeavy. African customary law in its confrontation with laws imported from Europe is handled by Prof. A. N. Allott, while the last chapter is devoted to English law, described in considerable detail in the light of the other systems by Prof. A. K. B. Kiralfy.

Emphasis has throughout been on practical matters as well as jurisprudence. Each section deals with the way in which laws are established and enforced, examining the role of legislative bodies, the judiciary and writers on jurisprudence. The relationship between religion and legal systems receives particular attention, and the concept of property is analysed. The laws of contract and succession are examined, instructive comparisons emerging on topics such as fraud, misrepresentation and adverse possession. Family law, including marriage, divorce and adoption, is treated in detail. The details of criminal law and procedure are compared. Central and Local Government, and their finance and staffing are discussed, and movements for law reform are noted and their results evaluated. As to Hindu law, it should be noted that it has always taken religion and superstitious sanctions as the allies of jurisprudence, while recognising that no actual judgment could ignore public opinion or public policy. Principles based upon religion never seemed to deny the force of purely secular needs, and a conflict between religion and State rarely arose, as the organs of Government have always considered it their permanent obligation to enforce every individual's duty to show compassion, responsibility and loyalty. Thus, religion is not a true source of law but a part of the conceptual frame work within which a legal system works; similarly beside the ultimate requirements of morality all such law is dwarfed, and on this every religion is agreed.

At the end of each section is an useful list of books for further study, and the index at the end of the book is quite useful.

R.S.S.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF THE INDIAN CONSTITUTION. By K. Subba Rao, Former Chief Justice of India. The Advocates Association, Bangalore, 1969, Pp. 32. Price Rs. 1.50.

The historical and other circumstances that bring a Constitution into being and the hopes and aspirations of the members of the Constituent Assembly which frames the Constitution go to mould its philosophy. The Constitution is the form in which a State is organised, and its philosophy deals with the principles underlying it. It is the soul of the Constitution, and the provisions thereof, the body. If this philosophy is ignored or misinterpreted in any way the Constitution loses its soul and ceases to be itself. 'The Philosophy of the Indian Constitution' was the subject of the Bangalore Bar Association Endowment Lectures of 1969. The Endowment Lectures Fund was constituted in 1959 to finance a scheme of lectures on topics relating to the legal profession, development of law and legislation, international law and Human Rights and other allied subjects, and the Lectures under notice was the seventh in the series.

The following are the basic principles of the Indian Constitution: (1) Federation with a bias towards the Centre; (2) Constitutional democracy with its division of powers, territorial and functional; (3) Representative Government through adult franchise; (4) Responsible Government through Parliamentary executive; (5) Social control of economic power; (6) Social justice, i.e., the right of the underprivileged to the State's protection against ruthless competition; (7) The doctrine of the tolerance of religious diversity (8) The high concept of the rule of law in which social justice and freedoms are integrated; (9) The conferment of power on the higher judiciary to enforce the fundamental rights, to maintain a just balance between freedoms and social justice, and to function as a balancing wheel of federation.

The learned lecturer begins by analysing the various slogans of economic ideology including democratic socialism, that are being flaunted to gain political ends. Democratic socialism seeks to bring about an egalitarian State through the democratic process. It does not accept nationalisation of property except under extraordinary circumstances and provides for social control of economic power in order to prevent possible imbalances in the economy. The economic ideology of the Indian Constitution is reflected in Articles 14, 19 (1) (f), 19 (1) (g), 19 (4) and (6), 31, 32, 39 (b) & (c), 226, 265, 301 to 307. The Constitution seeks to implement the ideal Gandhian doctrine of Trusteeship through the Rule of Law, which satisfies the modern tests, both substantive and procedural. The fundamental rights mentioned in Part III of the Constitution and the Directive principles of State policy contained in Part IV bring out the social and economic content of law. The rule of law envisaged by the Constitution is a powerful instrument for bringing about an egalitarian society. It maintains the balance between liberty and authority, ensures equality before the law to everyone, keeps just equilibrium between freedom and social control, is a powerful instrument of socio-economic justice, and enjoins on the executive not to interfere with the rights of the people except in accordance with law. The next doctrine that received constitutional acceptance is that of social justice. While Parts III and IV of the Constitution provide for an integrated scheme of social justice, the doctrine of equality is taken care of in Articles 15 to 18 of the Constitution. As regards religion the constitutional doctrine may be described as that of tolerance of religious diversity, and the learned lecturer proceeds to state the effects of the relevant provisions of the Constitution and the case law on it in nine main propositions.

Since the Constitution came into being, the executive has been making attempts to remove judicial checks. With a few bold and deft strokes of amendment the constitutional philosophy was changed and a totalitarian slant given to it, unrestricted power being conferred on Parliament to make laws infringing some of the fundamental rights of the people. The executive and even the Supreme Court in some of its judgments added to the process of deflating the constitutional philosophy, although the latter has sometimes tried to stem the tide as far as it lay within the scope of its jurisdiction. In the famous Golaknath case the Supreme Court held that the Parliament has no power, by the amendment of the Constitution, to take away or abridge the fundamental rights. To enable one to appreciate the scope of this judgment and its effect on the Philosophy of the Constitution, the lecturer lays special emphasis on six fundamental principles of the Constitution. As it is, in the realm of property and business, constitutional despotism has replaced the rule of law though in other respects the original philosophy holds good. The lecturer finally refers to the proposed amending bill which seeks to amend Article 368 so as to confer a power on the Parliament to amend the Constitution in order to take away or abridge by a special majority the fundamental rights of the people.

R.S.S.

LAW AND MORALITY. By M. J. Sethna, Department of Law, University of Bombay, University Buildings, Fort, Bombay 32. 1st Edition, 1969. Pp. 73. Price, Rs. 7.50.

The object of the present handy work is to show the respective provinces of law and morality and, while explaining how they are inter-dependent, to emphasise clearly how they are not exactly identical. Morality appeals internally to the human conscience while positive law sometimes coerces, or attempts to coerce, the human conscience. Positive law is a powerful instrument for enforcing morality at a reasonably high level, but no man could be made a good citizen through the fear of punishment. There are fields on which law does not encroach; there are values like those of social education, religion and art, which are often more potent in their effect than the value of law, which in its nature cannot be sole or supreme. This is not, however, to deny that law is absolutely necessary, for without it, morality would be thrown overboard. Positive law rules through sanctions, such as those of fine, imprisonment, decrees for specific performance, restitution, damages, processes of execution of decrees and orders of courts of law, and in international law, quasi-legal sanctions like condemnation or censure by the U. N. boycott, reprisals and, in the ultimate resort, by even recourse to arms.

There are seven chapters in the book under review dealing, inter alia, with the concept of law, the nature and purpose of morality, the achievement of morality through legislation, the relation between law and morality, the morality of legal rights and duties and the morality of punishment. The purpose of law, which is an essential social institution, is to promote the security of the citizen, prevent class conflict, procure socio-economic welfare for all classes and protect and enforce the rights and obligations and liberties of the citizen. Morality on the other hand guides principles of ideal behaviour in consonance with what is right and good. Positive morality is what society creates or dictates, it is the conscience of the people and it is enforced through social sanctions. Legislation is only a powerful instrument for attaining peaceful conditions of living so that men may live with due respect to the rights and liberties of others and in the due discharge of their own duties. Good laws bring credit to the Government of the State, which works through the machinery of its laws. Having examined the difference between positive law and morality which could be easily bridged and having examined the extent to which morality should prevail in a healthy legal society, the author rightly concludes that law has its limitations and is not meant to make men moral by the force of sanctions. Positive law needs the help of ethics, for ethics alone, more than law, can facilitate the leading of the higher life which instinctively sees what is good and right from what is mischievous and wrong. Law has power to impose sanctions, but religious, moral and philosophical ideas should also be borne in mind. To bring about the reconciliation of the conflicting claims of the various classes, it becomes desirable at the outset to observe and study the malady that afflicts a particular section of society, for this is essential before any actual law-making is taken in hand. As to punishment for breaches of the law, its moral justification lies in the very objectives it is meant to secure; they are, the prevention of the offender from committing the crime again; the informing of society at large that crime does not pay; the working out of retribution "As you sow so you reap" — and the education or reformation of the criminal.

What is the extent to which morality could efficaciously be enforced through legislation? The present work seeks to show that there is a limit beyond which legislation cannot enforce morality and the forces of good living. Law should help to enforce morality upto a high standard, but it cannot make men intrinsically good-hearted and noble, a conclusion to which few will demur.

There is an useful index to the book, but expressions like "Powerful instrumentality towards enforcing" and "enforcing to obedience and peaceful living" and several others would seem to admit of improvement. R.S.S.

---

POTTER AND MONROE'S TAX PLANNING (WITH PRECEDENTS). 6th Edition by D. A. Shirley, M. A., Bar-at-Law, and Stephen J. H. Oliver, M. A., Bar-at-Law. Sweet & Maxwell, London, 1970. (N. M. Tripathi Private Ltd., Bombay). Pp. xxxix & 485. Price, Rs. 90.

"Tax Planning" means that a man should make an intelligent appreciation of the incidence of tax and should take it into account as a relevant factor in planning the dispositions of his property as between himself and members of his family. If we are to be taxed according to law, the introduction of pseudo-moral judgments into the administration of fiscal measures should be deprecated, for prejudice cannot be substituted for reason in discussing this topic. If one lawful course involves the payment of more tax and another less, the choice between them raises no moral issue. What the law permits cannot be reprehensible, especially as this branch of the law knows no equity. Problems of tax planning are normally approached by regarding the family rather than the individual as the tax paying entity, and, as the precedents in the book under review show, a saving of tax and of duty may often be effected. This subject has been dealt with also in "Tax and the Family Business" (Sweet and Maxwell 1970).

The twofold purpose of the present publication is to provide the legal draftsman with a supplementary precedent book for use where considerations arise outside the scope of the standard works on conveyancing precedents, and to assist all those who are called upon to deal with the disposition or management of property and wish to understand the principles concerned and visualise the type of disposition likely to be advantageous. In order to preserve the book's practical nature, the text has been built around the precedents. There are some fifty precedents, grouped in eight chapters. It is not merely a precedent book, however, for at the beginning of each chapter an account of the tax problems arising out of the particular topic is provided. The book also describes the principles involved in 'tax planning' in such a way that a reader without specialised knowledge may comprehend them. Footnotes have been reduced to the minimum, and the text and the precedents have been set one against the other, to balance, as it were, theory and practice.

The most important changes in the tax law since the previous edition (1966) are contained in the Finance Act, 1968 and in the Finance Act, 1969. The former introduces the notion of aggregating with his parent's income the income of an infant where the settlor is not the infant's father or mother. The subject was referred to also in "Elements of the law of Income and Capital Gains Taxation" (Stevens, 1970). The Finance Act, 1969 recasts the estate duty changing provisions of the Finance Act 1954. It is said that the greatest change is the imposition of estate duty on the death of a beneficiary under a discretionary trust. The new legislation has rendered obsolete parts of the previous edition of this book; the total length of the text has been considerably reduced and several precedents of doubtful value omitted.

The table of contents gives the titles of the eleven chapters along with the cross-heads of each chapter as well as a description of the precedents provided in it. The 11 chapters, cover, respectively, deeds of covenant, separation deeds, family settlements, discretionary trusts, marriage settlements, charities, insurance policies, variation of existing settlements, partnerships, service agreements and pension schemes, and wills. A table of cases, a table of statutes and index are provided, while in the appendix is included a note published in November 1961 by Inland Revenue on Estate Duty on benefits under superannuation schemes. The present book should, by illustrating the possibilities, be of use to all who deal with matters of taxation.

THE TECHNIQUE OF PERSUASION

By David Napley, Solicitor of the Supreme Court, England. With Foreword by the Hon. Mr. Justice Melford Stevens. Sweet and Maxwell, London. 1970. (N. M. Tripathi Private Ltd, Bombay). Pp. xii & 104. Price, Rs. 27.

Why "The Technique of Persuasion" rather than "The Art of Advocacy"? The author holds, and many will agree, that the art of advocacy is not confined merely to the four walls of the lawyer's chambers and the courtroom but extends all down the line from the time that a lawyer takes on a client's case to the moment it is finally disposed of, and consists essentially in the cultivation of the quality of persuasiveness in every detail, however small, a quality that is to be acquired by diligent observation and study. The lessons which can be easily learnt by any lawyer who reads Mr. Napley's pages, observes Mr. Justice Melford Stevens in the Foreword, "were all too often rubbed in by sharp and ferocious rebukes administered in public by men who were overworked and underpaid..." This goes for several judicial officers in the Indian Law Courts as well.

The present small book represents revised versions of talks given by the author to the Associate and Young Members of the Law Society, London. As a result the Society initiated courses of training in advocacy, which have now become an established part of the facilities offered by it under the control of its Education and Training Committee. The result of over thirty-five years observation and practice of the technique of persuasion has been presented in this book, which analyses and explains the mistakes usually made by lawyers, a valuable part of the book being that devoted to the preparation of cases. In discussing the essential know-how of the lawyer's profession, viz., the most effective way to persuade, the author considers that, in the examinations for lawyers, it should be made compulsory for every candidate to sit for a paper on the elements of psychology, the science of human behaviour. Some knowledge of it lies at the root of successful cross-examination; it is an integral part of skilled negotiation; and it is indispensable in the field of public relations.

"Preparation for Trial" and "Presentation in Court" are the titles of the two sections into which the book is divided. The former section deals, inter alia, with the preparation of the case, discovery of documents, expert witnesses, the preliminary enquiry, the preparation of witnesses, and the preparation for cross-examination. The latter section is devoted to the duties of an advocate, preparation in Court, addressing the Court, presentation of the case, opening address, examination-in-chief, cross-examination, and re-examination. At the outset it is necessary to define the lawyer's objective and what he must establish to achieve it, before proceeding to the serious business of preparation, which forms the most important part of the art of advocacy and the technique of persuasion. While presenting the case for his client to its best advantage, the advocate should also be bound by certain ethical rules, and he should assist the Court in reaching a just decision on the facts and the law. Neatness and tidiness in dress is indispensable as also strict adherence to punctuality. In the matter of delivery the points to be watched are clarity; simplicity; putting the points succinctly; developing them in an interesting way, presenting them with integrity, but without any trace of pomposity. The advocate's task will be to persuade judge to accept the arguments and reasoning he places before him. Although the case is decided on the evidence and not on the personality of the lawyer, unless one advocate is more persuasive than another, the result will be an indeterminate decision. An advocate, in pleading a case, may not express his own opinions, but it will be his business to present to the Court what his client 'should' say for himself if he had the necessary skill and knowledge, and not what the client 'would have' said.

Apart from the author's own experience in the Courts, he has had the advantage, over many years, of watching others who have pursued the art of advocacy. The present work should provide a measure of guidance and confidence to the beginner and enable him to avoid at least some of the errors of his professional life.

R.S.S.

CONCISE COLLEGE TEXTS ESTATE DUTY IN ENGLAND AND WALES.
By A. Douglas Lawton, LL.B., B.Sc. (Econ.), Bar-at-Law. Sweet and Maxwell Limited, London, 1970. (N.M. Tripathi Ltd., Princess Street, Bombay 2). Pp xxi and 169. Price, Rs. 14.20.

The present work has been designed as a concise statement of the main principles of estate duty in England and Wales, inasmuch as the basic law in respect of persons dying after the 15th April 1969 has been altered by the Finance Act, 1969. It was the Finance Act, 1894 which introduced estate duty and is still the basic code. It provides the scheme of liability to duty and the basis of valuation of property liable, specifies the persons accountable for the duty, and prescribes the machinery of collection. Although extensively altered by amending legislation, the 1894 Act continues to be the framework upon which the whole body of estate duty law is erected. The publication under review which covers Eng. land and Wales, owes its origin to the third edition of An Outline of Estate Duty in Scotland, which was published in 1967 for the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland. It deals with the Finance Acts of 1968 and 1969, and the author has tried to base the English edition on the accepted formula which has proved popular with Scottish lawyers, accountants and students. Nevertheless a few topics had to be largely re-written because of the differences in the legal structure in the two countries. The arrangement of the book follows the Act in its main divisions, commencing with property liable to duty and certain special categories of each property, and then proceeding to valuation, exemptions and deductions, rates and reliefs, accountability, payment and procedure on appeals. The law is stated as at 1st September, 1969.

Estate duty is a charge leviable upon the principal value of all property, both moveable and immoveable, which passes or is treated as passing on the death of any person. The meaning of the term 'passing' is considered fully in chapters 2 and 3. The property passing on death is not restricted to the deceased's own free estate, which he owned absolutely and could dispose of at will, but also includes settled property in various circumstances, such as the capital of trust funds and gifts made by the deceased within a certain period after his death. The broad principle of liability for estate duty is that the burden of it falls upon the persons who are entitled to it on the death or as donees of property given by the deceased. To secure efficiency in the collection of the duty, persons having an administrative title to the property are required to account for the duty before passing the remainder of the property to the persons beneficially entitled to it; the executor of the deceased is required to pay the duty on the estate passing to him as executor before accounting to the beneficiaries. The duty is imposed upon the basis of the legal rights and liabilities of persons in relation to property as determined by the general law. In a problem relating to liability to duty the first step is to ascertain the legal situation of the persons concerned, and to apply the principles of the relevant branches of law, like the law of domicile, contract, trusts, gifts, property and life assurance.

There are eleven chapters in the book, the first five dealing, inter alia, with property liable to duty, gifts, joint and common property, life assurance policies, and interests under trusts or settlements. The valuation of property for estate duty, exemptions and deductions, rates and reliefs, accountability, and payment and appeals are covered in the other chapters. The Appendices relate to the previous rates of estate duty and the current amount of duty, list of Forms of Affidavit and Account and specimen Estate and Model Affidavit and Accounts. The table of cases, the table of Statutes and index, are other useful features.

R.S.S.

---

AEROSPACE LAW. By Nicolas Mateesco Matte, LL.D., Professor of Air & Space Law at the University of Montreal. Sweet and Maxwell Limited, London, 1969. (N. M. Tripathi Ltd., Princess Street, Bombay 2), Pp. 501. Price, Rs. 99.

Man, the State, and the International community cannot 'live' for ever in a legal 'no man's land.' The launching of satellites into space must make one sit up. The first sputnik was placed in orbit on the 4th October 1957. More than 1000 objects now move about in space, among them being about 300 satellites which will remain in space for different lengths of time. It is not surprising, therefore, that international, governmental, regional, continental and State organisations immediately began to work to establish adequate norms and lay the foundations of a new legal code. The uses and exploitation of space,—technical, economic, meteorological, military, sanitary, and for transport and research,—demand a corresponding law and a structural transformation of the existing international organisations, because the United Nations resolutions dealing with space are considered vague and lack binding force, and the present make-up of its specialised agencies, including WHO and UNESCO, are thought to be insufficient and obsolete.

The volume under review considers doing away with the boundaries between the air and the remainder of space, as drawn up by the sovereign States and,—after a presentation of living conditions created by satellites—analyses the new law resulting from the peaceful uses of space. This utilisation is dealt with from its technical and economical angle as well as from the military one. The present analysis takes into account the nuclear dangers, the space laboratories, the present division of atomic power between the United States and the U. S. S. R., and its consequences for peace and the danger of war, the non-proliferation of nuclear arms, as well as the problem of disarmament. The responsibility for damages caused in space or on land and the assistance to be given to astronauts in distress are also covered.

The author considers that the moon and other celestial bodies can in fact be appropriated, and the present resolutions of the U. N. and the Treaty on Peaceful uses of Outer Space cannot stop it, so that the States must draw up and ratify in good faith a world-wide international agreement. The United Nations may be a favourable place for the emergence of certain principles of space law, but, its charter and composition being what they are, any legal space organisation will have to be set up only by State agreements. The present space law is developing in a regime of bipolar competition between the United States and the Soviet Union and so long as this lasts, the world will be far from the possibilities of a more general participation. A special status must be given, says the author, to economical uses of space, such as satellite communications. Here also the old ideas of law should make way for new ones which do not stop at the frontiers of States. The Treaty on the Peaceful uses of Outer Space suffers from weaknesses which reduce its scope and efficiency and it will have to be revised, or replaced by an agreement relating to a code of conduct in good faith in space.

The present volume is divided into five Parts. The first Chapter of Part I, on space and space vehicles, dwells on the movement towards a new functional theory regarding the legal status of space, and the second Chapter deals with space vehicles and their use in scientific research and telecommunications. The four Chapters in Part II are devoted to the activities of non-governmental organisations. Governmental organisations and the development of space law, bilateral co-operation, and State activities. Part III is concerned with the economic utilisation and exploitation of space, while Part IV deals with the treaties, agreements and projects on the peaceful uses of outer space. The problems of aero-space law are stated as they may arise, but no answers are attempted, because it is recognised that principles of law in this domain must at the moment be premature.

At the end of the volume are twenty annexes giving the text of the U. N. General Assembly resolutions, conventions, Agreements and Treaties; there is a Bibliography, and an Index of authors cited. To have the table of contents at the very end of the publication, rather than at the beginning, will be an innovation to many who may think it is not given its due place. R.S.S.

THE LAW AND PRACTICE RELATING TO COMPANY DIRECTORS.

By Vircent Powell-Smith, LL. M., J. C. B., Dip. Com., Lecturer in Law at the University of Birmingham. Butterworths, London, 1969 (Sole Selling Agents: Eastern Law House Pvt. Ltd., Calcutta), Pp. xxvii & 233, Price £2-16s.

As observed by Sir Richard Powell, Bt., M. C., Director-General of the Institute of Directors, in the Foreword, today's director has to be a man of many parts, not the least of them being the need to have a knowledge of where he stands legally. The object of the present publication is therefore to provide an easily read description of the law relating to company directors. It describes the principal legal implications arising from the office of director and discusses the legal aspects of a company director's work, illustrated by reference to decided cases. Although some details have been omitted, the aim has been to provide a practical handbook for practical men. Where the law is not clear, the most likely solution has been suggested, and the author has also drawn on trans-Atlantic experience where this seemed helpful.

After tracing the evolution of the modern company in the first chapter, the author proceeds to discuss the qualification and appointment of directors, their service, emoluments, taxation and fringe benefits, in the next four chapters. The last of these chapters does not deal with all taxation matters likely to affect directors, but indicates those matters which are most likely to concern them and those provisions in the law where specific reference is made to directors. There are: Remuneration deductible by close companies, expenses and benefits; stock option plans and employees' shares; loans; payment for loss of office; superannuation; life policies; and national insurance. The directors and the Board, relation of directors, meetings, and powers of directors are the subject of the next four chapters, while chapter 10 is devoted to the duties and obligations of directors. Directors owe to their company duties of good faith, loyalty, skill and diligence. The duties of loyalty arise out of the fiduciary relationship between the director and his company and are virtually identical with those imposed on trustees. The Courts are well qualified to operate in this area, the law being fairly well defined. On the other hand, a director's skill and diligence are somewhat indefinable, because of the difficulty the Courts find in dealing with problems of business economics and administration. An understandable reluctance to move into the business world and to interfere in matters of business judgment is evident. The Courts have been unwilling to condemn directors when loss has been occasioned to the company by a misjudgment of the course of business events, because it is always easy to be wise after the event. The last two chapters examine the liabilities of directors on contracts and for torts of the company and statutory liabilities for fraudulent trading, misfeasance proceedings and offences. Appendix I reproduces the principal sections of the Companies Acts of 1948 and 1987 and Appendix II gives the City Code on take-overs and mergers.

This is not primarily a book for lawyers, says the author, but it is intended for company directors and company executives generally. He gives in fairly non-technical and straightforward language the background to the increasing complexities of company law. The publication is a practical handbook which may be easily understood by company directors and executives as well as lawyers. R.S.S.

ROLE OF DIRECTORS IN COMPANY LAW.

By Ch. S. Rao, M.A., B.L., C.L.S.S. The Madras Law Journal Office, Myslapore, Madras, 4, 1970. Pp. xxxvii and 448. Price, Rs. 25.

The Company Director is the keystone in the arch of the business structure of a Company because, in the final analysis, a company depends for its success on the Director's ability and integrity. Although the interest of the shareholders constitutes the ultimate factor involved, the entire responsibility for management rests in practice on the Board of Directors, as the shareholders are in fact widely dispersed and out of touch with the day-to-day affairs of the companies. Progress depends mainly on the character and administrative acumen of the Directors and a correct appreciation of the Director's position and status in law is therefore necessary both for ensuring proper administration and for preventing maladministration, and that is the theme of the work now under review.

2. The present work sets out to demonstrate the norms that derive from the positive laws over and above the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956. Based particularly upon those sections of the Act which deal with the Directors of companies, the subject-matter is discussed against the background of the whole of the Indian Trusts Act and other laws, Indian and foreign. Some judgments of the American Courts, with special notes by the author, have been included. The Seventeenth Report of the Law Commission on the law of trusts is also reproduced in the form of an appendix.

3. As observed by ex-Chief Justice Subba Rao in the foreword, the author gives the Director a status consistent with the doctrine of constructive trusteeship, and develops the doctrine in the light of the provisions of the Indian Trusts Act and the Indian Partnership Act. Chapter I sets out the status of constructive trustees, and the second chapter deals with the joint responsibility of the Board of Directors. Chapter 3 traces their civil and criminal liability to their status as constructive trustees and their relationship inter se. The last chapter illustrates the application of the doctrine to cases of unjust enrichment and abuse of power. The author concludes that the position of the Directors will continue to be onerous so long as the scheme of the law of companies and of trusts stands as it is at present, but that it carries the quality of a mission whose best reward can only be in its service aspect.

4. There are six appendices; the first two are devoted to the Indian Trusts Act (II of 1882) and Report on Trusts Act, 1882, Appendix V is on American judgments, and Appendix VI contains Notes on non-elected directors, on strict-liability doctrine and directors, and on de facto directors. Appendices III and IV reproduce relevant sections from the Indian Companies Act, 1956, the Constitution of India, Civil Procedure Code, Indian Contract Act, Indian Partnership Act, Code of Criminal Procedure, English Companies Act, 1948, English Trustee Act, 1925, and the Delegation of Functions Act, 1950.

5. The subject-matter of the book is based on lectures delivered by the author to the Incorporated Secretaries of England, Calcutta District, during his tenure as Additional Registrar of Companies at Calcutta. His official experience of the daily administration of the Companies Act and his work at the Bar in the earlier years have eminently fitted him for the present work. The author, it is believed, strikes out his own path where necessary and expresses original views that are at times critical of well-known authors, and there is no lack of citations in the book. The work should therefore be of help to lawyers and students of law; equally interesting and useful should it be to every Company Director. The subject index at the end furnishes a ready key for a topic-wise approach to the subject-matter of discussion.

R.S.S.

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE. 11th Edition. By John H. Buzzard, Roy D. Amlot, and Stephen Mitchell. Sweet & Maxwell, London. 1970 (N. M. Tripathi Private Ltd., Bombay) Price, Rs. 175.50.

Evidence, as used in judicial proceedings, has several meanings. The two main senses of the word are: the means, apart from argument and inference, whereby the Court is informed about the issues of fact as ascertained by the pleading; and, the subject-matter of such means. The rules of procedure regulate the general conduct of litigation: the object of pleading is to ascertain for the guidance of the parties and the court the material facts in issue in each particular case; proof is the establishment of such facts by proper legal means to the satisfaction of the court. The province, therefore, of the Law of Evidence is two-fold, viz., to lay down rules as to what matter is or is not admissible for the purpose of establishing facts in dispute and as to the manner in which such matter may be placed before the court.

2. Since the appearance of the last edition of the present authoritative work on evidence in 1963, large areas of the law of evidence have been scrutinised by experts with the object of simplifying and rationalising it. Among recent legislative developments may be mentioned the Criminal Procedure (Right of Reply) Act 1964; Criminal Evidence Act 1965; Criminal Procedure (Attendance of Witnesses) Act 1967; Criminal Law Act 1967; Road Safety Act 1967; Theft Act 1968; and, the Civil Evidence Act 1968, and also several decisions of the House of Lords and the Judicial Committee. In order to incorporate these into the present edition it has been necessary to rewrite or extensively revise the chapters on Burden of Proof, Facts relevant to show identity, Similar Facts, Hearsay in Criminal and Civil Proceedings, Confessions, Written Statements in Criminal Proceedings, Judgments and Rules of Evidence relating to the course of a trial.

3. The Criminal Evidence Act 1965, the Criminal Justice Act 1967, and the Civil Evidence Act 1968, mark the beginning of the end for the hearsay rule. As it, however, survives in criminal proceedings (See Archbold: Pleading, Evidence, and Practice in Criminal Cases. 1969), the operation of the rule at common law has been reconsidered. The publication of the statutory instrument which, inter alia, amends the Rules of the Supreme Court to accord with the rules and procedures laid down in the Civil Evidence Act, 1968 has also been referred to. According to Part I of this Act, hearsay evidence is to be admissible only by virtue of this Act and other statutory provisions, or by agreement, in "Civil Proceedings", which includes, in addition to civil proceedings in any of the ordinary courts of law, civil proceedings before any other tribunal in relation to which the strict rules of evidence apply, and an arbitration or reference, whether or not under an enactment, it does not include civil proceedings in relation to which the strict rules of evidence do not apply.

4. The relevant section of the instrument mentioned above is Part II of the Civil Evidence Act, 1968. The authors have picked out Rules 3, 7, & 8, as particularly important from out of the seven rules. Rule 3 specifies the particulars which are to be included in a pleading where it is intended to put in evidence by virtue of S 11 or 12 of the Act, a previous conviction, finding of adultery, or adjudication of paternity. Rule 7 adds a new Part III to Order 38 and prescribes procedure to be followed where it is intended to adduce evidence under Part I of the Act, and Rule 8 provides for the application of Part I of the 1968 Act to Admiralty Proceedings.

5. Of the 47 sections in the present volume, the first 14 discuss, inter alia, matters for which evidence is unnecessary, burden of proof, facts in issue, and facts excluded; Sections 15 to 25 deal with hearsay evidence, admissions, confessions and statements, and declarations; sections 29 to 39 consider public registers, records and other documents, reputation, judgments, and Oath and Affirmation. Rules of evidence relating to the course of a trial, extrinsic evidence, and weight of evidence, are among the topics covered by the other sections.

6. In the Appendix are included Section 1 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, Section 16 (2) of the Children and Young Persons Act, 1963, and Judges' Rules. The table of cases, the table of statutes, and index are adequate. R.S.S.

ESTATE DUTY ON SETTLED PROPERTY. By John Mowbray, B.A., Bar at Law. Sweet and Maxwell. London, 1970. (N. M. Tripathi Private Ltd., Bombay). Pp. xvi & 119. Price, Rs. 22.50.

The British Finance Act, 1969 has altered the law in so many ways that the basic law in respect of persons dying after 15th April 1969 is now entirely different from what it was earlier. Many of the old charging sections have been repealed and new ones added, the rate structure has been altered, and old reliefs have been abolished; and as a result much of the old case law has become obsolete. The law concerning estate duty on settled property has been substantially changed, and the present publication is a close study of these changes. The book contains a full account of the new charging provisions, including "the substituted S. 2 (1) (b)" of the Finance Act, 1894 and the new charge on discretionary settlements, and the rules for ascertaining the extent of the dutiable property. It also includes a full account of the exemptions and reliefs peculiar to the new charging provisions. While approaching the subject from the point of view of surveying the damage after the death, the author has not let the opportunity go to prod the new law for possible loopholes. The law is stated as on 31st October 1970.

2. The author begins by outlining the pre-1969 position and the position subsequent to it. As it originally stood, S. 1 of the Finance Act 1894, which still remains the basic law of estate duty, imposed duty on property 'settled or not settled', passing on the death, and section 2 deemed certain kinds of property to be included in that passing. These included property of which the deceased was competent to dispose of at his death (S. 2 (1) (a)), and property in which an interest ceased on his death (S. 2 (1) (b)). This S. 2 (1) (b) has been replaced by a corresponding substituted section under which settled property passes on the death if the deceased has an interest in possession in it within the last seven years, or previously if he retained a benefit into the seven years. The main definition of 'settlement' for the purpose of deciding whether property is settled property within the substituted S. 2 (1) (b) is an adaptation of the definition of 'settlement' for the purposes of the Settled Land Act, 1925. The substituted S. 2 (1) (b) is not, like the original S. 2 (1) (b) of the Finance Act 1894, confined to interests ceasing on death; it applies to interests continuing after the death, like entailed interests, continuing annuities, and leases for life which continue after the death. It charges duty on settled property, not only where the deceased had an interest in possession in it at his death, but also where he had such interest within the previous seven years. In a separate chapter the author briefly notes the changes in the provisions regarding exemptions and reliefs applying to settled property made by the Finance Act, 1969, with a brief account of the old law in order to enable one to understand the changes and their significance. In the chapter on discretionary settlements, he examines discretionary trusts, the charging provisions, partial benefit and particular exemptions and reliefs, while, in dealing with the purchases of reversionary interests, he covers settlement ceasing before death and continuing settlement. Elsewhere he takes a look at accumulation ceasing on settlor's death, and at accountability and incidence of duty.

3. The nine chapters in the book are divided into convenient sections, the chapter and paragraph numbers being given in the margin in each section; a similar arrangement is followed in the index, although the pages also are duly numbered. There is a table of cases, and a table of statutes. The book should be of real assistance to accountants and legal practitioners who are concerned with estate duty on settled property. R.S.S.

---

CRIMINAL LAW. By J. C. Smith, M.A., LL.B., Bar-at-Law, and Brian Hogan, LL.B., Bar-at-Law. 2nd Edition, 1969. Butterworths, London. (Eastern Law House Pvt. Ltd., Calcutta). Pp. lxxi & 588. Price, 70s.

The volume under review, which is a textbook about the substantive law of crime, attempts to state and discuss the law which determines whether any act is a crime or not. The book does not deal with the procedure by which the law is enforced or the evidence by which criminal offences are proved, except in so far as these matters are inseparable from the discussion of the substantive law. Procedure and Evidence are equally important subjects, but they are well discussed in such works as Pleading, Evidence and Practice in Criminal Cases (Archbold, 1969) and Criminal Justice and the Treatment of Offenders (McClean and Wood, 1969), which have already been reviewed in these columns. Since the publication of the first edition of the present work, there have been far-reaching changes in English Criminal law, like the Criminal Law Act, 1967, the Criminal Justice Act, 1967, the Sexual Offences and Abortion Acts 1967 and the Theft Act 1968. There have been other statutory changes and a considerable amount of case law. In the present edition the authors have taken these developments into account and state the law as it stood on 1st February 1969. The discussion of the general principles has been somewhat expanded, but the general plan of the book remains unchanged.

2. The book is divided into two parts, Part I being devoted to general principles, and Part II, to particular crimes. The introductory chapter is concerned with the objectives which criminal punishment has in view, viz., the prevention of the offender from committing the crime again; the informing of society at large that crime does not pay; the working of retribution—As you sow, so you reap; and the education and reformation of the criminal. Four of the ten chapters in Part I explain crimes of negligence, crimes of strict liability and modes of participation in crime, and incitement, conspiracy and attempt. Chapter 3 classifies offences into treasons, felonies and misdemeanours: arrestable offences, and indictable and summary offences, while chapter 4 examines the elements of a crime—the nature and analysis of actus reus, the meaning of mens rea, and the coincidence of actus reus and mens rea. A separate chapter describes the general defences available in a criminal trial like infancy, insanity, diminished responsibility, mistake, drunkenness, necessity, duress, and superior orders.

3. The first three chapters in Part II deal with offences against the person like homicide, non-fatal offences and sexual offences. Murder, manslaughter, suicide, infanticide and child destruction come under the first category; assault and battery, wounding, administering poison, false imprisonment and fire arms and other weapons come next, and in sexual offences are included rape, indecent assault, abduction of women, prostitution, indecent exposure and unnatural offences. Offences against property involving fraud take up a whole chapter under the heads of theft, robbery, deception, cheating, false accounting, blackmail, burglary, handling stolen goods, and forgery. Three chapters dwell on offences against public morals and public order and on road traffic offences. These are comprehensive and cover bigamy, obscene publications, unlawful assembly, public nuisance and libel, reckless driving, and driving under the influence of drink. Offences relating to the administration of justice, like perjury, perverting the course of justice, impeding the apprehension of offenders, and contempt of court, and offences against the security of the State, like treason and violation of official secrets, are considered in the last two chapters.

4. The table of statutes, the table of cases and index are useful. In this attempt to provide the undergraduate—with a complete exposition of the substantive Criminal Law, all the more important crimes are examined, and, as the citation of cases is more extensive than the needs of the undergraduate alone would have required, it should be of assistance to practising lawyers also. R.S.S.

CASE-BOOK ON INDUSTRIAL LAW.

By R. S. Sim, LL.B. (Hons.) Cert. Ed., F. R. S. A., Bar-at-Law, and Vincent Powell-Smith, LL.M., J. C. B., Dip. Com., F. R. S. A. Butterworths & Co. (Publishers) Ltd., 88 Kingsway, London W. C. 2. (Sole selling Agents: Eastern Law House Pvt. Ltd., Calcutta) 1969. Pp. xxv and 387. Price, 32s.

Personnel managers, trade union officials, and others taking professional examinations, have to study industrial law as a special subject. It is becoming more and more important even in the curricula of universities, both in the Law Faculties and in the Departments of Commerce and Industrial Administration. In the present work the authors aim to provide a reasonably-priced case-book covering the subject-matter, and they have also included other source materials in order to add to the usefulness of the book. The book is based upon materials that were available in July 1968, although at the proof stage the authors were able to incorporate an extract from the Government White Paper, In Place of Strife, published in January 1969; they have also noted the effect of the Court of Appeal decision in Torquay Hotels v. Cousins. The White Paper referred to outlines Government's proposals for reform of the system of industrial relations. The main divisions of this document are:—The role of Government in industrial relations; the present state of industrial relations; the reform of collective bargaining; the extension of collective bargaining; aids to collective bargaining; and new safeguards.

2. The book is divided into three parts. Part I deals with the concept and contract of employment itself, and the duties of the parties, both at common law and by statute. The first chapter covers the creation of the employer-employee, master-servant relationship, vicarious liability, termination of the relationship and remedies for breach of contract, under the heads of damages, injunction and declaration. The next chapter is concerned with the terms of the contract, redundancy payments, wage councils and fair wage clauses. Part II relates to the protection of workpeople and allied matters. So far as statutory provisions go the authors have treated the Factories Act, 1961, but have not included the mines and quarries legislation or that concerning shops and offices. The third chapter dwells on safe working conditions, voluntary assumption of risk and the employee's contributory negligence at common law, while safety provisions, special rules for women and young persons, and the administration of the Factories Act, form the subject of the next chapter. Part III, called Industrial Relations, deals with trade unions, collective bargaining, and the settlement of industrial disputes. It is devoted to the subject of trade unions and their relation to the law of contract, the law of crime, and the law of torts, and the final chapter treats the subject under the heads of common law, statutory provisions, and reform of the law.

3. Repeating his plea the other day for 'one industry, one union,' the President of the Indian Union is said to have urged that a registered trade union should have a minimum membership of at least 10 per cent of the total work force. Chapter 5 of the book gives the English judicial decisions in the matter of union membership and expulsion. Union rules must be strictly followed, but a union rule which is contrary to the Trade Union Act, 1913 will not be enforced by the Courts. An expulsion in accordance with union rules is not open to question in a Court of law, so long as relevant legislation is satisfied and those concerned have acted in good faith. A member cannot be expelled where there is no power of expulsion in the rules, and a resolution expelling a member, which is not in accordance with union rules is ultra vires. An expulsion will also be invalid and an appeal will lie to a Court of law where the expulsion is based upon a misinterpretation of a legal term. Where union rules make provision for an appeal against expulsion that appeal procedure must be followed before the Courts will have jurisdiction. A member wrongfully expelled from a trade union, in addition to a declaration of wrongful expulsion and an injunction requiring his restoration to full rights, may also recover damages against the union.

4. At the beginning of each case is a brief headnote which is useful. The table of statutes, the table of cases and the index should also be mentioned. On the whole this is a volume which students of the subject should find of great assistance. R.S.S.

CASE BOOK ON INSURANCE LAW.

By E. R. Harday Ivamy, LL.B., Ph.D., LL.D., Bar-at-Law. Butterworths, London, 1969. (Eastern Law House Pvt. Ltd., Calcutta). Pp. xxviii and 225. Price, 32s.

Believed to be the first case-book devoted exclusively to the law of Insurance, the present book follows the layout of other case-books by the same author. It has been planned in such a way that it can be used with the introductory works on the subjects like Law of Insurance (Preston and Collinvaux, 1958) and also with larger volumes like MacGillivray's (Law of Insurance, 1961). The author has presented the law of insurance as a whole, and linked up marine and non-marine insurance, for all branches of insurance are held to have developed from marine insurance. He has given a balanced selection of cases, bearing in mind that most of the Law of Marine Insurance has been codified in the Marine Insurance Act, 1906. In regard to this subject, however, he has chosen those cases which are authorities on the interpretation of the words of the sections of that Act.

2. There are eight parts in the book, and the 1st Part, dealing as it does with the general principles of insurance law, covers such subjects as insurable interest, non-disclosure, and misrepresentation, cover-note, premium, alteration of the Policy, exceptions, the conduct of the insured, conditions, construction of the Policy, doctrine of proximate cause, the claim, loss and subrogation. The last three parts are concerned with liability insurance, householder's comprehensive insurance, and jewellery insurance. The topics of injury to the insured, loss or damage to the vehicle, extension clauses, the right of third parties against the insurers, insurable value, warranties, the voyage, assignment of policy, loss and abandonment, salvage and general average, measures of indemnity, and procedure, are considered in two of the Parts, on Motor and Marine Insurance, and Part V, on Life and Personal Accident Insurance, focusses attention on the nature of a contract of life assurance, non-disclosure, and perils insured against.

3. Regarding life insurance, the fact that another insurance company has declined to insure the proposer has been held to be a material one which ought to have been disclosed. Where the Insured dies as a result of drowning, this amounts to "death by accident" within the meaning of a personal accident insurance policy, but death from sunstroke is not death "by accident". An injury is not accidental if it is caused by the intentional act of the assured, even though he does not foresee the effect. The policy sometimes defines "Permanent total disablement" as the "inability of the insured to resume his normal calling". As to motor insurance, the fact that another insurance company has refused to renew an insurance policy has been held to be material to be disclosed. A proposer who is asked whether he suffers from defective vision and replies 'No' is not guilty of making a mis-statement if his eye-sight is sufficient for the purpose of driving, although he wears thick glasses when doing so. Further, although a car may be mechanically sound when unloaded, it is not roadworthy if, when loaded with passengers, it cannot be driven safely. An insurance company must indemnify the insured who has insured against third party risks, even if the third party's death is caused by negligence or drunkenness of the insured. In fire insurance, normally the insurer is entitled to avoid liability on the ground that the property has been misdescribed, only when the misdescription is material. Damage caused to the insured premises by atmospheric concussion resulting from a fire or explosion in neighbouring premises is not damage by "fire". Actual ignition of the damaged property is necessary; destruction by heat is not enough.

4. The work contains a table of cases, a table of statutes, and an index. R.S.S.

---

THE LAW OF CONTRACT. 7th Edition by G. C. Cheshire, D.C.L., LL.D., F.B.A., Bar-at-law, and C. H. S. Fifoot, M.A., F.B.A., Bar-at-Law. Butterworths, London, 1969. (Eastern Law House Pvt. Ltd., Calcutta). Pp. lxxviii and 610 and (27). Price not stated.

In the present publication the authors profess to examine the principles underlying the English Law of Contract, to indicate the difficulties which surround their application, to illustrate them from the accidents of litigation and the practices of life, and to justify or excuse their vagaries by a reference to their history, because in the last four years there have been an unusual number of cases concerning the Law in which the decisions or dicta have provoked more than ordinary interest. Fresh thinking has become necessary on old ideas such as, for instance, the problem of fundamental obligation (the Suisse Atlantique case), the widening ambit of restraint of trade (the Eso Petroleum case), and the recurrent theme of remoteness of damage (The Heron II case). In 1968 there was a plethora of statutes on the borderland of law and of social and economic policy, which could not be ignored even if their relation to contract was only incidental. Of these statutes some are now in force, like the Restrictive Trade Practices Act, 1968; others may be enforced by executive order. There has also been the problem of dealing with cases recently decided but still under appeal; the decision in Gallie v. Lee in the Court of first instance was being prepared for inclusion, but, after the book had gone to press, the decision was reversed by a judgment of the Court of Appeal.

2. Opening with a historical introduction, the book is divided into nine Parts, the second Part describing the formation of a contract, under the heads of phenomena of agreement, consideration, intention to create legal relations and the contents of the contract, and the fifth, discussing the capacity of infants, corporations, persons mentally disordered and drunkards, and married women, to make a contract. After considering the elements required to form a contract, the factors that may vitiate it are examined; a 'mistake' at common law may make the contract 'void' and a 'misrepresentation' make it 'voidable.' The English law classifies contracts not only as valid and void or voidable, but also unenforceable though valid. The unenforceable contract is a creature of procedural rather than substantive law and its origin is to be found in the Statute of Frauds, whose history is now examined with a view to observing its surviving effects on the modern law. Several other questions are also considered. Are the reciprocal rights and obligations confined to the contracting parties or may they be extended to persons who took no share in the formation of the contract? Are their rights and obligations transferable by operation of law, as for instance where one of the parties dies before the contract is discharged?

3. Part IV examines the position of contracts that contain a vitiating element under the heads of mistake, misrepresentation, duress and undue influence, contracts rendered void by statute, contracts illegal as being prohibited by statute; contracts illegal at common law on grounds of public policy; and contracts void at common law on grounds of public policy. There is an analytical treatment of discharge of contracts in Part VII under the heads of discharge by performance, discharge by express agreement, discharge under the doctrine of frustration, and discharge by breach. Parts VIII and IX deal respectively with remedies for breach of contract and quasi-contract.

4. The volume has a table of cases, a table of statutes, and an useful index. B. S. S.

CASES ON THE LAW OF CONTRACT. 5th Edition. By G. C. Cheshire, D.C.L., LL.D., F.B.A., and C. H. S. Fifoot, M.A., F.B.A. Butterworths, London, 1969. (Eastern Law House Pvt. Ltd, Calcutta). Pp. xxvi & 510. Price, 50s.

A companion volume to the authors' 'Law of Contract', the present publication is divided into sixteen sections, of which the first seven cover the phenomena of agreement, consideration, intention to create legal relations, the contents of the contract, mistake, misrepresentation, and undue influence. An offer, to be capable of acceptance, must involve a definite promise by the offeror that he will bind himself if the exact terms specified by him are accepted, and it may be made either to a particular person or to the public at large. There may be a contract the consideration for which is the making of some other contract, which is collateral, although each has an independent existence. If a creditor accepts part payment by a third party in satisfaction of money due to him by a debtor, he cannot afterwards sue the debtor for the balance of the debt. If there is no intention to create legal relations, there may not be a contract even where there is a concluded agreement supported by consideration. Where parties have reached final agreement upon the terms of a contract, but, owing to a mistake, these terms are inaccurately expressed in a later instrument, the Court may rectify the mistake and decree specific performance. A misrepresentation is ground for relief if it is one of the causes that induced the plaintiff to make the contract. An action for rescission of a contract on the ground of innocent misrepresentation must be brought within a reasonable time, and a contract may be rescinded for undue influence in two groups of cases, viz., those in which the parties come within certain specified relations such as parent and child and solicitor and client, and those in which no special relation exists between the parties.

2. Four sections deal with contracts void by statute: Wagering contracts; contracts rendered illegal by statute; contracts illegal at common law on grounds of public policy; and contracts void at common law on grounds of public policy. A contract which is expressly or implicitly forbidden by statute will not be enforced whether or not there is an intention to break the law. Property transferred under an illegal contract is irrecoverable unless the plaintiff can establish a cause of action without being compelled to disclose and to rely on the illegality. If a contract violates no basic feeling of morality but only runs counter to social or economic expediency, it is void; but if it is obviously inimical to the interests of the community, it is illegal. Void at common law on grounds of public policy are contracts in restraint of trade. Contracts which restrain competition by an employee against an employer or by the vendor of a business against the purchaser are prima facie void.

3. The last five sections are concerned with infants, privity of contract, discharge of contract, remedies, and quasi-contract. A wife cannot bind her husband contractually unless she has his express or implied authority to contract on his behalf. There is however a presumption that a wife who lives with her husband has his authority to purchase necessities suitable to his style of living. A principal who becomes indebted to a third person upon a contract made by his agent remains liable for the debt, although he has already paid the amount to the agent. Contractual obligations cannot be assigned, though in certain cases the obligation to perform a contract may be delegated without affecting the rights and liabilities of the contracting parties. A party to an entire contract who has abandoned it after partly performing his obligations can recover nothing for what he has done, and a contract is discharged by 'frustration', which occurs whenever the law recognises that without default of either party, a contractual obligation has become incapable of being performed. The party who commits a breach of contract is liable for the loss thereby caused to the plaintiff, if he had reason to expect that the loss was likely to result. Suits in quasi-contract lie where money is paid by the plaintiff to the defendant's use and where there is a total failure of consideration.

4. In the present edition of the work the authors have removed nine cases and added seven, including the Suisse Atlantique case, the Esso Petroleum case and The Horon II case. They have included the text of the Misrepresentation Act 1967, which awaits the interpretation of the Courts. R.S.S.

---

LAW AND ORDER: THE SCALES OF JUSTICE. Edited by Abraham S. Blumberg. Trans-action Books. Aldine Publishing Company, 529 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A. 1970. Pp. 188. Price, $ 2.45

Although giving a critical but fair appreciation of the Supreme Court and the judicial and legal systems of the United States, books like The Honourable Court and Equality by Statute revealed only one side of the medal; the other, and seamier, side is now exposed by publications like the one under review, which is a merciless indictment of the whole gamut of America's judicial administration, its machinery and processes, which are all so insidiously working for the perpetuation of the numerous inequities and anomalies that disfigure the face of so-called civilised society today. The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States asserts that no State or local government "shall deny any person the equal protection of the laws". The due process clause of the Fifth Amendment provides a similar restraint on the Federal Government. Other clauses of the Bill of Rights guarantee the right to a lawyer, a grand jury indictment, speedy trial, and trial by jury. Do all defendants in American courts get the full benefit of these guarantees? No, say many criminologists and lawyers.

2. The present volume, which consists of ten articles originally published in the Trans-action magazine, seeks to explain how legal inequality has evolved and suggests what must be done to remedy this situation. Central to the present ideology of "Law and Order" is the belief that it can provide for real justice. Yet as the essays in this volume show, the American legal system has often discouraged change and the possibilities of more opportunities for material advancement. Creditors, landlords, and the wealthy tend to receive more favourable treatment by the courts as well as the legislatures and other agencies, while consumers, the young and the blundering pay the consequences. The former group receives the substance of justice; the latter, the form. The "Law and Order" ideology has deceived the middle classes into believing that the good life could be had without addressing ourselves to the underlying issues of poverty, education, health and employment. Unless the poor and the weak receive the kind of protection and resources now available only to the rich and the powerful, it is useless, deplores the author, to prate about law and order.

3. "The Tipped Scales of American Justice", "Lawyers with convictions", "the Lawyers as champion", "Justice Stumbles over Science" and "Juvenile Justice" and "Pornography" are among the titles of the essays included, some of them self-explanatory, others somewhat intriguing, but all of them backed by data assiduously collected, although some readers may consider the publication tendentious in a way. The sum and substance of the argument is that the present ideology of "Law and Order" is so much bunkum and that it should be replaced by a new order of things which would be ushered in by a frontal attack on the citadels of power. As the political and economic struggle intensifies, it is certain that the legal system, the enforcement apparatus, and the courts as political instruments will be at the centre.

4. The Editor of this collection, Mr. Abraham S. Blumberg, is a professor of sociology and law, with major interests in the sociology of law, social stratification, and deviance. He is a member of the New York Bar and the United States Supreme Court Bar and, in his private practice, he specialises in criminal law and constitutional law. R.S.S.

---

LAW AND ORDER : MODERN CRIMINALS. Edited by James F. Short Jr. Trans-action Books. Aldine Publishing Co. Chicago, U. S. A. 1970, Pp. 188, Price $ 2.45.

The several essays from the Trans-action magazine which comprise the present publication analyse crimes into those committed by groups with little or no political or economic power, such as the young and minority groups (Part I), those in which the criminal is also the victim, such as abortion, or those in which the victim rationalises his activity as "white collar" or 'respectable' crime (Part II), and those stemming directly from social conflict and dissent, such as political assassination and looting (Part III). Laws define who shall be considered criminal, but much leeway has yet to be made in law enforcement processes, varying in degree with the varying influences at work. It is observed that laws are both explicit and harsher concerning property offences that are committed by the poor (e.g. larceny, burglary and robbery) than they are with respect to the crimes of the 'better classes' (e.g. embezzlement, illegal financial manipulations, and large scale tax evasions). Many types of such law violation are not defined as criminal at all, but rather as violations of civil and administrative law.

2. 'Diagnosing' delinquency is the primary focus of the first essay in the book, and it brings to the task a variety of methods of data collection and measuring devices. The next two papers concern the delinquent gang, 'Why Gangs Fight' treating in some detail a few of the group mechanisms which produce delinquent behaviour and variations in such behaviour. In his book, "Judging Delinquents" R. W. Emerson, of the University of California, thrashes out the problem and discusses how it is being handled in American juvenile Courts. In the II Part of this book, the first essay reports findings from a study of the incidence of criminal victimisation among a selected sample of U. S. population surveyed in 1968. The intricate relationships of a specific type of crime, public attitudes, and social and economic status are illustrated by the third article in this Part, on abortion laws. The 'criminals' of this type are, in a manner of speaking, victims, as their type of behaviour does not harm the property or person of others—more or less the same as homosexual activity and drug addiction.

3. The four essays in Part III of the book study crimes of a political nature, beginning with research and commentary concerning assassination—political homicide, which discusses a typology of motives for assassination with illustrations from the Middle East. The second essay consists of a thoughtful commentary following the assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy. The last two essays compare looting in natural disasters and in civil disturbances, and it is found that looting is broadly participated in by local people and is very common in civil disturbances, but rare, and with few participants, who are usually outsiders, in natural disasters.

4. An important conclusion emerging from these essays is that these criminal activities seem to stem from perceptions of inequities and injustices and that the definition of criminal behaviour is becoming "politicized." However that may be, it is well that the United Nations Congress on 'Prevention of Crime and Treatment of Offenders,' which met recently in Japan, should have recommended that special attention should be paid to the administrative, technical and professional structure necessary for more effective action in the area of crime prevention; it felt that young men should be enthused to participate in crime prevention and rehabilitation work.

5. At the end of most of the essays, extra reading lists are provided for the benefit of those interested in the topics under reference.

6. The Editor, James F. Short Jr., is Professor of Sociology and Chairman of the Department at Washington State University. Since 1963 he has served as co-director of research for the National Commission of the Causes and Prevention of Violence. He is also a member of the Research Council, National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

R.S.S.

END

mised. Clause 3 of the U. P. Wheat Procurement (Levy) Order compels the licensed dealer to deliver to the Controller or his authorised agent every day 50 p.c. of the wheat procured or purchased by him. There is no scope for negotiations there. Supply of wheat pursuant to cl. 3 of the Order and acceptance thereof do not result in a contract of sale. There is no 'sale' within the meaning of S. 2 (h) in such a case and the person supplying wheat is not liable to pay sales tax on the price for wheat supplied. Case law discussed. Judgment of Allahabad High Court, Reversed. (Paras 7, 8, 16)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1970) AIR 1970 All 518 (V 57) =
1969 All LJ 424, Commr. of Sales Tax, U. P. Lucknow v.
Ram Bilas Ram Gopal 4, 8
(1969) AIR 1969 SC 343 (V 56) =
(1969) 1 SCR 861, State of Rajasthan v. M/s. Karam Chand
Thappar & Bros. Ltd. 12
(1968) AIR 1968 SC 478 (V 55) =
(1968) 1 SCR 479, Indian Steel and Wire Products Ltd. v. State of Madras 10
(1968) AIR 1968 SC 599 (V 55) =
(1968) 1 SCR 705, Andhra
Sugars Ltd. v. State of Andhra Pradesh 11
(1963) AIR 1963 SC 1207 (V 50) =
1963 Supp (2) SCR 459, M/s New India Sugar Mills Ltd. v. Com-
mr. of Sales Tax, Bihar 5, 9, 10, 12
(1958) AIR 1958 SC 560 (V 45) =
1959 SCR 379, State of Madras
v. Gannon Dunkerley & Co.
(Madras) Ltd. 5
(1955) 1955 AC 696 = 1955-2 All ER 345, Kirkness (Inspector of Taxes) v. John Hudson & Co.
Ltd. 13
(1954) 1954-1 All ER 29 = 1954-1
WLR 40, John Hudson & Co.
Ltd. v. Kirkness 13

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.: The appellants who are dealers in food grains supplied to the Regional Food Controller diverse quantities of wheat in compliance with the provisions of the U. P. Wheat Procurement (Levy) Order, 1959. The Sales Tax Officer levied tax under the U. P. Sales Tax Act on the aggregate of the price of wheat by the appellants, rejecting the contention raised by the appellants that the wheat supplied was not sold by them to the Controller. In appeal the Assistant Commissioner (Judicial) Sales Tax held that the turnover resulting from supplies of wheat was not taxable since there was no "sale" within the meaning of the U. P. Sales Tax Act, 1948. The order was confirmed by the Additional Judge (Revisions) Sales Tax.

2. The Additional Judge (Revisions) Sales Tax referred the following questions to the High Court of Allahabad for opinion:

"(1) Whether the sales made to the Regional Food Controller under the U. P. Wheat Procurement (Levy) Order, 1959, are sales within the meaning of "sale" under S. 2 (h) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act?

(2) Whether in the circumstances of the case, the assessee is liable to pay sales tax on the sales made to the Regional Food Controller under the provisions of the U. P. Wheat Procurement (Levy) Order, 1959?"

3. The questions raised were defective in form. The word "sales" when it first occurs in Question No. (1) should be "supplies". The expression "sales made" in Question No. (2) should be "on the price for wheat supplied". We modify the questions accordingly.

4. The High Court of Allahabad, following their earlier judgment in Commr. of Sales Tax, U. P. Lucknow v. Ram Bilas Ram Gopal, 1969 All LJ 424 = (AIR 1970 All 518) answered the two questions in the affirmative. The appellants have appealed to this Court with special leave.

5. The expression "sale" is defined in S. 2 (h) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act, 1948 as meaning any transfer of property in goods for cash, deferred payment or other valuable consideration, but not including a mortgage, hypothecation, charge or pledge. Power of the Provincial Legislature by virtue of Entry 42 List II of the Government of India Act, 1935, was restricted. The Legislature was competent to legislate for levy of tax only on transactions which were "sales" within the meaning of the Indian Sale of Goods Act, 1930, State of Madras v. Gannon Dunkerley & Co. (Madras) Ltd., 1959 SCR 379 = (AIR 1958 SC 560), M/s New India Sugar Mills Ltd. v. Commissioner of Sales Tax, Bihar, 1963 Supp (2) SCR 459 = (AIR 1963 SC 1207). It was observed in M/s New India Sugar Mills' case (1963) Supp (2) SCR 459 = (AIR 1963 SC 1207):

"In popular parlance 'sale' means transfer of property from one person to another in consideration of price paid or promised or other valuable consideration. But that is not the meaning of 'sale' in the Sale of Goods Act, 1930. Section 4 of the Sale of Goods Act provides by its first subsection that a contract of sale of goods is a contract where the seller agrees to transfer the property in goods to the buyer for a price. "Price" by cl. (10) of S. 2 means the money consideration for sale of goods, and "where under a contract of sale property in the goods is transferred from the seller to the buyer, the contract is called a sale, but where the transfer of the property in the goods is to take place at a future time or subject to some condition thereafter to be fulfilled, the contract is called an agreement to sell" (sub-section (3), Sec. 4). It is manifest that under the Sale of Goods Act a transaction is called sale only where for money consideration property in goods is transferred under a contract of sale. Section 4 of the Sale of Goods Act was borrowed almost verbatim from Section 1 of the English Sale of Goods Act 56 & 57 Vict. c. 71. As observed by Benjamin in the 8th Edn. of his work on 'Sale', "to constitute a valid sale there must be a concurrence of the following elements, viz., (1) parties competent to contract; (2) mutual assent; (3) a thing, the absolute or general property in which is transferred from the seller to the buyer; and (4) a price in money paid or promised"

It was also observed that the expression "sale of goods" in the Constitution must be understood in the same sense in which it is used in the Sale of Goods Act, 1930. The U. P. Legislature could therefore legislate for levy of sales-tax on a transaction which amounted to a sale within the meaning of the Sale of Goods Act, 1930, and not on any other transaction which was deemed by fiction to be a sale.

6. It is necessary then to determine whether the stocks of wheat supplied by the appellants in compliance with the provisions of the U. P. Wheat Procurement (Levy) Order, 1959, to the Regional Food Controller were sold to that Officer within the meaning of the definition of the word 'sale' in Section 2 (h) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act, 1948. The relevant provisions of the U. P. Wheat Procurement (Levy) Order, 1959, may first be read.

The Preamble to the Order states:

"Whereas the State Government is of the opinion that it is necessary and expedient so to do for maintaining the supplies of wheat and for securing its equitable distribution and availability at fair prices:

Now, therefore, in exercise of the powers conferred by Clauses (e), (f), (h), (i) and (j) of sub-section (2) of Section 3 of the Essential Commodities Act, 1955 (10 of 1955), x x x the Governor of the State of Uttar Pradesh is pleased to make the following order x x x"

Clause 3 provides:

"(1) Every Licensed dealer shall sell to the State Government at the controlled prices:

(a) Fifty (50) per cent of wheat held in stock by him at the commencement of this Order; and

(b) Fifty (50) per cent of wheat procured or purchased by him every day beginning with the date of commencement of this Order and until such time as the State Government otherwise directs.

(2) The wheat required to be sold to the State Government under sub-clause (1) shall be delivered by the licensed dealer to the Controller or to such other person as may be authorised by the Controller to take delivery on his behalf."

Clause 4 confers powers of entry, search, seizure upon Enforcement Officers: insofar as it is material it provides:

"(1) Any Enforcement Officer may, with a view to securing compliance with this Order or to satisfying himself that this Order has been complied with:

(i) enter with such assistance as may be necessary any premises where he has reason to believe that wheat is procured, purchased or stocked;

(ii) ask of any person all necessary questions;

(iii) examine any books or documents;

(iv) search any premises, vehicles, vessels and air-craft and seize wheat in respect of which he has reasons to believe that a contravention of the order has been, is being, or is about to be committed and thereafter take or authorise the taking of all measures necessary for securing the production of stocks so seized in a court and for their sale, custody, pending such production.

x x x x "

By Clause 3 of the Order every licensed dealer is directed to "sell" to the State Government 50 per cent of the wheat held in stock by him on the date of the commencement of the Order at the "controlled prices". Again out of the stock of wheat procured or purchased by him every day beginning with the date of commencement of the Order he is directed to "sell" 50 per cent of that stock. The Order enjoins the licensed dealer to deliver the quantities specified in sub-clause (1) of Clause 3 either to the Controller or to such other person as may be authorised by the Controller to take delivery on his behalf. To ensure that the licensed dealer carries out his obligation the Enforcement Officers may enter any premises where they have reason to believe that wheat is procured, purchased or stocked, and may make necessary enquiries, examine any books or documents and search any premises, vehicles, vessels and air-craft and seize wheat in respect of which they have reason to believe that a contravention of the Order has been, is being, or is about to be committed.

7. Obligation to deliver wheat of the quantity specified arises out of the statute. The Order takes no account of the volition of the licensed dealers and until the State Government directs otherwise, of the Controller or the authorised officer. The Order imposes an obligation upon the licensed dealer who is defined in Clause 2 (d) as meaning a person holding a valid licence under the U. P. Foodgrains Dealers Licensing Order, 1959, to deliver the quantities of wheat specified in the Order. The State Government is directed by the Order to pay for the wheat supplied at the controlled rate. The source of the obligations to deliver the specified quantities of wheat and to pay for them is not in any contract, but in the statutory order. In our judgment Clause 3 sets up a machinery for compulsory acquisition by the State Government of stocks of wheat belonging to the licensed dealers. The Order, it is true, makes no provision in respect of the place and manner of supply of wheat and payment of the controlled price. It contains a bald injunction to supply wheat of the specified quantity day after day, and enacts that in default of compliance the dealer is liable to be punished if it does not envisage any consensual arrangement. It does not require the State Government to enter into even an informal contract. A sale predicates a contract of sale of goods between persons competent to contract for a price paid or promised: a transaction in which an obligation to supply goods is imposed, and which does not involve an obligation to enter into a contract, cannot be called a 'sale', even if the person supplying goods is declared entitled to the value of goods, which is determined or determinable in the manner prescribed. Assuming that between the licensed dealer and the Controller, there may be some arrangements about the place and manner of delivery of wheat, and the payment of "controlled price", the operation of Clause 3 does not on that account become contractual.

8. The High Court relied upon the following observations in Ram Bilas Ram Gopal's case, 1969 All LJ 424 = (AIR 1970 All 518):

"Analysing Clause 3 of the Levy Order it is clear that a licensed dealer is obliged to sell to the State Government fifty per cent of the wheat held in stock by him at the commencement of the Order, and thereafter fifty per cent of the wheat daily procured or purchased by him beginning with the date of commencement of the Order until such time as the State Government otherwise directs. The price at which the wheat is sold is the maximum price fixed in the Wheat (Uttar Pradesh) Price Control Order, 1959, as notified by the Government of India. Delivery of the wheat has to be given by the dealer to the Regional Food Controller or a person authorised by him in that behalf. The dealer has no option but to sell the specified percentage of wheat to the State Government. The State Government has also no option but to purchase fifty per cent of the wheat held in stock by the dealer at the commencement of the Levy Order. As regards the wheat procured or purchased daily by the dealer thereafter, it is open to the State Government to say that from any particular date it will not purchase any or all of the specified percentage of wheat. Therefore, as regards that wheat the Levy Order leaves it open to one of the parties, namely the State Government to decide when it will stop purchasing wheat from the dealer. That in substance is Clause 3 of the Levy Order and it embodies the total sum of obligations imposed on the dealer and the State Government. All other details of the transaction are left open to negotiation. It leaves it open to the parties to negotiate in respect of the time and the mode of payment of the price, the time and mode of delivery of wheat, and other conditions of the contract."

Clause 3 of the Order compels the licensed dealer to deliver to the Controller or his authorised agent every day 50 per cent of the wheat procured or purchased by him. There is no scope for negotiations there. Assuming that the Controller may designate the place of delivery and the place of payment of price at the controlled rate, and the licensed dealer acquiesces therein, or even when in respect of those two matters there is some consensual arrangement, in our judgment, supply of wheat pursuant to Clause 3 of the Order and acceptance thereof do not result in a contract of sale. The High Court observed that:

" x x x whatever compulsive or coercive force is used to bring about a transaction under Clause 3 of the Levy Order, it must be traced to legislation. It cannot be attributed to the State Government as a party to the transaction. This, then, is clear. There is nothing in the Levy Order which can be accused of vitiating the free consent of the parties as defined under Section 14 of the Indian Contract Act, when entering into the contract of sale."

But these observations assume a contract of sale which the Order does not contemplate. If there be a contract, the restrictions imposed by statute may not vitiate the consent. But the contract cannot be assumed.

9. We may refer to certain decisions of this Court on which reliance was placed at the Bar. In M/s. New India Sugar Mills' case, 1963 Supp (2) SCR 459 = (AIR 1963 SC 1207) under the Sugar and Sugar Products Control Order, 1946, a scheme was devised for equitable distribution of sugar. The consuming States intimated to the Sugar Controller of India their requirements of sugar and the factory owners sent statements of stocks of sugar held by them. The Controller made allotments to various States and addressed orders to the factory owners directing them to supply sugar to the States in question in accordance with the despatch instructions from the State Governments. Under the allotment orders, M/s. New India Sugar Mills Ltd., in Bihar despatched stocks of sugar to the State of Madras. The State of Bihar treated the transaction as a sale and levied tax thereon under the Bihar Sales Tax Act, 1947. The tax payer contended that the supplies of sugar, pursuant to the directions of the Controller, did not result in sales, and that no tax was exigible on such transactions. A majority of the Court observed that despatches of sugar pursuant to the directions of the Controller were not made in pursuance of any contract of sale. There was no offer by the tax payer to the State of Madras, and no acceptance by the latter; the tax payer was under the Control Order compelled to carry out the directions of the Controller and it had no volition in the matter. Intimation by the State of its requirements of sugar to the Controller or communication of the allotment order to the assessee did not amount to an offer. Nor did the mere compliance with despatch instructions issued by the Controller, which the assessee had not the option to refuse to comply with, amount to acceptance of an offer or to making of an offer. A contract of sale of goods postulates a voluntary arrangement regarding goods between the contracting parties. It was held that in the case before the Court there was no such voluntary arrangement.

10. In two later decisions of this Court the true character of transactions in which supplies of commodities were made pursuant to Control Orders was examined. In Indian

Steel & Wire Products Ltd. v. State of Madras, (1968) 1 SCR 479 = (AIR 1968 SC 478) the tax-payer supplied certain steel products to various persons in the State of Madras pursuant to the directions given by the Steel Controller exercising powers under the Iron and Steel (Control of Production and Distribution) Order, 1941. The authorities of the State of Madras assessed the turnover of the tax-payer resulting from those transactions to sales tax under the Madras General Sales Tax Act. The tax-payer contended that the transactions of supply did not result in sales and were on that account not exposed to sales-tax, because steel products were supplied pursuant to the directions of the Iron and Steel Controller made under Cl. 10-B of the Order there being no mutual assent between the parties to the transaction. This Court held that the supplies were made pursuant to the directions issued under Cl. 5 of the Order and not pursuant to the directions issued under Clause 10-B of the Order. It was observed that the Orders were in respect of goods not yet manufactured, whereas under Clause 10-B directions could be given only in respect of goods already in stock, and since Cl. 5 did not require the Controller to regulate or control every facet of a transaction between a producer and the person to whom the tax-payer supplied iron and steel products the transactions were consensual. Cl. 5 of the Order read as follows:

"No producer or stock-holder shall dispose of or agree to dispose of or export or agree to export from British India any iron or steel, except in accordance with the conditions contained or incorporated in a general or special written order of the Controller."

Clause 10-B provided:

"The Controller may, by a written order require any person holding stock of iron and steel, acquired by him otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of Clause 4 to sell the whole or any part of the stock to such person or class of persons and on such terms and conditions as may be specified in the Order."

Comparing the terms of Clause 5 with the terms of Clause 10, the Court observed that liberty of contract in large measure was reserved to the producer or stockholder and to the purchaser in the matter of disposal of iron & steel. The obligation imposed by Clause 5 was, it was said, not to dispose of or agree to dispose of or export or agree to export any iron or steel except in accordance with the conditions contained or incorporated in the order of the Controller and that since there was liberty of contract between the parties but subject to restrictions, the transaction could be regarded as a sale. It was observed at page 489 (of SCR) = (at page 484 of AIR):

"But under Clause 5 he can authorise a producer or a stockholder to dispose of any iron or steel whether the same is in stock or not in accordance with the conditions contained or incorporated in a special or general written order issued by him. In the instant case, as can be gathered from the correspondence already referred to, the order issued by the Controller could be complied with only after manufacturing the required material. Hence, the order issued by the Controller could not have been issued under Clause 10-B."

The Court then observed:

"..... the area within which there can be bargaining between a prospective buyer and an intending seller of steel products, is greatly reduced. Both of them have to conform to the requirements of the order and to comply with the terms and conditions contained in the order of the Controller. Therefore they could negotiate only in respect of matters not controlled by the order or prescribed by the Controller."

The Court also observed:

"It would be incorrect to contend that because law imposes some restrictions on freedom to contract, there is no contract at all. So long as mutual assent is not completely excluded in any dealing, in law it is a contract. On the facts of this case for the reasons already mentioned, it is not possible to accept the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that nothing was left to be decided by mutual assent."

The Court in that case distinguished the case in M/s. New India Sugar Mills' case, 1963 Supp (2) SCR 459 = (AIR 1963 SC 1207) and expressly reserved their opinion on the question whether supplies of goods pursuant to the directions issued under cl. 10B of the Order may be regarded as sales. The decision in Indian Steel & Wire Products Ltd.'s case, (1968) 1 SCR 479 = (AIR 1968 SC 478) does not justify the view that even if the liberty of contract in relation to the fundamentals of the transaction is completely excluded a transaction of supply of goods pursuant to directions issued under a control Order may be regarded as a sale.

11. In Andhra Sugars Ltd. v. State of Andhra Pradesh, (1968) 1 SCR 705 = (AIR 1968 SC 599) again, in the view of the Court liberty of contract between parties to transactions relating to supply of sugarcane was not ruled out. Under the Andhra Pradesh Sugarcane (Regulation of Supply and Purchase) Act, 1961, the occupier of a sugar factory had to buy sugarcane from cane-growers in conformity with the directions of the Cane Commissioner. Under section 21 of the Act the State Government had power to tax purchases of sugarcane for use, consumption or sale in a sugar factory. Certain owners of sugar factories contended that "S. 21 was invalid." They contended that they were compelled by law to buy cane from the cane-growers, and since purchases made by them were not under agreements, the price paid for sugarcane could not be taxed under a statute enacted in exercise of the power in Entry 54 List II of the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution. This Court held that under Act 45 of 1961 and the rules framed thereunder, the cane-grower in the factory zone was free to make or not to make an offer of sale of cane to the occupier of the factory: if the cane-grower made an offer, the occupier of the factory was bound to accept it, and the agreement resulting therefrom was recorded in writing and was signed by the parties. The consent of the occupier of the factory was free as defined in S. 14 of the Indian Contract Act. The compulsion of law is it was said not coercion as defined in S. 15 of the Act. The agreements were enforceable by law and were regarded as contracts of sale as defined in S. 4 of the Indian Sale of Goods Act.

12. In a later decision of this Court, State of Rajasthan v. M/s. Karam Chand Thappar & Bros. Ltd., (1969) 1

SCR 861 = (AIR 1969 SC 343), the assessee who (sic) had acquired monopoly rights to supply coal in Rajasthan and sold coal to the State of Rajasthan. The Sales Tax Officer sought to tax the turnover from supplies of coal made to the State of Rajasthan. It was held by this Court that the colliery Control Order super-imposed upon the agreement between the parties the rate fixed by the Control Order and by reason of such super-imposition of the rate fixed by the Control Order the mutual assent of the parties and the voluntary character of the transactions were not affected. The decision of this Court in M/s. New India Sugar Mills' case, 1963 Supp (2) SCR 459 = (AIR 1963 SC 1207) was distinguished on the ground that there was in the case then in hand mutual assent between the parties, to the transaction of supply of coal.

13. The decision of the House of Lords in Kirkness (Inspector of Taxes) v. John Hudson & Co. Ltd., 1955 AC 696 is instructive. In that case liability to pay income-tax on the difference between the compensation received for requisition of certain wagons by the Minister of Transport was in issue. A majority of the House held that there was no sale of the wagons and no income-tax was payable. Viscount Simonds observed:

"x x x the taxpayers' wagons were not sold, and it would be a grave misuse of language to say that they were sold. To say of a man who has had his property taken from him against his will and been awarded compensation in the settlement of which he has had no voice, to say of such a man that he has sold his property appears to me to be as far from the truth as to say of a man who has been deprived of his property without compensation that he has given it away. Alike in the ordinary use of language and in its legal concept, a sale connotes the mutual assent of two parties. So far as the ordinary use of language is concerned, it is difficult to avoid being dogmatic but, for my part, I can only echo what Singleton, L. J., said in his admirably clear judgment ((1954) 1 All E. R. 29 at page 32):

"What would any one accustomed to the use of the words 'sale' or 'sold' answer? It seems to me that every one must say 'the taxpayer did not sell'."

14. On the date of the commencement of the U. P. Wheat Procurement (Levy) Order, upon the licensed dealer was imposed a liability to deliver half the quantity of wheat on hand, and he had also to supply to the State Government 50 p.c. of the quantity of wheat procured or purchased by him every day beginning with the date of commencement of the Order. If he failed to carry out the obligation he was liable to be penalized. To ensure that he carried out his obligation his premises were liable to be searched and his property sequestered. The order ignored the volition of the dealer.

15. We are unable to hold that there was any contract between the assessee and the State pursuant to which the goods were sold within the meaning of the U. P. Sales Tax Act.

16. The appeals are allowed. The order passed by the High Court is set aside. The answer to the two questions as reframed by us will be in the negative. The appellants will be entitled to their costs in this Court and in the High Court. One hearing fee. Appeals allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2007 (V 57 C 430)

(From: Bombay)

J. M. SHELAT AND I. D. DUA, JJ.

Gajanan and others, Appellants v. Seth Brindaban, Respondent.

Civil Appeal No. 1982 of 1966, D/-20-7-1970.

(A) Debt Laws — C. P. and Berar Moneylenders' Act (13 of 1934). Sections 11F, 11H and 2 (v) — Absence of registration as moneylender — Does not prohibit and invalidate isolated transaction of moneylending.

Person registered as moneylender in one District entering into isolated transaction of moneylending on a mortgage in different district — Suit on mortgage can proceed without registration Certificate — "Moneylender" under the Act means a person who in the regular course of business advances a loan and excludes isolated transactions of moneylending. AIR 1954 Nag 44 & (1965) 67 Bom LR 816

& AIR 1962 Madh Pra 117 (FB), Approved; 1918 A. C. 199, Distinguished. (Paras 10, 12 and 14)

(B) Precedents — Principle of stare decisis.

Where the meaning of a statute is ambiguous and capable of more than one interpretation and one view accepted by the highest court has stood for a long period during which many transactions, such as dealings in property and making of contracts, have taken place on the faith of that interpretation the Court would normally be reluctant to put upon it a different interpretation which would affect those transactions. To justify the reversal of a decision of the highest court which has prevailed for a considerable length of time there should be some exceptional reason when such reversal is likely to create serious embarrassment to those who had acted on the faith of what seemed to be the settled law. (Para 13)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1965) 67 Bom LR 816 = ILR
- (1966) Bom 402, Hajarimal v. Harinarayan 7, 8, 9
- (1964) 1964 MPLJ Note No. 102, Gurumukh Rai v. Hari Har Singh 11
- (1963) 1963 MPLJ Note No. 119, Kishan Lal v. Laxmibai 11
- (1962) AIR 1962 Madh Pra 117 (V 49)=1962 MPLJ 78 (FB), Janki Bai v. Ratan Melu 7, 8, 9, 12, 13-A
- (1960) 1960 MPLJ Note No. 198, Chaith Ram v. Baparimal 11
- (1958) 60 Bom LR 1247 = ILR (1959) Bom 113, Wasudeo Bhairulal v. Ramchandra 7, 13-A
- (1958) 1958 MPLJ Note No. 11, Hariprasad v. Sobhalal 11
- (1954) AIR 1954 Nag 44 (V 41)= 1953 Nag LJ 517, Patiram v. Baliram 6, 8, 9, 12, 13-A
- (1952) AIR 1952 Hyd 58 (V 39)= ILR (1952) Hyd 95 (FB), Shamshir Ali v. Ratnaji 6
- (1941) AIR 1941 Nag 177 (V 28)= 1941 Nag LJ 194, Sitaram Shrawan v. Bajya Parnya 10, 11, 13-A
- (1932) AIR 1932 PC 207 (V 19)= 59 Ind App 376, Lasa Din v. Mt. Gulab Kunwar 8
- (1918) 1918 AC 199 = 87 LJ KB 246, Cornelius v. Phillips 6, 9
- (1910) 1910 AC 514 = 79 LJ KB 1050, Whitman v. Sadler 6

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

DUA, J.: This is an appeal with certificate under Art. 133 (1) (a) of the Constitution by Gajanan and his two sons Janardhan and Nanaji who figured as defendants 1, 4 and 5 respectively in the suit instituted by Seth Brindaban, respondent in this appeal. It is directed against the judgment and decree of the Bombay High Court (Nagpur Bench) dated February 7, 1966 allowing the plaintiff's appeal in part against the dismissal of his suit by the trial court, and granting him a decree for Rs. 1,60,000/- against the appellants. The other two defendants, Rajeshwar and Narhari, were also the sons of Gajanan; the dismissal of the suit against them was upheld by the High Court. The suit for foreclosure of three mortgages was instituted on December 1, 1950. The plaintiff claimed a decree for foreclosure of the mortgages; the mortgage amount due was stated to be Rs. 1,07,269/2/- with future interest. The suit was contested on various grounds but the main point with which we are concerned in this appeal was raised in the amended written statement allowed by the court on December 15, 1959, nine years after the institution of the suit. According to the amended plea: (i) the plaintiff being a moneylender within the meaning of C. P. Money Lenders' Act (XIII of 1934) and no certificate under S. 11F of that Act having been secured by him the transaction in dispute was void and the suit was, therefore, incompetent, (ii) production in court of moneylender's licence was necessary for the maintenance of the suit; and (iii) the plaintiff had not maintained proper accounts of the moneylending business and had not given Diwali notices to the defendant in respect of this debt and this omission disentitled him to claim interest.

2. Seven additional issues were framed on the amended pleas. They are mainly concerned with the provisions of the Moneylenders' Act. The trial court repelled the plaintiff's submission that the case was governed by the Bombay Moneylenders' Act. It was contended on his behalf that with effect from February 1, 1960 the provisions of C. P. & Berar Moneylenders' Act had ceased to apply to the territory in question and in its place the Bombay Moneylenders' Act was made applicable. The Bombay Act was thus claimed to govern this case. Disagreeing with this submission the trial court held the Bombay Act to be prospective only and, therefore, inapplicable to pending cases. The present suit which had been instituted in 1950 in respect of a transaction of 1947 was accordingly held to be governed by the provisions of the C. P. & Berar Moneylenders' Act. The plaintiff was found to have contravened sections 11F and 11H of the C. P. Act and, therefore, disentitled to maintain the suit. He was also held disentitled to claim interest as he had not sent statement of accounts as required by that Act. As regards the liability of defendants 2 and 3, they were held not to be bound by the mortgages, but it was observed that a simple money decree could be passed against them provided the claim was otherwise legally enforceable. In case the plaintiff's claim deserved to be decreed then in the trial court's view there had to be three decrees because there were three mortgages covering three separate properties. The share of defendant no. 5 was also held to be bound by the three mortgages dated September 12, 1947. The registration of documents at the instance of the court was found to be proper and lawful. The decision in the previous suit was held to operate as res judicata. The suit, as observed earlier was dismissed on the ground of violation of the C. P. Act.

3. On appeal to the High Court the following seven points fell for determination.

"(1) Was the appellant a moneylender within the meaning of the C. P. and Berar Moneylenders Act and was he required to obtain a moneylender's licence for Chanda District because the transaction pertains to property in Chanda district?

(2) Were the documents duly attested vis-a-vis respondents 2 and 3 who had appended their signatures to the documents? if it is held that the documents were not attested so far as defendants 2 and 3 are concerned, what will be the effect on the liability of defendants 2 and 3?

(3) Could a personal decree for payment of money be passed against defendants 2 and 3?

(4) Is the appellant entitled to claim interest because of his failure to send statements of account as required by section 3 (b) of the C. P. and Berar Moneylenders Act?

Was the appellant liable to maintain accounts as provided by section 3 (a) of the Moneylenders Act?

(5) Are the three instruments validly registered or is the registration void?

(6) Are the findings on issues 1 to 6 in the present suit barred on the principle of res judicata because the subject matter of those issues was also the subject matter of identical issues in the previous litigation finally decided between the parties?

(7) Could a decree be passed against respondent no. 5 after he attained majority, respondent No. 5 not having himself executed the instruments sued upon?"

On behalf of the plaintiff (appellant in the High Court) it was stated that he had made an application for the certificate but had not yet obtained the same. The High Court held that Section 11H of the C. P. & Berar Moneylenders' Act did not apply to the case. It, however, observed that the Court would have normally granted time to the plaintiff to produce the necessary certificate if the Act had been held applicable. In the opinion of the High Court the plaintiff was doing moneylending business in Yeotmal District and had obtained the requisite licence for that district in August, 1947 which was thereafter regularly renewed. The transaction in question was held to be an isolated transaction which did not clothe the plaintiff with the character of a moneylender carrying on the business of moneylending in Chanda District. It further observed that though the transaction in question related to property at Chanda and payment was also made at Chanda, the amount was paid from the Wani shop where the accounts were maintained. This was in Yeotmal District for which the plaintiff held the necessary certificate. On this view the High Court disagreed with the conclusion of the trial court. The High Court further added that it was not the defendants' case that the plaintiff had been carrying on money lending business in Chanda District after 1950 or in 1959 or even in April, 1960 when the suit was decided. The three documents executed by the court were also held to be duly executed and duly registered so as to be binding on defendants 1, 4 and 5. In regard to defendants 2 and 3, the High Court felt that even a money decree could not be passed against them and the suit against them must fail in its entirety. The conclusion of the trial court that the decision in the previous suit operated as res judicata was upheld. In the final result the plaintiff was held entitled to a decree for the principal sum of Rs. 80,000 on the basis of the three mortgages and a further sum of Rs. 80,000 by way of interest, the total amount being Rs. 1,60,000/-. This decree was made against defendants 1, 4 and 5. They were given six months' time to pay up the amount with further interest at 6 p.c. per annum on the principal amount till realisation. If the amount was not paid the mortgages were to stand foreclosed. The suit against defendants 2 and 3 was dismissed without costs.

4. On appeal in this Court the principal question raised centres round the provisions of the C. P. & Berar Moneylenders' Act.

5. This Act which came into force on April 1, 1935 was enacted with the object of making better provision for the regulation and control of the transactions of moneylending so as to secure protection to ignorant debtors against the evil of fraud and extortion on the part of unscrupulous moneylenders without unduly interfering with freedom of private contract. It was framed broadly on the lines of the Punjab Regulation of Accounts Act (No. 1 of 1930) but it embodied, in addition, the principle of Damdupat so that the creditors were not encouraged to postpone unconscionable enforcement of their claims. The courts were also empowered to fix instalments for execution of decrees. "Moneylender" as defined in cl. (v) of S. 2 means a person who in the regular course of business advances a loan as defined in this Act and it includes his legal representatives and successors in interest. "Loan" as defined in cl. (vii) means an actual advance whether of money or in kind at interest and it includes any transaction which the court finds to be in substance a loan. It does not include inter alia an advance made on the basis of negotiable instrument other than a promissory note. In 1910 this Act was amended by C. P. & Berar Act XIV of 1940 and Sections 11-A to 11-J were added. In the definition of "moneylender" also it was added in the end, "and moneylending shall be construed accordingly". According to S. 11-B every person carrying on or intending to carry on the business of moneylending is required to get himself registered by an application made to the Sub-Registrar of any sub-District of the District or anyone of the districts in which he carries on or intends to carry on such business. The registration certificate does not entitle the holder thereof to carry on the business of moneylending in other districts for which he does not hold such certificate. Section 11F debars a person from carrying on the business of moneylending in any district unless he holds a valid registration certificate in respect of that district. Sub-section (2) of this section makes contravention of this section a penal offence punishable with fine extending to Rs. 100/- and in case of a previous conviction the fine may extend to Rs. 200/-. According to S. 11H no suit for the recovery of a loan advanced by a moneylender is to proceed in a civil court until the court is satisfied that he holds a valid registration certificate or that he is not required to have such a certificate by reason of the fact that he does not carry on the business of moneylending in any of the districts of Madhya Pradesh. The question which arises for consideration in this case is whether the suit out of which this appeal arises is incompetent and whether the transaction of moneylending is void and, therefore, unenforceable in courts of law.

6. On behalf of the appellants strong reliance was placed on the decision of the House of Lords in Cornelius v. Phillips, 1918 AC 199. In that case, distinguishing and explaining an earlier decision of the House of Lords in Whiteman v. Sadler, 1910 AC 514, S. 2 (2) of the Moneylenders' Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vic. c. 51) was held to have the effect of rendering void a transaction of moneylending carried out at an hotel at some distance from the moneylender's registered address in contravention of S. 2 (1) (b). The transaction was held to amount to a carrying on of his business by the moneylender. Relying on the ratio of this decision it was urged before us on behalf of the appellants that the transaction in question in the present case must be held to be void and, therefore, unenforceable in courts of law. A similar argument on the authority of this decision was raised before a Bench of the Nagpur High Court in Patiram v. Baliram, 1953 Nag LJ 517 at p. 522 = (AIR 1954 Nag 44 at p. 47) but was not accepted. The case of 1918 AC 199 was distinguished and it was observed:

"The learned counsel for the applicant then relied on the Rouse of Lords' decision in 1918 AC 199 which was a case under the English Moneylenders Act. The question which had arisen in that case was the same as the question in this case, namely whether the transaction was void or it only exposed the moneylender to liability for criminal proceedings without rendering the transaction void. It was decided in that case that the transaction amounted to a carrying on of his business by the moneylender at an address other than his registered address in contravention of section 2 sub-section (1) (b) of the Moneylenders' Act, 1900 and that the effect of the Act was to avoid the transaction. A comparison of the English Moneylenders Act, 1900 and the Central Provinces and Berar Moneylenders Act, 1934 will clearly show that the two differ on several important points. The definition of "moneylender" in the two Acts is not the same. The former contains provisions regarding "registered name" and "registered address" which are not to be found in the latter. Section 2 (1) (c) of the former expressly prohibits individual agreements which is not the case with the latter. So the cases decided under the English Moneylenders Act cannot be of much help in deciding cases under the Central Provinces and Berar Moneylenders Act. We may here quote the warning given by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Lasa Din v. Mt. Gulab Kunwar, AIR 1932 PC 207 at p. 211. 'It is, they think, always dangerous to apply English decisions to the construction of an Indian Act'.

We, therefore, do not propose to discuss the other cases under the English Moneylenders Act cited by the learned counsel for the applicant."

After referring to Section 11B and to Maxwell on Interpretation of Statutes the Court observed:

"This special statute which trenches on the contractual rights must be construed strictly against those who seek to avail of it. There are no reasons to suppose that the Legislature intended that every transaction of moneylending made after the amendment came into force till the lender was able to obtain a registration certificate was invalid and unenforceable thereby enriching the debtor at the cost of the creditor without any fault of the latter. The learned counsel has not brought to our notice any compelling reasons to accept his construction which manifestly leads to injustice to the moneylenders." (p. 523).

The final conclusions of the court were expressed in these words:

"It will be clear from all this discussion that section 11F applies to the business of moneylending and not to an individual transaction of lending money and that the condition is attached and the penalty is imposed for the convenience of collection of the revenue, and the legislature did not declare an individual transaction of moneylending made by the moneylender who had not obtained a registration certificate invalid. It is not necessary for the validity of the contract of loan that the moneylender must be registered on the date of the transaction. He, however, cannot obtain a decree on his loan unless he possesses a valid registration certificate on the date on which the decree is to be passed. Though the transactions of moneylending are not affected for want of a registration certificate, a moneylender is exposed to the penalty provided by section 11F of the Act for carrying on the business without a valid registration certificate. We may cite Shamshir Ali v. Ratnaji, AIR 1952 Hyd 58 (FB) in support."

7. The appellants' counsel also tried to distinguish the Full Bench decision of the Nagpur Bench in Hajaram v. Harinarayan, (1965) 67 Bom LR 816 (which overruled Wasudeo Bhairulal v. Ramchandra, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1247), by submitting that the Full Bench had left open the question of the transaction entered into by a moneylender in contravention of Section 11F being void and opposed to public policy. It is true that this precise question was not considered by the Full Bench to be necessary to decide in that case but the court added:—

"Assuming that the transaction is void, the plaintiff may be able to obtain relief under S. 65 of the Contract Act."

Earlier in the course of the judgment the learned Chief Justice speaking for the Full Bench had also observed:

"The principal reason for the contrary view taken in (1958) 60 Bom LR 1247, is that as S. 11-F prohibits a moneylender from carrying on the business of moneylending without a valid registration certificate and also provides a penalty for the contravention of this provision, a suit on a moneylending transaction entered into by an unregistered moneylender cannot be maintained. With respect, it may be pointed out that the Legislature itself has not barred a civil suit in respect of such a transaction. The only obstacle which it has placed in the way of a plaintiff in such a case is that the suit shall not proceed until a valid registration certificate has been produced. The Legislature has also in sub-sec. (2) of Sec. 11-F specified the penalty for contravention of the provisions of sub-sec. (1) of S. 11-F, that is, for carrying on moneylending business without a certificate. It has not prescribed any additional penalty such as that a suit to recover a loan advanced by an unregistered moneylender shall not lie or shall be dismissed. It is not open to a Court to subject a person to any penalty other than what the Legislature has prescribed."

The decision of the Full Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Janki Bai v. Ratan Melu, AIR 1962 Madh Pra 117 (FB), was also referred to with approval. In Janki Bai's case, AIR 1962 Madh Pra 117 (FB), also the decision of the House of Lords in 1918 AC 199, was distinguished and it was expressly observed that it would be unsafe to call in aid the decision relating to the interpretation of S. 2 of the English Act for construing S. 11-F of the C. P. Act. In regard to the true meaning of S. 11-F the Full Bench, after an elaborate discussion summed up its view thus:

"The considerations having a bearing on the construction of S. 11-F of the Act may now be summed up. The registration of a moneylender does not afford to his debtors any additional protection not available under the other provisions of the Act. An unregistered moneylender can be punished only for the collective act of carrying on the business of moneylending and not for every loan advanced by him without a registration certificate. In a moneylender's suit, his failure to obtain a registration certificate is not regarded as a vital consideration and is, for that reason, not required to be tried before considering the case on merits. On the other hand, S. 11-H of the Act envisages that a loan advanced by an unregistered moneylender can be recovered by him if he subsequently obtains a registration certificate which is in force at the time of the suit.

These considerations clearly indicate that section 11-F was not enacted for the protection of persons dealing with moneylenders. Its only object appears to be the protection of the revenue. This conclusion is further supported by the fact that the annual fee payable for a registration certificate was subsequently raised from Rs. 4/8/- to Rs. 12/-. Therefore, on the basis of the principles already stated, a loan advanced by an unregistered moneylender cannot be regarded as impliedly prohibited by S. 11-F."

Section 11-F was also held in this decision not to bar individual advances.

8. The principal question which arises is whether the view of law as taken by the Nagpur High Court in the Pati Ram case, 1953 Nag LJ 517 = (AIR 1954 Nag 44) (supra) in 1953, by a Full Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court in the Janaki Bai case, AIR 1962 Madh Pra 117 (FB) (supra) in 1961 and by the Full Bench of the Bombay High Court sitting at Nagpur in the Hajarimal case, (1965) 67 Bom LR 816 (supra) in 1965 is so clearly erroneous that this Court should upset their interpretation of the C. P. Act.

9. In considering this question we must keep in view the warning given by the Privy Council in Isadas (supra) that while construing Indian statutes it is dangerous to apply English decisions to the construction of Indian enactments. Now, the C. P. Act as originally enacted in 1935 was not modelled on the English Act of 1900. Indeed, the English Act which was construed by the House of Lords in Cornelius, 1918 AC 199 (supra) in 1917 was amended in 1927 when Sections 2 and 3—interpreted in Cornelius, 1918 AC 199 (supra), — were repealed. This was long before 1935 when the C. P. Act was enacted broadly, as already pointed out, on the lines of the Punjab Regulation of Accounts Act 1 of 1930 with the addition of the rule of Damdapat and extended power of Courts to fix instalments for execution of decrees. We are also inclined to think, in agreement with the decisions of the Nagpur High Court in Pati Ram, 1953 Nag LJ 517 = (AIR 1954 Nag 44) (supra) and Hajarimal, (1965) 67 Bom LR 816 (supra) and of the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Janki Bai, AIR 1962 Madh Pra 117 (FB) (supra) that the provisions of the English Act construed in Cornelius, 1918 AC 199 (supra) and of the C. P. Act, with which we are concerned, are not completely identical. The statutory schemes of the two enactments do seem to us to differ materially. This has been discussed at some length in the aforesaid decisions of the Nagpur and Madhya Pradesh High Courts and we do not consider it necessary to enter on an exhaustive discussion and cover the same ground again as we are inclined to agree with the final conclusions arrived at in those cases. Turning to the scheme of the Act which concerns us let us see if the transaction of money-lending which is the subject matter of the suit out of which this appeal arises is void and, therefore, unenforceable in courts of law and if for that reason the suit is incompetent. We have already referred to the broad outlines of the Act. We may now examine its scheme more closely to see if the impugned transaction is hit by its prohibitory provisions and the progress of the present suit barred. Before considering its statutory scheme it may be pointed out that though this Act having been initially enacted in what was then known as the Central Provinces and was named "the Central Provinces Moneylenders Act, 1934" it was later extended to what is now known as the State of Madhya Pradesh with slight formal modifications not affecting the substance of the statutory scheme. Now, it is described as the "M. P. Moneylenders Act, 1934".

10. "Moneylender" as defined in Section 2 (v) of the Act means a person who, in the regular course of business advances a loan as defined in this Act and it includes, subject to the provisions of Section 3, the legal representatives and successors-in-interest of the person who advanced the loan; and the expression "moneylending" is also to be construed accordingly. By virtue of Section 2 (ix) "Sub-Registrars" appointed under the Indian Registration Act are to function under the present Act. Section 11-A enjoins every Sub-Registrar to maintain a register of moneylenders in the prescribed form. Section 11-B renders it obligatory for every person who carries on or intends to carry on the business of moneylending to get himself registered by an application to the Sub-Registrar of the sub-district in which he carries on or intends to carry on such business. The application is required inter alia to specify the district or districts in which the applicant carries on or intends to carry on business of moneylending. Section 11-D provides that the registration certificate granted under S. 11-D shall not entitle the holder thereof to carry on the business of moneylending in other districts. Section 11-F which bars persons from carrying on business of moneylending without registration certificate also provides a penalty for the contravention of this provision. Section 11-C provides for composition of offences covered by Section 11-F (i). According to S. 11-H no suit for the recovery of a loan advanced by a moneylender is to proceed in a civil Court until the Court is satisfied that he holds a valid registration certificate or that he is not required to have such certificate by reason of the fact that he does not carry on the business of moneylending. From the scheme of these provisions it is evident that for a person to be a moneylender he must, in the regular course of business, advance a loan. There is a long catena of authorities on the statutes regulating and controlling moneylenders in which the expression "moneylender" has been so construed as to exclude isolated transaction or transactions of moneylending. Vivian Bose J. while dealing with the Act which concerns us, in Sitaram Shrawan v. Bajya Parnya, AIR 1941 Nag 177, said:

"The word 'regular' shows that the plaintiff must have been in the habit of advancing loans to persons as a matter of regular business. If only an isolated act of moneylending is shown to the Court it is impossible to state that that constitutes a regular course of business. It is an act of business, but not necessarily an act done in the regular course of business."

11. This decision was followed by T. C. Shrivastava J., of the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Hariprasad v. Sobhalal, MFA No. 124 of 1956, D/- 18-12-1957 = 1958 MPLJ Note No. 11 and by Shiv Dayal, J., of the same High Court in Gurmukh Rai v. Hari Har Singh, SA No. 39 of 1961, D/- 26-3-1964 = 1964 MPLJ Note No. 102. The same view was taken by K. L. Pandey J., of the same High Court in Chaith Ram v. Baparimal, C. R. No. 374 of 1959, D/- 1-7-1960 = 1960 MPLJ Note No. 198. In this case both Section 2 (v) and Section 11-H of the Act came up for construction. In Sitaram Shrawan, AIR 1941 Nag 177 (supra) it was also held that the person seeking advantage of the Moneylenders Act has to prove that the plaintiff is a moneylender. To the same effect is the decision by T. C. Shrivastava J., in Kishanlal v. Laxmi-bai, C. R. P. No. 109 of 1962, D/- 20-7-1962 = 1963 MPLJ Note No. 119.

12. Section 11-F on its plain reading only prohibits the carrying on of the business of moneylending in any district without holding a valid registration certificate in respect of that district. It does not prohibit and, therefore, does not invalidate an isolated transaction of lending money. Such an isolated transaction seems to us to be outside the rigour of the prohibition. The fact that a registered moneylender in one district has entered into an isolated transaction of lending money in another district in which he is not registered would not make any difference in this respect and such isolated transaction would not be hit by the prohibitory mandate. Section 11-H also operates only against the suits by moneylenders on loans advanced by them and would similarly exclude from its purview a suit on an isolated transaction not entered into by a moneylender in the regular course of the business of moneylending. The statutory scheme thus clearly seems to indicate that it is only the business of moneylending which is sought to be controlled and individual transactions of lending money do not fall within the mischief which was sought to be remedied by the Act. An individual transaction of lending money has not been declared to be void and as we construe the Act as a whole, interference with freedom of contract appears to have been limited only to the extent necessary for regulating and controlling the business of moneylending. Section 11-G which provides for composition of offences also suggests that individual transactions are not considered void. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the view of law taken by the Nagpur and M. P. High Courts in Pati Ram, 1953 Nag LJ 517 = (AIR 1954 Nag 44) (supra) and Hajarimal (1965) 67 Bom LR 816 (supra) and Janki Bai, AIR 1962 Madh Pra 117 (supra) is in conformity with the statutory intent and is, therefore, correct.

13. There is also another aspect which may legitimately be kept in view. People in arranging their affairs are entitled to rely on a decision of the highest court which appears to have prevailed for considerable length of time and it would require some exceptional reason to justify its reversal when such reversal is likely to create serious embarrassment for those who had acted on the faith of what seemed to be the settled law. Where the meaning of a statute is ambiguous and capable of more interpretations than one, and one view accepted by the highest court has stood for a long period during which many transactions such as dealings in property and making of contracts have taken place on the faith of that interpretation the court would ordinarily be reluctant to put upon it a different interpretation which would materially affect those transactions.

13-A. In the case before us the construction placed by the Nagpur and Madhya Pradesh High Courts on the relevant provisions of the C. P. Act seems to have been accepted all these years beginning with Sitaram Shrawan, AIR 1941 Nag 177 (supra) in 1941 (except for a short period between 1958 and 1962) and rights to property and under contracts seem to have been founded on the faith of that construction. A Division Bench of the Bombay High Court sitting at Nagpur in Wasudeo, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1247 (supra), of course, dissented in 1958 from the view of the Division Bench of the Nagpur High Court in Pati Ram, 1953 Nag LJ 517 = (AIR 1954 Nag 44) (supra) without referring the point of dissent to a larger Bench. But a Full Bench of the Madhya Pradesh High Court disagreed with the Wasudeo case, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1247 (supra), vide Janki Bai, AIR 1962 Madh Pra 117 (FB) (supra). It, therefore, seems obvious that titles and transactions must have been founded on the view of law which, by and large, stood almost uniformly as enunciated in Sitaram Shrawan, AIR 1941 Nag 177 (supra) in 1941 and later in Pati Ram, 1953 Nag LJ 517 = (AIR 1954 Nag 44) (supra) and it would, in our opinion, be unjust to disturb them by adopting the interpretation suggested on behalf of the appellant on the authority of the English decisions. Now, assuming that two views on the statutory scheme of the Act are possible and assuming the interpretation canvassed on behalf of the appellant to be preferable to that accepted in the impugned judgment we are unable to say that the construction adopted in the judgment under appeal is so clearly and patently erroneous that it should, in the larger interests of justice, be upset notwithstanding the fact that it is likely to disturb rights to property and under contracts founded upon this construction. The fact that contravention of Section 11-F (i) of the Act is made a penal offence is an additional factor against the propriety of overruling and upsetting the established view unless we feel convinced that the established view is clearly erroneous. As already discussed, we are not so convinced but are on the other hand inclined to agree with the established view.

14. There is still another circumstance which may appropriately be noticed. Sections 11-C, 11-E (i) and 11-G (i) of the Act were amended by M. P. Act 40 of 1965. Had the construction placed by the courts on Section 11-F and other provisions of the Act been considered by the Legislature to be contrary to the legislative intentment, one would have ordinarily expected an amendment clarifying its intention because the Legislature must be fixed with the knowledge of the construction placed on the Act by the courts. No such action was taken by the Legislature. This circumstance is, of course, not conclusive but it is not wholly irrelevant and certainly deserves to be noticed as carrying some presumptive weight. As the appellant was not carrying on the business of moneylending in Chanda District, the single transaction in dispute in that district was not covered by the Act and the suit could proceed in the normal way without a registration certificate.

15. On the view we have taken the only question which remains to be noticed relates to the argument that there should be three mortgage decrees instead of one. This matter is one of procedure and form and it does not materially affect the substantive rights of the parties. We are, therefore, disinclined on this ground to direct modification of the impugned decree. The appeal accordingly fails and is dismissed but without costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2015 (V 57 C 431)

(From Kerala: ILR (1968) 1 Ker 384)
HIDAYATULLAH C. J., G. K. MITTER
AND A. N. RAY, JJ.

E. M. Sankaran Namboodiripad, Appellant v. T. Narayanan Nambiar, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 56 of 1968, D/- 31-7-1970.

Contempt of Courts Act (1952), S. 3
— Acts or words spoken tending to obstruct administration of justice — Amounts to contempt of court.

The law of contempt stems from the right of the courts to punish by imprisonment or fines persons guilty of words or acts which either obstruct or tend to obstruct the administration of justice. This right is exercised in India by all courts when contempt is committed in facie curiae and by the superior courts on their own behalf or on behalf of courts subordinate to them even if committed outside the courts. Formerly, it was regarded as inherent in the powers of a court of record and now by the Constitution of India, it is a part of the powers of the Supreme Court and the High Courts. There are many kinds of contempts. The chief forms of contempt are insult to Judges, attacks upon them, comment on pending proceedings with a tendency to prejudice fair trial, obstruction to officers of courts, witnesses or the parties, abusing the process of the court, breach of duty by officers connected with the court and scandalising the Judges or the courts. The last form occurs, generally speaking, when the conduct of a person tends to bring the authority and administration of the law into disrespect or disregard. In this conduct are included all acts which bring the court into disrepute or disrespect or which offend its dignity, affront its majesty or challenge its authority. Such contempt may be committed in respect of a single Judge or a single court but may in certain circumstances, be committed in respect of the whole of the judiciary or judicial system. (Para 6)

While it is intended under Art. 19 that there should be freedom of speech and expression, it is also intended that in the exercise of the right, contempt of court shall not be committed. Each case must be examined on its own facts and the decision must be reached in the context of what was done or said. (Para 11)

Where therefore a person charged the judiciary as "an instrument of oppression" and the judges as "guided and dominated by class hatred, class interests and class prejudices, instinctively favouring the rich against the poor", it is clearly an attack upon Judges calculated to raise a sense of disrespect and distrust of all judicial decisions. It weakens the authority of law and law courts and the person is guilty of contempt of court. That the person did not intend any such result cannot serve as a justification. AIR 1938 Bom 197 & Criminal Appeal No. 110 of 1966, D/- 3-5-1962 (SC) Distinguished. Case law discussed.

(Para 33)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1968) 1968-2 WLR 1204 = 1968-2 All ER 319, R. v. Metropolitan Police Commr. 7
- (1964) 11 Law Ed 2d 686 = 376 US 254, New York Times Co. v. L. B. Sullivan 12
- (1962) AIR 1962 SC 955 (V 49) = 1962 Supp (2) SCR 769 = 1962 (2) Cri LJ 103, Kedar Nath Singh v. State of Bihar 12
- (1962) Criminal Appeal No. 110 of 1960, D/- 3-5-1962 (SC) In re Basudeo Prasad Advocate Patna High Court 10
- (1957) 1 Law Ed 1498 = 354 US 476, Samuel Roth v. United States of America 12
- (1948) 93 Law Ed 1131 = 337 US 1, Arthur Terminiello v. City of Chicago 12
- (1938) AIR 1938 Bom 197 (V 25) = ILR (1938) Bom 179 = 39 Cri LJ 440, Govt. Pleader, High Court, Bombay v. Tulsidas Subhanrao 7
- (1936) AIR 1936 PC 141 (V 23) = 1936 All LJ 671, Andre Paul Terence Ambard v. Attorney General of Trinidad and Tobago 8
- (1925) 71 Law Ed 1095 = 274 US 357, Charlotte Anita Whitney v. People of the State of California 12
- (1900) 1900-2 QB 36 = 69 LJ QB 502, R. v. Gray 8
- (1899) 1899 AC 549 = 68 LJ PC 137, Meleod v. St. Aubyn 7, 8

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HIDAYATULLAH, C. J.: Mr. E. M. S. Namboodiripad (former Chief Minister of Kerala) has filed this appeal against his conviction and sentence of Rs. 1000/- fine or simple imprisonment for one month by the High Court of Kerala for contempt of Court. The judgment, February 9, 1968, was by majority — Mr. Justice Raman Nair (now Chief Justice) and Mr. Justice Krishnamoorthy Iyer formed the majority. Mr. Justice Mathew dissented. The case has been certified by them as fit for appeal to this Court under Article 134 (1) (c) of the Constitution.

2. The conviction is based on certain utterances of the appellant, when he was Chief Minister, at a Press Conference held by him at Trivandrum, on November 9, 1967. The report of the Press Conference was published the following day in some Indian newspapers. The proceedings were commenced in the High Court on the sworn information of an Advocate of the High Court, based mainly on the report in the Indian Express. The appellant showed cause against the notice sent to him and in an elaborate affidavit stated that the report 'was substantially correct, though it was incomplete in some respects.'

3. The offending parts of the Press Conference will be referred to in this judgment, but we may begin by reading it as a whole. This is what was reported.

"Marx and Engels considered the judiciary as an instrument of oppression and even today when the State set-up has not undergone any change it continues to be so. Mr. Namboodiripad told a news conference this morning. He further said that Judges are guided and dominated by class hatred, class interests and class prejudices and where the evidence is balanced between a well dressed pot-bellied rich man and a poor ill-dressed and illiterate person the Judge instinctively favours the former, the Chief Minister alleged. The Chief Minister said that election of Judges would be a better arrangement, but unless the basic State set-up is changed, it could not solve the problem. Referring to the Constitution the Chief Minister said the oath he had taken was limited only to see that the constitutional provisions are practised. 'I have not taken any oath' the Chief Minister said 'that every word and every clause in the Constitution is sacred'.

Before that he had also taken an oath. Mr. Namboodiripad said, holding aloft a copy of the Marxist party's programme and read out extracts from it to say that the oath (party—Ed.) had always held that nothing much could be done under the limitations of the Constitution.

Raising this subject of Constitution and judiciary suo motu at the fag end of his news conference the Chief Minister said so many reports have appeared in the press that Marxists like himself, Mr. A. K. Gopalan, and Mr. Imbichi Baba (Transport Minister) were making statements critical of the judiciary 'presumably with the idea that anything spoken about the court is contempt of court'.

His party had always taken the view, the Chief Minister said, that Judiciary is part of the class rule of the ruling classes. And there are limits to the sanctity of the judiciary. The judiciary is weighted against workers, peasants and other sections of the working classes and the law and the system of judiciary essentially serve the exploiting classes. Even where the judiciary is separated from the executive it is still subject to the influence and pressure of the executive. To say this is not wrong. The judiciary he argued was only an institution like the President or Parliament or the Public Service Commission. Even the President is subject to impeachment. After all, sovereignty rested not with any one of them but with the people. Even with regard to Judges confidential records are being kept—why? The judge is subject to his own idiosyncrasies and prejudices. "We hold the view that they are guided by individual idiosyncrasies, guided and dominated by class interests, class hatred, and class prejudices. In these conditions we have not pledged ourselves not to criticise the judiciary or even individual judgments."

This did not mean, he explained, that they could challenge the integrity of the individual judge or cast reflections on individual judgments, the Chief Minister contended.

He did not subscribe to the view that it was an aspersion on integrity when he said that judges are guided and dominated by class hatred and class prejudices. "The High Court and the Supreme Court can haul me up, if they want" he said".

4. The affidavit which he filed later in the High Court explained his observations at the press conference, supplied some omissions and pleaded want of intention to show disrespect and justification on the ground that the offence charged could not be held to be committed, in view of guarantee of freedom of speech and expression under the Constitution. He stated that his observations at the press conference did no more than give expression to the Marxist philosophy and what was contained in Chapter 5 of the programme of the Communist Party of India (Marxist) adopted in November 1964. His pleas in defence were accepted by Justice Mathew who found nothing objectionable which could be termed contempt of court. The other two learned Judges took the opposite view. Judgment was entered on the basis of the majority view.

5. In explaining his press conference the appellant added that it did not offend the majesty of law, undermine 'the dignity of courts' or obstruct the administration of justice. Nor did it have any such tendency. He claimed that it contained a fair criticism of the system of judicial administration in an effort to make it conform to the peoples' objective of a democratic and egalitarian society based on socialism. He considered that it was not only his right but also his duty to educate public opinion. He claimed that the statement read as a whole amounted to a fair and reasonable criticism of the present judicial system in our country, that it was not intended to be a criticism of any particular judge, his judgment or his conduct, and that it could not be construed as contempt of court. He added that he had always enforced the judgments of the courts and shown respect to the judiciary and had advocated the independence of the judiciary and decried all attempt to make encroachments upon it. Criticism of the judiciary, according to him, was his right and it was being exercised by other parties in India. He denied that it was for the courts to tell the people what the law was and asserted that the voice of the Legislatures should be supreme. He, however, found his party at variance with the other parties in that according to the political ideology of his party the State (including all the three limbs — the Legislature, the Executive and the Judiciary) was the instrument of the dominant class or classes, so long as society was divided into exploiting and exploited classes, and parliamentary democracy was an organ of class oppression. He concluded that his approach to the judiciary was:

(a) the verdicts of the Courts must be respected and enforced;

(b) no aspersions should be cast on individual judges or judgments by attributing motives to judges; .

(c) criticism of the judicial system or of judges going against the spirit of legislation should be permissible; and

(d) education of the people that the State (including the judiciary) was an instrument of exploitation of the majority by the ruling and exploiting classes, was legitimate.

These principles, he submitted, were not transgressed by him and also summed up his observations and the press conference.

6. The law of contempt stems from the right of the Courts to punish by imprisonment or fines persons guilty of words or acts which either obstruct or tend to obstruct the administration of justice. This right is exercised in India by all Courts when contempt is committed in facie curiae and by the superior Courts on their own behalf or on behalf of Courts subordinate to them even if committed outside the Courts. Formerly, it was regarded as inherent in the powers of a Court of Record and now by the Constitution of India, it is a part of the powers of the Supreme Court and the High Courts. There are many kinds of contempts. The chief forms of contempt are insult to judges, attacks upon them, comment on pending proceedings with a tendency to prejudice fair trial, obstruction to officers of Courts, witnesses or the parties, abusing the process of the Court, breach of duty by officers connected with the Court and scandalising the judges or the Courts. The last form occurs, generally speaking, when the conduct of a person tends to bring the authority and administration of the law into disrespect or disregard. In this conduct are included all acts which bring the Court into disrepute or disrespect or which offend its dignity, affront its majesty or challenge its authority. Such contempt may be committed in respect of a single judge or a single Court but may, in certain circumstances, be committed in respect of the whole of the judiciary or judicial system. The question is whether in the circumstances of this case the offence was committed.

7. In arguing the case of the appellant Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon contended that the law of contempt must be read without encroaching upon the guaranteed freedom of speech and expression in Article 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution, that the intention of the contemner in making his statement at the press conference should be examined in the light of his political views as he was at liberty to put them before the people and lastly the harm done to the Courts by his statements must be apparent. He admitted that it might be possible to say that the speech constituted contempt of Court but submitted that it would be inexpedient to do so. He stated further that the species of contempt called scandalising the Court had fallen in desuetude and was no longer enforced in England and relied upon McLeod v. St. Aubyn, 1899 AC 549. He further submitted that the freedom of speech and expression gave immunity to the appellant as all he did was to give expression to the teachings of Marx, Engels and Lenin. Lastly, he contended that a general remark regarding Courts in general did not constitute contempt of Court and relied upon Govt. Pleader, High Court, Bombay v. Tulsidas Subhanrao, ILR (1938) Bom 179 = (AIR 1938 Bom 197) and the observations of Lord Denning M.R. in R. v. Metropolitan Police Commr, (1968) 2 WLR 1204.

8. It is no doubt true that Lord Morris in 1899 AC 549 at page 561 observed that the contempt of Court known from the days of the Star Chamber of Scandalum Justitiae Curiae or scandalising the judges, had fallen into disuse in England. But as pointed out by Lord Atkin in Andre Paul Torence Ambard v. The Attorney General of Trinidad and Tobago, AIR 1936 PC 141 at page 143 the observations of Lord Morris were disproved within a year in R. v. Gray, (1900) 2 QB 36 at p. 40. Since then many convictions have taken place in which offence was held to be committed when the act constituted scandalising a judge.

9. We may dispose of the Bombay case above cited. The contemner in that case had expressed contempt for all Courts. Beaumont, C. J., (Wasoodew, J., concurring) held that it was not a case in which action should be taken. The case did not lay down that there could never be contempt of Court even though the Court attacked was not one but all the Courts together. All it said was that action should not be taken in such a case. If the Chief Justice intended laying down the broad proposition contended for, we must overrule his dictum as an incorrect statement of law. But we think that the Chief Justice did not say anything like that. He was also influenced by the unconditional apology and therefore discharged the rule.

10. Another case cited in this connection may be considered here. In Criminal Appeal No. 110 of 1960 (SC) (In Re Basudeo Prasad, Advocate, Patna High Court) decided on May, 3, 1962, the offending statement was that many lawyers without practice get appointed as judges of the High Courts. The remark was held by this Court not to constitute contempt of Court. The remark was made after the report of the Law Commission was published and this Court held that the person concerned, who was then the Secretary of the Indian Council of Public Affairs and an advocate, was entitled to comment on the choice of judges and that the remarks were within the proper limits of public criticism on a question on which there might be differences of opinion. In our judgment that case furnishes no parallel to the case we have here. Each case must be examined on its own facts and the decision must be reached in the context of what was done or said.

11. The appellant has contended before us that the law of contempt should be so applied that the freedom of speech and expression are not whittled down. This is true. The spirit underlying Article 19 (1) (a) must have due play but we cannot overlook the provisions of the second clause of the article. While it is intended that there should be freedom of speech and expression, it is also intended that in the exercise of the right, contempt of Court shall not be committed. The words of the second clause are;

"Nothing in sub-clause (a) of Cl. (1) shall affect the operation of any existing law or prevent the State from making any law, in so far as such law imposes reasonable restrictions on the exercise of the right conferred by the sub-clause ..... in relation to contempt of Court, defamation or incitement to an offence."

These provisions are to be read with Articles 129 and 215 which specially confer on this Court and the High Courts the power to punish for contempt of themselves. Article 19 (1) (a) guarantees complete freedom of speech and expression but it also makes an exception in respect of contempt of Court. The guaranteed right on which the functioning of our democracy rests, is intended to give protection to expression of free opinions to change political and social conditions and to advance human knowledge. While the right is essential to a free society, the Constitution has itself imposed restrictions in relation to contempt of Court and it cannot therefore be said that the right abolishes the law of contempt or that attacks upon judges and Courts will be condoned.

12. Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon read to us observations from Samuel Roth v. United States of America, (1957) 1 Law Ed. 1498 at page 1506; Arthur Terminiello v. City of Chicago, (1948) 93 Law Ed. 1131 at page 1134; Charlotte Anits Whitney v. People of the State of California, (1925) 71 Law Ed. 1095 and New York Times Co. v. L. B. Sullivan, (1964) 11 Law Ed. 2d 686, on the high-toned objective in guaranteeing freedom of speech. We agree with the observations and can only say that freedom of speech and expression will always prevail except where contempt is manifest, mischievous or substantial. The question always is on which side of the line the case falls. The observations of this Court in Kedar Nath Singh v. State of Bihar, 1962 Supp (2) SCR 769 = (AIR 1962 SC 955) in connection with seditious do not lend any assistance because the topic there discussed was different. Freedom of speech goes far but not far enough to condone a case of real contempt of Court. We shall, therefore, see whether there was any justification for the appellant which gives him the benefit of the guaranteed right.

13. The appellant has maintained that his philosophy is based upon that of Marx and Engels. Indeed he claims to be descended from the last philosophie and seeks to educate the exploited peoples on the reality behind class oppression. As a Marxist-Leninist he advocates the radical and revolutionary transformation of the State from coercive instrument of exploiting classes to an instrument which the exploited majority can use against these classes. In this transformation he wishes to make the State wither away and with the State its organs, namely, the Legislature, the Executive and the Judiciary also to change. He has justified the press conference as an exposition of his ideology and claims protection of the first clause of Art. 19 (1) which guarantees freedom of speech and expression. The law of contempt, he says, cannot be used to deprive him of his rights.

14. All this is general but the appellant attacked the judiciary directly as "an instrument of oppression" and the judges as "dominated by class hatred, class interests and class prejudices", "instinctively" favouring the rich against the poor. He said that as part of the ruling classes the judiciary "works against workers, peasants and other sections of the working classes" and "the law and the system of judiciary essentially serve the exploiting classes". Even these statements, he claims, are the teachings of Marx, Engels and Lenin whose follower he is. This was also the submission of his counsel to us.

15. The appellant is only partly right. He and his counsel may be said to have distorted the approach of Marx, Engels and Lenin, and we proceed to explain how. Marx believed in man's inherent rationalism and virtue and depended upon them to create a better society where there would be no injustice and oppression and everyone would be able to share the fruits of man's labour and genius. He attacked all forms of social evils. Hence his sympathy for the neglected and the 'injured and insulted' labouring masses. Marx was neither first nor alone in this. Before him the Judeo-Christians demanded Social justice. Others who preached social equality and denounced social injustice were the Utopian Socialists and the Christian Socialists. They had all pointed out inequalities of civilization based on urban industrial development. We had thus Auguste Comte's Cours de philosophie positive, Feuerbach's History of New Philosophy and the writings of Hegel.

16. Marx's contribution was to create a scientific and ethical approach to the problem of inequality. He adopted the Hegelian dialectical form to explain how the capitalist society had arisen and showed how it would meet its fall. His view was that it nursed within itself the germ of its own destruction. In his classic book Das Kapital he disclosed the clues for the transition from capitalism to socialism. His labour theory was that the capitalist did not give to labour a due share from the value of the goods produced by labour because of the iron law of wages and this left the surplus labour value thereby saved in the hands of the capitalist. In this way the capitalist became an exploiter who grew rich on the exploited labour surplus and could indulge in what he called 'capitalist luxuries'. The introduction of machinery further cut down labour value and increased unemployment leading to reduction of wages. In this way the means of production passed into the hands of a few. Marx saw that this led to tensions which Marx thought would ultimately destroy the capitalist system. He saw the Revolution drawing nearer which would destroy 'classes' and the exploitation of man by man. There was in his view one obstruction to the triumph of the working classes and that was government established by the capitalists who could frame laws to enforce the differences. From this stemmed his hostility to the State, its government and its laws.

17. The Communist Manifesto, which spoke of class struggle, particularly between the bourgeoisie and the proletarians, gave a history of the domination of the ruling classes converting everyone not belonging to itself into paid wage-labourers. He said that these reactionaries were gearing all production to their own benefit and power. Describing the communists in this context, the Manifesto said that they had no separate interests but represented the Proletariat as a whole, irrespective of nationalities and that the class struggle was universal. The communists were to settle the lines of action and their aim was abolition of property — not property of the common man but the bourgeois property of the capitalist created by surplus from wage-labour and resulting in accumulation of capital in the hands of the capitalist. According to the communists, this capital became not a personal but social power and the fight visualized in the Manifesto was the termination of its class character. Wage-labour would thus leave no surplus, nor would it lead to accumulation of more wage-labour yielding still greater surplus but the gains of production would go to enrich labour in the communist society. Freedom according to the Manifesto never meant the abolition of property in toto but the abolition of the bourgeois individuality. What was done away with was not property but the means of subjugating labour of others to one's own use. This in short is the communist thesis of social equality as one gathers from the Manifesto.

18. Next follow the steps for achieving the betterment of what Saint Simon described as the largest and poorest class. Engels in his Analysis of Socialism explained the different types but we are not concerned with them here. The Radicals' appeal followed the forces of reaction released in the 1880s by Tzar Alexander III. The Populists of Plekhanov were routed and driven out. Then in 1890 the young intellectuals took up the cause of socialism and Marxism provided the answer where the moderation and escapism of the Populists had failed. The former was based on a scientific approach while Populism was empiric and tended to make Russia, as Bulgakov wrote, 'a peasant and crude country'. The Populists based themselves on the Peasant Communes. The rise of Vladimir Lenin at this time determined the future of Marxism and his classic "the State and Revolution" appears to be in the mind of the appellant when he made his pronouncements. We are doubtful if he has fully appreciated the literature, if he has read it.

19. Lenin's teachings on the State had removed the distortions of Marxism from the minds of the people. He quoted long extracts from Marx and Engels to establish his points. Lenin first took up Engel's Origin of the Family Private Property and the State. The State, according to Engels, was not the image and reality of Reason as Hegel had maintained before. It was the product of society, a power standing above society like the Leviathan of Hobbes. According to Lenin the State was the product and manifestation of the irreconcilability of class antagonism. The State emerged when class antagonisms could not objectively be reconciled. The distortion which had crept into Marxism was that the State was regarded as an organ for the reconciliation of the classes. Lenin reinterpreted Marx and, according to him, the State could neither arise nor maintain itself if it were possible to reconcile classes. Marx had thought of the State as an organ of class rule and an organ of oppression. The views of the Monshiviks and other Socialist revolutionaries were exactly the converse.

20. The disputes which have arisen in our country over the inviolability of property as a fundamental right have the same foundations. One side views that the chapter on Fundamental Rights reconciles, through itself, the basic and fundamental class antagonisms and the State is no longer required to play any part. The other side would give to one of the organs of the State, namely, the legislature, a continual power of readjustment through laws and amendments of the Constitution. Both views do not accord with the Communist Manifesto and hence the distrust of the Constitution by the communists disclosed by the appellant.

21. Lenin, however, thought that the State degenerated into an instrument for the exploitation of the oppressed classes and wielded special public powers to tax and maintain armies. Engels thought that this made the State stand above society and the officers of the State were specially protected as they had the protection of the laws. From this sprung his hostility to the State. Engels summed it up thus:

"The State is by no means a power forced on society, from without. Neither as little is it 'the reality of the ethical idea', 'the image and reality of reason' as Hegel maintains. The State is a product of society at certain stage of development; it is the admission that this society has become entangled in an insoluble contradiction with itself, that it is cleft into irreconcilable antagonisms which it is powerless to dispel. But in order that these antagonisms, classes with conflicting economic interests, might not consume themselves and society in sterile struggle, a power seemingly standing above society becomes necessary for the purpose of moderating the conflict, of keeping it within the bounds of 'order'. And this power, arisen out of society, but placing itself above it, and increasingly alienating itself from it, is the State."

Lenin resumed this thought further thus:

"This expresses with perfect clarity the basic idea of Marxism on the question of the historical role and meaning of the state. The State is the product and the manifestation of the irreconcilability of class antagonisms. The state arises when, where and to the extent that class antagonisms objectively cannot be reconciled. And, conversely, the existence of the state proves that the class antagonisms are irreconcilable."

22. Having viewed the state in this way these writers from Marx to Lenin viewed it as the instrument for the exploitation of the oppressed classes. The Paris Commune of 1871 had stated its conclusions how the state gets above society but it was blurred in a reactionary manner later by Kautsky in 1912. Lenin cleared the misconception in an exposition of Engel's philosophy:

".....As the state arose from the need to hold class antagonisms in check, but as it arose, at the same time, in the midst of the conflict of these classes, it is, as a rule, the state of the most powerful economically dominant class, which through the medium of the state, becomes also the politically dominant class and thus acquires means of holding down and exploiting the oppressed classes..... the modern representative state is an instrument of exploitation of wage labour by capital." Engels added further:

"In a democratic republic wealth exercises its power indirectly, but all the more surely first by means of the direct corruption of 'officials' and second, by means of 'an alliance between the Government and Stock Exchange'."

Lenin gave the example that "at the present time, imperialism and the domination of the banks have 'developed' both these methods of upholding and giving effect to the omnipotence of wealth in democratic republics of all descriptions into an unusually fine art". He concluded that "a democratic republic is the best possible political shell for capitalism" and that "it establishes its power so securely, so firmly, that no change whether of persons, of institutions, or of parties in the bourgeois democratic republic can shake it."

23. Therefore, Marx, Engels and Lenin thought in terms of 'withering away of the state'. Although Lenin thought that Engel's doctrines were an adulteration of Marxism, he was not right. Marx himself believed in this. In his Poverty of Philosophy, Marx says:

".....The working class, in the course, of development, will substitute for the old bourgeois society an association which will exclude classes and their antagonism, and there will be no more political power properly so-called, since political power is precisely the official expression of antagonism in bourgeois society."

Marx and Engels in the Manifesto had considered the true state to be "the proletariat organised as the ruling class." It was the Kautskyites (the Dictatorship of the Proletariat) who, misunderstanding the doctrines of Marx, taught that the Proletariat needed the state. According to Marx the proletariat needed a state which must wither away leading to the dictatorship of the proletariat.

24. In this fight for power the Communist Manifesto gave a purely abstract solution. It was the substitution of the commune for the bourgeois state machinery and a fuller democracy. The Army was to be replaced by armed people, the officials were to be elected and also the Judges. The Commune was not to be a 'talking Parliament' but a 'working body'. It was to be the executive and the legislature at the same time. The principles were formulated by Engels thus:

"The necessity of political action by the proletariat and of its dictatorship as the transition to the abolition of classes and with them the state....."

25. The thesis on the withering away of the state was to be accompanied by a restatement of the functions of the law. Law made by the bourgeois rulers was castigated as involving class supremacy. The Hegelian doctrine of the apotheosis of Reason was replaced by the invocation of economic necessity as the only foundation for laws. The laws which preserved privileges were to go, laws which kept the power of the bourgeois above the people were to go, only laws creating equality and preserving society from internal decay and disruption were to be tolerated.

26. In all the writings there is no direct attack on the judiciary selected as the target of people's wrath. Nor are the Judges condemned personally. Engels regarded the Courts as one of the means adopted by the law for effectuating itself. It was thus that he wrote:

"The centralised state power, with its ubiquitous organs, standing army, police, bureaucracy, clergy, and judicature organs wrought after the plan of a systematic and hierarchic division of labour — originates from the days of absolute monarchy, serving nascent middle-class society as mighty weapons in its struggles against feudalism".

This is not a castigation of the judiciary as being dishonestly ranged against the people but only a recital of a historic fact in feudal societies. He only said that the judicial functionaries must be divested of 'sham independence' which marked their subservience to succeeding Governments, and, therefore, be elected. In one of his letters to the Spanish Federal Council of the International Workingmen's Association London, February 13, 1871, he talked of the power of the possessing classes — the landed aristocracy and the bourgeoisie—and said that they kept the working people in servitude not only by their wealth got by the exploitation of labour but also by the power of the state, by the army, the bureaucracy, and the Courts. He was not charging the judiciary with taking sides but only as an evil adjunct of the administration of class legislation. The fault was with the state and the laws and not with the judiciary. Indeed in no writing which we have seen or which has been brought to our notice, Marx or Engels has said what the appellant quotes them as saying.

27. We have summarized into a very small compass, many thousands of words in which these doctrines have been debated from Plekhanov to Lenin through the thoughts of Kautsky, Kerensky, Lesalle, Belinsky and others who attempted a middle line between the revisionism of Bernstein and the Bolshevik views of Lenin. We have done so because Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon sneered that many people learn about communism through Middleton Murray!

28. It will be noticed that in all these writings there is not that mention of Judges which the appellant has made. Either he does not know or has deliberately distorted the writings of Marx, Engels and Lenin for his own purpose. We do not know which will be the more charitable view to take. Marx and Engels knew that the administration of justice must change with laws and changes in society, there was thus no need to castigate the Judges as such beyond saying that the judicial system is the prop of the state.

29. The Courts in India are not sui generis. They owe their existence, form, powers and jurisdictions to the Constitution and the laws. The Constitution is the Supreme law and the other laws are made by Parliament. It is they that give the Courts their obligatory duties, one such being the settlement of disputes in which the state (by which we mean those in authority) are ranged against citizens. Again they decide disputes in which class interests are apparent. The action of the Courts when exercised against the state proves irksome to the state and equally when it is between two classes, to the class which loses. It is not easily realized that one of the main functions of Courts under Constitution is to declare actions, repugnant to the Constitution or the laws (as the case may be), to be invalid. The Courts as well as all the other organs and institutions are equally bound by the Constitution and the laws. Although the Courts in such cases imply the widest powers in the other jurisdictions and also give credit where it belongs they cannot always decide either in favour of the state or any particular class. There are innumerable cases in which the decisions have gone against what may be described in the language of communism as the exploiting classes.

30. For those who think that the laws are defective the path of reform is open, but in a democracy such as ours to weaken the judiciary is to weaken democracy itself. Where the law is silent the Courts have discretion. The existence of law containing its own guiding principles, reduces the discretion of Courts to a minimum. The Courts must do their duty according to their own understanding of the laws and the obligations of the Constitution. They cannot take their cue from sentiments of politicians nor even indirectly give support to something which they consider to be wrong or against the Constitution and the laws. The good faith of the Judges is the firm bed-rock on which any system of administration securely rests and an attempt to shake the people's confidence in the Courts is to strike at the very root of our system of democracy. The oft-quoted anger of the Executive in the United States at the time of the New Deal and the threat to the Supreme Court (which the United States had the good sense not to pursue) should really point the other way and it should be noted that today the security of the United States rests upon its dependence on Constitution for nearly 200 years and that is mainly due to the Supreme Court.

31. The question thus in this case is whether the appellant has said anything which brings him out of the protection of Art. 19 (1) (a) and exposes him to a charge of contempt of Court. It is obvious that the appellant has misguided himself about the true teachings of Marx, Engels and Lenin. He has misunderstood the attack by them on state and the laws as involving an attack on the judiciary. No doubt the Courts, while upholding the laws and enforcing them, do give support to the state but they do not do so out of any impure motives. They do not range themselves on the side of the exploiting classes and indeed resist them when the law does not warrant an encroachment. To charge the judiciary as an instrument of oppression, the Judges as guided and dominated by class hatred, class interests and class prejudices instinctively favouring the rich against the poor is to draw a very distorted and poor picture of the judiciary. It is clear that it is an attack upon Judges which is calculated to raise in the minds of the people a general dissatisfaction with and distrust of all judicial decisions. It weakens the authority of law and law courts.

32. Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon tried to support the action of the appellant by saying that Judges are products of their environment and reflect the influences upon them of the society in which they move. He contended that these subtle influences enter into decision-making and drew our attention to the writings of Prof. Laski, Justice Cordozo, Holmes and others where the subtle influences of one's upbringing are described. This is only to say that Judges are as human as others. But Judges do not consciously take a view against the conscience or their oaths. What the appellant wishes to say is that they do. In this he has been guilty of a great calumny. We do not find it necessary to refer to these writings because in our judgment they do not afford any justification for the contempt which has patently been committed. We agree with Justice Raman Nair that some of them have the exaggerations of the confessional. Others come from persons like the appellant who have no faith in institutions hallowed by age and respected by the people.

33. Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon exhorted us to give consideration to the purpose for which the statement was made, the position of the appellant as the head of a State, his sacrifices, his background and his integrity. On the other hand, we cannot ignore the occasion (a press conference), the belief of the people in his word as a Chief Minister and the ready ear which many in his party and outside would give to him. The mischief that his words would cause need not be assessed to find him guilty. The law punishes not only acts which do in fact interfere with the Courts and administration of justice but also those which have that tendency, that is to say, are likely to produce a particular result. Judged from the angle of Courts and administration of justice, there is not a semblance of doubt in our minds that the appellant was guilty of contempt of Court. Whether he misunderstood the teachings of Marx and Engels or deliberately distorted them is not to much purpose. The likely effect of his words must be seen and they have clearly the effect of lowering the prestige of Judges and Courts in the eyes of the people. That he did not intend any such result may be a matter for consideration in the sentence to be imposed on him but cannot serve as a justification. We uphold the conviction.

34. As regards sentence we think that it was hardly necessary to impose a heavy sentence. The ends of Justice in this case are amply served by exposing the appellant's error about the true teachings of Marx and Engels (behind whom he shelters) and by sentencing him to a nominal fine. We accordingly reduce the sentence of fine to Rs. 50/-. In default of payment of fine he will undergo simple imprisonment for one week. With this modification the appeal will be dismissed.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2025 (V 57 C 432)

(From Bombay: AIR 1953 Bom 153)
V. BHARGAVA, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. RAY, JJ.

Goswami Shri Mahalaxmi Vahuji, Appellant v. Shah Ranchhoddas Kalidas (Dead) and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1784 of 1966, D/-
9-9-1969.

(A) Evidence Act (1872), Sec. 114, Illus. (g) — Question in issue whether temple and its property was private property of defendant or public trust — Previous Goswamis maintaining accounts — Defendant Goswami not producing accounts — Court can draw inference that if produced they would go against defendant—Documents from Registers of temple property — Tops of documents containing title of register appearing to be deliberately torn — Inference adverse to defendant held could reasonably be drawn from surrounding circumstances. (Para 7)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 2 —
Plea in written statement that suit properties were private properties of Maharaj and that there was no trust private or public — Case argued before Supreme Court that properties were partly of private trust and partly private property of Maharaj — Defendant cannot be allowed to set up a case wholly inconsistent with that pleaded.
(Para 8)

(C) Hindu Law — Religious endowment — Public trusts — Tests — Temple belonging to Vallabha Sampradayees — Common feature of such temple is that the ground floor is used as the place of worship and the first floor as the residence of Goswami Maharaj. Therefore, the fact that Gokulnathji temple at Nadiad had the appearance of a residential house does not in any manner militate against the contention that the temple in question is a public temple. AIR 1963 SC 1638,

Rel. on. (Para 12)

(D) Hindu Law — Religious endowment — Public Trust — Tests — Temple of Shree Gokulnathji at Nadiad belonging to Vallabha Sampardayees—Custom that public are asked to enter temple only after Goswami has finished worship — This is no circumstance to show that temple is private one — Power to manage temple includes power to maintain discipline within its precincts. (Para 12)

(E) Hindu Law — Religious endowment — Public trust — Public temple — Tests to see whether temple is public — Criteria indicated.

(Paras 15, 16, 17)

(F) Hindu Law — Religious endowment — Public trust — Haveli (Temple) at Nadiad of Shree Gokulnathji and the properties attached thereto are properties of public religious trust created by followers of Vallabh cult residing in Nadiad — The Goswami Maharaj is not a mere manager, but have an important place — He is the Maha Prabhu — Vallabh devotees worship their deity through him — Income from temple properties has to be primarily used for the expenses of the sevas and utsavas in the temple, the upkeep, renovation and improvements of the temple premises but subject to these demands, the Maharaj has a right to utilise the temple income in maintaining himself and his family in a reasonably comfortable manner.
AIR 1953 Bom 153, Affirmed.

(Paras 36, 37)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1963) AIR 1963 SC 1638 (V 50) =
(1964) 1 SCR 561, Shri Govind- lalji Maharaj v. State of Rajas- than	9
(1960) AIR 1960 SC 100 (V 47) =
(1960) 1 SCR 773, Narayan Bhagwant Rao Gosavi Balaji- wale v. Gopal Vinayak Gosavi	16
(1957) AIR 1957 SC 133 (V 44) =
1956 SCR 756, Deoki Nandan v. Murlidar	16
(1934) AIR 1934 PC 230 (V 21) =
61 Ind App 405, Mundacheri Koman v. Achutan Nair	16
(1924) AIR 1924 PC 44 (V 11) =
5 LRPC 125, Lakshmana v. Subramania	16

M/s. D. Narasaraaju and A. K. Sen, Sr. Advocates (M/s. Balkrishan Acharya and S. S. Shukla, Advocates with them), for Appellant; Mr. S. T. Desai, Sr. Advocate (Mr. M. N. Shroff, Advocate, for Mr. I. N. Shroff, Advocate, with him), for Respondents Nos. 3 and 4; M/s. K. K. Jain, M. K. Garg, and H. K. Puri, Advocates, for Respondents Nos. 13 (a) to 13 (f).

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by HEGDE, J.: The main question for decision in this appeal is whether the Haveli at Nadiad in which the idol of Shree Gokulnathji is installed as well as the other properties detailed in plaint schedules A & B are the properties of a public religious trust created by the followers of Vallabh cult residing at Nadiad.

2. The history of the suit institution and its management as also the various pleas taken by the parties have been elaborately set out by the High Court in a well considered judgment. Hence we shall refer only to such pleas as are necessary to decide the contentions advanced before us.

3. The plaintiffs are the residents of Nadiad. They are Vaishnavites. They belong to the Vallabh Sampradaya. They sued for a declaration that the properties mentioned in Schedules A & B of the plaint are properties of the ownership of the trust mentioned earlier. They are suing on behalf of the Vallabha Sampradayeas residing at Nadiad. According to their case as finally evolved that even during the last quarter of the 18th Century, the Mandir of the Gokulnathji existed at Nagarwad in Nadiad Prant, but in about 1821, a new Mandir was constructed by the followers of the Vallabha school at Santh Pipli, Nadiad and the idol of Gokulnathji which was previously worshipped at Nagarwad was taken and consecrated there. In about 1831 they invited Goswami Mathuranathji, a direct descendant of Shri Vallabhacharya to come over to Nadiad and take up the management of the Mandir as its Maha Prabhu. According to the plaintiffs the Mandir in question was constructed by the Vallabha Sampradayeas and the expenses of the sevas as well as the utsavas performed in the Mandir were contributed by them. They further say that the properties belonging to the trust were purchased from the contributions made by the devotees of that temple. They assert that the persons belonging to the Vallabha Sampradaya have a right to have darshan of the deities in the Mandir, according to usage, as of right. In short their case is that the Mandir in question is a place of public religious worship by the persons belonging to the Vallabha Sampradaya and the Maha Prabhu is only a trustee. He has a right to reside in the upstairs portion of the Mandir and further he can utilise a reasonable portion of the income of the trust, after meeting the requirements of the trust for his maintenance as well as the maintenance of the members of his family. They contend that the suit properties were dedicated to Shree Gokulnathji and the Maha Prabhu has no independent right of his own in those properties. It is further said that the management of the temple was carried on efficiently by Mathuranathji and his descendants till about the time Annirudhalalji became the Maha Prabhu in Samv. 1955. Annirudhalalji under evil advice sought to secure the Jamnagar Gadi and for that purpose spent enormous sums of money from out of the funds belonging to the suit temple. He also incurred considerable debts in that connection. He died in Samv. 1992. Thereafter defendant No. 1, his widow took over the management of the suit temple and its properties. During her management she began to assert that she was the absolute owner of the suit properties including the suit temple. She alienated several items out of the suit properties. Hence they were constrained to bring the suit under appeal for the declaration mentioned earlier and also for a further declaration that the alienations effected by her are illegal, improper and unauthorised and not binding on the deity. They also sought a mandatory injunction against defendants Nos. 2, 7 to 14 to restore lot No. 2 property in Sch. A to defendant No. 1 for the benefit of the deity Shree Gokulnathji after declaring that the sale deed dated 19, April, 1953, passed by defendant No. 1 to defendant No. 2 in respect of it is illegal, improper, unauthorised and without consideration and the same is not binding on the deity. They have also asked for a permanent injunction against defendants 3, 4, 5 and 6 restraining them from enforcing the mortgages, dated 14th March, 1939, 27th January, 1942, 12th January, 1942 and 17th December 1941, passed by defendant No. 1 in their favour. The suit was mainly contested by defendant No. 1. According to her Goswami Mathuranathji Maharaj was the owner of the idol Shri Gokulnathji. It is he who established the Haveli at Nadiad and founded his Gadi there; he was not only the owner of the Haveli but he was also the owner of the deities that were being worshipped in that Haveli. She further pleaded that as per the tenets and usages of the Vallabha school, it is not possible for the members of that cult to found a temple. They can only worship through the Acharya (Maha Prabhu) in his house known as Haveli. According to their cult the Goswami Maharaj otherwise known as Maha Prabhu is the emblem of God head and the living representative of divinity. She went further and took up the plea that according to the Vallabha Sampradaya no deity can own any property. She further averred that Mathuranathji Maharaj and his descendants received from time to time presents and gifts made by his followers. Those presents were made to them as a mark of reverence and respect to them and with a view to receive their grace. They were the absolute owners of the idols they worshipped, the presents and gifts made to them and of the properties acquired by them. She denied that the Haveli in which Shri Gokulnathji is worshipped is a public temple. She also denied that the Vallabh Sampradayeys were entitled to have the Darshana of that deity in that Haveli as of right. She denied the plaint averments that all or any portion of the suit properties were acquired from the funds raised by the devotees or that the sevas or festivals were conducted from out of the contributions made by them. She justified the impugned alienations mainly on the ground that she had absolute right to deal with the suit properties as she pleased. The other defendants supported the defence taken by the 1st defendant. They further pleaded that the alienations effected in their favour were supported by consideration and they were bona fide alienees and therefore those alienations are not open to challenge.

4. The trial court dismissed the plaintiff's suit principally on the ground that as per the tenets and usages of Vallabha School it is impermissible for Vallabh Sampradayeys to found a public temple and therefore, it is not possible to uphold the pleas advanced on behalf of the plaintiffs. In appeal the High Court reversed the judgment and decree of the trial court. It accepted the plaintiffs' case that suit properties were the properties of a public religious trust and the alienations impeached were not valid and binding on the trust. This appeal has been brought by the 1st defendant. The alienees have not appealed against the decree of the High Court. In this Court they merely supported the pleas taken by the 1st defendant.

5. In this case voluminous evidence both oral and documentary has been led by the parties. Fifty-one witnesses were examined in court and two on commission. The oral evidence mainly relates to the tenets and beliefs of the devotees of the Vallabh Cult and the usages that prevail in their places of worship.

6. Before proceeding to examine the issues arising for decision in the case it is necessary to mention certain circumstances which have a bearing on those issues. At the stage of pleadings it was common ground between the parties that Mathuranathji was the first person to be recognised as their Maharaj by the Vallabh Sampradayeys of Nadiad. The plaintiffs' case as mentioned earlier, was that there was a temple of Shree Gokulnathji at Nagarwad in Nadiad even before Mathuranathji arrived at that place and according to them Mathuranathji had in fact been invited by the Vallabh Sampradayeys of Nadiad to take over the management of the temple that was already existing. In her written statement defendant No. 1 admitted that Mathuranathji was the first descendant of Vallabha to settle down in Nadiad. According to her he brought with him the idol of Shree Gokulnathji and started worshipping that idol in his Haveli. At a later stage the 1st defendant changed her version and put forward the theory that the ancestors of Mathuranathji had brought the idol of Shree Gokulnathji to Nadiad and installed the same there long before Mathuranathji came to that place. This significant deviation in the 1st defendant's case has evidently been introduced to meet the evidence led on behalf of the plaintiffs about the existence of Gokulnathji temple even before Mathuranathji was born in 1806.

7. Yet another circumstance that has to be borne in mind in appreciating the evidence adduced by the parties is about the manner in which Mathuranathji and his descendants were managing the Haveli. They had maintained regular and systematic accounts. It is obvious they were maintaining two sets of accounts, one relating to the income and expenses of the deity and another relating to the personal income and expenses of the Maharaj. But when the 1st defendant was summoned to produce those accounts, the accounts relating to certain important periods were not produced and no satisfactory explanation is forthcoming for their non-production. From this omission the High Court has drawn the inference that those account-books have been kept back as the evidence which those books would have afforded was not favourable to the 1st defendant's case. We agree with that conclusion. Similarly, certain important documents have been kept back by the 1st defendant. Some of those documents were available at the time of the inventory but when the 1st defendant was summoned to produce them she failed to do so. This circumstance has again led the High Court to infer that those documents were deliberately kept back in order to suppress material evidence supporting the plaintiffs' case. Two of the important documents produced into court namely Exhs. 501 and 503 were found to have been tampered with. Exh. 501 appears to be a register of the temple properties but the title page of that book has been mutilated. The top portion of that page had been clearly cut and removed. It is reasonable to assume that the portion that has been removed contained the title of the register. Possibly it mentioned that it is the property register of Shree Gokulnathji's temple. It is reasonable to draw this inference from the surrounding circumstances. Exh. 503 is the register relating to the expenses incurred for repairs of Shree Gokulnathji's temple. That register was also tampered with. The original book was not made available to us for examination, but the High Court which had the opportunity of examining that book has made the following remarks in its judgment:

"A new slip was affixed to this document, and the heading which showed that the properties belonged to Shree Gokulnathji's temple was torn out." The High Court has also held that Exh. 633, which evidences the sale of S. No. 1840, was torn in such a way as to justify the plaintiffs' complaint that in the torn portion was the description of the Maharaj as the Vahiwatdar of the temple. The High Court observed:

"We have looked at all these three documents (Exts. 501, 503 and 633) and we are satisfied that the complaint made by the plaintiffs against the advisers of defendant No. 1 cannot be said to be without substance. It seems to us clear, on examining these documents that the advisers of defendant No. 1 have unscrupulously tampered with the documents. This conduct naturally raises suspicion against the defence, and we would be justified in drawing an inference against defendant No. 1 by holding that, if the books of account which have been kept back by her had been produced they would have supported the plaintiffs' case."

We agree with these observations.

8. We may now proceed to examine the material on record for finding out the true character of the suit properties viz., whether they are properties of a public trust arising from their dedication of those properties in favour of the deity Shree Gokulnathji or whether the deity as well as the suit properties are the private properties of Goswami Maharaj. In her written statement as noticed, earlier, the 1st defendant took up the specific plea that the idol of Shri Gokulnathji is the private property of the Maharaj; the Vallabh Cult does not permit any dedication in favour of an idol and in fact there was no dedication in favour of that idol. She emphatically denied that the suit properties were the properties of the deity Gokulnathji but in this Court evidently because of the enormity of evidence adduced by the plaintiffs, a totally new plea was taken namely that several items of the suit properties had been dedicated to Gokulnathji but the deity being the family deity of the Maharaj, the resulting trust is only a private trust. In other words the plea taken in the written statement is that the suit properties were the private properties of the Maharaj and that there was no trust, private or public. But the case argued before this Court is a wholly different one viz., the suit properties were partly the properties of a private trust and partly the private properties of the Maharaj. The 1st defendant cannot be permitted to take up a case which is wholly inconsistent with that pleaded. This belated attempt to bypass the evidence adduced appears to be more a manoeuvre than a genuine explanation of the documentary evidence adduced. It is amply proved that ever since Mathuranathji took over the management of the shrine, two sets of account books have been maintained, one relating to the income and expenses of the shrine and the other relating to that of the Maharaj. These account books and other documents show that presents and gifts used to be made to the deity as well as to the Maharaj. The two were quite separate and distinct. Maharaj himself has been making gifts to the deity. He has been, at times utilising the funds belonging to the deity and thereafter reimbursing the same. The account books which have been produced clearly go to show that the deity and the Maharaj were treated as two different and distinct legal entities. The evidence afforded by the account books is tell-tale. In the trial court it was contended on behalf of the 1st defendant that none of the account books produced relates exclusively to the affairs of the temple. They all record the transactions of the Maharaj, whether pertaining to his personal dealings or dealings in connection with the deity. This is an obviously untenable contention. That contention was given up in the High Court. In the High Court it was urged that two sets of account books were kept, one relating to the income and expenditure of the deity and the other of the Maharaj, so that the Maharaj could easily find out his financial commitments relating to the affairs of the deity. But in this Court Mr. Narasaraju, learned Counsel for the appellant realising the untenability of the contention advanced in the courts below presented for our consideration a totally new case and that is that Gokulnathji undoubtedly is a legal personality; in the past the properties had been dedicated in favour of that deity; those properties are the properties of a private trust of which the Maharaj was the trustee. On the basis of this newly evolved theory he wanted to explain away the effect of the evidence afforded by the account books and the documents. We are unable to accept this new plea. It runs counter to the case pleaded in the written statement. This is not a purely legal contention. The 1st defendant must have known whether there was any dedication in favour of Shree Gokulnathji and whether any portion of the suit properties were the properties of a private trust. She and her advisers must have known at all relevant times the true nature of the accounts maintained. Mr. Narasaraju is not right in his contention that the plea taken by him in this Court is a purely legal plea. It essentially relates to questions of fact. Hence we informed Mr. Narasaraju that we will not entertain the plea in question.

9. We shall now proceed to assess the evidence adduced in this case to find out whether the plaintiffs have succeeded in establishing that the suit temple and the properties annexed thereto constitute a public trust. Before doing so, it is necessary to examine certain basic contentions advanced on behalf of the appellant. It is the case of the appellant that Vallabh Sampradayeys cannot worship in a public temple; according to their cult they can have the Darshan of one or the other swaroops of Lord Krishna in the house of their Maharaj. In other words their cult prohibits public worship. They can only worship through their Maharaj and that too in his Haveli. In support of this contention great deal of reliance was placed in the High Court and the trial court on the views expressed by Dr. Bhandarkar in his Works on 'Vaishnavism, S'aivism and Minor Religious systems'. The views expressed by Dr. Bhandarkar had greatly weighed with the trial court and it is mainly on the basis of those views, the trial court rejected the plaintiffs' suit. The High Court after examining the doctrines of Vallabha School, its tenets and usages as well as the views expressed by eminent writers like Dr. Radhakrishnan and Dasgupta came to the conclusion that it would not be correct to say that worship in public temple is prohibited by the Vallabha cult though in the absence of any positive evidence it may be taken that the place where the Vallabha Sampradayeys worship is a private temple. It is not necessary for us to go into that controversy in view of the decision of this Court in Tilkayat Shri Govindlalji Maharaj v. State of Rajasthan, 1964-1 SCR 561 = (AIR 1963 SC 1638). In that case this court was called upon to consider whether Nathdwara Temple in Udaipur, a temple founded by the Vallabha Sampradayeys is public temple or not. After examining the various treatises on the subject including Dr. Bhandarkar's book on 'Vaishnavism, S'aivism and Minor Religious Systems', this Court observed at p. 585 of SCR) = (at page 1648 of AIR).

"Therefore, we are satisfied that neither the tenets nor the religious practices of the Vallabha school necessarily postulate that the followers of the school must worship in a private temple. Some temples of this cult may have been private in the past and some of them may be private even today. Whether or not a particular temple is a public temple must necessarily be considered in the light of the relevant facts relating to it. There can be no general rule that a public temple is prohibited in Vallabha School."

10. In view of this decision Mr. Narasaraaju, learned Counsel for the appellant did not press forward the contention that the Vallabha School prohibits worship in public temple.

11. Yet another contention taken on behalf of the appellant is that the architecture of the building in which Gokulnathji is housed and the nature of that building is such as to show that it is not a public temple. It was urged that that building does not possess any of the characteristics of a Hindu temple. It has not even a dome. This contention again has lost much of its force in view of the decision of this Court referred to earlier. Evidence establishes that Vallabha's son and his immediate successor Vithaleshwar had laid down a plan for the construction of temples by the Vallabha Sampradayeys. He did not approve the idea of constructing rich and costly buildings for temples. Evidently he realised that religious temple buildings were not safe under the Mohommedan rule. For this reason he advised his followers to construct temples of extremely simple type. The external view of those temples gave the appearance of dwelling houses. It appears to be a common feature of the temple belonging to the Vallabha Sampradayeys that the ground-floor is used as the place of worship and the first floor as the residence of Goswami Maharaj. Therefore the fact that Gokulnathji temple at Nadiad had the appearance of a residential house does not in any manner militate against the contention that the temple in question is a public temple.

12. It was said that according to the usage prevailing in that temple, the public are asked to enter the temple only after the Maharaj had finished his worship. This circumstance again is of no consequence. Each sect nay each temple has its own customs. The usage pleaded by the appellant is not inconsistent with that temple being a public temple. The appellant attempted to prove that on two occasions certain individuals were forbidden from entering the temple. In the first place this plea has not been satisfactorily established. Further according to the evidence adduced on behalf of the appellant those individuals were kept out of the temple because of some act of indiscipline on their part. The power to manage a temple includes within itself the power to maintain discipline within the precincts of that temple.

13. The only other circumstance relied on by the appellant to establish that the temple in question is not a public temple is that the sale proceeds of Nagarwad Haveli were credited to the account of the Maharaj. The learned Judges of the High Court have carefully looked into that aspect. After examining the relevant evidence on record they arrived at the conclusion that though initially the amount in question was credited to the account of the Maharaj at a subsequent stage it was transferred to the account of the temple by means of adjustment entries. The learned Counsel for the appellant was unable to satisfy us that this conclusion of the High Court was incorrect.

14. We shall now see how far the plaintiffs have succeeded in establishing that Gokulnathji Mandir is a public Mandir. The burden of establishing that fact is undoubtedly on them.

15. Though most of the present day Hindu public temples have been founded as public temples, there are instances of private temples becoming public temples in course of time. Some of the private temples have acquired great deal of religious reputation either because of the eminence of its founder or because of other circumstances. They have attracted large number of devotees. Gradually in course of time they have become public temples. Public temples are generally built or raised by the public and the deity installed to enable the members of the public or a section thereof to offer worship. In such a case the temple would clearly be a public temple. If a temple is proved to have originated as a public temple, nothing more is necessary to be proved to show that it is a public temple but if a temple is proved to have originated as a private temple or its origin is unknown or lost in antiquity then there must be proof to show that it is being used as a public temple. In such cases the true character of the particular temple is decided on the basis of various circumstances. In those cases the courts have to address themselves to various questions such as—

(1) Is the temple built in such imposing manner that it may prima facie appear to be a public temple?

(2) Are the members of the public entitled to worship in that temple as of right?

(3) Are the temple expenses met from the contributions made by the public?

(4) Whether the sevas and utsavas conducted in the temple are those usually conducted in public temples?

(5) Have the management as well as the devotees been treating that temple as a public temple?

16. Though the appearance of a temple is a relevant circumstance, it is by no means a decisive one. The architecture of temples differs from place to place. The circumstance that the public or a section thereof have been regularly worshipping in the temple as a matter of course and they can take part in the festivals and ceremonies conducted in that temple apparently as a matter of right is a strong piece of evidence to establish the public character of the temple. If votive offerings are being made by the public in the usual course and if the expenses of the temple are met by public contribution, it is safe to presume that the temple in question is a public temple. In brief the origin of the temple, the manner in which its affairs are managed, the nature and extent of gifts received by it, rights exercised by the devotees in regard to worship therein, the consciousness of the manager and the consciousness of the devotees themselves as to the character of the temple are factors that go to establish whether a temple is a public temple or a private temple. In Lakshmana v. Subramania, AIR 1924 PC 44, the Judicial Committee was dealing with a temple which was initially a private temple. The Mahant of this temple opened it on certain days in each week to the Hindu public free to worship in the greater part of the temple, and on payment of fees in one part only. The income thus received by the Mahant was utilised by him primarily to meet the expenses of the temple and the balance went to support the Mahant and his family. The Privy Council held that the conduct of the Mahant showed that he had held out and represented to the Hindu public that the temple was a public temple at which all Hindus might worship and the inference was, therefore, that he had dedicated it to the public. In Mundacheri Koman v. Achutan Nair, 61 Ind App 405 = (AIR 1934 PC 230), the Judicial Committee again observed that the decision of the case would depend on the inferences to be derived from the evidence as to the way in which the temple endowments had been dealt with and from the evidence as to the public user of the temples. Their Lordships were satisfied that the documentary evidence in the case conclusively showed that the properties standing in the name of the temples belonged to the temples and that the position of the manager of the temples was that of a trustee. Their Lordships further, added, that if it had been shown that the temples had originally been private temples they would have been slow to hold that the admission of the public in later times possibly owing to altered conditions would affect the private character of the trusts. In Deoki Nandan v. Murlidar, 1956 SCR 756 = (AIR 1957 SC 133), this Court observed that the issue whether a religious endowment is a public or a private one is a mixed question of law and fact, the decision of which must depend on the application of legal concepts of a public and private endowment to the facts found. Therein it was further observed that the distinction between a public and private endowment is that whereas in the former the beneficiaries, which means the worshippers, are specific individuals and in the latter the general public or class thereof. In that case the plaintiff sought to establish the true scope of the dedication from the user of the temple by the public. In Narayan Bhagwant Rao Gosavi Balajiwale v. Gopal Vinayak Gosavi, (1960) 1 SCR 773 = (AIR 1960 SC 100) this Court held that the vastness of the temple, the mode of its construction, the long user of the public as of right, grant of land and cash by the Rulers taken along with other relevant factors in that case were consistent only with the public nature of the temple.

17. In examining the evidence adduced by the plaintiffs in proof of the fact that the temple in question is a public temple we have to bear in mind the tests laid down by the courts for determining whether a given temple is a public temple or not.

18. The case for the plaintiffs is that this temple originated as a public temple. According to them it was founded long before Mathuranathji was born; the idol of Gokulnathji was originally worshipped at Nagarwad and later on the suit temple was built and that idol installed therein. We have earlier seen that the case of the 1st defendant on this point was that the idol of Gokulnathji was the private property of Mathuranathji. Mathurnathji brought that idol along with him when he came to Nadiad and worshipped the same as his private deity. This part of her case was given up at a later stage, and she put forward a new case to the effect that the idol of Gokulnathji was brought by the ancestors of Mathuranathji to Nadiad and it is they who started worshipping that idol at Nadiad. From this it is clear that the appellant has no consistent case as to the origin of the worship of Gokulnathji at Nadiad. The new plea put forward by her was evidently intended to meet the evidence adduced to show that the idol of Gokulnathji was being worshipped at Nadiad even before Mathuranathji was born. In order to show that the idol of Gokulnathji was being worshipped in Nadiad even in the 18th century, oral evidence of local repute has been adduced by the plaintiffs. In the very nature of things that evidence cannot but be inconclusive. In this connection the plaintiffs have also placed reliance on Exh. 791, an extract showing the list of Devasthanans in the Pargana of Nadiad to which the former Baroda State was making contributions, one of such Devasthan is the "Shree Gokulnathji". This extract relates to Fasli Samvat 1833 (i.e., 1781-82 A.D.). On the basis of this Exhibit, we are asked to conclude that the suit temple was in existence even before 1781-1782 A.D. The evidence afforded by this document undoubtedly probabilises the version of the plaintiffs but it cannot be said with any definiteness that the entry in question relates to the suit temple. Therefore, it is not possible to come to a positive conclusion that the suit temple originated as a public temple nor there is any conclusive evidence before us to determine the date of its origin. All that we can say is that the origin of this temple is lost in antiquity. Therefore for determining whether it is a public temple or not we must depend on other circumstances.

19. It is established by the evidence on record that Gokulnathji is neither the Nidhi Swaroop nor Seva Swaroop of Mathuranathji's branch. Therefore it is unlikely that Mathuranathji branch would have installed the idol of Shree Gokulnathji for their private worship though the idol of Shree Gokulnathji is one of the Swaroops of Lord Krishna. The plea taken by the appellant that Gokulnathji was one of the Nidhi Swaroop given to the branch of Mathuranathji by Vallabha is opposed to the documentary evidence produced by herself. That plea has not been pressed before us for our acceptance.

20. From the account books produced in this case, it is clear that ever since 1865 two sets of accounts had been maintained by the Maharaj, one relating to the temple and another relating to him. The temple accounts are referred to as "Nichen Khata" and Maharaj's accounts as "Uparna Khata". At this stage we may emphasize that the evidence disclosed that the entire ground floor is being used as the place of worship of Gokulnathji and upstairs portion as the residence of the Maharaj. For the years 1877 to 1892, no books of accounts have been produced. The appellant has stated that these books are not with her. But this is not a satisfactory explanation for their disappearance. The temple accounts for the years 1892 to 1894 have been produced but the personal accounts of the Maharaj for those years have not been produced. Again for the years 1900 to 1907, only the temple accounts have been produced but for the period from 1908 and 1934 both the sets have been produced. Again for the period 1935 to 1943, only the temple account books have been produced and not the personal account books of the Maharaj. This pick and choose method adopted in the matter of producing account books unmistakably indicate that the appellant was deliberately keeping back unfavourable evidence. Evidence on record establishes that some of the documents which were there at the time of the inventory were not produced when summoned. Under those circumstances the High Court was justified in drawing an adverse inference against the appellant.

21. The existence of two sets of accounts clearly goes to indicate that the Maharaj had always considered the temple as an entity different from themselves. That circumstance goes to negative the contention of the appellant that the deity was owned by the Maharaj and therefore the deity as well as the suit properties are his private properties.

22. Right back in 1861 under a gift deed executed by a devotee by name Bai Jasubai, two fields and a house were gifted in favour of the temple of Gokulnathji Maharaj at Nadiad. The properties gifted by Jasubai were sold in 1865 and the sale proceeds credited in the 'Nichen Khata'. In 1865 when Sri Vrajratna Maharaj left Nadiad he made a present of Rs. 5/- to the idol of Shree Gokulnathji. This was also credited in the 'Nichen Khata'.

1970 S. C./128 XII G—3

23. Then we come to Ex. 593, an application made by several merchants and other residents of Nadiad to the Collector of Kaira in the year 1866. That application recites that the ancestors of the applicants had voluntarily levied a cess known as Laga on several articles for the benefit of the suit temple. Originally this Laga was separately recovered from the devotees by the Maharaj but later on at the request of the merchants the same used to be recovered by the Government along with the custom duty and made over to Maharaj for the benefit of the temple. Therein it was prayed that the newly established municipality should be directed to collect the Laga along with its dues and make it over to the Maharaj. That application was signed by a large number of persons. That application inter alia states:—

"There is a temple of Shree Gokulnathji at Nadiad. A son of our preceptor, Shree Goswami Mathuranathji performs the seva in the said temple. Our ancestors have granted for his expenses from the town a laga on several articles which may be received, a list whereof is enclosed herewith."

The signatories to that application must have been familiar with the history of the suit temple. We can reasonably assume that the facts stated therein are correct. Those facts support the case of the plaintiffs.

24. We next go to the entries in the account books. In the temple accounts for the year 1870, there is a credit entry of Rs. 27/4/-. It is in respect of the fine imposed by the Mahajan on three persons who appear to have played mischief at the time of darshan. This entry clearly shows that the supervision of the temple, in a general sense, vested in the Mahajan of the place. It appears from the accounts that in 1874, the Mahajan examined the account books of the temple—see Exh. 308. This conduct on the part of the Mahajan would be inconsistent with the appellant's claim that Gokulnath's shrine is her private property. In 1881 one Bai Harkore under her will made certain bequests in the name of the Gokulnathji Maharaj at Nadiad for providing Samagri for Shree Gokulnathji. This is a bequest to the idol. Therein there is no reference to the Maharaj. Then we come to Exh. 534, under which a substantial portion of lot No. 1 of the suit properties wherein the temple is situated was purchased on April 4, 1885. The sale deed was taken in the name of Pari Pranvallabh Vrajilal and others on behalf of Shree Gokulnathji of Nadiad. This is a clear indication that the deity of Gokulnathji was treated by the devotees as an independent legal entity. Further the importance of this document is that it is taken in the name of the representatives of the public and not in the name of the Maharaj. Under Exh. 691, a gift was made in 1883 in the name of Vrajratnalaji for and on behalf of Shree Gokulnathji temple. The donor paid Rs. 1,200 and desired that a meal of six breads every day should be given till the temple exists to the person whom the Maharaj would name and if the person named by the Maharaj does not come to take the meal the same should be given to any visitor to the temple. Still more significant is the bequest contained in Exh. 512, the will executed by one Bai Vasant. Under this will two bequests were made, one in favour of the temple of Shree Gokulnathji and the other in favour of the Maharani Vahuji who was then the Maharani of the temple. This will was executed on September 20, 1897. Under a prior will executed by the same devotee (Exh. 189), the same distinction between the Maharaj and the temple is to be found. That document was executed in 1888. Similarly when bhets (presents) were made by the devotees to the idol as well as to the Maharaj, they were separately credited in the respective account books. As an illustration, we may refer to entries in the account books for the year 1896. Therein Rs. 22 was credited to the temple accounts and Rs. 5 to the Maharaj's personal account. The account books clearly show the various presents made to the temple as well as to the Maharaj.

25. It is established by evidence that in 1896 when the question of taxing the income of the Maharaj came up for consideration, the Maharaj pleaded that the income of the temple cannot be treated as his income. The balance sheets prepared in that connection showed the income of the temple separately from that of the Maharaj. The correspondence that passed between the Maharaj and the authorities in that connection establishes beyond doubt that the Maharaj did not treat the income of the temple as his income. The contention that the admission in question was made under wrong advice receives no support from the evidence on record. Similarly with regard to the payment of the municipal tax, the properties of the Maharaj had been treated separately from that of the temple.

26. In 1907 one Shah Chaganlal made a gift of some property to the temple. That property was subject to a mortgage. The donor directed that the Maharaj of the temple should divide the annual income of the mortgaged property into nine shares, out of which one share should be given for the samagri of Shree Gokulnathji on Posh Vad 3rd of every year and eight shares of the income should be given for the samagri of the said Gokulnathji every year on Vaishakh Sud 8th. In that document the Maharaj was shown as the agent of the temple. This property was subsequently sold and the sale proceeds were credited to the temple accounts. The accounts show numerous other instances of receipts and expenses relating to the temple as distinguished from that of the Maharaj. The High Court has enumerated those receipts and expenses with elaborate fulness. It would be superfluous to refer to them. The above-mentioned instances go to falsify the contention of the appellant that the idol of Shree Gokulnathji was the private property of the Maharaj. On the other hand they establish that the temple in question was treated by all concerned as a public temple.

27. In proof of her case that the suit temple and the properties are individual properties of the Maharaj, the appellant relied on the wills executed by Vrajatanlalji in 1882 and Maharani Vahuji in 1898. Under the former the testator provided for the management of the properties mentioned therein after his death. Therein he asserted his right to make vahivat according to his pleasure of movable and immovable properties shown in the will during his lifetime. One of the stipulations in the will was that if he dies leaving no son, natural or adopted, those properties should go to his wife, as owner subject to the condition that the expenses of worship of "his Shree Thakorji" according to usage should come out of its income. There are similar assertions in the will executed by Maharani Vahuji in 1898. These statements are at best self serving statements. They have little evidentiary value. They are likely to have been made by the executants of those wills under a misconception as to their rights. If the account books for the years 1877 to 1892 had been produced we would have been able to find out how Vrajatanlalji himself dealt with the properties of the temple.

28. There is clear, consistent and reliable evidence to show that Vallabha Sampradaes have been worshipping in the suit temple as of right. There is also evidence to show that the temple has all along been primarily maintained from the contributions made by the devotees belonging to the Vallabha School. The suit temple appears to be an important temple attracting a large number of devotees. Utsavas and other festivals are performed in that temple in a reasonably grand scale. The devotees as well as the Maharaj were treating that temple as a public temple. From the facts proved we have no hesitation in agreeing with the High Court that the temple in question is a public temple.

29. This takes us to the question whether all or any of the properties detailed in the plaint schedule are proved to be that of the temple. We have earlier come to the conclusion that the temple has been getting substantial contributions from its devotees in diverse ways. It was also the recipient of several gifts. It had adequate resources to make the acquisitions with which we are concerned in this case. The temple is exclusively managed by the Goswamiji Maharaj. It maintains regular accounts. Maharaj also maintains his separate accounts. Therefore it was easy for the appellant to prove the source from which the acquisitions in question were made and how their income was treated. The appellant has led no evidence to show that they were her own properties. She has failed to produce some of the accounts relating to the relevant periods. In this background let us proceed to examine the title to the suit properties.

30. Lot No. 1 is the site in which the suit temple is situate. It was conceded on behalf of the appellant that if we come to the conclusion that the suit temple is a public temple that item of property will have to be considered as the property of the temple. Lot No. 2 is the garden land in Survey No. 2031. It is used for raising flowers for worship in the temple. That land appears to have been granted to Mathuranathji but the appellant admitted in her deposition that item of property was at all time managed by the Haveli and whoever is the owner of the Haveli is the owner of the garden. This admission is corroborated by considerable other evidence. Vaishnav merchants of Nadiad contributed for the expenses of installation of an electric pump in that garden and for its subsequent repairs. All expenses incurred for that garden have always been debited and all income received therefrom credited to the temple accounts. That garden is included in the Patriks of the temple property, prepared long before the present dispute arose. When a part of that property was compulsorily acquired on three different occasions, the compensation received was credited to the temple account. These circumstances conclusively establish that lot No. 2 is temple property.

31. Lot No. 3 is the building known as Goshala. Its survey No. is 994. It is used for the purpose of tethering the cows reared for supplying milk and butter for the worship of Bal-krishnalalji, one of the deities installed in the temple. This property is included in Exs. 500 and 501. It is shown in the property register as the property belonging to the Devasthan Charity. The balance sheet prepared in 1896 treats the rent of the shops and houses in that site as the income from temple properties — See Exh. 1048. We think the High Court was right in concluding on the basis of this evidence that that item belongs to the temple.

32. Lot No. 4 is a shop bearing city survey No. 720. This property was gifted by Kuber Jetha Vashram as per his will Exh. 673 for the samagri of the temple. The bequest is made in favour of Shree Gokulnathji Maharaj. Hence this is clearly an item of property belonging to the suit temple.

33. Lot No. 5 is survey No. 121. It is gifted under Exh. 610 dated June 29, 1868. The gift is purported to have been made in favour of the Maharaj but the income from this property has always been credited to the temple accounts, the earliest entry being that of the year 1870. In the property register, this property is shown as temple property and the rent note Exh. 535 is taken in the name of the Vahivatdar of Shree Gokulnathji. Hence this item of the property should also be held to be that of the temple.

34. Lot No. 6 consists of 14 small items of property. They are all agricultural fields. They have been shown in the property register as the properties of the temple. Out of 14 items in this lot, items Nos. 6, 9, 11, 12 and 14 originally belonged to the Maharaj but they have been all along dealt with by the Maharaj as temple property. Item No. 1 in lot No. 6 belongs to the temple. The mortgage Exh. 603 relates to this item and the same was executed in favour of the temple on May 17, 1897. A rent note in respect of this property was taken on April 22, 1915 in the name of the Vahivatdar of the temple. Items 2, 3 and 4 of that lot are shown in the record of rights in the name of the Maharaj but the income from those properties and the expenses incurred for the same have always been entered in the temple accounts. Item 5 of this lot had been gifted to the temple under Exh. 1049. Item 8 of this lot had been purchased in the name of the Maharani Vahuji on June 2, 1897 for Rs. 1150. The income of this property has been shown in the temple accounts. So far as item 10 is concerned though the record of rights stands in the name of the Maharaj personally, its sale price (Rs. 800-0-6) has been credited to the temple accounts. From all this it is clear that the temple is the owner of lot No. 6.

35. Now coming to lot No. 7, the entries in the account books clearly show that this is temple property. The consideration for the purchase of a portion of it was paid from the temple funds. A portion of that property had been gifted to the temple under Exh. 461.

36. Lot No. 8 was purchased in 1877 from the temple funds and lot No. 13 was gifted to the temple. Lot No. 9 was received by the temple under will Exh. 512 and lot No. 10 was always treated as temple property in the account books. So also lots Nos. 11 and 12. Similarly lots Nos. 13 and 14 were always being treated as temple properties. We are in agreement with the learned judges of the High Court that the properties detailed in the plaint schedule are all temple properties.

37. For the reasons mentioned above this appeal must fail. But before we conclude we should like to clarify one aspect which undoubtedly is implicit in the judgment of the High Court. The Goswami Maharajs or Maharanis are not mere managers. In the temples belonging to the Vallabha School they have an important place. The Maharaj is the Maha Prabhu. The Vallabh devotees worship their deity through him. It is true that the income from temple properties has to be primarily used for the expenses of the sevas and utsavas in the temple, the upkeep, renovation and improvements of the temple premises but subject to these demands, the Maharaj has a right to utilise the temple income in maintaining himself and his family in a reasonably comfortable manner. The learned Counsel for the plaintiffs conceded this position. This suit has been brought by the plaintiffs with the sole purpose of preserving the temple's assets and maintaining its dignity. They do not want to undermine the position or prestige of their Maha Prabhu.

38. In the circumstances of the case we see no useful purpose in directing the appellant to pay the costs of the plaintiffs in this appeal. She can only pay the same from temple funds. The alienees have not appealed against the judgment of the High Court. When we mentioned this aspect to Mr. S. T. Desai, learned Counsel for the plaintiffs he indicated that the parties may be left to bear their own costs in this appeal.

39. For the reasons mentioned above this appeal is dismissed but we make no order as to costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2037
(V 57 C 433)(From Andhra Pradesh: 1966-2 Andh LT 27)V. RAMASWAMI AND I. D. DUA, JJ.Navalkha and Sons, Appellants v. Sri Ramanya Das and others, Respondents.Civil Appeals Nos. 1085 and 1086 of 1967, D/- 27-10-1969.

(A) Companies (Court) Rules (1959),
R. 273 — Sale subject to confirmation — Property does not vest in auction purchaser unless sale is confirmed —
Before confirmation Court must satisfy itself that price fetched is reasonable — Sale confirmed without being so satisfied — Confirmation is not proper exercise of jurisdiction — (Civil P. C.
(1908), O. 21, R. 92).

Where the acceptance of the offer by the Commissioners is subject to confirmation of the Court the offerer does not by mere acceptance get any vested right in the property so that he may demand automatic confirmation of his offer. The condition of confirmation by the Court operates as a safeguard against the property being sold at inadequate price whether or not it is a consequence of any irregularity or fraud in the conduct of the sale. In every case it is the duty of the Court to satisfy itself that, having regard to the market value of the property, the price offered is reasonable. Unless the Court is satisfied about the adequacy of the price the act of confirmation of the sale would not be a proper exercise of judicial discretion. AIR 1921
Mad 286 and AIR 1925 Mad 318 and AIR 1940 Mad 42 and AIR 1951 Mad
986, Ref. (Para 6)

(B) Companies (Court) Rules (1959),
R. 273 — Sale held not by public auction and without due publicity — Confirmation of such sale — Prejudice is inherent — Court in appeal will set aside confirmation.

Rule 273 of the Companies (Court) Rules provides that all sales shall be made by public auction or by inviting sealed tenders or in such manner as the Judge may direct. Where the auction in question no doubt was conducted in a public place but it was not a public auction inasmuch as it was not open to the general public but was confined to two named persons, and secondly it was not held after due publicity, but immediately after it was decided upon, the sale in question was not a public sale which implies sale after giving notice to the public wherein every member of the public is at liberty to participate. The denial of opportunity to purchase the property by persons who would have taken part in the auction bid but for want of notice is a serious matter. (Para 8)

It is true that the discretion exercised by the Judge in confirming the sale ought not to be interfered with unless the Judge has gone wrong on principle.
The prejudice was inherent in the method adopted inasmuch as there was no publicity and the auction through public was confined only to two persons. In these circumstances the Company Judge ought not to have confirmed the bid offered in such an auction. (Para 8)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- |  |   |
|--|---|
| (1951) AIR 1951 Mad 986(V 38) = 1951-2 Mad LJ 353,A. Subbaraya Mudaliar v.K. Sundararajan            | 6 |
| (1940) AIR 1940 Mad 42 (V 27) =50 Mad LW 699, S. Soundara-rajan v. Mahomed IsmailM/s. Roshan and Co. | 6 |
| (1925) AIR 1925 Mad 318 (V 12) =82 Ind Cas 793, RathnasamiPillai v. Sabapathi Pillai                     | 6 |
| (1921) AIR 1921 Mad 286 (V 8) =24 Mad LW 35, Gordhan DasChuni Lal v. KathimathinathaPillai           | 6 |

The following judgment of the Court
was delivered by

RAMASWAMI, J.: These appeals are brought by certificate from the judgment of the Andhra Pradesh High Court dated September 24, 1965 in
O. S. A. Nos. 3 and 4 of 1965.

2. In the winding up proceedings of Hyderabad Vegetable Products Co.,
Ltd. (in liquidation) the 5th respondent (Official Liquidator) sought permission of the Court for the sale of immovable and movable properties and actionable claims of the Company.
This application was Company Application No. 67 of 1963. A shareholder of the Company one Sirajuddin Babu
Khan also made an application C. A.
No. 93 of 1964 to a similar effect. On these applications an order was passed by Jagan Mohan Reddi J., on April 17, 1964 appointing respondents 2, 3 and 4

as Joint Commissioners for the purpose of selling immovable and movable properties and actionable claims of the aforesaid Company in accordance with the terms and conditions mentioned in the order. Accordingly a sale proclamation August 1, 1964 was drawn and issued by the respondents 2 to 4 inviting offers for the purchase of movable and immovable properties and actionable claims of the Company as a single unit. According to the terms and conditions of sale the commissioners were not bound to accept the highest offer and were at liberty to reject any offer without assigning any reason. Immediately after the offer was accepted by the commissioners the offeror had to deposit 15 per cent. of the offer amount as initial deposit and the balance of the amount together with the amount required on non-judicial stamp paper within 15 days from the date of acceptance. Acceptance of the offer by the Commissioners was subject to the condition of confirmation by the High Court and the offeror was entitled to take delivery of possession of the properties only after such confirmation. It was made abundantly clear in clause 16 that in all matters relating to the sale of the properties the decision of the Commissioners shall be final and shall be binding subject to the control of the High Court. One of the conditions also was that the proclamation of sale was to be advertised twice in each of the five leading dailies The Statesman, The Times of India, The Hindu, Indian Express and the Hindustan Times to ensure wide publicity and the Commissioners were also required to get the proclamation printed and distributed among the likely purchasers. The Commissioners got published the proclamation in four leading dailies only; The Hindu, Indian Express, The Statesman and the Hindustan Times. No publication was made in the Times of India nor was the advertisement made twice in any of the said newspapers. In two of them there were two insertions but in the remaining papers there was only one insertion. In addition to the advertisement the Commissioners got printed 300 copies and posted them to various industrial concerns. The last date fixed for the receipt of the offers was September 8, 1964. Not even a single offer was received by that time. The time for receipt of offers was extended by the Court to the end of November, 1964 at the instance of the Commissioners. The appellant Navalkha and Sons happened to be the sole offeror. It has offered a sum of Rupees 7,91,001/- which was made of Rupees 2,50,000/- for the immovable property and Rs 5,41,001/- for the machinery. It made no offer for the actionable claims. The appellant made deposit of Rs. 50,000 in the shape of demand draft drawn on the State Bank of Hyderabad. The offer was accepted by the Commissioners on December 2, 1964. The appellant was called upon to deposit 15 per cent. of the amount of the offer as initial deposit immediately and the balance together with the amount required for non-judicial stamp paper within 15 days from the date of acceptance. The appellant did make the initial deposit. The Commissioners then made an application on December 3, 1964 to the High Court for confirmation of the sale. On December 11, 1964 the High Court extended time for payment of the balance amount for two weeks. On December 24, 1964 one Gopaladas Darak made an offer of Rs. 8,50,000/- saying that he could not offer in time because he came to know of the sale only two days prior to that date and it was due to the fact that there was no adequate publicity. To show his bona fides he gave a demand draft for a sum of Rs. 1,00,015/-. The learned Judge decided that the property did not fetch its proper price and there was possibility of higher bids. Instead of directing a fresh auction or calling for fresh offers the learned Judge thought it proper to arrange an open bid in the Court itself on that very day, as between the appellant and Gopaladas Darak. Before starting the bid the learned Judge gave time to the appellant to think over and say whether it was willing to accept the course decided upon and to participate in the auction bids. The appellant consented and volunteered to take part in the bid and became the highest bidder at Rs. 8,82,009/-. The learned Judge accepted the said bid as final bid and concluded the sale in favour of the appellant directing it to pay the balance of the money together with the amount required for non-judicial stamp on or (before) 31-1-1965 making it clear that in case of default the deposit already made would be forfeited. The appellant paid the balance of the amount on January 30, 1965. On the same day one Padam Chand Agarwal made an application (C. A. 44 of 1965) offering Rs. 10,00,000. He complained that publicity of the sale of the property was not adequately made and he came to know of the advertisement very late. He was prepared to enhance the offer to Rs. 10,00,000/- and was also willing to participate in open bid if the Court so decided with Rs. 10,00,000/- as initial bid. The learned Judge rejected his request and by his order dated February 19, 1965 held that the sale should be confirmed in favour of the appellant. Aggrieved by this Order Padam Chand Agarwal filed appeal No. 4 of 1965. One Ramnuja Das, a contributory also chose to prefer an appeal (appeal No. 3 of 1965) against the order of confirmation. According to him, the publicity given was inadequate and the first offer given by the appellant was too low and the Court has rightly refused to confirm the acceptance of the offer. His grievance was that the learned Judge should have held the auction only after due publicity but has not done so and the same course followed did not achieve the object of getting adequate price of the property.

3. Both appeals 3 and 4 are, therefore, directed against the confirmation of the auction sale held in Court on December 24, 1964. These appeals were allowed by Letters Patent Bench consisting of the Chief Justice and Kumarayya J., and the order of the learned single Judge dated February 19, 1965 read with his previous order dated December 24, 1965 was set aside. It was directed that the learned Judge should take fresh steps for the sale of the property either by calling sealed tenders or by auction in accordance with law. The tenders would be called or the auction would take place with the requisite condition of minimum offer or starting bid of Rs. 10,00,000/-.

4. It was argued by Mr. V. S. Desai on behalf of the appellants that the discretion of the learned Company Judge was not erroneously exercised when he accepted the bid of the appellant in the auction held on December 24, 1964 and consequently there was no justification for the Division Bench to interfere with the order of the learned Single Judge. We are unable to accept this argument as correct.

5. Rule 273 of Companies (Court) Rules, 1959 is to the following effect:

"Procedure at sale.—Every sale shall be held by the Official Liquidator, or, if the Judge shall so direct, by an agent or an auctioneer approved by the Court, and subject to such terms and conditions, if any, as may be approved by the Court. All sales shall be made by public auction or by inviting sealed tenders or in such manner as the Judge may direct."

6. The principles which should govern confirmation of sales are well established. Where the acceptance of the offer by the Commissioners is subject to confirmation of the Court the offeror does not by mere acceptance get any vested right in the property so that he may demand automatic confirmation of his offer. The condition of confirmation by the Court operates as a safeguard against the property being sold at inadequate price whether or not it is a consequence of any irregularity or fraud in the conduct of the sale. In every case it is the duty of the Court to satisfy itself that having regard to the market value of the property the price offered is reasonable. Unless the Court is satisfied about the adequacy of the price the act of confirmation of the sale would not be a proper exercise of judicial discretion. In Gordhan Das Chuni Lal v. Kanthimathinatha Pillai, AIR 1921 Mad 286, it was observed that where the property is authorised to be sold by private contract or otherwise it is the duty of the Court to satisfy itself that the price fixed is the best that could be expected to be offered. That is because the Court is the custodian of the interests of the Company and its creditors and the sanction of the Court required under the Companies Act has to be exercised with judicial discretion regard being had to the interests of the Company and its creditors as well. This principle was followed in Rathnasami Pillai v. Saba-pathi Pillai, AIR 1925 Mad 318 and S. Soundararajan v. Mahomed Ismail, M/s. Roshan and Co., AIR 1940 Mad 42. In A. Subbaraya Mudaliar v. K. Sundararajan, AIR 1951 Mad 986, it was pointed out that the condition of confirmation by the Court being a safeguard against the property being sold at an inadequate price, it will be not only proper but necessary that the Court in exercising the discretion which it undoubtedly has of accepting or refusing the highest bid at the auction held in pursuance of its orders, should see that the price fetched at the auction is an adequate price even though there is no suggestion of irregularity or fraud. It is well to bear in mind the other principle which is equally well settled namely that once the court comes to the conclusion that the price offered is adequate, no subsequent higher offer can constitute a valid ground for refusing confirmation of the sale or offer already received. (See the decision of the Madras High Court in Roshan and Co's case, AIR 1940 Mad 42).

7. In the present case the Division Bench has come to the conclusion that publicity was not as wide as originally proposed by the Commissioners in their affidavit. The publication was made in four dailies namely The Hindu, Indian Express, Hindustan Times and The Statesman. There was no publication in the Times of India. Further out of the four newspapers in which publication was made only in two there were two insertions and in the remaining two there was only one insertion. This was contrary to what the Commissioners have promised in their affidavit dated July 8, 1964. No doubt, other efforts were made for giving publicity but these efforts were not sufficient to attract more than one offer. When the case came for confirmation on December 24, 1964 there was an application by Babukhan that the property was of much higher value and that fresh offers must be invited again with wider publicity. There is also the affidavit of the State Government dated August 29, 1963 in which the value of the property was shown as Rs. 13,40,000/-. Besides, on that very day, one Gopaldas Darak had come before the Court with a higher offer showing his bona fides and earnestness by depositing more than one lakh of rupees. He came with the complaint that there was not sufficient publicity as to attract people from the north and that as soon as he came to know he gave his offer. In these circumstances the learned single Judge was right in expressing his reluctance to confirm the offer of Navalkha & Sons. He therefore decided to have an open bid as between the appellant and Darak in the court itself on that very day. The complaint of Padam Chand Agarwal is that the second step taken by the Single Judge of holding an auction without giving wide publicity was not justified in law. Rule 273 of the Companies (Court) Rules provides that all sales shall be made by public auction or by inviting sealed tenders or in such manner as the Judge may direct. It appears that on April 17, 1964 at the instance of the Official Liquidator and at the instance of a contributory the Court had approved of the terms and conditions of sale which provide for calling of sealed tenders. On December 24, 1964 the learned Judge realised the ineffectiveness of this course and decided to abandon the original procedure and put the properties to auction. But having made up his mind to resort to auction the learned Judge confined the auction to only two persons namely the previous tenderer and the fresh tenderer. The auction in question no doubt was conducted in a public place but it was not a public auction because it was not open to the general public but was confined to two named persons. Secondly it was not held after due publicity. It was held immediately after it was decided upon. It is, therefore, obvious that the sale in question was not a public sale which implies sale after giving notice to the public wherein every member of the public is at liberty to participate. No doubt, the device resorted to considerably raised the previous bid yet it was not an adequate price having regard to the market value of the property to which reference has already been made. The denial of opportunity to purchase the property by persons who would have taken part in the auction bid but for want of notice is a serious matter. In our opinion the learned Judge having decided on December 24, 1964 that the property should be put to auction should have directed auction by public sale instead of confining it to two persons alone. Since there was want of publicity and there was lack of opportunity to the public to take part in the auction the acceptance of the highest bid by the learned Judge was not a sound exercise of discretion. It is contended on behalf of the appellant that confirmation was discretionary with the court and the Division Bench ought not to have interfered with the discretion exercised by the Company Judge. It is true that the discretion exercised by the Judge ought not to be interfered with unless the Judge has gone wrong on principle. As already pointed out the learned Company Judge having decided to put the property to auction went wrong in not holding the auction as a public auction after due publicity and this has resulted in prejudice to the Company and the creditors in that the auction did not fetch adequate price. The prejudice was inherent in the method adopted. The petition of Padam Chand Agarwal also suggests that want of publicity had resulted in prejudice. In these circumstances the Company Judge ought not to have confirmed the bid of the appellant in the auction held on December 24, 1964. We are accordingly of opinion that the Division Bench was right in holding that the order of the Company Judge dated February 19, 1965 should be set aside and there should be fresh sale of the property either by calling sealed tenders or by auction in accordance with law. The tender will be called or the auction will take place with the minimum offer or with the starting bid of ten lakh rupees.

8. For these reasons we hold that the judgment of the Division Bench of the Andhra Pradesh High Court dated September 24, 1965 is correct and these appeals must be dismissed with costs. One set of hearing fee.

Appeals dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2041
(V 57 C 434)

(From Patna)*

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Civil Appeal No. 159 of 1969:

M/s. Shree Krishna Gyanodaya Sugar Ltd., Appellant v. The State of Bihar and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 291 of 1969:

M/s. Laxmi Narain Ram Narain, Appellant v. The State of Bihar and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 371 of 1969:

M/s. Lakshminarain Ramnarain, Lalpur, Appellant v. M/s. Shree Krishna Gyanodaya Sugar Ltd. and others, Respondents.

*(C. W. J. C. Nos. 197 and 234 of 1968 — Pat.)

EN/EN/B/676/70/CWM/D

AND

Petn. for Special Leave to Appeal (Civil) No. 999 of 1969:

M/s. Shree Krishna Gyanodaya Sugar Ltd., Petitioner v. State of Bihar and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 159, 291 and 371 of 1969 and Petn. for Special Leave to Appeal (Civil) No. 999 of 1969, D/- 8-4-1970.

Constitution of India, Article 133 (1), Clauses (a) and (c) — Grant of certificate under Clause (a) on ground that subject matter of dispute is incapable of valuation — Erroneous. C. W. J. C. Nos. 197 and 234 of 1968 (Pat), Reversed.

A certificate under Clause (a) of Article 133 (1) can be granted only when the High Court certifies that the amount of the value of the subject matter of the dispute in that Court as well as in appeal to Supreme Court was not less than Rs. 20,000. A subject matter which is incapable of valuation cannot be considered to be a subject matter of the value of not less than Rs. 20,000. Civil Appeal No. 272 of 1969, D/- 9-3-1970 (SC), Rel. on. (Para 2)

Where the subject matter of dispute is grant of licence for supply of liquor, the grant of certificate by High Court under Article 133 (1) (a) is erroneous. It will be open to the High Court to consider afresh the applications for certificate under Article 133 (1) (c). C. W. J. C. Nos. 197 and 234 of 1968 (Pat), Reversed. (Para 2)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1970) Civil Appeal No. 272 of 1969, D/- 9-3-1970, Satyanarain Prasad v. State of Bihar 2

The following judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J. — Civil Appeals Nos. 159 and 291 of 1969 arise from two writ petitions (C. W. J. C. Nos. 197 and 234 of 1968) before the High Court of Judicature at Patna, filed by two companies (appellants in C. As. Nos. 159 and 291 of 1969) manufacturing alcohol in the State of Bihar. In C. W. J. C. No. 197 of 1968, the petitioners challenged the licence granted to the 4th respondent therein (the petitioners in C.W.J.C. No. 234 of 1968) for supplying alcohol. Similarly in C. W. J. C. No. 234 of 1968, the petitioners challenged the licence granted to the petitioners in C. W. J. C. 197 of 1968. Both those writ petitions were dismissed by the High Court. Thereafter the appellants in Civil Appeal No. 159 of 1969 moved the High Court for certificate under Clauses (a), (b) and (c) of Article 133 of the Constitution. The High Court did not consider their prayer under Clauses (b) and (c) of Article 133 of the Constitution but granted a certificate under Article 133 (1) (a) on the ground that the subject matter of appeal is incapable of valuation. Civil Appeal No. 371 of 1969 brought by special leave is directed against the order granting that certificate. In C. W. J. C. 234 of 1968 certificate was asked for only under Article 133 (1) (a) and (b) and the High Court was pleased to grant a certificate under Article 133 (1) without specifying whether it is under Clause (a) or (b) of Article 133 (1). But from the order granting the certificate, it appears to be one under Article 133 (1) (a). Quite clearly the subject matter of both the petitions was incapable of valuation as in the writ petitions, the licences given to one or other of the parties were asked to be cancelled.

2. In our opinion, the High Court erred in granting certificates under Clause (a) of Article 133 (1). A certificate under that clause can be granted only when the High Court certifies that the amount of the value of the subject matter of the dispute in that court as well as in appeal to this Court was not less than Rupees 20,000/-. A subject matter which is incapable of valuation cannot be considered to be a subject matter of the value of not less than Rs. 20,000/- — see Satyanarain Prasad v. State of Bihar, Civil Appeal No. 272 of 1969 D/- 9-3-1970. Hence no certificate under Art. 133 (1) (a) could have been granted. Hence Civil Appeal No. 371 of 1969 is allowed and the certificate granted in Civil Appeal No. 159 of 1969 is revoked. We suo motu revoke the certificate granted in Civil Appeal No. 291 of 1969. In the result Civil Appeals Nos. 159 and 291 of 1969 are dismissed. It will be open to the High Court to consider afresh the applications made by the appellants in those appeals for certificates under clause (c) of Art. 133 (1). Special Leave Petition No. 999 of 1969 is adjourned sine die. The parties may move the Court to take up that petition after the High Court decides the question whether the appellants in Civil Appeals Nos. 159 and 291 of 1969 are entitled to any certificate under clause (c) of Art. 133 of the Constitution. In the circumstances of the case we make no order as to costs in these appeals.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2042 (V 57 C 435)

(From Mysore: AIR 1968 Mys 156)

S. M. SIKRI, G. K. MITTER,
K. S. HEGDE, A. N. RAY AND
P. JAGANMOHAN REDDY JJ.

In Civil Appeal No. 1617 of 1967.

Chandra Bhawan Boarding and Lodging, Bangalore, Appellant v. State of Mysore and another, Respondents.

In W. P. No. 207 of 1967; All Mysore Hotels Assocn. and another, Petitioners v The State of Mysore and another, Respondents; Chandra Bhawan Boarding and Lodging Bangalore, Intervener.

Civil Appeal No. 1617 of 1967 and Writ Petn. No. 207 of 1967, D/- 29-9-1969.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 14 — Power conferred under S. 5 (1), Minimum Wages Act is not arbitrary or unguided.

It is true that the procedural inequality, if real and substantial is also within the vice of Article 14. But then, before a power can be held to be bad the same should be an unguided and unregulated one. But if a power is given to an authority to have recourse to different procedures under different circumstances, that power cannot be considered as an arbitrary power. Power under Section 5 (1) Minimum Wages Act is given to the State Government and not to any petty official. The State Government can be trusted to exercise that power to further the purposes of the Act. It is not the law that the guidance for the exercise of a power can be gathered from the circumstances that led to the enactment of the law in question i.e. the mischief that was intended to be remedied, the preamble to the Act or even from the scheme of the Act. The legislative policy is enumerated with sufficient clearness in the Minimum Wages Act. The Government is merely charged with the duty of implementing that policy. There is no basis for saying that the legislature had abdicated any of its legislative functions. The legislature has prescribed two different procedures for collecting the necessary data. One contained in Section 5 (1) (a) and the other in Section 5 (1) (b). In either case it is merely a procedure for gathering the necessary information. The Government is not bound by the advice given by the Committee appointed under Section 5 (1) (a). Discretion to select one of the two procedures prescribed for collecting the data is advisedly left to the Government.

Which procedure should be adopted in any particular employment depends on the nature of the employment and the information the Government has in its possession about that employment. Hence, the powers conferred on the Government cannot be considered as either unguided or arbitrary. It cannot therefore be said that the power conferred under Section 5 (1) is an arbitrary power. (Held that the power was not arbitrarily exercised.) AIR 1955 SC 25 and AIR 1955 SC 33, Rel. on. (Paras 8, 9)

Dictum: "Prima facie the rates fixed for hotel industry appear to be reasonable. We are not convinced that the rates prescribed would adversely affect the industry or even a small unit therein. If they do, then the industry or the unit as the case may be has no right to exist. Freedom of trade does not mean freedom to exploit. The provisions of the Constitution are not erected as the barriers to progress. They provide a plan for orderly progress towards the social order contemplated by the preamble to the Constitution. They do not permit any kind of slavery, social, economic or political. It is a fallacy to think that under our Constitution there are only rights and no duties. While rights conferred under Part III are fundamental, the directives given under Part IV are fundamental in the governance of the country. We see no conflict on the whole between the provisions contained in Part III and Part IV. They are complementary and supplementary to each other. The provisions of Part IV enable the legislatures and the Government to impose various duties on the citizens. The provisions therein are deliberately made elastic because the duties to be imposed on the citizens depend on the extent to which the directive principles are implemented. The mandate of the Constitution is to build a welfare society in which justice social, economic and political shall inform all institutions of our national life. The hopes and aspirations aroused by the Constitution will be belied if the minimum needs of the lowest of our citizens are not met."

(Para 13)

(B) Minimum Wages Act (1948), Section 5 (1) — Power conferred under, is not arbitrary or unguided — Art. 14 of Constitution is not violated.

(Paras 8, 9)

(C) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Natural justice — Principles apply to exercise of administrative power as well.

Dividing line between an administrative power and quasi judicial power is quite thin and is being gradually obliterated. The principles of natural justice apply to the exercise of the administrative powers as well. But those principles are not embodied rules. What particular rule of natural justice, if any, should apply to a given case must depend to a great extent on the facts and circumstances of that case, the frame work of the law under which the inquiry is held and the constitution of the tribunal or body of persons appointed for the purpose. AIR 1970 SC 150, Rel. on.

(Para 14)

(D) Minimum Wages Act (1948), Section 5 (1) — Whether power given to fix minimum wages is administrative or quasi judicial, rules of natural justice apply — Reasonable opportunity held had been given before fixing minimum wages to parties concerned — Order was not vitiated by failure to constitute committee under Sec. 5 (1) (a). (Paras 14, 15)

(E) Minimum Wages Act (1948), Section 5 — Government can fix different minimum wages for different industries or in different localities — The fixation of minimum wages depends on the prevailing economic conditions, the cost of living in a place, the nature of the work to be performed and the conditions in which the work is performed. AIR 1963 SC 806, Foll.

(Para 16)

(F) Minimum Wages Act (1948), Section 3 (3) — Fixing of different rates of minimum wages for different industries or in different localities by dividing State into zones is not opposed to S. 3 (3) or scheme of the Act. (Zones held made on rational basis).

(Para 16)

(G) Constitution of India, Art. 14 — State can fix different rates of minimum wages for different industries or different localities. (Para 16)

(H) Minimum Wages Act (1948), Section 5 — Notification fixing minimum wage merely saying that if employer supplies free meals to employees, he may deduct the sum mentioned in notification — It is only option given and not duty imposed — Supplying food is amenity — Notification does not fix minimum wages in kind.

(Para 18)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
{1970} AIR 1970 SC 150 (V 57) =

1969-2 SCC 262, A. K. Karapalk
v Union of India 14

{1963} AIR 1963 SC 806 (V 50) =

(1963) Supp 1 SCR 524, M/s.
Bhikusa Yamas Kshatriya v.
Sangamner Akola Taluka Bidi
Kamgar Union 16

{1962} AIR 1962 SC 12 (V 49) =

1962-1 SCR 946, U. Unnichoyl
v. State of Kerala 10

{1955} AIR 1955 SC 25 (V 42) =

1955-1 SCR 735, Edward Mills
Co. Ltd., Beawar v. State of Ajmer 10

{1955} AIR 1955 SC 33 (V 42) =

1955-1 SCR 752, Bijay Cotton
Mills Ltd. v. State of Ajmer 10

{1954} AIR 1954 SC 545 (V 41) =

1955-1 SCR 448, Surajmall
Mohita and Co. v. A. V. Vishwanatha Sastri 8

In C. A. No. 1917 of 1967: Mr. A. K. Sen, Sr. Advocate (Mr. R. Gopalakrishnan, Advocate with him), for Appellant; In W. P. No. 207 of 1967: Mr. S. T. Desai, Sr. Advocate (M/s S. N. Prasad and R. B. Datar, Advocates with him), for Petitioners; In C. A. No. 1617 of 1967 and Respondent No. 1 in W. P. No. 207 of 1967: Mr. Niren De, Attorney General, for India, (M/s S. S. Javali and S. P. Nayar, Advocates with him), for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2; In W. P. No. 207 of 1967: Mr. S. S. Khanduja Advocate, for Respondent No. 2; In W. P. No. 207 of 1967: Mr. R. Gopalakrishnan Advocate, for Intervener.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by HEGDE, J.:—The above-mentioned appeal by certificate as well as the petition under Art. 32 of the Constitution raise identical questions of law for decision. In both these proceedings the validity of the notification issued by the Government of Mysore in S. O 1038, dated the 1st June, 1967 fixing the minimum wages of different classes of employees in residential hotels and eating houses in the State of Mysore, under the provisions of the Minimum Wages Act, 1948 (to be hereinafter referred to as the Act) is called into question. The Civil Appeal arises from the decision of the High Court of Mysore rejecting the various contentions advanced on behalf of some of the hotel owners questioning the validity of the impugned notification. The writ petition is filed by the All Mysore Hotels Association, Bangalore and the Madras Woodland Hotel raising these very contentions.

2. The impugned notification was challenged on several grounds before the High Court but in this Court only some of those grounds were pressed. The grounds urged in this Court are:

(1) Section 5 (1) of the Act is violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution as it confers unguided and uncontrolled discretion on the Government to follow either of the alternative procedures prescribed in clauses (a) and (b) of that sub-section.

(2) The provisions of the Act are unconstitutional as they confer arbitrary power without guidance to the Central and the State Governments concerned to fix minimum rates of wages and thus interfere with the freedom of trade guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (g) of our Constitution.

(3) It was incumbent on the Government to appoint a Committee under Sec. 5 (1) (a) of the Act to inquire into and advise it in the matter of fixing minimum wages. Its failure to do so has resulted in fixing minimum wages arbitrarily.

(4) Fixing of minimum wages under the provisions of the Act being a quasi-judicial act, the Government's failure to observe the principles of natural justice has vitiated its decision.

(5) It was not permissible for the Government to fix different minimum wages in different industries.

(6) The division of the State into zones and fixing different rates of minimum wages for different zones was impermissible under the Act.

(7) The division of the State into zones was not done on any rational basis and

(8) The valuation of the food to be provided to the employees is unreasonably low and the same was done without the authority of law.

3. The Act came to be enacted to give effect to the resolutions passed by the minimum wages fixing Machinery Convention held at Geneva in 1928. The relevant resolutions of the Convention are embodied in Arts. 223 to 228 of the International Labour Code. The object of these resolutions as stated in Art. 224 was to fix minimum wages in industries "in which no arrangements exist for the effective regulation of wages by collective agreements or otherwise and wages are exceptionally low". The Central Legislature enacted the Act in 1948 and it came into force on March 15, 1948. The long title to the Act says that it is an Act for fixing minimum rates of wages for certain employments. The preamble to the Act says that "it is expedient to provide for fixing minimum rates of wages in certain employments". Section 2 defines certain terms. Section 3 empowers the appropriate Government which expression is defined in Sec. 2 (b) to fix the minimum rates of wages payable to the employees employed in an employment specified in Part I or in part II of the Schedule and in any employment added to either part in exercise of the powers granted under Section 27 of the Act. Clause (b) of Sec. 3 (2) empowers the appropriate Government to review at such intervals as it may think fit, such intervals not exceeding five years, minimum rates of wages so fixed and revise the minimum rates, if necessary. Sub-section (3) of that section stipulates that in fixing or revising minimum rates of wages under that section different minimum rates of wages may be fixed in different scheduled employments for different classes of work in the same scheduled employment for adults, adolescents, children and apprentices and for different localities. Section 4 prescribes the different methods in which the minimum rates of wages can be fixed. Section 5 is important for our present purpose. It reads thus:

"(1) In fixing minimum rates of wages in respect of any scheduled employment for the first time under this Act or in revising minimum rates of wages so fixed, the appropriate Government shall either—

(a) appoint as many committees and sub-committees as it considers necessary to hold enquiries and advise it in respect of such fixation or revision, as the case may be, or

(b) by notification in the Official Gazette, publish its proposals for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby and specify a date, not less than two months from the date of the notification on which the proposals will be taken into consideration.

(2) After considering the advice of the committee or committees appointed under clause (a) of sub-section (1) or as the case may be, all representations received by it before the date specified in the notification under clause (b) of that sub-section, the appropriate Government shall, by notification in the Official Gazette, fix or, as the case may be, revise the minimum rates of wages in respect of each scheduled employment, and unless such notification otherwise provides, it shall come into force on the expiry of three months from the date of its issue:

Provided that where the appropriate Government proposes to revise the minimum rates of wages by the mode specified in clause (b) of sub-sec. (1), the appropriate Government shall consult the Advisory Board also".

4. Section 7 says that for the purpose of co-ordinating the work of committees and sub-committees appointed under Sec. 5 and for advising it generally in the matter of fixing and revising the rates of wages, the appropriate Government should appoint an Advisory Board. Section 8 provides for the appointment of a Central Advisory Board. Section 9 prescribes the composition of the various committees and sub-committees under Section 5 and the Advisory Boards under Sections 7 and 8. Section 11 authorises the appropriate Government to fix wages in kind under certain circumstances and to fix its value in terms of money. Section 12 stipulates that the employer shall pay to every employee engaged in a scheduled employment the minimum rates of wages fixed by the notification. The other provisions of the Act except Sec. 27 are not relevant for our present purpose. Section 27 empowers the appropriate Government to add to either part of the Schedule any employment in respect of which it is of opinion that the minimum rates of wages should be fixed under the Act.

5. The Schedule to the Act as it originally stood did not include residential hotels and eating houses but they were brought into Part 1 of the Schedule by the State Government on June 18, 1959 in exercise of its powers under Sec. 27.

6. The State Government of Mysore fixed the minimum rates of wages to different categories of employees in residential hotels and eating houses situate within the municipal limits of Bangalore, Mysore, Hubli, Mangalore and Belgaum as well as in the area of the Kolar Gold Fields Sanitary Board as per its notification published on June 16, 1960. That notification was quashed by the High Court of Mysore on November 10, 1961, at the instance of some of the proprietors of residential hotels and eating houses in proceedings under Art. 226 of the Constitution on the sole ground that as the notification in question applied only to certain parts of the State and not to the whole of it, it was invalid. A fresh notification under Sec. 5 (1) (b) of the Act containing certain proposals was issued by the State Government for fixing minimum wages for different classes of employees in residential hotels and eating houses on December 9, 1964 but no further action was taken on the basis of that notification. On October 28, 1966, the State Government after consulting the Mysore State Minimum Wages Advisory Board published in the Official Gazette fresh proposals under Sec. 5 (1) (b) for fixing minimum wages for different categories of employees in residential hotels and eating houses in the State. The parties affected were called upon to submit their representations regarding those proposals. Various representations from the interested parties were received. Thereafter the Minister for Labour summoned a meeting of the interested parties on April 27, 1967 for considering those proposals. That meeting was attended by the representatives of the employers as well as the employees. It was also attended by the representatives of various hotel owners' associations in the State. At the meeting the employers' representatives pleaded that the minimum wages proposed to be fixed are excessive but the representatives of the employees asserted that the proposed rates are low and that they should be enhanced. After considering the written as well as the oral representations made by the concerned parties, the impugned notification was issued. The minimum wages fixed under that notification is somewhat higher than that proposed.

7. We have earlier referred to the circumstances under which the Act came to be enacted as well as the objectives intended to be achieved by the Act. In that context we may also refer to a passage in the report of the Committee on Fair Wages appointed by the Central Government. In paragraph 8 of that report, it is observed:

"The demand for the fixation of the minimum wage arose, in the first instance, out of the clamour for the eradication of the evils of 'sweating'. Thus in the early days, the operation of the minimum wage legislation was confined to employments which paid unduly low wages. There has since been increasing demand for the fixation of minimum wages so as to cover even non-sweated industries particularly those in which labour is unorganised or is only weakly organised. The International Convention of 1928 prescribes the setting up of minimum wage fixing machinery in industries in which 'no arrangements exist for the effective regulation of wages by collective agreement or otherwise and wages are exceptionally low'. The Minimum Wages Act passed by the Indian Legislature last year was found necessary on both these grounds.

In foreign countries, particularly Australia, New Zealand, the United States of America and Canada, where the national wealth is high, the living wage forms the primary basis of the minimum wage. In these countries there is not much distinction between the two. The I.L.O. monograph on the Minimum Wage-Fixing Machinery contains the following passage on the subject:

"The basis specified in various laws include the living wage basis, and that of fixing minimum wages in any trade in relation to the wages paid to workers in the same trades in other districts or in relation to the wages paid to workers of similar grade in other trades. There is a third important basis, namely, the capacity of the individual industry or of Industry in general, which, though sometimes not expressly mentioned in minimum wage laws, must always be taken into account in practice.....A close relation exists between them. As a basis for wage-fixing it would be valueless to make an estimate of a living wage beyond the capacity of industry to pay. Here capacity of industry as a whole, and—not of each separate industry or branch is to be understood."

From this analysis of the bases of fixing of the minimum wage, it will be seen that, as a rule, though the living wage is the target, it has to be tempered, even in advanced countries, by other considerations, particularly the general level of wages in other industries and the capacity of industry to pay. This view has been accepted by the Bombay Textiles Labour Inquiry Committee which says that "the living wage basis affords an absolute external standard for the determination of the minimum" and that "where a living wage criterion has been used in the giving of an award or the fixing of a wage, the decision has always been tempered by other considerations of a practical character."

In India, however, the level of the national income is so low at present that it is generally accepted that the country cannot afford to prescribe by law a minimum wage which would correspond to the concept of the living wage as described in the preceding paragraphs. What then should be the level of minimum wages which can be sustained by the present stage of the country's economy? Most employers and some Provincial Governments consider that the minimum wage can at present be only a bare subsistence wage. In fact, even one important all-India organization of employees has suggested that "a minimum wage is that wage which is sufficient to cover the bare physical needs of a worker and his family." Many others, however, who have replied to our questionnaire, consider that a minimum wage should also provide for some other essential requirements such as a minimum of education, medical facilities and other amenities. We consider that a minimum wage must provide not merely for the bare sustenance of life but for the preservation of the efficiency of the worker. For this purpose, the minimum wage must also provide for some measure of education, medical requirements and amenities."

8. It is now convenient to examine the various contentions advanced on behalf of the appellant and the petitioners. It was contended that Section 5 (1) of the Act is violative of Article 14 of the Constitution as it confers unguided and uncontrolled discretion to the Government to follow either of the two alternative procedures prescribed in that section in the matter of fixing minimum wages. It was urged that under clause (a) of Section 5 (1) the appropriate Government is required to appoint a committee representing all interests to hold a detailed enquiry regarding the concerned employment before advising the Government in the matter of fixing minimum wages but under clause (b) of Section 5 (1) all that the appropriate Government need do is to publish by notification in the Official Gazette its proposals for the information of the persons likely to be affected by those proposals and specify a date not less than two months from the date of the notification on which the proposals will be taken into consideration. It was urged that if the procedure prescribed in Section 5 (1) (a) is adopted it would be advantageous to the employers because in the committee to be appointed, there will be the representatives of the employers who know the difficulties of the employers and hence are in a position to acquaint their colleagues about the same but if the procedure prescribed in Section 5 (1) (b) is followed, the affected parties can only submit their written representations followed by some nominal oral representation in a crowded meeting. While dealing with that topic, assistance was sought from the rule laid down by this Court in Suraj Mall Mohta and Co. v. A. V. Visvanatha Sastri, 1955-1 SCR 448 = (AIR 1954 SC 545) and the other decisions of this Court reiterating that rule. It is true that this Court has firmly ruled that the procedural inequality, if real and substantial is also within the vice of Article 14. But then, before a power can be held to be bad the same should be an unguided and unregulated one. But if a power is given to an authority to have recourse to different procedures under different circumstances, that power cannot be considered as an arbitrary power. It must also be remembered that power under Section 5 (1) is given to the State Government and not to any petty official. The State Government can be trusted to exercise that power to further the purposes of the Act. It is not the law that the guidance for the exercise of a power should be gatherable from one of the provisions in the Act. It can be gathered from the circumstances that led to the enactment of the law in question i.e., the mischief that was intended to be remedied, the preamble to the Act or even from the scheme of the Act.

9. We have earlier noticed the circumstances under which the Act came to be enacted. Its main object is to prevent sweated labour as well as exploitation of unorganised labour. It proceeds on the basis that it is the duty of the State to see that at least minimum wages are paid to the employees irrespective of the capacity of the industry or unit to pay the same. The mandate of Article 43 of the Constitution is that the State should endeavour to secure by suitable legislation or economic organisation or in any other way, to all workers agricultural, industrial or otherwise, work, a living wage, conditions of work ensuring a decent standard of life and full enjoyment of leisure and social and cultural opportunities. The fixing of minimum wages is just the first step in that direction. In course of time the State has to take many more steps to implement that mandate. As seen earlier that resolution of the Geneva Convention of 1928 which had been accepted by this country called upon the covenanting States to fix minimum wages for the employees in employments where the labour is unorganized or where the wages paid are low. Minimum wage does not mean wage just sufficient for bare sustenance. At present the conception of a minimum wage is a wage which is somewhat intermediate to a wage which is just sufficient for bare sustenance and a fair wage. That concept includes not only the wage sufficient to meet the bare sustenance of an employee and his family. It also includes expenses necessary for his other primary needs such as medical expenses, expenses to meet some education for his children, and in some cases transport charges etc. — see U. Unnichoyi v. State of Kerala, 1962-1 SCR 946 = (AIR 1962 SC 12). The concept of minimum wage is likely to undergo a change with the growth of our economy and with the change in the standard of living. It is not a static concept. Its concomitants must necessarily increase with the progress of the society. It is likely to differ from place to place and from industry to industry. That is clear from the provisions of the Act itself and is inherent in the very concept. That being the case it is absolutely impossible for the legislature to undertake the task of fixing minimum wages in respect of any industry much less in respect of an employment. That process must necessarily be left to the Government. Before minimum wages in any employment can be fixed it will be necessary to collect considerable data. That cannot be done by the legislature. It can be best done by the Government. The legislature has determined the legislative policy and formulated the same as a binding rule of conduct. The legislative policy is enumerated with sufficient clearness. The Government is merely charged with the duty of implementing that policy. There is no basis for saying that the legislature had abdicated any of its legislative functions. The legislature has prescribed two different procedures for collecting the necessary data, one contained in Section 5 (1) (a) and the other in Section 5 (1) (b). In either case it is merely a procedure for gathering the necessary information. The Government is not bound by the advice given by the committee appointed under Section 5 (1) (a). Discretion to select one of the two procedures prescribed for collecting the data is advisedly left to the Government. In the case of a particular employment, the Government may have sufficient data in its possession to enable it to formulate proposals under Section 5 (1) (b). Therefore it may not be necessary for it to constitute a committee to tender advice to it but in the case of another employment it may not be in possession of sufficient data. Therefore it might be necessary for it to constitute a committee to collect the data and tender its advice. If the Government is satisfied that it has enough material before it to enable it to proceed under Section 5 (1) (b) it can very well do so. Which procedure should be adopted in any particular employment depends on the nature of the employment and the information the Government has in its possession about that employment. Hence the powers conferred on the Government cannot be considered as either unguided or arbitrary. In the instant case as seen earlier the question of fixing wages for the various categories of employees in residential hotels and eating houses was before the Government from 1960 and the Government had taken various steps in that regard. It is reasonable to assume that by the time the Government published the proposals in pursuance of which the impugned notification was issued, it had before it adequate material on the basis of which it could formulate its proposals. Before publishing those proposals, the Government had consulted the advisory committee constituted under Section 7. Under those circumstances we are unable to accede to the contention that either the power conferred under Section 5 (1) is an arbitrary power or that the same had been arbitrarily exercised.

10. The validity of some of the provisions in the Act including S. 5 came up for consideration by this Court in Edward Mills Co. Ltd., Beawar v. State of Ajmer, 1955-1 SCR 752 = (AIR 1955 SC 33) and in Bijay Cotton Mills Ltd. v. State of Ajmer, 1955-1 SCR 735 = (AIR 1955 SC 25). In the former case, it was observed that the legislative policy is apparent on the face of the enactment. What it aims at is the statutory fixation of the minimum wages with a view to obviate the chances of exploitation of labour. It is to carry out the purpose of the enactment that power has been given to the appropriate Government to decide with reference to local conditions whether it is desirable that minimum wage should be fixed in regard to a particular trade or industry. In the latter case, the validity of Section 5 was assailed on the ground that it is violative of Article 19 (1) (g). That challenge was negated by this Court. Dealing with Section 5 (1) this is what the Court observed therein:

"As regards the procedure for the fixing of minimum wages, the "appropriate Government" has undoubtedly been given very large powers. But it has to take into consideration, before fixing wages, the advice of the committee if one is appointed, or the representations on his proposals made by persons who are likely to be affected thereby. Consultation with advisory bodies has been made obligatory on all occasions of revision of minimum wages, and Section 8 of the Act provides for the appointment of a Central Advisory Board for the purpose of advising the Central as well as the State Government both in the matter of fixing and revision of minimum wages. Such Central Advisory body is to act also as a co-ordinating agent for co-ordinating the work of the different advisory bodies. In the committees or the advisory bodies, the employers and the employees have an equal number of representatives and there are certain independent members besides them who are expected to take a fair and impartial view of the matter. These provisions, in our opinion constitute an adequate safeguard against any hasty or capricious decision by the "appropriate Government". In suitable cases the "appropriate Government" has also been given the power of granting exemptions from the operation of the provisions of this Act."

11. It is true that in those cases the validity of Section 5 was not challenged as being ultra vires Article 14 of the Constitution. But the observations quoted above afford an answer to the plea that the power granted to the Government is an arbitrary power.

12. It was complained that an examination of the various proposals made by the Government ever since 1960 would clearly show that the Government was out to fix fair wages and not minimum wages. From stage to stage it has gone on proposing higher and higher wages and under the impugned notification the wages fixed are higher than those proposed. We were told that if the prescribed rates are sustained, the hotel industry would be crippled and the smaller units in that industry will be driven out of the trade.

13. Our attention was not drawn to any material on record to show that the minimum wages fixed are basically wrong. Prima facie they appear to be reasonable. We are not convinced that the rates prescribed would adversely affect the industry or even a small unit therein. If they do, then the industry or the unit as the case may be has no right to exist. Freedom of trade does not mean freedom to exploit. The provisions of the Constitution are not erected as the barriers to progress. They provide a plan for orderly progress towards the social order contemplated by the preamble to the Constitution. They do not permit any kind of slavery, social economic or political. It is a fallacy to think that under our Constitution there are only rights and no duties. While rights conferred under Part III are fundamental, the directives given under Part IV are fundamental in the governance of the country. We see no conflict on the whole between the provisions contained in Part III and Part IV. They are complementary and supplementary to each other. The provisions of Part IV enable the legislatures and the Government to impose various duties on the citizens. The provisions therein are deliberately made elastic because the duties to be imposed on the citizens depend on the extent to which the directive principles are implemented. The mandate of the Constitution is to build a welfare society in which justice social, economic and political shall inform all institutions of our national life. The hopes and aspirations aroused by the Constitution will be belied if the minimum needs of the lowest of our citizens are not met.

14. It was urged on behalf of the hotel owners that the power conferred to fix the minimum wage on the appropriate Government under S. 5 (1) is a quasi-judicial power and in exercising that power, it was incumbent on the appropriate Government to observe the principles of natural justice. The Government having failed to observe those principles, the fixation of wages made is liable to be struck down. It is unnecessary for our present purpose to go into the question whether the power given under the Act to fix minimum wages is a quasi-judicial power or an administrative power. As observed by this Court in A. K. Karaipak v. Union of India, 1969-2 SCC 262 = (AIR 1970 SC 150), the dividing line between an administrative power and quasi-judicial power is quite thin and is being gradually obliterated. It is further observed therein that principles of natural justice apply to the exercise of the administrative powers as well. But those principles are not embodied rules. What particular rule of natural justice, if any, should apply to a given case must depend to a great extent on the facts and circumstances of that case, the framework of the law under which the inquiry is held and the constitution of the tribunal or body of persons appointed for the purpose.

15. Taking into consideration the provisions of the Act, the objective behind the Act, the purposes intended to be achieved and the high authority on whom the power is conferred, we have no doubt that the procedure adopted was adequate and effective. We have equally no doubt that reasonable opportunity had been given to all the concerned parties to represent their case. We are unable to agree that the impugned order is vitiated because of the Government's failure to constitute a committee under Section 5 (1) (a). We see no substance in the contention that the Government is not competent to enhance the rate of wages mentioned in the proposals published. If it has power to reduce those rates, as desired by the employers, it necessarily follows that it has power to enhance them. There is no merit in the contention that the Government must go on publishing proposals after proposals until a stage is reached where no change whatsoever is necessary to be made in the last proposal made.

16. The contention that the Government has no power to fix different minimum wages for different industries or in different localities is no more available in view of the decision of this Court in M/s. Bhaikusa Yamasa Khatriya v. Sangamner Akola Taluka Bidh Kamgar Union, (1963) Supp 1

SCR 524 = (AIR 1963 SC 806). The fixation of minimum wages depends on the prevailing economic conditions, the cost of living in a place, the nature of the work to be performed and the conditions in which the work is performed. The contention that it was impermissible for the Government to divide the State into several zones is opposed to Section 3 (3) as well as to the scheme of the Act.

17. On the basis of the material before us we are unable to say that the various zones had not been made on any rational basis. The Government has given good reasons in support of the steps taken by it. Bangalore is the capital of the State and Mangalore is a major port. Therefore they may stand on a different footing. In matter like the preparation of zones we have to trust the State Government unless it is shown that collateral considerations have influenced its decision. No such plea was taken. The argument based on cost of living index showing that cost of living index was higher in several other towns in the State than Bangalore or Mangalore is not a well-founded argument. The cost of living is one thing, cost of living index is another. What is relevant is the former and not the latter. The latter depends on the base year, which is not the same in all the towns and the prices of certain selected goods in each of the towns concerned in the base year and thereafter which again is likely to differ from town to town.

18. The contention relating to the value of the food that may be supplied to the employee is not merely petty, it is misconceived as well. For example the employers contend that a minimum wage of Rs. 80 per month in Bangalore and Mangalore for a cleaner is excessive; at the same time they assert that the computation of the value of the food to be supplied to him at Rs. 40 per month is not adequate. They fail to see the obvious contradictions in those pleas. In fixing minimum wages, a family of three members has to be taken into consideration. Further the food is not the only item taken into consideration. We have earlier referred to the other components of a minimum wage. Therefore if the value of the food supplied has to be increased, minimum wages also will have to be increased.

Further the impugned notification does not authorise under Section 11 (2) the payment of any portion of wages in kind. It merely says that if the employer supplies free meals to any employee, he may deduct the sum mentioned in the notification. It is only an option given and not a duty imposed. Therefore the procedure prescribed in Rule 21 of the Rules framed under the Act is inapplicable to the facts of the case before us. The relevant rule is Rule 22 (2) (v) i.e., the valuation of an amenity. We fail to see why the supplying of food is not an amenity.

19. In the result the appeal and the writ petition fail. They are dismissed with costs. Hearing fee one set. The owners of residential hotels and eating houses are permitted to pay the arrears of minimum wages accrued up till now within six months from this date subject to the condition they pay interest on those arrears from the due dates till payment at 6 per cent per annum.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2051 (V 57 C 436)

(From Kerala: 1966 Ker LT 881)

J. C. SHAH, V. RAMASWAMI AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

V. Venugopala Varma Rajah, Appellant v. The Commissioner of Income-tax, Kerala, Respondent.

A. K. L. K. M. Vishnudatta Antharjanam, Intervener.

Civil Appeal No. 810 of 1967, D/-13-2-1969 and 24-9-1969.

Income-tax Act (1922), Section 4 — Income — Revenue receipt — Sale of tree trunks — Trees so cut, capable of regeneration—Receipt from sale of trunks is in the nature of income and subject to special exemption under Section 4 (3) (viii) is liable to tax — By sale of trunks assessee does not realise part of his capital. (Para 19)
Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1964) 1964-51 ITR 129 = ILR
(1964) 1 Ker 458, State of Kerala v. Karimtharuvi Tea Estate Ltd. 17
(1964) 1964-53 ITR 681 (Mys),
Commr. of Income-tax, Mysore
v. H. B. Van Ingen 18

- (1961) 1961-41 ITR 313 (Bom), Commr. of Income-tax v. N. T.
Patwardhan 4, 16
- (1952) AIR 1952 Mad 47 (V 39)
= (1951) 20 ITR 385, Fring-ford Estates Ltd. Calicut v.
Commr. of Income-tax, Madras 15
- (1947) AIR 1947 Pat 115 (V 34) =
(1946) 14 ITR 673, Kamakshya
Narain Singh v. Commr. of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa 14
- (1945) AIR 1945 Oudh 35 (V 32) =
(1945) 13 ITR 74, Maharaja of Kapurthala v. Commr. of Income-tax, C. P. and U. P. 13
- (1930) AIR 1930 All 389 (V 17) =
ILR 52 All 419, In re Ram
Prasad 12
- (1930) AIR 1930 Mad 764 (V 17) =
ILR 54 Mad 21 (FB), Commr. of Income-tax, Madras v. Manavedan Tirumalpad 11
- Mr. R. Thiagarajan, Advocate for Appellant; Mr. S. T. Desai, Senior Advocate, (M/s. R. H. Dhebar and B. D. Sharma, Advocates, with him), for Respondent; Mr. Sardar Bahadur, Advocate for Intervener.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.: (13-2-1969) In computing the income of the appellant's father to tax for the assessment year 1959-60 the Incometax officer included Rs. 75,000 received under an agreement for cutting and removing trees from 500 acres of Mangayam Katchihode forest. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner after calling for a report on certain facts confirmed the order. But the Tribunal held that the receipt was of a capital nature and deleted it from the taxable income.

2. At the instance of the Commissioner of Income-tax, the Tribunal referred the following question to the High Court of Kerala:

"Whether on the facts and in the circumstances of the case, the Incometax Appellate Tribunal was correct in holding that Rs. 75,000 being income from felling of trees from forests is not subject to income-tax?"
The High Court answered the question in the negative.

3. We are of the view that the facts found by the Tribunal are not sufficient to enable us to record an answer to the question referred. The Income-tax officer held that the income was taxable because 500 acres of forest land was leased for "clear felling" by the father of the appellant and this fetched an income of Rupees 75,000. What the expression "clear felling" meant was not investigated by the Income-tax officer. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner in dealing with the contention raised by the appellant that the receipt was of the nature of a capital, observed:

"The claim is based on the reasoning that the clear felling of forest trees amounts to sterilisation of a capital asset. In other words clear felling is said to involve total destruction of the forest. It is admitted that the trees are of spontaneous growth and it has not been established that removal of trees has in any way affected the value of the property. As a matter of fact, clear felling is resorted to make the land more productive and more valuable. At any rate the claim has not been substantiated beyond doubt and hence there is no scope for any relief."

4. The Tribunal relying upon the observation of the Income-tax officer
"that the trees were not cut together with the roots but only 6" above the ground and that they were later on destroyed" held that there was "nothing to show that there was a diminution of capital assets. On the other hand, the Income-tax officer had given a clear finding that this was a case of "clear felling." After making an extensive quotation from the judgment of the High Court of Bombay in Commr.
of Income-tax v. N. T. Patwardhan, (1961) 41 ITR 313 (Bom), the Tribunal stated that the observations applied to the facts in the case before them, and on that account they upheld the claim of the appellant.

5. The High Court observed that it was agreed that the Mangayam Katchihode forest was within the ambit of the Madras Preservation of Private Forests Act, 1949, and the statutory rules on the subject and that the expression "clear felling is an expression with a definite and specific meaning as far as such forests are concerned". They then proceeded to quote Rule 7 framed under the Madras Preservation of Private Forests
Act, 1949, and after setting out conditions (b) and (c) observed that
"the felling of the trees under the "clear felling" method will not permit a removal of the trees along with their roots. On the other hand, the clear indications were that the felling of the trees under the clear felling method should be done in such a way as to permit the regeneration and future growth of the trees concerned. In other words, what is contemplated by the clear felling method is not sterilisation of an asset but the removal of a growth above a particular height leaving intact the roots and the stumps in such a manner as to ensure regeneration, future growth, further felling and subsequent income." On that view the Court held that the receipt of Rs. 75,000 was a revenue receipt and not a capital receipt as held by the Appellate Tribunal.

6. The departmental authorities, the Tribunal and the High Court have expressed different views on the import of the expression "clear felling" and about the true effect of the agreement. The Income-tax officer taxed the amount of Rs. 75,000 on the footing that the 500 acres of forest lands were leased for clear felling. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner held that the trees being of spontaneous growth and the felling of the trees not having affected the value of the property as a result of the clearance, the lands became more productive and the receipt was a revenue income. The Tribunal held that the case being one of "clear felling" and the trees having been cut 6" above the ground and that they were later on destroyed" it was a case of clear felling and the receipt was of a capital nature. The High Court was of the view that the "clear felling" of forest lands meant cutting trees and not removal of the roots so that there would be regeneration, future growth, of the roots and the stumps and on that account the receipt was of revenue nature.

7. It appears that before the Income-tax Officer the agreement dated September 11, 1957 was not produced. After the Appellate Assistant Commissioner remanded the case to the Income-tax Officer the latter submitted the "remand report" and at that time the agreement was produced. The Tribunal in support of its conclusion referred to the preamble of the document and the conditions thereof. The learned Judges of the High Court observed that they did not place any reliance on the extracts in the lease given in paragraph 2 of the statement of the case for coming to the conclusion they had reached. Why the High Court thought it fit to discard the recitals is not clear from the record.

8. The facts found being not clear, it is difficult to record any conclusion whether the receipt was of a revenue nature or of a capital nature. We therefore call upon the Tribunal to submit to this Court a supplementary statement setting out the terms of the agreement between the father of the appellant relating to the rights conveyed to the lessees in the forest lands and especially about the import of the term relating to "clear felling". The Tribunal will submit the supplementary statement of the case only on the basis of the evidence on the record and will not take any additional evidence. The report to be submitted within three months from the date on which the papers reach the Tribunal.

(Judgment delivered on 24-9-1969 after the return of supplementary statement:)

9. By our order dated February 13, 1969, we called for a supplementary statement of the case setting out the terms of the agreement conveying the rights in the forest trees to the lessees, and the true import of the expression "clear felling". The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal has submitted a supplementary statement of the case. The Tribunal has set out the relevant terms of the agreement and has also observed that the import of the expression "clear felling" is that "all trees except casuarina are to be felled at a height not exceeding six inches from the ground, the barks being left intact on the stump and adhering to it all round the stump without being torn off or otherwise changed."

10. There is no suggestion that there were any casuarina trees in the forest lands let out to the lessees. It is common ground also that the trees in the forest were of spontaneous growth. The Tribunal has found that by the use of the expression "clear felling" it was stipulated that the trees are to be cut so that 6" of the trunk with the barks intact and adhering to it all round the stump is left. This is with a view to permit regeneration of the trees.

11. The question whether receipts from sale of trees by an owner of the land who is not carrying on business in timber may be regarded as income liable to tax has given rise to some difference of opinion in the High Courts. In Commr. of Income-tax, Madras v. T. Manavedan Tirumalpad, ILR 54 Mad 21 = (AIR 1930 Mad 764) (FB), a Full Bench of the Madras High Court held that the receipts from sale of timber trees by the owner of un-assessed forest lands in Malabar were revenue and not capital. The Court observed that if income from the sale of coal from a coal-mine or stone won from a quarry or from the sale of paddy grown on land be regarded as income, but for the special exemption granted under the Income-tax Act, there is no logical reason for holding that income from sale of trees is not income liable to tax.

12. In re, Ram Prasad, ILR 52 All 419 = (AIR 1930 All 389), a Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court held that receipt from sale of timber is income liable to be taxed and is not a capital receipt. The case arose under the Government Trading Taxation Act 3 of 1926.

13. In Maharaja of Kapurthala v. Commr. of Income-tax, C. P. & U. P., (1945) 13 ITR 74 = (AIR 1945 Oudh 35), the Oudh Chief Court held that net receipt from the sale of forest trees is income liable to income-tax, even though the forest may be gradually exhausted by fellings. The Court further observed that income from the sale of forest trees of spontaneous growth growing on land which is assessed to land revenue is not agricultural income within the meaning of Sec. 2 (1) (a) of the Income-tax Act and is not exempt from income-tax under Sec. 4 (3) (viii) of the Act.

14. In Kamakshya Narain Singh v. Commr. of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa, (1946) 14 ITR 673 = (AIR 1947 Pat 115), a similar view was expressed by the Patna High Court.

15. In Fringford Estates Ltd., Calicut v. Commr. of Income-tax, Madras, (1951) 20 ITR 585 = (AIR 1952 Mad 47), it was held that profits realised from the sale of timber were trade profits and were liable to income-tax. In that case the assessee Company formed with the object of purchasing, clearing and improving of estates and the cultivation and sale of tea, coffee etc., in such estates, purchased a tract of land part of which had already been cultivated with tea and the rest was a jungle capable of being cleared and made fit for plantation. The Company entered into an agreement with a timber merchant for clearing a part of the forest of all trees and for sale of the trees in the market. This was held to be a part of the business activity of the Company.

16. The cases on the other side of the line are to be found in (1961) 41 ITR 313 (Bom), in which a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court held that when old trees which stood on the land of the assessee were disposed of with their roots "once and for all", the receipts were capital. The Court observed (p. 318):

"The asset of the man was the land with the wild growth of trees on it. If the land with the trees had been sold, there could have been no doubt that the sale was a realisation of capital and it would not have been possible to argue that the transaction in so far as it involved a sale of the trees was a sale producing income and the remaining part of the transaction was a capital sale. In the present case the land is retained by the assessee but a part of the asset is disposed of in its entirety by selling the trees with roots once and for all."

17. In State of Kerala v. Karimtharuvi Tea Estate Ltd., (1964) 51 ITR 129 (Ker) the Kerala High Court held in a case arising under the Kerala Agricultural Income-tax Act, 1950, that the amount realised by sale as firewood of old and useless gravelia trees grown and maintained in tea gardens for the purpose of affording shade to tea plants is capital receipt and not revenue receipt. The Court observed:

"The gravelia trees were grown and maintained for the sole purpose of providing shade to the tea bushes in the tea estates of the assessee. That such shade is essential for the proper cultivation of tea cannot be disputed and the trees should hence be considered to be as much a part of the capital assets of the company as the tea bushes themselves or the equipment in its factories. Some of the gravelia trees became old and useless with the efflux of time and they naturally had to be cut down and sold. The sale proceeds of such trees cannot possibly amount to a revenue receipt."

18. In Commr. of Income-tax, Mysore v. H. B. Van Ingen, (1964) 53 ITR 681 (Mys), the Mysore High Court held that the assessee who had purchased a coffee estate of which a part had been planted with coffee plants and the rest was jungle, and had cleared the jungle for the purpose of planting coffee and had sold the trees felled, price realised by the sale of the trees was a capital and not a revenue receipt, because the trees had grown spontaneously, and the assessee had purchased the estate including the trees.

19. It is not necessary for the purpose of this case to enter upon a detailed analysis of the principle underlying the decisions and to resolve the conflict. On the finding in the present case it is clear that the trees were not removed with roots. The stumps of the trees were allowed to remain in the land so that the trees may regenerate. If a person sells merely leaves or fruits of the trees or even branches of the trees it would be difficult (subject to the special exemption under Section 4 (3) (viii) of the Income-tax Act, 1922) to hold that the realization is not of the nature of income. Where the trunks are cut so that the stumps remain intact and capable of regeneration, receipts from sale of the trunks would be in the nature of income. It is true that the tree is a part of the land. But by selling a part of the trunk, the assessee does not necessarily realise a part of his capital. We need not consider whether in case there is a sale of the trees with the roots so that there is no possibility of regeneration, it may be said that the realisation is in the nature of capital. That question does not arise in the present case.

20. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2055
(V 57 C 437)

(From Kerala: ILR (1969) 1 Ker 329)
J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. GROVER JJ.

A. K. T. K. M. Vishnudatta Andhar-janam represented by D. V. Nam-budiripad Desamangalam, Appellant v. The Commissioner of Agricultural Income Tax, Trivandrum, Respondent.

Civil Appeals Nos. 2327 and 2328 of 1968, D/- 5-5-1970.

Kerala Agricultural Income Tax Act (22 of 1950) S. 2 (a) — Receipt from trees cut from roots and removed — Not income but capital and exempt from taxation. ILR (1969) 1 Ker 329, Reversed.

Profit motive is not decisive of the question whether a particular receipt is capital or income. An accretion to capital does not become taxable income merely because an asset is acquired in the hope that it may be sold at a profit. Trees so long as they are uncut form a part of the land. If they are cut with roots once and for all a part of the assets is disposed of. The sale proceeds on account of their disposal cannot constitute revenue because by removing the roots the source from which fresh growth of trees can take place is also removed. The sale of such trees thus affects capital structure and cannot give rise to a revenue receipt. Receipt from such sale is exempt from taxation. ILR (1969) 1 Ker 329, Reversed; (1961) 41 ITR 313 (Bom), Rel. on; AIR 1932 PC 138, Applied; AIR 1970 SC 2051, Ref. (Para 5)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1970) AIR 1970 SC 2051 (V 57) =

Civil Appeal No. 810 of 1967,
D/- 24-9-1969, V. Venugopala Varma Rajah v. Commr. of Income-tax, Kerala 3

(1961) 41 ITR 313 (Bom), Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay South
v. N. T. Patwardhan 4

(1932) AIR 1932 PC 138 (V 19) =
6 STC 178, Commr. of Incometax, Bengal v. M/s. Shaw
Wallace and Co. 4

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

GROVER, J.—These appeals by special leave from a judgment of the Kerala High Court arise out of the assessment of agricultural income of the assessee made under the Kerala Agricultural Income-tax Act, 1950, hereinafter called the "Act", in respect of the assessment years 1963-64 and 1964-65.

2. For the assessment year 1963-64 the assessee filed a return showing a net agricultural income of Rs. 12,558-76. When the matter came up for bearing before the Agricultural Income-tax Officer another statement showing an amount of Rs. 43,250-00 as income from teak trees was filed. The Agricultural Income-tax Officer disallowed certain expenses and assessed the income for the year 1963-64 at Rs. 62,021-00. For the assessment year 1964-65 a return was filed declaring a net agricultural income of Rs. 25,733-63. No income was shown from the sale of teak trees. The Agricultural Income-tax Officer found that teak trees had been sold for a lump sum of Rs. 76,500-00 out of which Rupees 43,250-00 had been received in the previous year (1963-64) and he included the said amount in that year's income. The balance amount of Rupees 33,250-00 was received in the previous year corresponding to the assessment year 1964-65. In determining the assessable income for that year this amount was added to the income which had been returned and after disallowing certain amount which had been claimed by way of expenses the net income was determined at Rupees 61,041-00. The assessee filed appeals before the Additional Appellate Assistant Commissioner who confirmed the assessment and dismissed the appeals. Further appeals were taken to the Agricultural Income-tax Tribunal. The Tribunal held that the amount in dispute was agricultural income and not capital. The expenses which were claimed were also disallowed. On an application made under Sec. 60 (1) of the Act the following two questions were referred to the High Court:

"1. Whether on the facts and in the circumstances of the case, the receipt from the sale of teak trees for the purpose of planting the area with rubber is capital in nature and exempt from Agricultural Income-tax Act.

2. If the answer to the above question is in the negative, whether the expenses incurred in the prior years for the purpose of obtaining the said agricultural income is allowable as a deduction from the sale proceeds of the trees."

The High Court did not agree with the contention of the assessee that the amounts received by sale of the teak trees constituted capital and were not agricultural income. Certain amounts were, however, allowed as deductions by way of expenses for the assessment year 1963-64.

3. The principal point that has to be determined is whether the sale proceeds of the teak trees constituted capital or revenue. It appears to have been common ground before the High Court that the assessee planted the teak trees sometime in the year 1946-47. The form of the question itself showed that the trees were cut and completely removed from the land together with their roots for the purpose of planting rubber. There was no question of any further regeneration or growth of the trees which had been cut and removed. In other words there was no possibility of recurring income from these trees. In V. Venugopala Varma Rajah v. Commr. of Income-tax, Kerala, Civil Appeal No. 810 of 1967, D/- 24-9-1969 = (reported in AIR 1970 SC 2051) the question before this court was whether trees which had not been removed with the roots and the stumps of which had been allowed to remain in the land was in the nature of income. This is what was observed in that case:

"Where the trunks are cut so that the stumps remain intact and capable of regeneration, receipts from sale of the trunks would be in the nature of income. It is true that the tree is a part of the land. But by selling a part of the trunk, the assessee does not necessarily realise a part of his capital. We need not consider whether in case there is a sale of the trees with the roots so that there is no possibility of regeneration, it may be said that the realisation is in the nature of capital. That question does not arise in the present case."

The present question was apparently left open and was not decided as the point which arose there did not relate to sale of trees of which the roots had also been taken out for the purpose of planting some other kind of trees e.g., rubber as in the present case.

4. It seems to us that the well-known test laid down by the Privy Council in Commr. of Income-tax, Bengal v. Messrs. Shaw, Wallace and Co., 6 STC 178 = (AIR 1932 PC 138) to find out whether a particular receipt is income is not satisfied in the facts and circumstances of the present case. According to that test income connotes a periodical monetary return coming in with some sort of regularity or expected regularity from definite sources. The source is not necessarily one which is expected to be continuously productive but it must be one whose object is the production of a definite return excluding anything in the nature of a mere windfall. Once the teak trees were removed together with their roots and there was no prospect of regeneration or of any production of a return therefrom it could well be said that the source ceased to be one which could produce any income. The Bombay High Court in Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay South v. N. T. Patwardhan, (1961) 41 ITR 313 (Bom), said that from the point of view of a person engaging himself in the business of sale of trees the capital structure would be not only the land on which the trees stood but also the roots of the trees from which the wood yielded income. If the trees were sold off with the roots the capital structure would be affected.

5. The High Court in the judgment under appeal was particularly impressed with the profit motive of the assessee in planting teak trees although that was done several years ago. But it was overlooked that profit motive is not decisive of the question whether a particular receipt is capital or income. An accretion to capital does not become taxable income merely because an asset is acquired in the hope that it may be sold at a profit. It must also be remembered that trees so long as they are uncut form a part of the land. If they are cut with roots once and for all a part of the assets is disposed of. The sale proceeds on account of their disposal cannot constitute revenue because by removing the roots the source from which fresh growth of trees can take place is also removed. The sale of such trees thus affects capital structure and cannot give rise to a revenue receipt.

6. For the reasons given above the answer to the first question will be in the affirmative and in favour of the assessee. It is unnecessary to return any answer to the second question. The appeals are accordingly allowed and the judgment of the High Court is set aside with costs. One hearing fee. Appeals allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2057 (V 57 C 438)

(From Assam: AIR 1967 Assam 83)
J. C. SHAH, ACTG. C. J., V. RAMA-SWAMI AND A. N. GROVER, JJ.

The State of Assam and another (In all the Appeals), Appellants v. D. C. Choudhuri and another, Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 1537 to 1545 of 1968, D/- 7-8-1969.

Assam Agricultural Income-tax Act (9 of 1939), Ss. 30, 19 (1), 19 (2) and 20 (4) — Best judgment assessment of escaped income cannot be made without notice under Section 19 (2) or a notice under Section 30.

In the absence of a return filed by the assessee pursuant to a general notice under Sec. 19 (1) of the Act assessment could be made only after due notice under Section 19 (2) or by initiating proceedings under Sec. 30 of the Act. Section 19 (2) requires that an individual notice is to be served in the financial year. If no notice is served under that section proceedings under Section 30 can be initiated by a notice in accordance with that section within three years of the end of that financial year. AIR 1964 SC 766, Rel. on. (Para 10)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1969) AIR 1969 SC 831 (V 56) =

Civil Appeals Nos. 808 and 809 of 1967, D/- 14-8-1968, State of Assam v. Deva Prasad Barua

8

(1964) AIR 1964 SC 766 (V 51) = (1964) 4 SCR 436, Ghanshyamdas v. Regional Asst. Commr. Sales Tax, Nagpur

9

(1960) 38 ITR 224 (PC), Gokuldas Ratanji Mandavia v. Commr. of Income-tax

11

(1959) AIR 1959 SC 1154 (V 46) = (1960) 1 SCR 114, Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay v. Ranchhoddas Karsondas, Bombay

8

(1951) 20 ITR 432 (Cal), Commr. of Agricultural Income-tax v. Sultan Ali

5

(1948) AIR 1948 Bom 401 (V 35) = (1948) 16 ITR 119.

Harakchand Makanji and Co.
v. Commr. of Income-tax 5, 7

M/s. Naunit Lal and S. N. Choudhuri, Advocates, for Appellants, (In all the Appeals); M. C. Chagla, Senior Advocate (Mr. Sukumar Ghose, Advocate with him), for Respondents, (In all the Appeals.)

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

GROVER, J.—These are nine connected appeals by certificate from a judgment of the High Court of Assam and Nagaland whereby nine petitions filed by the respondents under Art. 226 of the Constitution were allowed and the assessment orders made under the provisions of the Assam Agricultural Income-tax Act, 1939, hereinafter called the 'Act', were quashed.

2. The facts may be first stated. D. C. Choudhuri and S. C. Dutt petitioners in four of the writ petitions owned the Martycherra Tea Estate in the district of Cachar which they had purchased on January 1, 1948. They sold this Estate on July 9, 1953. From January 1, 1948 to July 9, 1953 they carried on the business of cultivation, manufacture and sale of black tea at the said Estate under a partnership of which they were the sole partners. The partnership firm was served with a notice under the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 hereinafter called the Income-tax Act and was assessed to income-tax for the assessment year 1951-52. Appeals were filed against the assessment order before the Appellate Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax and the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal in which substantial reliefs were given to the assessee. After the sale of the Tea Estate these assessee ceased to have any agricultural income. The case of the assessee as laid in the writ petition was that on January 25, 1961 a letter was received by one of them from the Agricultural Income-tax Officer directing both the assessee to furnish returns of their agricultural income for the assessment years 1949-50 to 1953-54. Thereafter they received a notice of demand under Sec. 23 of the Act for payment of a certain amount as agricultural income-tax for the assessment year 1950-51. The assessment order was stated to have been made under Sec. 20 (4) of the Act. Similar orders were made and demands created with regard to the subsequent years, namely, 1951-52, 1952-53 and 1953-54. All these assessment orders were challenged by means of four petitions under Art. 226 of the Constitution. Apart from other points which were raised the main objection taken was that no notice under Sec. 30 of the Act had been served at any time in respect of the assessment covered by the impugned orders. Such a notice could be served only within three years of the end of the financial year. In the absence of service of the aforesaid notice within the prescribed period the Income-tax Officer had no jurisdiction to make any assessment nor could such an assessment be made after the expiry of a period of three years from the end of each financial year.

3. The other set of petitions under Art. 226 of the Constitution was filed by the company — The Eastern Tea Estate Private Ltd. This company owned two tea estates, the Chandana Tea Estate and the Martycherra Tea Estate. The Chandana Tea Estate was purchased from the Indian Tea and Mill Industries Limited in 1950 and the Martycherra Tea Estate was purchased from M/s. D. C. Choudhuri and S. C. Dutt on July 9, 1953. The case of the company was that no notice had been received under Section 19 (2) of the Act for the assessment years 1951-52 to 1955-56 and therefore no returns were filed. On October 9, 1959 the company received a letter from the Agricultural Income-tax Officer, Shillong asking it to submit returns in respect of Martycherra Tea Estate for the assessment year 1950-51 onwards. The company addressed a communication to the Agricultural Income-tax Officer on November 18, 1959 saying, inter alia, that no notice had been served on it under the Act previously and as it also owned the Chandana Tea Estate it proposed to submit returns for the years in respect of which it was liable under the Act. On October 19, 1959, the company received a notice under Sec. 19 (2) of the Act directing it to submit the return in respect of the previous year for Martycherra Tea Estate. In response to the notice the company submitted the return for the year ending December 31, 1958 showing the agricultural income from tea estates. A number of notices were served subsequently and there was further exchange of correspondence. It was alleged in the petitions filed by the company that a letter was received dated January 23, 1960 from the Agricultural Income-tax Officer in which it was stated that the company had failed to submit the returns for the years 1950-51 to 1958-59 and it was asked to show cause why the assessments for these years should not be completed summarily. After further exchange of correspondence the company received an assessment order dated June 19, 1961 in respect of the assessment year 1951-52 which was made under S. 20 (4) of the Act together with a notice of demand for payment of a certain amount of agricultural income-tax. Similar assessment orders were passed under Sec. 20 (4) and demands created in respect of the assessment years 1952-53, 1953-54, 1954-55 and 1955-56. All these assessments were challenged by means of five petitions under Art. 226 of the Constitution. The main point raised in all these petitions was that unless individual notices under Sec. 19 (2) of the Act had been served no assessment could be made under Section 20 (4) except by way of proceedings under Sec. 30 of the Act.

4. In the returns which were filed by the Agricultural Income-tax Officer to all the petitions filed in the High Court it was maintained that the assessee had refused to accept the service of the notices under Ss. 19 (2) and 30 of the Act. The notice under Sec. 19 (1) had been published in the Assam Gazette and the assessee was bound to make a return pursuant to that notice. It was denied that there was any necessity of serving notices under Section 19 (2) or 30 of the Act and that the assessments which had been made were barred by limitation.

5. A Division Bench of the Assam and Nagaland High Court consisting of Mehrotra C.J. and S. K. Dutta J. allowed all the petitions but delivered separate judgments. The learned Chief Justice held that where no return had been filed pursuant to a general notice under Sec. 19 (1), the Agricultural Income-tax Officer was bound to proceed under Sec. 30 and issue a notice under Sec. 19 (2) of the Act within the prescribed period, namely, three years of the end of the financial year. He further held that there was no service of notice on the respondent in respect of the assessment years in question either under Section 19 (2) or Section 30 of the Act. S. K. Dutta, J., came to the same conclusion as the learned Chief Justice but he relied on a judgment of the Calcutta High Court in Commr. of Agricultural Income-tax v. Sultan Ali, (1951) 20 ITR 432 (Cal) in which a dissent had been expressed from the Bombay judgment in Harakchand Makanji and Co. v. Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay City, (1948) 16 ITR 119 = (AIR 1948 Bom 401), on the question as to when proceedings relating to assessment could be regarded as having commenced. According to the learned Judge if no return is made in response to a public notice under Section 19 (1) of the Act and no individual notice is served under Section 19 (2) there would be no pending proceedings and it would be a case of escaped assessment. But this would be so only after the expiry of the financial year. In other words after the publication of the notice under Section 19 (1) there would be no escapement of income till the end of the financial year. Once the financial year is over and no return has been made in response to a notice under Section 19 (1) and no individual notice has been served under S. 19 (2) a case would arise of "escaped assessment for the financial year".

6. The relevant provisions in Chapter IV of the Act may now be noticed. Sections 19 and 20 contain provisions similar to Sections 22 and 23 of the Income-tax Act, 1922. Under S. 19 (1) of the Act the Agricultural Income-tax Officer before the specified date shall give notice by publication in the press, or otherwise, requiring every person whose agricultural income exceeds the limits of taxable income prescribed in Section 6 to furnish within such period not being less than 30 days as may be specified a return in the prescribed form setting forth his agricultural income during the previous year. Sub-section (2) provides that in the case of any person whose total agricultural income is, in the opinion of the Agricultural Income-tax Officer, of such amount as to render such person liable to payment of agricultural income-tax for any financial year, he may serve in that financial year a notice requiring him to furnish within the prescribed period a return. Sub-s. (3) enables a person who has not furnished a return within the time allowed by or under sub-s. (1) or sub-s. (2) to furnish a return or a revised return at any time before the assessment is made. Thus sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) of S. 19 of the Act are identical with and correspond to sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) of Section 22 of the Income-tax Act.

7. Under Section 20 of the Act if the Agricultural Income-tax Officer is satisfied that a return made under Section 19 is correct and complete he has to assess total agricultural income of the assessee according to it. If he has reason to believe that such a return is incorrect or incomplete he has to serve a notice requiring the person who has made the return to produce any evidence on which he may rely in support of the return. After hearing such evidence as the person making the return may produce and such other evidence as the officer may require on specified points the assessment order is to be made. These are the provisions of sub-sections (1), (2) and (3). Sub-section (4) is in the following terms:

"If the principal officer of any company or other person fails to make a return under sub-section (1) or, sub-section (2) of Section 19, as the case may be or having made the return, fails to comply with all the terms of the notice issued under sub-section (2) of this section, or to produce any evidence required under sub-section (3) of this section, the Agricultural Income tax Officer shall make the assessment to the best of his judgment, and determine the sum payable by the assessee on the basis of such assessment:

Provided....."

Turning to Section 23 of the Income-tax Act, sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) thereof correspond to sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) of Section 20 of the Act. Sub-section (4) of Section 23 reads:

"If any person fails to make the return required by any notice given under sub-section (2) of Section 22 and has not made a return or a revised return under sub-section (3) of the same section or fails to comply with all the terms of a notice issued under sub-section (4) of the same section or, having made a return, fails to comply with all the terms of a notice issued under sub-section (2) of this section, the Income-tax Officer shall make the assessment to the best of his judgment and determine the sum payable by the assessee on the basis of such assessment and in the case of a firm may refuse to register it or may cancel its registration if it is already registered:

Provided....."

Section 30 of the Act which corresponds to Section 34 of the Income-tax Act which deals with income escaping assessment may now be reproduced:

"If for any reason any agricultural income chargeable to agricultural income-tax has escaped assessment for any financial year, or has been assessed at too low a rate or has been the subject of undue relief under this Act, the Agricultural Income-tax Officer may, at any time within three years of the end of that financial year serve on the person liable to pay agricultural income-tax on such agricultural income or, in the case of a company on the principal officer thereof, a notice containing all or any of the requirements which may be included in a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 19, and may proceed to assess or reassess such income, and the provisions of this Act shall, so far as may be, apply accordingly as if the notice were a notice issued under that sub-section:

Provided....."

The principal contention raised on behalf of the appellant is that for an assessment to be made under S. 20 (4) of the Act it is not necessary that any proceedings should have been taken under Section 30. The argument is that assessment proceedings commence with the publication of a general notice under Section 19 (1) and it is open to the Agricultural Income-tax Officer to make the best judgment assessment under Section 20 (4) without any limitation as to time. It is not necessary to issue any individual notice under Section 19 (2) or to initiate proceedings under Section 30 in such a situation. Reliance has been placed on the observations in (1948) 16 ITR 119 = (AIR 1948 Bom 401) that once a public notice is given under sub-section (1) of Section 22 of the Income-tax Act, 1922, which is similar in terms to Section 19 (1) of the Act, the assessment proceedings should be deemed to have commenced and there is no obligation on the Income-tax Officer to serve an assessee individually as well. But in the same case it was said that "a notice under S. 34 is only necessary if at the end of the assessment year no return has been made by the assessee and the Income-tax authorities wish to proceed under Section 22 (2) by serving a notice individually. It may then be said that as the assessment year had come to an end and as no return had been furnished and as the authorities wished to proceed under Section 22 (2) they should not do so without a notice under Section 34".

8. The above view was approved by this Court in Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay v. Ranchhodas Karsondas, Bombay, (1960) 1 SCR 114 = (AIR 1959 SC 1154), but the portion which has been extracted does not support the contention which has been pressed on behalf of the appellant. Indeed it has been relied upon more firmly by the counsel for the respondents. If this view is accepted to be correct it follows that a notice under Section 30 of the Act, in the present case, would be necessary if at the end of the assessment year no return has been made by the assessee and the authorities wish to proceed under Section 19 (2). The case would be entirely different where he himself chooses voluntarily to make a return. This he can do after the publication of a general notice under Section 19 (1) of the Act. If the return is filed no question arises of any income having escaped assessment. The return under the provisions of Section 19 (3) of the Act can be furnished at any time before the assessment is made. This is what this Court held in State of Assam v. Deva Prasad Barua, Civil Appeals Nos. 808 and 809 of 1967, D/-14-8-1968 = (reported in AIR 1969 SC 831).

9. The position is altogether different if no return has been made by the assessee and where income has not been assessed at all because for one reason or the other no assessment proceedings were initiated. That would be a case of "escaped assessment" within Section 30 of the Act. The matter was examined at length by this Court in Ghanshyam Das v. Regional Asst. Commr. of Sales Tax, Nagpur, (1964) 4 SCR 436 = (AIR 1964 SC 766) with reference to the provisions of the Central Provinces and Berar Sales Tax Act, 1947. The following principles were laid down in that case which are noteworthy:

(1) In the case of a registered dealer the proceedings before the Commissioner started factually when a return was made or when a notice was issued to him either under Section 10 (3) (under which the Commissioner has to issue a notice if no return is submitted) or under Section 11 (4) (which provides for the best judgment assessment) of the Sales Tax Act. The statutory obligation to file a return did not initiate the proceedings.

(2) Once a statutory return was filed pursuant to a notice under S. 10 (3) or Section 11 of the Sales Tax Act the proceedings did not come to an end until the final assessment was made.

(3) The expression "escaped assessment" in Section 11-A of the Sales Tax Act included that of a turnover which had not been assessed at all because for one reason or the other no assessment proceedings were initiated and no assessment was made in respect thereof.

10. Keeping in view the above principles it must be held that in the absence of a return having been filed by the assessee in the present case pursuant to a general notice under Section 19 (1) of the Act assessment could be made only after due notice under Section 19 (2) or by initiating proceedings under Section 30 of the Act. Section 19 (2) requires that an individual notice is to be served in the financial year. If no notice is served under that section proceedings under Section 30 can be initiated by a notice in accordance with that section within three years of the end of that financial year. In this connection it may also be remembered that Section 43 (2) (a) of the Act confers a valuable right on the assessee in the matter of choosing the forum for the assessment. According to that provision an assessee may on receipt of the first notice served on him under Section 19 (2) apply to the Agricultural Income-tax Officer by whom such notice is served, to be assessed at the usual place of residence or at the place where the accounts relating to his agricultural income are kept. The Agricultural Income-tax Officer can then make an order that the assessee shall be assessed at the place specified in the application or he has to refer the matter to the Assistant Commissioner of Agricultural Income-tax whose decision shall be final. No such right is conferred on the assessee with reference to publication of a general notice under Section 19 (1). It shows, therefore, that the proceedings for assessment under the Act can be initiated only by service of a notice under Section 19 (2) or by having resort to the provisions of Section 30 of the Act.

11. Counsel for the appellant has sought to make a distinction between the decision given under the provisions of the Income-tax Act by pointing out that under Section 20 (4) of the Act best judgment assessment can be made on the failure to make a return under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of Section 19 whereas under S. 23 (4) of the Income-tax Act such an assessment can be made only where any person fails to make the return required by any notice given under sub-section (2) of Section 22 which is equivalent to Section 19 (2) of the Act. This distinction is hardly material when the principles which have been laid down by this Court are kept in view. In support of his contention counsel for the appellant has also called attention to a decision of the Privy Council in Gokuldas Ratanji Mandavia v. Commr. of Income-tax, (1960) 38 ITR 224 (PC) in which the provisions of the East African Income Tax (Management) Act, 1952, came up for consideration. Those provisions are altogether different and the decision rested on the wording of S. 71 of that enactment. It cannot, therefore, be of any assistance in the present case.

12. For the reasons given above the appeals fail and they are dismissed with costs. One hearing fee.

Appeals dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2062 (V 57 C 439)

(From: Bombay)*

J. C. SHAH AND V. RAMA-SWAMI, JJ.

F. Hoffmann-La Roche and Co. Ltd., Appellant v. Geoffrey Manners and Co. Private Ltd., Respondent.

Civil Appeal No. 1330 of 1966, D/- 8-9-1969.

(A) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (1958), Section 2 (1) (d) — Mark whether deceptively similar to another mark — Test.

The marks must be compared as whole. It is not right to take a portion of the word and say that because that portion of the word differs from the corresponding portion of the word in the other case there is no sufficient similarity to cause confusion. The true test is whether the totality of the proposed trade mark is such that it is likely to cause deception or confusion or mistake in the minds of persons accustomed to the existing trade mark. (Para 11)

Held on comparison of the trade marks "Dropovit" and "Protovit" that they are not deceptively similar. Appeal No. 65 of 1962, D/- 14/17-8-1964 (Bom), Affirmed. (Case Law discussed) (Para 14)

(B) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (1958), S. 9 (1) — Registration of trade mark — Plea that word used in trade mark is deceptive and not invented — Plea taken at delayed stage — Inference that it did not strike even the legal adviser of party etc., that trade mark is deceptive can be drawn — Finding by High Court also against plea — Plea rejected by Supreme Court. (Para 17)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1962) 1962 RPC 265, Parker
Knoll v. Knoll International
Ltd. 11
(1951) 68 RPC 103 = 95 SJ 316,
De Cordova v. Vick Chemical
Co. 17
(1945) 62 RPC 65 = 1945 AC
68, Aristoc Ltd. v. Rysta
Ltd. 11
(1915) 32 RPC 133, Lavroma Case, Tokalon Ltd. v. Davidson &
Co. 11

*Appeal No. 65 of 1962, D/- 14/17-8-1964, — Bom.)

(1908) 25 RPC 565, Diabolo case 16
 (1906) 23 RPC 774, Pianotist Co., Ltd.'s application 11
 M/s. Shavaksha and R. A. Shah, Advocates, Mr. J. B. Dadachanji, Advocate of M/s. J. B. Dadachanji and Co. and Miss Bhuvanesh Kumari, Advocate, for Appellant; Mr. M. C. Chagla, Senior Advocate (M/s. I. M. Chagla and Anoop Singh, Advocates, and Mr. M. N. Shroff, Advocate for Mr. I. N. Shroff, Advocate, with him), for Respondent.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by RAMASWAMI, J.—This appeal is brought by certificate from the judgment of the Bombay High Court dated August 17, 1964 in application No. 65 of 1962 upholding in part the judgment of Mr. Justice Tarkunde dated December 7, 1962 in Miscellaneous Petition No. 358 of 1961.

2. The appellant is a limited liability company incorporated under the laws of Switzerland and carries on business in the manufacture and sale of pharmaceutical and chemical products. The respondent is a company incorporated under the Companies Act in India and also carries on business in the manufacture and sale of pharmaceutical products.

3. On December 2, 1946 the appellant applied for registration of its trade mark "PROTOVIT". The application was granted and the appellant's mark was registered in Class V in respect of "Pharmaceutical preparations for human use and for veterinary use, infants' and invalids' foods." The appellant thereafter used that mark on multi-vitamin preparations in liquid and tablet forms and its goods are being sold under that mark at least since the year 1951.

4. On January 28, 1957 the respondent applied for registration of its mark "DROPOVIT" in respect of "medicinal and pharmaceutical preparations and substances". The application was registered but the advertisement of the respondent's application escaped the notice of the appellant who did not hence oppose the registration. By a letter dated March 4, 1958 Messrs. Voltas Limited, the appellant's agents, drew the attention of the appellant to the respondent's mark "DROPOVIT". There was negotiation between the parties but on March 19, 1958 the respondent wrote to the appellant refusing to alter its trade mark. On January 21, 1959 the appellant applied for rectification of the Register by removal therefrom of the respondent's trade mark. The ground urged in support of the application was that the respondent's mark so nearly resembled the appellant's mark as to be likely to deceive or cause confusion. On March 9, 1960 the appellant applied for amendment of the application and an additional ground was taken that "DROPOVIT" was not an invented word. The application for amendment was allowed by the Registrar. The amended application was opposed by the respondent. By his judgment dated August 5, 1961 the Joint Registrar rejected the application for rectification holding that "DROPOVIT" was not deceptively similar to "PROTOVIT" and that the word "DROPOVIT" considered as a whole was not descriptive. The appellant took the matter in appeal to the Bombay High Court. On December 7, 1962 Mr. Justice Tarkunde dismissed the appeal. The appellant preferred an appeal under Letters Patent but the appeal was dismissed by a Division Bench consisting of Chief Justice Chainani and Mody, J. on August 17, 1964. During the hearing of the appeal the respondent restricted the designation of goods to "medicinal and pharmaceutical preparations and substances containing principally vitamins."

5. The application for rectification was made on January 21, 1959 before the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958 (Act No. 43 of 1958) came into operation. But it is not disputed that under Section 136 (3) of this Act, the decision of this case is governed by the provisions of Act No. 43 of 1958 (hereinafter called the Act).

6. Section 11 of the Act states:

"A mark—

(a) the use of which would be likely to deceive or cause confusion; or

(b) the use of which would be contrary to any law for the time being in force; or

(c) which comprises or contains scandalous or obscene matter; or

(d) which comprises or contains any matter likely to hurt the religious susceptibilities of any class or section of the citizens of India; or

(e) which would otherwise be disentitled to protection in a court; shall not be registered as a trade mark."

7. Section 12 (1) provides:

"Save as provided in sub-section (3), no trade mark shall be registered in respect of any goods or description of goods which is identical with or deceptively similar to a trade mark which is already registered in the name of a different proprietor in respect of the same goods or descriptive of goods."

8. Section 56 (1) reads:

"On application made in the prescribed manner to a High Court or to the Registrar by any person aggrieved, the tribunal may make such order as it may think fit for cancelling or varying the registration of a trade mark on the ground of any contravention, or failure to observe a condition entered on the register in relation thereto."

9. Section 2 (1) (d) defines the phrase "deceptively similar" as follows:

"A mark shall be deemed to be deceptively similar to another mark if it so nearly resembles that other mark as to be likely to deceive or cause confusion."

10. The first question to be considered in this appeal is whether the word "DROPOVIT" is deceptively similar to the word "PROTOVIT" and offends the provision of Sec. 12 (1) of the Act. In other words, the question is whether the respondent's mark so nearly resembles the registered mark as to be "likely to deceive or cause confusion". It is not necessary that it should be intended to deceive or intended to cause confusion. It is its probable effect on the ordinary kind of customers that one has to consider.

11. In Parker Knoll Ltd. v. Knoll International Ltd., 1962 RPC 265 at p. 274, Lord Denning explained the words "to deceive" and the phrase "to cause confusion" as follows:

"Secondly, 'to deceive' is one thing. To 'cause confusion' is another. The difference is this: When you deceive a man, you tell him a lie. You make a false representation to him and thereby cause him to believe a thing to be true which is false. You may not do it knowingly, or intentionally, but still you do it, and so you deceive him. But you may cause confusion without telling him a lie at all, and without making any false representation to him. You may indeed tell him the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, but still you may cause confusion in his mind, not by any fault of yours, but because he has not the knowledge or ability to distinguish it from the other pieces of truth known to him or because he may not even take the trouble to do so."

The tests for comparison of the two word-marks were formulated by Lord Parker in Pianotist Co., Ltd.'s application (1906) 23 RPC 774 at p. 777 as follows:

"You must take the two words. You must judge of them, both by their look and by their sound. You must consider the goods to which they are to be applied. You must consider the nature and kind of customer who would be likely to buy those goods. In fact, you must consider all the surrounding circumstances; and you must further consider what is likely to happen if each of those trade marks is used in a normal way as a trade mark for the goods of the respective owners of the marks. If, considering all those circumstances, you come to the conclusion that there will be a confusion—that is to say, not necessarily that one man will be injured and the other will gain illicit benefit, but that there will be a confusion in the mind of the public which will lead to confusion in the goods—then you may refuse the registration, or rather you must refuse the registration in that case."

It is necessary to apply both the visual and phonetic tests. In Aristoc Ltd. v. Rysta Ltd., 1945 RPC 65 at p. 72, the House of Lords was considering the resemblance between the two words "Aristoc" and "Rysta". The view taken was that considering the way the words were pronounced in English, the one was likely to be mistaken for the other. Viscount Maugham cited the following passage of Lord Justice Luxmoore in the Court of Appeal, which passage, he said, he completely accepted as the correct exposition of the law:

"The answer to the question whether the sound of one word resembles too nearly the sound of another so as to bring the former within the limits of Section 12 of the Trade Marks Act, 1938, must nearly always depend on first impression, for obviously a person who is familiar with both words will neither be deceived nor confused. It is the person who only knows the one word and has perhaps an imperfect recollection of it who is likely to be deceived or confused. Little assistance, therefore, is to be obtained from a meticulous comparison of the two words, letter by letter and syllable by syllable, pronounced with the clarity to be expected from a teacher of elocution. The Court must be careful to make allowance for imperfect recollection and the effect of careless pronunciation and speech on the part not only of the person seeking to buy under the trade description, but also of the shop assistant, ministering to that person's wants".

It is also important that the marks must be compared as whole. It is not right to take a portion of the word and say that because that portion of the word differs from the corresponding portion of the word in the other case there is no sufficient similarity to cause confusion. The true test is whether the totality of the proposed trade mark is such that it is likely to cause deception or confusion or mistake in the minds of persons accustomed to the existing trade mark. Thus in Lavroma case, Tokalon Ltd. v. Davidson and Co., 32 RPC 133 at p. 136, Lord Johnston said :

".....we are not bound to scan the words as we would in a question of comparatio literarum. It is not a matter for microscopic inspection, but to be taken from the general and even casual point of view of a customer walking into a shop."

12. In order to decide whether the word "DROPOVIT" is deceptively similar to the word "PROTOVIT" each of the two words must, therefore, be taken as a whole word. Each of the two words consists of eight letters, the last three letters are common, and in the uncommon part the first two are consonants, the next is the same vowel 'o', the next is a consonant and the fifth is again a common vowel 'o'. The combined effect is to produce an alliteration. The affidavits of the appellant indicate that the last three letters "VIT" is a well-known common abbreviation used in the pharmaceutical trade to denote Vitamin preparations. In his affidavit dated January 11, 1961 Frank Murdoch, has referred to the existence on the Register of about 57 trade marks which have the common suffix "VIT" indicating that the goods are vitamin preparations. It is apparent that the terminal syllable "VIT" in the two marks is both descriptive and common to the trade. If greater regard is paid to the uncommon element in these two words, it is difficult to hold that one will be mistaken for or confused with the other. The letters 'D' and 'P' in "DROPOVIT" and the corresponding letters 'P' and 'T' in "PROTOVIT" cannot possibly be slurred over in pronunciation and the words are so dissimilar that there is no reasonable probability of confusion between the words either from the visual or phonetic point of view.

13. In the High Court, counsel for the respondent made a statement that the respondent was willing that the Court should direct in exercise of its powers under Section 56 (2) that the Registrar should limit the respondent's trade mark "DROPOVIT" to medicinal and pharmaceutical preparations and substances containing principally vitamins and that the appeal should be decided on this basis. The question of deceptive similarity must therefore be decided on the basis of the class of goods to which the two trade marks apply subject to the limitation agreed to by the respondent. From the nature of the goods it is likely that most of the customers would obtain a prescription from a doctor and show it to the chemist before the purchase. In such a case, except in the event of the handwriting of the doctor being very bad or illegible the chance of confusion is remote. As we have already observed the evidence shows that there are as many as 57 trade marks in the Register of Trade Marks with the suffix "VIT". Therefore, even an average customer would know that in respect of Vitamin preparations the word "VIT" occurs in large number of trade marks and because of this he would naturally be on his guard and take special care against making a mistake. In this connection the provisions of the Drug Rules, 1945 are also relevant. Under Rule 61 (2) vitamin preparations would be covered by Item 5 in Schedule C (1) to the Rules and a licence would be required to stock such vitamin preparations and to sell them retail. The question of confusion must hence be determined on the basis that the goods with one of the two rival trade marks would be sold only by such a licensed dealer and would not be available in any other shop. The fact that the vendor would be a licensed dealer also reduces the possibility of confusion to a considerable extent.

14. Having taken into account all circumstances of the present case we are of the opinion that the High Court and the Joint Registrar of Trade Marks were right in holding that there was no real tangible danger of confusion if respondent's trade mark was allowed to continue to remain on the Register and the application for rectification made by the appellant should be dismissed.

15. The question was also argued in the appeal whether the word "DROPOVIT" was not an invented word and whether it was a descriptive word. Section 9 (1) of the Act states—

"A trade mark shall not be registered in Part A of the register unless it contains or consists of at least one of the following essential particulars, namely:—

(c) one or more invented words;

(d) one or more words having no direct reference to the character or quality of the goods and not being according to its ordinary signification, a geographical name or a surname or a personal name or any common abbreviation thereof or the name of a sect, caste or tribe in India."

16. It is contended on behalf of the appellant that "DROPOVIT" meant only "DROP OF VITAMIN" with the word 'of' being misspelled as 'o', 'VIT' being used to denote "Vitamins", and the three separate words are joined together to make "DROPOVIT" as one word. It was said that the word "DROPOVIT" was simply a combination of three common words in English language and cannot, therefore, be said to be an invented word. In Diablo case, (1908) 25 RPC 265 Parker J., has explained the meaning of "invented word" as follows:

"To be an invented word within the meaning of the Act a word must not only be newly coined, in the sense of not being already current in the English language, but must be such as not to convey any meaning, or, at any rate, any obvious meaning to ordinary Englishmen. It must be a word having no meaning or no obvious meaning until one has been assigned to it."

17. In the case of De Cordova v. Vick Chemical Co., (1951) 68 RPC 103, the Privy Council referred to that interpretation of Parker J., as "the best standing interpretation". The question arising in this case is whether the word "DROPOVIT" would strike an ordinary person knowing English as meaning "DROP OF VITAMIN". In this connection the High Court has pointed out that the original application for rectification did not contain the ground that the word "DROPOVIT" was descriptive. It was, therefore legitimate to draw the inference that the word "DROPOVIT" did not strike even Messrs. Depenning and Depenning the legal advisers of the appellant as being descriptive. It was also pointed out that in his judgment Mr. Justice Tarkunde has remarked that when the case was opened before him he did not understand that the word "DROPOVIT" meant "DROP OF VITAMIN" till the explanation of that word was given to him. We see no reason, therefore, to differ from the reasoning of the High Court on this aspect of the case. If the word "DROPOVIT" is not a descriptive word it must be held to be an invented word. It is true that the word "DROPOVIT" is coined out of words commonly used by and known to ordinary persons knowing English. But the resulting combination produces a new word, a newly coined word which does not remind an ordinary person knowing English of the original words out of which it is coined unless he is so told or unless at least he devotes some thought to it. It follows that the word "DROPOVIT" being an invented word was entitled to be registered as a trade mark and is not liable to be removed from the Register on which it already exists.

18. For the reasons expressed we hold that this appeal fails and must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2067
(V 57 C 440)

(From : Calcutta)

J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

Commissioner of Income-tax, West Bengal, Appellant v. Indian Molasses (Private) Ltd., Respondent.

Civil Appeal No. 2555 of 1966, D/- 12-8-1970.

(A) Income Tax Act (1922), S. 66 (1) — "Question of law arising out of such order" — Question raised before Tribunal — Aspect of it not raised can be urged before High Court — Decision of High Court at Calcutta, Reversed.

The expression "question of law arising out of such order" in Sec. 66 (1) is not restricted to take in only those questions which have been expressly argued and decided by the Tribunal. If a question of law is raised before the Tribunal, even if an aspect of that question is not raised that aspect may be urged before the High Court. Thus the question whether certain amount expended effectively during the accounting year within the meaning of Section 10 (2) (xv) represented revenue expenditure did not exclude an enquiry as to whether it was laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business of the assessee. AIR 1961 SC 1633, Rel. on. Decision of Calcutta High Court, Reversed.

(Paras 11, 12)

(B) Income Tax Act (1922), Sec. 10 (2) (xv) — Amount set apart to provide pension on retirement of or death of Director — Amount becomes expended only on retirement or death of Director and not before that event — For applicability of S. 10 (2) (xv) other requirements of the section and of Sec. 10 (4A) must be complied with.

A company arranged to provide a pension to its managing director on his retirement or to his wife in the event of his death before age of retirement. The company delivered to the trustees a certain sum to take out a deferred annuity policy to secure certain amount as annuity payable to the director who however died before he was due to retire.

Held that the amount set apart became subject to the obligation to pay the pension only when the director died and not before that when the amount was set apart and must be deemed expended only on death within the meaning of Sec. 10 (2) (xv). But to attract the exemption under Sec. 10 (2) (xv) it had still to be established that the amount set apart was laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business of the Company, and that it was authorised under Sec. 10 (4-A). AIR 1959 SC 1049, Rel. on. (Paras 6, 10)

(C) Income Tax Act (1922), S. 66 (4), (5) — Supreme Court directing Tribunal to submit supplementary statement — Tribunal is restricted to evidence on record and is not entitled to take additional evidence — Not taking such evidence may result in injustice — Tribunal left to dispose of case under Section 66 (5) in the light of observations of Supreme Court. AIR 1959 SC 1177 and AIR 1963 SC 1484 and AIR 1965 SC 1636, Rel. on. (Para 14)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- |   |      |
|---|------|
| (1965) AIR 1965 SC 1636 (V 52) =  |      |
| (1965) 56 ITR 365, Keshav Mills Co., Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay North, Ahmedabad                  | 14   |
| (1963) AIR 1963 SC 1484 (V 50) =  |      |
| (1963) 48 ILR (SC) 92, Petlad Turkey Red Dye Works Co., Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax                        | 14   |
| (1961) AIR 1961 SC 1633 (V 48) =  |      |
| (1961) 42 ITR 589, Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay v. Scindia Steam Navigation Co., Ltd.                       | 11   |
| (1959) AIR 1959 SC 1177 (V 46) =  |      |
| (1959) 37 ITR 11, New Jehangir Vakil Mills Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay North, Kutch and Saurashtra | 14   |
| (1959) AIR 1959 SC 1049 (V 46) =  |      |
| (1959) 37 ITR 66, Indian Molasses Co. (P.) Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax, West Bengal                        | 2, 6 |

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by:

SHAH, J.: The respondent Company appointed one Harvey its Managing Director. Under the terms of agreement, Harvey was to retire on attaining the age of 55 years. The company arranged to provide a pension to Harvey on retirement, and executed a deed of trust on September 16, 1948 appointing three trustees to carry out that object. The respondent Company set apart in 1948 Rs. 1,09,643/- and in each of the six subsequent years Rs. 4,364/- and delivered the various amounts to the trustees who were authorised to take out a deferred annuity policy to secure an annuity of £720 per annum payable to Harvey for life from the date he attained the age of 55 years, and in the event of his death before that date an annuity of £ 611.12 annually to his widow.

2. In its return for the assessment year 1949-50 the Company claimed that in the computation of its taxable income Rs. 1,09,643/- paid in 1948 to the trustees under the deed of trust were allowable as an amount wholly and exclusively expended for the purpose of its business. In the subsequent years of assessment the Company claimed allowance of the annual payment of Rs. 4,364/-. The Income-tax Officer disallowed the claim. The Company disputed the decision and carried it to the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal. The Tribunal submitted a statement of case to the High Court of Calcutta on the question whether the payments "constituted 'expenditure' within the meaning of that word in Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, in respect of which a claim for deduction can be made subject to the other conditions mentioned in that clause being satisfied". The High Court answered the question in the negative. The view taken by the High Court was confirmed by this Court in appeal: Indian Molasses Co. (P.) Ltd v. Commr. of Income-tax, West Bengal, (1959) 37 ITR 66 = (AIR 1959 SC 1049). This Court held that the expenditure deductible for income-tax purposes is one towards a liability actually existing at the time, but a sum of money set apart which may be deemed appropriated to a purpose for which it was intended on the happening of a future event was not expended within the meaning of Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Act, until the event occurs, and since the Company had dominion through the trustees over the funds and there was a possibility of a trust resulting in its favour, by setting apart the funds no "expenditure" within the meaning of Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, may be deemed incurred.

3. During the pendency of those proceedings the Company arranged to give an "enhanced pension" to Harvey and executed a supplementary deed of trust on October 29, 1954 and set apart an additional sum of Rs. 47,607 to enable the trustees to take out an annuity policy in the names of the trustees in favour of Harvey and his wife to cover the "enhanced pension." The terms of the original trust deed were made applicable to the supplementary deed.

4. Harvey died in May 1955 (before he was due to retire) and in the return of its taxable income for the assessment year 1956-57 the Company claimed that Rs. 1,83,434/- being the total amount paid by the Company to the trustees in terms of the original trust deed dated September 16, 1948 and the supplementary deed dated October 29, 1954 be allowed as a permissible expenditure in the computation of the Company's business profits in the previous year ending December 31, 1955. The Income-tax Officer disallowed the claim without assigning any reasons. In appeal the Appellate Assistant Commissioner confirmed the order observing that the amounts paid long before the commencement of the previous year were not admissible under Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Income-tax Act, 1922. The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal in appeal reversed the order and allowed the claim of the Company holding that the amount of Rs. 1,83,434/- was "effectively disbursed during the accounting year" and was on that account an admissible allowance in the computation of the Company's business profits.

5. At the instance of the Commissioner of Income-tax, the Tribunal submitted a statement of the case to the High Court of Calcutta on the following two questions:

"(1) Whether on the facts and in the circumstances of the case, the sum of Rs. 1,83,434/- was an expenditure effectively laid out or expended during the accounting-year 1955 within the meaning of Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Income-tax Act?

(2) If the answer to question No. (1) is in the affirmative, then whether the said expenditure of Rs. 1,83,434/- represented a revenue expenditure?"

The High Court of Calcutta recorded answers in the affirmative on both the questions. With certificate granted by the High Court under Section 66A (2) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, this appeal is preferred by the Commissioner of Income-tax.

6. Answer recorded by the High Court on the first question was, in our judgment, correct. This Court had in the earlier decision (1959) 37 ITR 66 = (AIR 1959 SC 1049), held that the Company had not parted with control over the amounts set apart between the years 1948 and 1954 for securing the pension benefit to Harvey, and on that account no amount was appropriated to make it expenditure within the meaning of Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Act when Harvey died. At the date when different sums of money were set apart there was no existing liability and the sums of money set apart to meet an obligation which may or may not arise on the happening of a future event, the Company did not lay out or expend the sums within the meaning of Sec. 10 (2) (xv). The amounts set apart became subject to the obligation to pay the pension arranged to be given only when Harvey died, and must be deemed expended then within the meaning of Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922.

7. But on the materials before us we are unable to answer the second question, for the Tribunal has found no facts on which the admissibility of the allowance may be determined, and the High Court has declined to allow the argument to be raised by the Commissioner that in the circumstances of the case the amounts expended were not admissible under Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Act.

8. Secs. 10 (1) and 10 (2) (xv) of the Act, in so far as they are relevant, provide:

S. 10 (1) — "The tax shall be payable by an assessee under the head "Profits and gains of business, profession or vocation" in respect of the profits or gains of any business, profession or vocation carried on by him."

S. 10 (2) — "Such profits or gains shall be computed after making the following allowances, namely:—

x      x      x      x      x

(xv) any expenditure (not being an allowance of the nature described in any of the clauses (i) to (xiv) inclusive, and not being in the nature of capital expenditure or personal expenses of the assessee) laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of such business, profession or vocation."

Sub-section (4-A) of Section 10 which was added by the Finance Act of 1956 with effect from April 1, 1956, may also be read:

"Nothing in sub-section (2) shall, in the computation of the profits and gains of a company be deemed to authorise the making of—

(a) any allowance in respect of any expenditure which results directly or indirectly in the provision of any remuneration or benefit or amenity to a director or a person who has a substantial interest in the company within the meaning of sub-clause (iii) of clause (6-C) of Section 2, or

(b) any allowance in respect of any assets of the company used by any person referred to in clause (a) either wholly or partly for his own purposes or benefit, if in the opinion of the Income-tax Officer any such allowance is excessive or unreasonable having regard to the legitimate business needs of the company and the benefit derived by or accruing to it therefrom.

Explanation.—The provisions of this sub-section shall apply notwithstanding that any amount disallowed under this sub-section is included in the total income of any person referred to in clause (a)."

9. An amount proved to be expended by a tax-payer carrying on business is (subject to sub-section (4A) of Section 10) a permissible allowance in the computation of taxable income of the business, if it be established that the allowance claimed is (a) expenditure which is not of the nature described in clauses (i) to (xiv) of Section 10 (2); (b) that it is not of the nature of capital expenditure or personal expenses of the assessee; and (c) that the expenditure was laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of such business, profession or vocation. The expenditure incurred by the Company is not allowance of the nature described in any of the clauses (i) to (xiv) inclusive of Sec. 10 (2), nor is it of the nature of capital expenditure or personal expenses of the assessee. In our judgment, the argument advanced before the High Court that the expenditure resulting from the setting apart of the money for securing an annuity to provide pensionary benefit to Harvey and his wife was of a capital expenditure was rightly negatived by the High Court.

10. To attract the exemption under Sec. 10 (2) (xv) it had still to be established that the amount set apart was laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business of the Company. On this part of the case there is no discussion in the orders of the taxing authorities and the Tribunal. To recall, the Income-tax Officer recorded no reasons for disallowing the expenditure. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner disallowed it on the ground that it was not debited in the profit and loss account of the Company in the previous year. The Tribunal, assumed, and in our judgment erroneously, that this Court had in the earlier judgment pronounced upon the applicability of all the conditions of Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Act to the amount set apart when it became expenditure. This Court did not express any opinion on that question. The language in which the question was framed in the earlier case clearly indicated that the enquiry contemplated was only whether the amounts set apart were expended and no other. The judgment of this Court also does not imply that in the view of the Court if the setting apart of the amount was expenditure, the other conditions for the expenditure to be a permissible allowance under Sec. 10 (2) (xv) were satisfied. It cannot be assumed that because on the death of Harvey the amounts previously set apart were deemed expended, the outgoing was admissible as expenditure under Section 10 (2) (xv) read with Section 10 (4A). The Tribunal considered two questions only: (1) whether the setting apart of the amounts amounted to expenditure within the meaning of Section 10 (2) (xv); and (2) if it was expenditure, whether it could be regarded as capital expenditure and not revenue expenditure. On both the contentions the Tribunal decided in favour of the Company. But before Sec. 10 (2) (xv) could be called in aid to support the claim of the company it had to be established that it represented expenditure laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business, and that it was authorised under Section 10 (4A).

11. The High Court was of the view that because before the Tribunal the question was not expressly raised that "the other conditions inviting the application of Section 10 (2) (xv) were not satisfied, the allowance was not admissible", the Commissioner was incompetent to urge that plea before the High Court. In support of that view they relied upon the judgment of this Court in Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay v. Scindia Steam Navigation Co., Ltd., (1951) 42 ITR 589 = (AIR 1951 SC 1633). The High Court observed that before the Tribunal the plea that the expenditure was not laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of business of the Company was not argued, and since the question raised and referred "was not wide enough to include that submission", the Commissioner could not urge it before them. We are unable to hold that the decision in Scindia Steam Navigation Company's case, (1951) 42 ITR 589 = (AIR 1951 SC 1633), supports the opinion of the High Court. The plea that the amount claimed to have been expended was not admissible as an allowance was raised by the Department. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner had decided in favour of the Department and the order was sought to be supported before the Tribunal by the departmental representative. Granting that an aspect of the question was not argued before the Tribunal, the question was on that account not one which did not arise out of the order of the Tribunal. In our judgment, the expression "question of law arising out of such order" in Section 65 (1) is not restricted to take in only those questions which have been expressly argued and decided by the Tribunal. If a question of law is raised before the Tribunal, even if an aspect of that question is not raised, in our judgment, that aspect may be urged before the High Court. The judgment of this Court in Scindia Steam Navigation Co. Ltd.'s case (1951) 42 ITR 589 = (AIR 1951 SC 1633), does not only not lend any assistance to the view taken by the High Court, but negatives that view. In that case certain steamships belonging to the assessee Company were lost during the World War II by enemy action. The Government of India paid to the Company compensation which exceeded the written down value of the steamships. The Department sought to charge the excess amount to tax under the fourth proviso of Section 10 (2) (vii) of the Income-tax Act, 1922, inserted by the Income-tax (Amendment) Act, 1946, which came into force in the year of assessment. The Income-tax Officer held that the material date for the purpose of the fourth proviso to Section 10 (2) (vii) was the date when the compensation was in fact received and therefore, the amount was assessable in the assessment year 1946-47. At the instance of the Company the Tribunal referred the question whether the difference between the written down value and compensation was properly included in the total income for the assessment year 1946-47. Before the High Court the Company for the first time raised the contention that the fourth proviso to Section 10 (2) (vii) did not apply to the assessment as it was not in force on April 1, 1946 and the liability of the Company had to be determined as on April 1, 1946, when the Finance Act, 1946, was brought into force. The Commissioner of Income-tax contended that the question did not arise out of the order of the Tribunal within the meaning of Sec. 66 as it was not raised before nor dealt with by the Tribunal, and it was not referred to the Court. The High Court overruled the objection. This Court held that the High Court had jurisdiction to entertain the Company's contention raised for the first time before it, that the fourth proviso to Section 10 (2) (vii) did not apply to the assessment as the contention was within the scope of the question as framed by Appellate Tribunal and was really implicit therein. The Court in that case held that the question as framed was comprehensive enough to cover the question of the applicability of the fourth proviso to Section 10 (2) (vii) of the Income-tax Act. Venkatarama Aiyar, J., observed at page 612 (of ITR) = (at 1645 of AIR):

"Section 66 (1) speaks of a question of law that arises out of the order of the Tribunal. Now a question of law might be a simple one, having its impact at one point, or it may be a complex one, trenching over an area with approaches leading to different points therein. Such a question might involve more than one aspect, requiring to be tackled from different standpoints. All that Section 66 (1) requires is that the question of law which is referred to the Court for decision and which the Court is to decide must be the question which was in issue before the Tribunal. Where the question itself was under issue, there is no further limitation imposed by the section that the reference should be limited to those aspects of the question which had been argued before the Tribunal. It will be an over-refinement of the position to hold that each aspect of a question is itself a distinct question for the purpose of Section 66 (1) of the Act."

12. The second question raised in the present case, in our judgment, permits an enquiry whether the amount claimed is an admissible allowance under Section 10 (2) (xv). We are unable to hold that it is restricted to an enquiry whether the expenditure is of capital nature. The Tribunal did not consider whether the amount was laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business of the Company. Expenditure is admissible as an allowance under Section 10 (2) (xv) if all the conditions prescribed thereby are satisfied and is authorised by Section 10 (4-A). We are unable to hold that the question framed and referred excluded an enquiry whether the expenditure was wholly and exclusively laid out or expended for the purpose of the business of the Company. Nor are we able to hold that because before the Tribunal stress was not pointedly laid upon the ingredients which enable an expenditure to be claimed and allowed, the question does not arise out of the order of the Tribunal. The matter in dispute before the Tribunal was whether the Company was entitled to the allowance under Section 10 (2) (xv) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922. The Tribunal considered whether the amount claimed to have been laid out or expended became expenditure within the meaning of Section 10 (2) (xv) on the death of Harvey, and whether it was capital expenditure. They did not consider whether the expenditure was laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business of the Company. Since the Tribunal gave no finding on this part of the case, we are unable to answer the question on the materials placed before us.

13. The High Court was, in our judgment, in error in refusing to allow the argument to be raised that the requirements of Section 10 (2) (xv) were not satisfied, and the expenditure on that account was inadmissible.

14. Two courses are now open to us: to call for a supplementary statement of the case from the Tribunal; or to decline to answer the question raised by the Tribunal and to leave the Tribunal to take appropriate steps to adjust its decision under Section 66 (5) in the light of the answer of this Court. If we direct the Tribunal to submit a supplementary statement of the case, the Tribunal will, according to the decisions of this Court, (New Jehangir Vakil Mills Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay North, Kutch and Saurashtra, (1959) 37 ITR 11 = (AIR 1959 SC 1177); Petlad Turkey Red Dye Works Co., Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax, (1963) 48 ITR (SC) 92 = (AIR 1963 SC 1484) and Keshav Mills Co., Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax, Bombay North, Ahmedabad, (1965) 56 ITR 365 = (AIR 1965 SC 1336)) be restricted to the evidence on the record and may not be entitled to take additional evidence. That may result in injustice. In the circumstances we think it appropriate to decline to answer the question on the ground that the Tribunal has failed to consider and decide the question whether the expenditure was laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of the business of the Company and has not considered all appropriate provisions of the statute applicable thereto. It will be open to the Tribunal to dispose of the appeal under Section 66 (5) of the Income-tax Act, 1922, in the light of the observations made by this Court after determining the questions which ought to have been decided.

15. There will be no order as to costs in this appeal.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2072
(V 57 C 441)

(From: Assam)

J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

State of Assam, Appellant v. The Amalgamated Tea Estates Co. Ltd. and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 2052 of 1969, D/- 21-8-1970.

(A) Municipalities — Assam Municipal Act, 1956 (15 of 1957), Section 334 (1) and (4) — Constitution of notified area — Conclusion of Government that improved arrangements are required not conclusive — Notification can be challenged on ground of absence of authority or that it was made for collateral purpose. Decision of Assam High Court, Reversed.

In issuing a notification under S. 334 (1) the Government has to consider whether the area specified requires to be provided with improved arrangements in respect of matters upon which a municipal fund may be expended. The conclusion of the State Government that improved arrangements are so needed is not conclusive but the validity of the notification can only be challenged on ground of absence of authority or on clear proof that it was issued for a collateral purpose. From the mere circumstance that in respect of some pockets in the specified area there already exist arrangements at private expense, it does not follow that in signifying its intention to declare the specified area the State Government acted for a collateral purpose. Decision of High Court of Assam, Reversed.

(Para 6)

(B) Constitution of India, Article 226 — "Speculative petition" — Objection not raised to preliminary notification under Section 334 (1) of Assam Municipal Act signifying intention to provide improved arrangements in a specified area — Petition challenging validity of notification filed after years of constitution of Notified Town Committee and only after tax was demanded — Held, that it was a speculative petition and the High Court was in error in allowing it and declaring the notification as illegal. Decision of High Court of Assam, Reversed.

(Para 7)

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.— This appeal is filed with special leave granted by this Court against the judgment of the High Court of Assam “declaring ultra vires” a notification dated December 4, 1959 issued under Section 334 (4) of the Assam Municipal Act, 1956 (No. 15 of 1957).

2. By notification dated May 22, 1958 issued in exercise of the powers conferred by Section 334 (1) of the Assam Municipal Act, 1956, the Government of Assam signified its intention to declare that with respect to a specified area (including a part of the Naharkatia Tea Estate) “improved arrangements” were required, and invited objections against that proposal from interested parties. The owners of the Naharkatia Tea Estate did not file any objection. On December 4, 1959 a notification was issued under Section 334 (4) declaring the specified area as the Naharkatia Town Committee. In consequence of that declaration holders of land and buildings, within the specified area became liable to pay certain municipal taxes. On receiving a demand from the Town Committee for license fee and municipal taxes the respondent Company (owner of the Naharkatia Tea Estate) filed a petition in the High Court of Assam challenging the validity of the notification dated December 4, 1959 and for an order restraining the Town Committee from taking any action in pursuance of the notification and the notices levying tax, on the plea that the notification was issued “as a colourable device for taxing the assets of the Company with the sole motive of augmenting the income of the Town Committee without any obligation or necessity to expend funds for providing municipal amenities”. It was asserted that the Naharkatia Tea Estate was a “fully developed private property”; that it had arranged to provide all amenities required by law for the welfare of its employees and residents within the plantation, and on that account inclusion of the part of the plantation within the Town Committee was “illegal and in excess of the powers conferred by the Assam Municipal Act, 1956.”

3. The High Court accepted the contention of the Company. They observed that it could not have been the intention of the Legislature to provide for setting up a Town Committee in an area where adequate arrangements of lighting, maintenance of roads, conservancy, water-supply, hospital amenities and other “welfare arrangements” had previously been made by the owner. In the view of the High Court the demands for licence fee and tax were made by the Town Committee with the “ulterior motive to get money from the tea estate without reference to any service of providing facilities and amenities and that the inclusion of the tea garden within the Town Committee area must be held to be mala fide and contrary to Section 334 of the Act”. The High Court accordingly declared invalid the notification dated December 4, 1959 constituting the Naharkatia Town Committee insofar as it related to the area of the Naharakatia Tea Estate. The State of Assam has appealed to this Court with special leave.

4. Chapter XII of the Assam Municipal Act, 1956, deals with “Small Towns”. Section 334 deals with constitution of notified area, which insofar as it is relevant provides:

“(1) The State Government may, by notification, signify its intention to declare that with respect to some or all of the matters upon which a municipal fund may be expended under Section 60, improved arrangements are required within a specified area, which, nevertheless, it is not expedient to constitute as a municipality.

(2)	x	x	x
(3)	x	x	x

(4) When six weeks from the date of publication have expired, and the State Government has considered and passed orders on such objections as may have been submitted to it, the State Government may, by notification, declare the specified area aforesaid or any portion thereof to be a notified area to be termed as Small Town.”

Section 335 provides for establishment of a Town Committee for each notified area consisting of such number of members as may be fixed by the State Government. Section 336 authorises the State Government to impose in a notified area any tax which could have been imposed therein if such areas were a municipality and to apply or to adapt to the notified area provisions for the assessment and recovery of any tax imposed under the Assam Municipal Act or rules for the time being in force with respect to assessment and recovery of any tax imposed under the Act, and to extend to any notified area the provisions of any section of the Assam Municipal Act subject to such restrictions and modifications, if any, as the State Government may think fit.

5. In paragraph 14 of the petition it is averred by the Amalgamated Tea Company Ltd., that "the inclusion of the plantation area of the petitioner within the jurisdiction of the Naharkatia Town Committee is not at all bona fide, inasmuch as it was made not with a view to provide improved arrangements or amenities to the inhabitants of the said plantation, but solely with the motive of augmenting the income of the said Town Committee without the obligation or necessity of any expenditure of municipal funds for providing anything in return as contemplated by law." The State of Assam it was claimed by the Company, had in issuing the notification, which included the plantation area of the Naharkatia Tea Estate, not acted bona fide. But no particulars were given of that plea. The plea raised on behalf of the Company was denied by the State of Assam. The Company tendered no evidence in support of the plea that the notification dated December 4, 1959, was issued for a collateral purpose.

6. By Section 334 (1) the State Government is authorised to issue for a specified area a notification signifying its intention to provide improved arrangements. In issuing a notification under Section 334 (1) the State Government has to consider whether the area specified requires to be provided with improved arrangements in respect of matters upon which a municipal fund may be expended and if the State Government has come to the conclusion that improved arrangements are so needed the validity of the notification could only be challenged on proof of absence of authority, or on clear proof that the notification was issued for a collateral purpose. From the mere circumstance that in respect of some pockets in the specified area there may already exist arrangements made at private expense municipal facilities and amenities which after the constitution of the notified area, obligation to provide which may lie upon the Town Committee, it does not follow that in signifying its intention to declare the specified area, the State Government acted for a collateral purpose. The High Court was of the view that the Amalgamated Tea Company Ltd. had made arrangements for lighting, maintenance of roads, conservancy, water supply, hospital amenities and other welfare arrangements, and since improved arrangements were not necessary the notification of the State Government must be regarded as "mala fide". The notification of the State Government signifying its intention to declare a specified area as one in which improved arrangements may be made is undoubtedly not conclusive: in appropriate cases the validity of the notification may be challenged. But in the present case no ground has been made out on which such a challenge may be sustained.

7. The Company raised no objection to the preliminary notification dated May 22, 1958, issued under subsection (1) of Section 334 of the Assam Municipal Act, 1956. The writ petition was filed years after the constitution of the notified Town Committee and only after the demands for tax were made. Prima facie, such a petition was, as characterised by counsel for the State of Assam, a "speculative petition". In our judgment, the High Court was in error in allowing the petition and declaring the notification under Section 334 (1) of the Act as illegal.

8. We are here dealing with the validity of the notifications issued by the State Government under subsections (1) and (4) of Section 334. We are not called upon to pronounce upon the validity of the demands for licence fee and other taxes levied by the Notified Town Committee. The Company may, if so advised, challenge the validity of the demands for the licence fee and the municipal taxes in appropriate proceedings.

9. The appeal is allowed and the order passed by the High Court is set aside. The petition is dismissed with costs throughout in favour of the State of Assam.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2075
(V 57 C 442)

(From : Delhi)*

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Ramji Lal, Appellant v. Ram Babu Maheshwari and another, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 2392 of 1968, D/- 21-8-1970.

(A) Representation of the People Act (1951), Sections 116-A and 123 — Jurisdiction of Supreme Court under Section 116-A — Charge of commission of corrupt practice — Finding as to, is one of fact — No interference with finding of High Court merely on ground that different view on evidence is reasonable.

Supreme Court under Sec. 116-A does not ordinarily interfere with the finding of fact reached by the High Court in an election petition particularly when the High Court comes to the conclusion that the corrupt practices pleaded are not established. A charge of commission of corrupt practice is akin to a charge of commission of an offence. The trial Court has the advantage of seeing the witnesses examined before him and that circumstance aids it in the appreciation of the evidence adduced.

(Para 5)

Where it is not said that the High Court had ignored any material piece of evidence or its conclusions are unsupported by evidence and all that is said is that the conclusions reached by the Court on the basis of evidence are not correct and that a different view of the evidence is reasonable, there is not a sufficient ground for Supreme Court to interfere with the findings reached by the High Court.

(Para 5)

(B) Representation of the People Act (1951), Section 116-A — Election petition, alleging commission of corrupt practice by returned candidate, rejected — Dismissal of appeal to Supreme Court — Court however disallowed cost of returned candidate in appeal in view of the fact that he had raised several false pleas.

(Para 16)

*Ele. Petn. No. 2 of 1967, D/- 29-3-1968, Delhi.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.:— This is an appeal under Section 116-A of the Representation of the People Act (1951) (to be hereinafter referred to as the Act) from the judgment and order of the Delhi High Court dated the 29th March 1968 in Election Petition No. 2 of 1967 on its file. The petition was brought by two electors. It was dismissed by the High Court. As against that order only one of the petitioners has come up in appeal.

2. The election petition arose from the election held for a seat to the Delhi Metropolitan Council from the Kalan Masjid constituency. The polling for the said constituency was held on February 19, 1967 and the result of the election was declared on February 22, 1967. In that constituency three persons contested; one Rajesh Sharma was the Congress nominee, the respondent Ram Babu Maheshwari was the Jan Sangh candidate and Z. R. Abbas was the Republican candidate. The respondent secured 7490 votes, Rajesh Sharma 5277 votes and Abbas 3203.

3. The defeated candidates have not come forward to challenge the validity of the election. On the other hand two electors from the constituency in question have challenged the election of the respondent primarily on two grounds. Those grounds are; that the returned candidate or his agents with his consent had distributed calendars like Annexure 'A' which amounted to a contravention of Section 123 (2) and (3) of the Act inasmuch as it was an exercise of an undue influence over the Muslim voters and further it amounted to an appeal to Muslim Voters for votes on the basis of a religious symbol. So far as the contravention of Section 123 (2) namely exercise of undue influence is concerned it was not pressed before the trial court nor in this Court. Therefore we shall not consider that part of the case. The second ground urged against the respondent's election was that he or/and his agents or/and other persons with his consent published leaflets similar to Annexure 'C' containing statements of fact which are false and which were either believed to be false or were not believed to be true in relation to the personal character and conduct of Rajesh Sharma.

4. The High Court has come to the conclusion that there is no satisfactory evidence to show that the publication of calendars similar to Annexure 'A' was done either by the respondent or with his consent. So far as leaflets similar to Annexure 'C' is concerned, it has held that there is no satisfactory proof of its publication much less that the same was published with the consent of the returned candidate.

5. The questions arising for decision in this case are essentially questions of fact. Their proof depends on oral evidence. Voluminous evidence has been adduced by the parties in this case in support of their respective contentions. The trial court after carefully examining their evidence has come to the conclusion that the petitioners have failed to establish the corrupt practices pleaded by them. This is essentially a finding of fact. This Court ordinarily does not interfere with the findings of fact reached by the High Court in an election petition particularly when the High Court comes to the conclusion that the corrupt practices pleaded are not established. A charge of commission of corrupt practice is akin to a charge of commission of an offence. No satisfactory ground is made out to persuade us to reopen the findings of fact reached by the High Court. The learned trial Judge had the advantage of seeing the witnesses examined before him. That circumstance must have aided him in the appreciation of the evidence adduced. It is not said that he had ignored any material piece of evidence or his conclusions are unsupported by evidence. All that is said on behalf of the appellants is that the conclusions reached by the trial Judge on the basis of the evidence on record are not correct and that a different view of the evidence is reasonable. That is not a sufficient ground to interfere with the findings reached by the trial Court.

Having laid down the general line of approach in election cases, we shall now proceed to examine the material on record relating to the two corrupt practices alleged. It is needless to say that the respondent vehemently denied the allegations made against him.

6. Now coming to 'A' it is a calendar depicting (1) Meccah Sha-rif and the Minaret in Madina.

(2) Crescent; (3) the Holy Quran with the words 'Al Hasin Va Allai Haib' (the quotation from the Holy Quran) and along with the Rosary; (4) the words in Arabic 'Allah' and another quotation (Aiyat) from the Holy Quran 'Lalil Ilah Mohammad Rasool Ill-Ilah). In that calendar there was an appeal to vote for the Jan Sangh candidates. The trial court held that this calendar was published during the election. It also came to the conclusion that in that calendar there is an appeal to religious symbols. It is not necessary to go into the correctness of those findings. We shall assume that those findings are correct. But the question is whether there is any satisfactory proof to show that those calendars were published by the returned candidate? It may be remembered that the election with which we are concerned is a part of the general election held in 1967. At Delhi it was a combined election for the Lok Sabha, Metropolitan Council and for the Corporation. The Kalan Masjid constituency of the Metropolitan Council was a part of the parliamentary constituency of Chandni Chowk. Included in the Kalan Masjid constituency, there were some Corporation constituencies. It is also in evidence that Jan Sangh had put up candidates for the Chandni Chowk parliamentary constituency, Kalan Masjid Metropolitan Council constituency as well as the Corporation constituencies that formed part of that constituency. Therefore unless there is satisfactory evidence to show that the calendars in question were published by or with the consent of the respondent, the election of the respondent cannot be invalidated. Hence we have to see whether there is satisfactory evidence to show that they were published by the respondent or with his consent.

7. The appellant's case is that on February 4, 1967, there was a meeting in the house of Shyam Kishore and at that meeting a decision was taken that calendars similar to Annexure 'A' should be distributed on the next day. The principal witness who speaks to this meeting is Jugal Kishore, P. W. 45. He is also the main witness to speak to the fact that leaflets similar to Annexure 'C' were distributed with the consent of the returned candidate. Therefore it is necessary to examine his evidence in some detail. According to P. W. 45, he was an active worker of the respondent during the election and he was also his counting agent. The respondent denied that he was either his worker or his counting agent. The trial court has found that this witness was the counting agent of the respondent. There is conclusive evidence to show that he was one of the counting agents of the respondent. But the question still remains whether we can rely on the testimony of this witness. According to his own showing he had known the contents of calendars and leaflets similar to Annexures 'A' and 'C' and yet took a prominent part in distributing them. The strangest part of his behaviour is that while before the election he actively worked for the respondent and did not hesitate to be an accomplice to the commission of election offences, immediately after the election he became a star witness for the petitioners who are seeking to get set aside the election of the respondent. His is a case of running with hare and hunting with the hound. It is clear that his loyalty was easily transferable. It was suggested during his cross-examination that he was siding Rajesh Sharma because he wants Rajesh Sharma to put back his brother in service from which he had been thrown out. P. W. 45's new-found enthusiasm for Rajesh Sharma's cause cannot be altruistic. It is quite clear that he can desert from camp to camp if it becomes worthwhile for him to do so. He appears to have a convenient memory as could be gathered from his cross-examination. The next witness who spoke about the publication of calendars similar to Annexure 'A' is P. W. 48, Munna Lal Gupta. He also tried to connect the respondent with the publication of those calendars. Admittedly he is a Congress worker and a close associate of Rajesh Sharma. The trial court was unable to place reliance on his testimony.

8. Some witnesses have been examined to show that the calendars in question had been distributed during the meeting held on February 15, 1967 and that meeting was addressed by several members including the respondent. The witnesses who speak to this are P. W. 4, Abdul Reshid; P. W. 6, Hansraj; P. W. 11, Haji Likhman; P. W. 12 Karim-uddin; P. W. 13 Qamar-uddin; P. W. 14 Abdul Majid;

P. W. 15 Ahmad; P. W. 18 Mohmad Yusuf and some others. Their evidence has been carefully analysed by the trial court. They are shown to be interested witnesses. Many of them are the workers of Rajesh Sharma. Some of them are staunch supporters of the Congress party. There is material contradiction between the evidence of some of these witnesses which are detailed in the judgment of the trial court. It is true that some of these witnesses are seemingly disinterested. We come across such witnesses in election cases. An election generates bitter party feelings and the factious spirit continues even after the election. Therefore in evaluating the evidence adduced in election cases, a Judge has to be extremely careful. After taking an overall view of the evidence, the trial Judge has come to the conclusion that it is unsafe to rely on the evidence of the witnesses who seek to connect the respondent with the publication of Annexure 'A'.

9. We also agree with the trial court that there is no satisfactory evidence to show that Annexure 'B', a poster wherein there is a reference to Annexure 'A' was either published or at any rate published with the consent of the respondent.

10. This takes us to Annexure 'C'. In this Court, learned Counsel for the appellant strenuously pressed for our acceptance the petitioner's evidence relating to the publication of leaflets similar to Annexure 'C'. Undoubtedly there are scurrilous statements in those leaflets. There is hardly any doubt that the facts mentioned there amount to an attack on the personal character and conduct of Rajesh Sharma. It was not contended before us that that document does not come within the scope of Sec. 123 (4) of the Act. If we believe that such a document was published during the election either by the respondent or by someone with his consent, the election of the respondent will have to be necessarily set aside. But the question for our consideration is whether such a document was published during the election or if it was published whether it was published by the respondent or alternatively with his consent.

11. Now coming to those leaflets, there is no satisfactory evidence as to their printing. It is not proved in which press the same was printed nor is there any evidence to show as to who got it printed. It is shown in those leaflets that they were printed at "Kailash Printers, Delhi-6". The proprietor of that press has been examined on behalf of the petitioners. He denied that those leaflets were printed at his press or that they were got printed by the respondent. The petitioner's Counsel did not seek the permission of the Court to cross-examine that witness to show that he had turned hostile to the petitioners. There is no reason why we should reject the testimony of this witness. The respondent has denied that he got those leaflets printed. No doubt not much reliance can be placed on the testimony of the respondent because he has given false evidence on several aspects of the case but the fact remains that the petitioners have not been able to prove that leaflets similar to Annexure 'C' were got printed at Kailash Printers and further that they were printed at the instance of the respondent.

12. The leaflets in question were issued under the signature of one Rishi Ram. One Rishi Ram was examined as R. W. 26. He denied that he got those leaflets printed or published. But there is evidence to show that there was bitter enmity between Rajesh Sharma and R. W. 26. Therefore there was a possibility of his getting those leaflets printed and he may even have distributed some of those leaflets. As R. W. 26 had serious enmity with Rajesh Sharma, he needed no prodding from the respondent for getting those leaflets printed or even for publishing them. If he had got those leaflets printed and published, on his own, as it appears to be likely, the respondent cannot be held responsible for the same.

13. The witnesses who speak to the fact that the leaflets in question were published with the consent of the respondent are P. W. 45 Jugal Kishore, P. W. 21 Manmohan Sharma and P. W. 33 R. B. Gupta. We have already considered the evidence of P. W. 45 and come to the conclusion that it is unsafe to place reliance on his testimony. That was also the conclusion reached by the learned trial Judge. P. W. 33, Ram Babu Gupta was a worker of Rajesh Sharma during the election. It is not likely that he would have gone to the office of the respondent on being invited by the respondent and that the respondent would have committed serious election offences in his presence or to his knowledge. He wanted to show that from his childhood he was a member of the R. S. S. and lately he disassociated himself from that organization. This version of his appears to be wholly false. From the facts elicited in his cross-examination, it is clear that he does not know anything about R. S. S. organization in Delhi. He does not know who is its Sanchalak at Delhi or its General Secretary or the Chief Organizer in Delhi State. In our opinion the evidence of this witness has been rightly rejected by the trial court. So far as P. W. 21 is concerned he admits that he was intimate with Rajesh Sharma. His evidence appears to be quite artificial. His story that the respondent was accompanying his workers when they were distributing the leaflets is difficult to accept. We agree with the learned trial Judge that his evidence also is not reliable.

14. Large number of witnesses have been examined to show that the leaflets in question were distributed by the Jan Sangh workers P. Ws. 17, 21, 33, 36, 41, 42, 43, 45, 49 and some others. The learned trial Judge after examining their evidence has rejected the same as unreliable. We agree with his conclusion. It is not necessary to examine their evidence in details as their evidence does not show that distribution was made at the instance of the respondent.

15. A lame attempt was made to show that even if we hold that there is no satisfactory proof to show that calendars similar to Annexure 'A' and leaflets similar to Annexure 'C' were not proved to have been distributed with the consent of the respondent the very proof of their distribution is sufficient to set aside the election as the distribution of those calendars and leaflets must have vitiated the result of the election. We have earlier come to the conclusion that there is no satisfactory evidence as regards their distribution. Further from the evidence on record it is not possible to hold that they were widely distributed. From the evidence before us it is not possible to come to a positive finding that their distribution is likely to have vitiated the result of the election.

16. In the result this appeal fails and the same is dismissed. Now coming to the question of costs, we think that we must disallow respondent's costs. The evidence adduced by the respondent has not been accepted by the trial Court. There is hardly any doubt that he has come forward with several false pleas. His plea that P. W. 45 was not his counting agent is proved to be wholly false. In several other material aspects, he has tried to support his case by false evidence. Under these circumstances we think that we should disallow his costs of this appeal. We accordingly make no order as to costs in this appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2079
(V 57 C 443)

(From: Kerala)

MR. Hidayatullah, C.J., J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE, A. N. GROVER, A. N. RAY AND I. D. DUA, JJ.

State of Kerala, etc., Appellants v. Very Rev. Mother Provincial, etc., Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 2598-2600 of 1969, 21-53, 155-190, 199, 200-203, 273 and 324 of 1970, D/-10-8-1970.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 30 (1) — Kerala University Act (9 of 1969) — Validity — S. 48 (2), (4) and (6), S. 49 (2), (4) and (6), S. 53 (1), (2), (3) and (9), S. 56 (2) and (4), S. 58 and S. 63 are ultra vires Art. 30 (1) in respect of minority institutions.

Article 30 (1) contemplates two rights which are separated in point of time. The first right is the initial right to establish institutions of minority's choice. It is irrelevant that in addition to the minority community others from other minority communities or even from the majority community can take advantage of these institutions. The next part of the right relates to the administration of such institutions which means 'management of the affairs' of the institutions. This management must be free of control so that the founders or their nominees can mould the institutions as they think fit, and in accordance with their ideas of how the interests of the community in general and the institution in particular will be best served. There is, however, an exception that the standards of education are not a part of management as such. The minority institutions cannot be allowed to fall below the standards of excellence expected of educational institutions, or under the guise of exclusive right of management, to decline to follow the general pattern. Case-law, Relied on.

(Paras 8, 9, 10)

By the force of sub-sections (2), (4) and (6) of Ss. 48 and 49 the minority community loses the right to administer the institution it has founded. Section 53, sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) confer on the Syndicate of the University the power to veto even the action of the governing body or the managing council in the selection of the principal. Indeed, sub-section (9) gives a right of appeal to the Syndicate to any person aggrieved by the action of governing body or the managing council thus making the Syndicate the final and absolute authority in these matters. Coupled with this is the power of Vice-Chancellor and the Syndicate in sub-sections (2) and (4) of Section 56. These provisions clearly take away the disciplinary action from the governing body and the managing council and confer it upon the University. Section 58 enables political parties to come into the picture of the administration of minority institutions which may not like this interference. To crown all, there is the provision of S. 63 which provides for the power to regulate the management of private colleges in which the governing body or the managing council have no say. Hence, all these provisions are ultra vires Art. 30 (1) in respect of the minority institutions. (Paras 15, 16, 17, 20)

(B) Constitution of India, Arts. 31 (2), (2A), 31-A (1) (b) — Kerala University Act (9 of 1969), S. 63 (1) — Is ultra vires Art. 31.

Section 63 (1) involves the transfer of right to possession of the properties to the University. This section provides for compulsory requisition of the properties within Art. 31 (2) and (2A). To be effective, the section required the assent of the President under clause (3) and it was not obtained. Therefore, the saving in Art. 31-A (1) (b) is not available.

(Para 18)

(C) Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (f) — Kerala University Act (9 of 1969), S. 63 — Provisions of S. 63 which affect both minority institutions and majority institutions are ultra vires Art. 19 (1) (f) in respect of both.

(Para 20)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1969) AIR 1969 SC 465 (V 56) =

(1969) 2 SCR 73, Rev. Father

W. Proost v. State of Bihar 10

(1966) AIR 1966 SC 1307 (V 53) =

(1966) 3 SCR 328, Katra Education Society v State of U P. 10

(1963) AIR 1963 SC 703 (V 50) =

1963 Supp (1) SCR 112, Gujarat University, Ahmedabad v.

Krishna Rangnath Mudholkar 10

(1963) AIR 1963 SC 540 (V 50) =

(1963) 3 SCR 837, Sidhrajibhai

v. State of Gujarat 10

(1958) AIR 1958 SC 956 (V 45) =

1959 SCR 995, In re, Kerala

Education Bill, 1957 10

(1954) AIR 1954 SC 561 (V 41) =

(1955) 1 SCR 568, State of

Bombay v. Bombay Education

Society 10

(1951) AIR 1951 SC 226 (V 38) =

1951 SCR 525, State of Madras

v. Sm. Champakam Dorairajan 10

The following Judgment of the Court

was delivered by

HIDAYATULLAH, C.J.: These appeals by certificates granted by the High Court of Kerala under Arts. 132

(1) and 133 (1) (c) of the Constitution are directed against a common judgment, September 19, 1969, declaring certain provisions of the Kerala University Act, 1969 (Act 9 of 1969), to be ultra vires the Constitution of India while upholding the remaining

Act as valid. They were heard together. This judgment will dispose of all of them. The validity of the Act was challenged in the High Court by diverse petitioners in 36 petitions under Art. 226 of the Constitution.

Some parts of the Act were declared ultra vires the Constitution. As a result there are cross-appeals. 36 appeals have been filed against the several petitioners by the State of Kerala.

Another 36 appeals have been filed by the University of Kerala which made common cause with the Government of Kerala. 7 appeals have been preferred by seven original petitioners, who seek a declaration that some other provisions of the Act, upheld by the High Court as valid, are also void.

2. The Kerala University Act, 1969 (which repealed and replaced the Kerala University Act, 1957 (Act 14 of 1957)), was passed to reorganise the University of Kerala with a view to establishing a teaching, residential and affiliating University for the southern districts of the State of Kerala. Some of its provisions affected private colleges, particularly those founded by minority communities in the State. They were consequently challenged on various grounds. The petitions were consolidated in the High Court and were decided by the judgment and order under appeal.

3. Before we begin to discuss these appeals we may say a few words about them. 33 petitioners belong to different denominations of the Christian community; 8 are Superiors of different Catholic Religious Congregations; 8 are Catholic Bishops representing their dioceses; 3 are Vicars of Catholic parishes; 5 are Boards of Associations constituted by different Catholic denominations for establishing colleges and other educational institutions and 3 are Bishops of the Malankara Orthodox Church. 4 petitions have been filed by the Metropolitan of the Marthoma Syrian Church and 2 by the Madhya Kerala Diocese of the Church of South India. The remaining 3 petitions are respectively by private colleges founded and administered by Sri Sankara College Association Kalady, Sree Narayana Trusts, Quilon and the Nair Service Society, Changannacherry. The petitioners in the 33 petitions specially invoke the provisions of Art. 30 of the Constitution which protects the right of the minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice. All the 36 petitions invoke Arts. 19 (1) (f), 31 and 14 of the Constitution.

4. The impugned Act consists of 78 sections divided into 9 chapters. The main attack in the petitions is against Chapter VIII headed 'private colleges' consisting of Ss. 47 to 61 and some provisions of Chapter IX, particularly Section 63. The High Court has declared that sub-sections (2) and (4) of Section 48, sub-sections (2) and (4) of Section 49, sub-sections (1), (2), (3) and (9) of Section 53, sub-sections (2) and (4) of Section 56, Section 58 (except to some extent) are offensive to Art. 19 (1) (f) in so far as citizen petitioners are concerned and additionally, in so far as the minority institutions are concerned, offensive to Art. 30 (1), and therefore void. The petitions were, therefore, allowed except two petitions (O.P.S. No. 2339 and 2796 of 1969) filed by Sree Sankara College Association and the Nair Service Society since the petitioners were companies and were not entitled to the benefit of Art. 30 (1) not being minority institutions and not entitled to Art. 19 (1) (f) not being citizens. Section 63 was, however, held to offend Art. 31 (2) and not saved by Art. 31A (1) (b) and this declaration was in favour of all the petitioners. It was also declared void as offending Art. 30 (1) in so far as the minority institutions were concerned. The rest of the Act was declared to be valid and the challenge to it was rejected. There was no order about costs.

5. The State of Kerala and the University challenge the judgment in so far as it declares the provisions of the Act to be void and the petitioners in the 7 counter-appeals challenge the judgment in so far as it has rejected the attack on some other provisions. We shall deal first with the contentions urged on behalf of the State of Kerala and the University of Kerala and then deal with the contentions of the majority institutions and the challenge to the surviving portions of the impugned Act by the appealing original petitioners.

6. In the matter of the minorities the main attack comes from Art. 30 (1) of the Constitution. This clause reads:

"30. Right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions.

(1) All minorities, whether based on religions or language, shall have the right to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice.

x x x x x."

It declares it to be a fundamental right of the minorities, whether based on religion or language, to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice. It is conceded by the petitioners representing minority communities before us (and indeed they could not gainsay this in the face of authorities of this Court) that the State or the University to which these institutions are affiliated may prescribe standards of teaching and the scholastic efficiency expected from colleges. They concede also that to a certain extent conditions of employment of teachers, hygiene and physical training of students can be regulated. What they contended is that here there is an attempt to interfere with the administration of these institutions and this is an invasion of the fundamental right. The minority communities further claim protection for their property rights in institutions under Articles 31 and 19 (1) (f) and the right to practise any profession or to carry on any occupation, trade or business guaranteed by sub-clause (g) of the latter article. The majority community which is also the founder of private colleges (of which three instances are before us) do not claim the right stemming from Art. 30 (1) but they claim the other rights mentioned above and further seek protection of equality in law with the minority institutions and thus freedom in the establishment and administration of their institutions.

7. The claim of the majority community institutions to equality with minority communities in the matter of the establishment and administration of their institutions leads to the consideration whether the equality clause can at all give protection, when the Constitution itself classifies the minority communities into a separate entity for special protection which is denied to the majority community. This is not a case of giving some benefits to minority communities which in reason must also go to the majority community institutions but a special kind of protection for which the Constitution singles out the minority communities. This question, however, does not fall within our purview as the State, at the hearing announced that it was not intended to enforce the provisions of the law relating to administration against the majority institutions only, if they could not be enforced against the minority institutions. Therefore, we have to consider the disputed provisions primarily under Art. 30 (1) and secondarily under Articles 31 and 19 where applicable.

8. Article 30 (1) has been construed before by this Court. Without referring to those cases it is sufficient to say that the clause contemplates two rights which are separated in point of time. The first right is the initial right to establish institutions of the minority's choice. Establishment here means the bringing into being of an institution and it must be by a minority community. It matters not if a single philanthropic individual with his own means, founds the institution or the community at large contributes the funds. The position in law is the same and the intention in either case must be to found an institution for the benefit of a minority community by a member of that community. It is equally irrelevant that in addition to the minority community others from other minority communities or even from the majority community can take advantage of these institutions. Such other communities bring in income and they do not have to be turned away to enjoy the protection.

9. The next part of the right relates to the administration of such institutions. Administration means 'management of the affairs' of the institution. This management must be free of control so that the founders or their nominees can mould the institution as they think fit, and in accordance with their ideas of how the interests of the community in general and the institution in particular will be best served. No part of this management can be taken away and vested in another body without an encroachment upon the guaranteed right.

10. There is, however, an exception to this and it is that the standards of education are not a part of management as such. These standards concern the body politic and are dictated by considerations of the advancement of the country and its people. Therefore, if Universities establish the syllabi for examinations, they must be followed subject, however, to special subjects which the institutions may seek to teach, and to a certain extent the State may also regulate the conditions of employment of teachers and the health and hygiene of students. Such regulations do not bear directly upon management as such although they may indirectly affect it. Yet the right of the State to regulate education, educational standards and allied matters cannot be denied. The minority institutions cannot be allowed to fall below the standards of excellence expected of educational institutions, or under the guise of exclusive right of management, to decline to follow the general pattern. While the management must be left to them, they may be compelled to keep in step with others. These propositions have been firmly established in the State of Bombay v. Bombay Education Society, (1955) 1 SCR 568 = (AIR 1954 SC 561); State of Madras v. S. C. Dorairajan, 1951 SCR 525 = (AIR 1951 SC 226); In re the Kerala Education Bill, 1957, 1959 SCR 995 = (AIR 1958 SC 956); Sidharajbhai v. State of Gujarat, 1963-3 SCR 837 = (AIR 1963 SC 540); Katra Education Society v. State of U. P., 1966-3 SCR 328 = (AIR 1966 SC 1307); Gujarat University, Ahmedabad v. Krishna Ranganath Mudholkar, 1963 Supp (1) SCR 112 = (AIR 1963 SC 703); and Rev. Father W. Proost v. State of Bihar, 1969-2 SCR 73 = (AIR 1969 SC 465). In the last case it was said that the right need not be enlarged nor whittled down. The Constitution speaks of administration and that must fairly be left to the minority institutions and no more. Applying these principles we now consider the provisions of the Act.

11. The Act as stated already consists of 78 sections arranged under 9 Chapters. Chapter VIII is headed 'Private Colleges' and Chapter IX 'Miscellaneous'. Chapter I contains the short title and commencement (Section 1) and definitions (Section 2). We are concerned with some definitions in Section 2 and Chapters VIII and IX. The other chapters lay down the constitution of University and contain matters relating thereto. They are not in dispute. The High Court in its judgment has carefully summarized the impugned provisions and it is not necessary for us to cover the same ground. We shall content ourselves by mentioning the important aspects briefly. "College" in the Act means an institution maintained by, or affiliated to, the University, in which instruction is provided in accordance with the provisions of the Statutes, Ordinances and Regulations. These are framed by the University. 'Educational Agency' means any person or body of persons who or which establishes and maintains a private college. 'Private College' means a college maintained by an agency other than the Government or the University and affiliated to the University. 'Principal' means the head of a college. By 'teacher' as used in the Act is meant a Principal, Professor, Assistant Professor, Reader, Lecturer, Instructor or such other person imparting instruction or supervising research and whose appointment has been approved by the University in any of the colleges or recognised institutions. 'Recognised teacher' means a person employed as a teacher in an affiliated institution and whose appointment has been approved by the University. There is much overlap between 'college', 'teacher' and 'recognised teacher' but there is no antinomical confusion which might have otherwise resulted. These definitions by themselves are not questionable but in the context of the provisions of Chapters VIII and IX, about to be referred to, the insistence on the recognition by the University is claimed to be interference with the freedom of management. Chapter VIII embraces Sections 47 to 61. It begins with the definition of 'corporate management' which means a person or body of persons who or which manages more than one private college. Sections 48 and 49 deal respectively with (a) the governing body for private colleges not under corporate management and (b) with managing council for private colleges under corporate management. In either case, the education agency (by which term we denote the educational agency of a private college as also corporate management, that is to say, the person or body of persons who or which manages more than one private college) is required to set up a governing body for private college or a managing council for private colleges under one corporate management. The two sections embody the same principles and differ only because in one case there is but one institution and in the other more than one. Both consist of 7 sub-sections. Under these provisions the educational agency or the corporate management has to establish a governing body or a managing council respectively. The sections give the compositions of the two bodies. The governing body set up by the educational agency is to consist of 11 members and the managing council of 21 members. The 11 members of the governing body are: (i) the principal of the private college; (ii) the manager of the private college; (iii) a person nominated by the University in accordance with the provisions in that behalf contained in the Statutes; (iv) a person nominated by the Government; (v) a person elected in accordance with such procedure as may be prescribed by the Statutes of the University from among themselves by the permanent teachers of the private college; and (vi-xi) not more than six persons nominated by the educational agency. The composition of the managing council consists of a principal in rotation from the private colleges, manager of the private colleges, the nominees of the University and the Government as above described, two elected representatives of the teachers and not more than 15 members nominated by the educational agency. The Act ought to have used the expression 'corporate management' instead of 'educational agency' but the meaning is clear.

12. It will thus be seen that a body quite apart from the educational agency or the corporate management is set up. Sub-section (2) in either section makes these bodies into bodies corporate having perpetual succession and a common seal. The manager of the college or colleges, as the case may be, is the Chairman in either case (sub-section (3)). Sub-section (4) then says that the members shall hold office for a period of 4 years from the date of its constitution. Sub-section (5) then says as follows:

"It shall be the duty of the Governing Body/(Managing Council) to administer the private college (all the private colleges under the corporate management) in accordance with the provisions of this Act and the Statutes, Ordinances, Regulations, Bye-laws and Orders made thereunder." (We have attempted to combine the two provisions here. In the case of governing body, the sub-section is to be read omitting the words in brackets and in the case of managing council the underlined words are to be omitted and the sub-section read with the words in brackets.)

13. Sub-section (6) then lays down that the powers and functions of the governing body (the managing council), the removal of members thereof and the procedure to be followed by it, including the delegation of its powers, shall be prescribed by the Statutes. Sub-section (7) lays down that decisions in either of the two bodies shall be taken at meetings on the basis of simple majority of the members present and voting.

14. These sections were partly declared ultra vires of Art. 30 (1) by the High Court as they took away from the founders the right to administer their own institution. It is obvious that after the election of the governing body or the managing council the founders or even the community has no hand in the administration. The two bodies are vested with the complete administration of the institutions. These bodies have a legal personality distinct from the educational agency or the corporate management. They are not answerable to the founders in the matter of administration. Their powers and functions are determined by the University laws and even the removal of the members is to be governed by the Statutes of the University. Sub-sections (2), (4), (5) and (6) clearly vest the management and administration in the hands of the two bodies with mandates from the University.

15. In attempting to save these provisions Mr. Mohan Kumaramangalam drew attention to two facts only. The first is that the nominees of the educational agencies or the corporate management have the controlling voice and that the defect, if any, must be found in the Statutes, Ordinances, Regulations, Bye-laws and Orders of the University and not in the provisions of the Act. Both these arguments are not acceptable to us. The Constitution contemplates the administration to be in the hands of the particular community. However desirable it might be to associate nominated members of the kind mentioned in Sections 48 and 49 with other members of the governing body or the managing council nominees, it is obvious that their voice must play a considerable part in management. Situations might be conceived when they may have a preponderating voice. In any event, the administration goes to a distinct corporate body which is in no way answerable to the educational agency or the corporate management. The founders have no say in the selection of the members nominated or selected except those to be nominated by them. It is, therefore, clear that by the force of sub-sections (2), (4) and (6) of Sections 48 and 49, the minority community loses the right to administer the institution it has founded. Sub-section (5) also compels the governing body or the managing council to follow the mandates of the University in the administration of the institution. No doubt the Statutes, Ordinances, Regulations, Rules, Bye-laws and Orders can also be examined in the light of Art. 30 (1) but the blanket power so given to the University bears adversely upon the right of administration. This position is further heightened by the other provisions of the Act to which a reference is now needed.

16. Section 53, sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) confer on the Syndicate of the University the power to veto even the action of the governing body or the managing council in the selection of the principal. Similarly, sub-section (4) takes away from the educational agency or the corporate management the right to select the teachers. The insistence on merit in sub-section (4) or on seniority-cum-fitness in sub-s. (7) does not save the situation. The power is exercised not by the educational agency or the corporate management but by a distinct and autonomous body under the control of the Syndicate of the University. Indeed, sub-section (9) gives a right of appeal to the Syndicate to any person aggrieved by the action of governing body or the managing council thus making the Syndicate the final and absolute authority in these matters. Coupled with this is the power of Vice-Chancellor and the Syndicate in sub-sections (2) and (4) of Section 56. These sub-sections read:

"56. Conditions of service of teachers of private colleges.—(1) x x x x

(2) No teacher of a private college shall be dismissed, removed, or reduced in rank by the governing body or managing council without the previous sanction of the Vice-Chancellor or placed under suspension by the governing body or managing council for a continuous period exceeding fifteen days without such previous sanction.

(3) x x x x x x

(4) A teacher against whom disciplinary action is taken shall have a right of appeal to the Syndicate, and the Syndicate shall have power to order reinstatement of the teacher in cases of wrongful removal or dismissal and to order such other remedial measures as it deems fit, and the governing body or managing council, as the case may be, shall comply with the order."

These provisions clearly take away the disciplinary action from the governing body and the managing council and confer it upon the University. Then comes Section 58 which reads:

"58. Membership of the Legislative Assembly, etc., not to disqualify teachers.—A teacher of a private college shall not be disqualified for continuing as such teacher merely on the ground that he has been elected as a member of the Legislative Assembly of the State or of Parliament or of a local authority:

Provided that a teacher who is a member of the Legislative Assembly of the State or of Parliament shall be on leave during the period in which the Legislative Assembly or Parliament, as the case may be, is in session."

This enables political parties to come into the picture of the administration of minority institutions which may not like this interference. When this is coupled with the choice of nominated members left to Government and the University by sub-section (1) (d) of Sections 48 and 49, it is clear that there is much room for interference by persons other than those in whom the founding community would have confidence.

17. To crown all, there is the provision of Section 63 (1) which reads:

"63. Power to regulate the management of private colleges.—(1) Whenever Government are satisfied on receipt of a report from the University or upon other information that a grave situation has arisen in which the working of a private college cannot be carried on for all or any of the following reasons, namely:—

(a) default in the payment of the salary of the members of the staff of the college for a period of not less than three months;

(b) wilful closing down of the college for a period of not less than one month except in the case of the closure of the college during a vacation;

(c) persistent default or refusal to carry out all or any of the duties imposed on any of the authorities of the college by this Act or the Statutes or Ordinances or Regulations or Rules or Bye-laws or lawful orders passed thereunder; and that in the interest of private college it is necessary so to do, the Government may, after giving the governing body or managing council, as the case may be, the manager appointed under sub-section (1) of Section 50 and the education agency, if any, of the college a reasonable opportunity of showing cause against the proposed action and after considering the cause, if any, shown, by order, appoint the University to manage the affairs of such private college temporarily for a period not exceeding two years:

Provided that in cases where action is taken under this sub-section otherwise than on a report from the University, it shall be consulted before taking such action.

x x x x x."

18. The remaining provisions of this section lay down an elaborate procedure for management in which even the governing body or the managing council have no say. Sub-section 63 (1) involves the transfer of right to possession of the properties to the University. The High Court rightly pointed out that this section provides for compulsory requisition of the properties within Art. 31 (2) and (2A). To be effective the section required the assent of the President under clause (3) and it was not obtained. Therefore the saving in Art. 31A (1) (b) is not available.

19. Mr. Mohan Kumarmangalam brought to our notice passages from the Report of the Education Commission in which the Commission had made suggestions regarding the conditions of service of the teaching staff in the universities and the colleges and standards of teaching. He also referred to the Report of the Education Commission on the status of teachers, suggestions for improving the teaching methods and standards. He argued that what has been done by the Kerala University Act is to implement these suggestions in Chapters VIII and IX and particularly the impugned sections. We have no doubt that the provisions of the Act were made bona fide and in the interest of education but unfortunately they do affect the administration of these institutions and rob the founders of that right which the Constitution desires should be theirs. The provisions, even if salutary cannot stand in the face of the constitutional guarantee. We do not, therefore, find it necessary to refer to the two reports.

20. The result of the above analysis of the provisions which have been successfully challenged discloses that the High Court was right in its appreciation of the true position in the light of the Constitution. We agree with the High Court that sub-sections (2) and (4) of Sections 48 and 49 are ultra vires Art. 30 (1). Indeed we think that sub-section (6) of these two sections is also ultra vires. They offend more than the other two of which they are a part and parcel. We also agree that sub-sections (1), (2), (3) and (9) of Sec. 53, sub-sections (2) and (4) of Sec. 56, Sec. 58 (in so far as it removes disqualification which the founders may not like to agree to), and Sec. 63 are ultra vires Article 30 (1) in respect of the minority institutions. The High Court has held that the provisions (except Sec. 63) are also offensive to Art. 19 (1) (f) in so far as the petitioners are citizens of India both in respect of majority as well as minority institutions. This was at first debated at least in so far as majority institutions were concerned. The majority institutions invoked Art. 14 and complained of discrimination. However at a later stage of proceedings Mr. Mohan Kumarmangalam stated that he had instructions to say that any provision held inapplicable to minority institutions would not be enforced against the majority institutions also. Hence it relieves us of the task of considering the matter under Art. 19 (1) (f) not only in respect of minority institutions but in respect of majority institutions also. The provisions of Sec. 63 affect both kinds of institutions alike and must be declared ultra vires in respect of both.

21. The result is that the judgment under appeal is upheld. The appeals of the State Government of Kerala and of the University are dismissed with costs. One set of hearing fees. For the reasons given by the High Court we do not accept the contentions of the seven appellants who have challenged some of the other provisions of the Act except Sections 48 (6) and 49 (6) and do not consider it necessary to repeat what is said by the High Court. These appeals are dismissed except as to those sections but without costs.

Appeals dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2086 (V 57 C 444)

(From Punjab: AIR 1963 Punj 503)

J. M. SHELAT AND

G. K. MITTER, JJ.

The State of Punjab, Appellant v. Dewan Chuni Lal, Respondent.

Civil Appeal No. 2348 of 1966, D/- 16-2-1970.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 311 (2) — Departmental enquiry — Dismissal of Police Sub-Inspector — Charges of inefficiency and dishonesty based on adverse reports of superior Officers — Such Officers, though available, not examined to enable Police Sub-Inspector to cross-examine them — Refusal of the right to examine such witnesses amounted to denial of reasonable opportunity of showing cause against the action of dismissal — Dismissal not legal. AIR 1963 Punj 503, Affirmed. (Paras 19, 25)

(B) Constitution of India, Art. 311 — Departmental enquiry against Police Sub-Inspector who was allowed to cross efficiency bar — Charges of inefficiency and dishonesty — Charges based on adverse confidential reports of superior Officers — Reports relating to period earlier than the year in which he was allowed to cross efficiency bar should not be considered in enquiry. (Para 14)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1967) AIR 1967 SC 122 (V 54) =
1966 (Supp) SCR 401, State of Jammu and Kashmir v. Bakshi
Ghulam Mohammad 24
(1967) AIR 1967 Orissa 49 (V 54) =
ILR (1965) Cut 147, Sadananda
Mahapatra v. State 20
(1963) AIR 1963 Orissa 73 (V 50) =
ILR (1962) Cut 125, State of Orissa v. Sailabehari 22

Mr. V. C. Mahajan, Advocate, for Appellant; Mr. N. S. Bindra, Senior Advocate (Mr. B. Datta Advocate and M/s J. B. Dadachanji and Co., Advocates, with him), for Respondent.

IN/IN/B35/70/MLD/T

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

MITTER, J.—By this appeal the State of Punjab challenges the judgment and order of the Punjab High Court upholding the decree of the Subordinate Judge, Gurgaon declaring that the dismissal of the respondent from service was illegal and inoperative. The respondent, a Sub-Inspector of Police was called upon to answer a charge framed on October 12, 1949 setting forth extracts from his confidential character roll showing his inefficiency and lack of probity while in service from 1941 to 1948 and to submit his answer to the prima facie charge of inefficiency as envisaged in paragraph 16.25 (2) of the Punjab Police Rules.

2. The respondent had joined the police service and had served as a Sub-Inspector in various places which are now in Pakistan before he was posted to Gurgaon in the year 1948. It appears that the view taken of his conduct and reputation by his superior officers over the years was not consistent. In some years he got what is known as a 'B' certificate and in others an 'A' certificate. According to rule 13.17 of the Punjab Police Rules, Superintendents of Police had to prepare personally and submit annually to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police confidential reports in the form prescribed on the working of all Assistant Sub Inspectors and Sub Inspectors serving under them. The reports were to be of two kinds 'A' and 'B', and to be marked as such. An 'A' report was for recommending that incremental promotions should not be withheld while a 'B' report was to contain a recommendation, for reasons to be fully stated, that incremental promotions should be withheld. The rule further shows that the purport of all 'B' reports was to be formally communicated to the officer concerned and his written acknowledgment to be taken. It also prescribed that the submission of two successive 'B' reports regarding an officer would result, automatically in the institution of departmental proceedings against him with a view to stoppage of increment.

3. The punishments which could be awarded departmentally are set out in rule 16.1 and under rule 16.2 (1) dismissal is to be awarded only for the gravest acts of misconduct or as the cumulative effect of continued misconduct proving incorrigibility and complete unfitness for police service. Rule 16.24 sets out the procedure to be followed in departmental enquiries. The sum and substance of rule 16.24 is that in case the police officer did not admit the misconduct:

"the officer conducting the enquiry shall proceed to record such evidence, oral and documentary, in proof of the accusation as is available and necessary to support the charge. Whenever possible, witnesses shall be examined direct, and in the presence of the accused, who shall be given opportunity to take notes of their statements and cross-examine them. The officer conducting the enquiry is empowered, however, to bring on to the record the statement of any witness whose presence cannot, in the opinion of such officer, be procured without undue delay and expense or inconvenience, if he considers such statement necessary, and provided that it has been recorded and attested by a police officer superior in rank to the accused officer or by a Magistrate, and is signed by the person making it."

Further the accused officer was required to state the defence witnesses whom he wished to call together with a summary of the facts as to which they would testify. The enquiring officer was empowered to refuse to hear any witnesses whose evidence he considered would be irrelevant or unnecessary in regard to the specific charge framed.

4. Under rule 16.25 (1) a police officer called upon to answer a charge of misconduct must be given every opportunity of proving his innocence. Under sub-rule (2) of this rule, charges need not be framed in relation only to a specific incident or act of misconduct and when reports received against an officer or a preliminary enquiry show that his general behaviour has been such as to be unfitting his position or that he has failed to reach or maintain a reasonable standard of efficiency he may and should be charged accordingly, and a finding of guilty on such a charge would be a valid ground for the infliction of any authorised departmental punishment which might be considered suitable in the circumstances of the case.

5. The confidential reports extracts whereof were contained in the charge sheet make it clear that the respondent was being accused of laziness and ineffectiveness and as having a doubtful reputation as to his honesty. Excepting for the year 1948 wherein a specific instance of corruption was charged against him the other reports only contained generally adverse remarks. For instance the remarks against him for the year 1941 were to the effect that he was "lazy and ineffective and that he had been warned for dishonesty, laziness and lack of control." In the year 1942 when he was posted at Dera Gazi Khan his annual confidential report showed that although there were no definite complaints he had not shown any outstanding ability or energy. The Superintendent of Police was not certain about his honesty but had no special complaints against him. The respondent was not allowed to cross the efficiency bar in that year in view of his past reports.

6. It is the common case of the parties that the respondent was allowed to cross the efficiency bar in 1944. In 1945 he was transferred to Montgomery and got a 'B' report and his honesty was characterised as doubtful. He got another warning in that year. In 1946 the Superintendent of Police remarked that he was a failure as a Station House Officer and was slow to carry out orders and had no grip on his staff. The Deputy Inspector General of Police Multan Range summed up his 16 years' service with the note:

"From all accounts he is one of the worst Sub Inspectors in the Range and the department will be well rid of him, if action under rule 16.25 (2) can be successfully taken against him. Action under rule 16.25 cannot succeed at present but his past record is such that any further complaint should warrant his dismissal."

In the confidential reports of the year 1946, the Superintendent of Police Muzaffargarh stated that he was not honest and was very poor on parade. The Deputy Inspector General Multan Range gave him a third warning. The Superintendent of Police Muzaffargarh however remarked that although his previous record was unsatisfactory he appeared to be trying to mend himself. In the year 1948 he got a 'C' report and the Superintendent of Police described him as "thoroughly corrupt". The S. P. further remarked that:

"This officer fell to unheard of depths of moral degradation in corrupt practices while posted to City Rewari inasmuch as he changed the opium recovered by him earlier with Rasaunt for Rs. 1,000/- bribe and then made over the opium for sale in the black market. He was known to have mixed up with bad characters, gamblers and Risbawat-dalals.

According to the charge sheet the attested copies of these reports were to be used as evidence against him.

7. In regard to the year 1948 and the charge above mentioned it is enough to say that an enquiry was held against him and he was held entitled to an honourable acquittal.

8. The respondent pleaded not guilty to the charge and filed a list of 86 witnesses whom he sought to examine in his defence. He also gave a summary of the facts about which each of the witnesses was to depose. The enquiry officer allowed him to examine 21 witnesses in defence. No witness was examined on behalf of the department. On 25th May, 1950 Bishambar Das, Superintendent of Police made a report that the charge had been fully brought home to the respondent and it was suggested that he should be dismissed. The Deputy Inspector General asked him to show cause why he should not be dismissed from service. After receipt of a written representation made by the respondent and recording his statement the Deputy Inspector General passed an order dismissing the respondent from service.

9. The respondent then filed his suit in the court of the Subordinate Judge Gurgaon wherein his main complaint was that the enquiring officer did not record any evidence in support of the charge nor were the persons making the reports examined direct and in his presence with opportunity to him to cross-examine the persons who had made those reports: he also averred that good reports earned by him during his long period of service had not been taken into account. He also pleaded that he had been allowed to cross the efficiency bar in December 1944 and had been given a selection grade in 1945.

10. It was urged before us that the crossing of the efficiency bar must be regarded as giving him a clean bill up to that date and in view of this the reports of 1941 and 1942 should not have been taken into consideration against him.

11. As regards the reports for the years 1945 and 1946 the respondent's complaint was that the Superintendent of Police Montgomery was for certain communal reasons biased against him. As regards the reports for the period May 27, 1946 to 30th June 1946 and the rest of the year the same had been made by Shamsheer Singh and Sadat Ali, Superintendents of Police of Muzaffargarh. Shamsheer Singh had given him no adverse remark and had left the column of honesty in the report "blank". Sadat Ali who was biased against the respondent got the word "no" typed opposite the column of honesty. The report for the year 1948 was based mainly on the opium case and as he had been cleared of the charge in respect of that case, there was no foundation for the report for that year. Further the order of dismissal was in violation of rule 16.2 as this punishment was to be awarded for the gravest acts of misconduct or as the cumulative effect of continued misconduct proving incorrigibility and complete unfitness for police service which facts did not exist in his case. A further complaint was made that the enquiry officer did not care to summon A. L. Chopra, the Rehabilitation Inspector and Captain Chuni Lal, Ex-military man although they had been allowed to be examined previously. The deposition of Ram Chander, Assistant Surgeon, a defence witness was not typed out and made a part of the record although his deposition was noted by the stenotypist in the note book. The order of dismissal was passed by the Deputy Inspector General without considering this evidence. Besides the above, the evidence of well placed officers like Deputy Commissioners, Superintendents of Police, Sub Divisional Magistrates and others who had testified to the respondent's efficiency, honesty and reliability were totally ignored.

12. The Subordinate Judge held that the charge framed against the respondent was vague and indefinite and the enquiry was unfair and inadequate because some of the authors of the reports adverse to the respondent, though available, were not produced to enable the respondent to cross-examine them, that oral and documentary evidence sought by the respondent was withheld and as such no reasonable opportunity of defence was afforded to him. In the result he held that the requirements of Art. 311 of the Constitution had been violated and the order of dismissal was inoperative.

13. The High Court did not agree that the charge was vague but focussed its attention mainly on the question as to whether there had been a substantial compliance with the requirements of Art. 311 and whether the enquiry conformed to the principles of fairplay and natural justice. Considering the Service Rules already mentioned the High Court observed that there was no dispute that reports till 1940 were generally favourable to the plaintiff.

14. In our view reports earlier than 1944 should not have been considered at all inasmuch as he was allowed to cross the efficiency bar in that year. It is unthinkable that if the authorities took any serious view of the charge of dishonesty and inefficiency contained in the confidential reports of 1941 and 1942 they could have overlooked the same and recommended the case of the officer as one fit for crossing the efficiency bar in 1944. It will be noted that there was no specific complaint in either of the two years and at best there was only room for suspicion regarding his behaviour.

15. It further appears from the judgment of the High Court based mainly on the lengthy finding of the Superintendent of Police, Bishambar Das dated 25th May 1950 that from 1942 to April 1945 the respondent got 'A' class reports though his superior officers were not certain as regards his honesty. His integrity was considered to be doubtful in the succeeding reports up to 31st December 1946. As regards the first half of 1947 the Superintendent of Police had noted that he was not in a position to make any remark about his honesty as he had not seen the respondent's work at any police station. The Deputy Commissioner however remarked that his work was quite satisfactory and he was honest. For the remaining part of 1947 he received an 'A' report from the District Superintendent of Police who also stated that the respondent seemed to be honest and competent.

16. There can be no doubt that the 1948 report was a very damaging one and if the allegations contained therein had any substratum of truth the respondent could be dismissed from service on the strength of the charges based on those allegations alone. But, as already noted, the respondent was cleared of this charge.

17. The High Court opined that the enquiry officer, Bishambar Das, should not have neglected to summon five officers who made reports about the respondent and were available for examination at the enquiry. They were Chunilal Malhotra, Cboudhry Roshan Lal, Deputy Commissioner, Shri Ismail, Shri Holiday and Shri Sant Prakash Singh. According to the High Court the defence of the respondent in the enquiry being that the reports against him were based upon no sufficient data and/or were made partly because of the poisoning of the mind of the District Superintendent of Police by the Deputy Superintendent of Police on communal considerations the only way the respondent could have substantiated his defence version would be by putting questions to the reporting officers if made available during the enquiry. One of the above officers Shamsher Singh was actually examined as the respondent's witness in the suit and his evidence showed that he had left the column for honesty in the report for 1946 blank as he had not seen the respondent at his work. This evidence went to show that if he had been examined by the enquiry officer a portion of the report taken in consideration against the respondent would have been found to be without substance. Another officer, Chunilal Malhotra though not examined before the enquiry officer was called in defence in the suit. All that he could say was that he had received complaints against the respondent but he did not remember whether they were oral or in writing. The High Court justifiably commented that there was no sufficient reason for the enquiry officer refusing to summon Chunilal Malhotra. On an overall consideration of the facts, the High Court took the view that:

"The approach of the enquiry officer was such that whatever be the testimony of other witnesses, it could not undo the effect of the reports made by the superior officers about the plaintiff."

In other words the enquiry officer shut his mind to the testimony afforded by a large number of witnesses including a Deputy Commissioner, Under Secretary, two Superintendents of Police, a few Magistrates and some Deputy Superintendents of Police who had given evidence about the respondent's reputation and work.

18. Further the High Court took the view that the remarks of the Deputy Inspector General of Police against the respondent in the year 1948 that he was not worth being retained in service had influenced the entire approach of the enquiry officer who was a subordinate to the Deputy Inspector General of Police. The Deputy Superintendent of Police Lekhraj examined at the hearing of the suit by the respondent and to whom another enquiry against the respondent had been entrusted earlier by Bishambar Das, the inquiry officer, told the Court that when he (Lekhraj) exonerated the respondent in the other enquiry, Bishambar Das had sent for him and told him that the higher authorities wanted to take serious action to the extent of dismissal of the respondent.

19. In our view the High Court arrived at the correct conclusion and on the facts of this case it is impossible to hold that the respondent had been given reasonable opportunity of conducting his defence before the enquiry officer. From what we have stated it is clear that if the enquiry officer had summoned at least those witnesses who were available and who could have thrown some light on the reports made against the respondent the report might well have been different. We cannot also lose sight of the fact that charges based on the reports for the years 1941 and 1942 should not have been levelled against the respondent.

20. Learned counsel for the appellant relied on two decisions of the Orissa High Court in support of his contention that it was not necessary to examine the authors of the confidential reports against the respondent. In Sadananda Mohapatra v. State, AIR 1967 Orissa 49, the Court considered the question as to whether reasonable opportunity had in fact been given to the petitioner before the punishing authority had made use of the adverse remarks in the confidential character roll. According to the High Court the petitioner in his explanation to the second show cause notice had referred to the good services that he had rendered to the department. The High Court observed that the fact that the petitioner had done good work led the punishing authority to impose a lesser punishment and thus the confidential roll had helped the petitioner. It also appears from the judgment that the punishing authority in that case had during the personal hearing discussed the confidential character with the petitioner and accordingly the High Court was of opinion that even though the adverse remarks in the petitioner's confidential character roll were not included in the second show cause notice inasmuch as the same had been discussed at the personal hearing it could not be said that no reasonable opportunity had been given to the petitioner.

21. In our view the facts in this case are entirely different. The respondent before us wanted an opportunity by examining the witnesses mentioned by him to explain away the circumstances which had led to the making of the adverse remarks and he was given no such chance.

22. The second authority relied on for the appellant was State of Orissa v. Sailabehari, AIR 1963 Orissa 73. In this case the entry in the diary of Deputy Collector went to show that the Special Assistant Agent i.e. the respondent, had no reputation for honesty. The diary mentioned the source of information on which the remarks were based and although none of the informants figured as witnesses in the departmental enquiry the touring officer was examined as a witness and his tour diary proved at the inquiry and the respondent had been given an opportunity to cross-examine him. On those facts the High Court of Orissa, after discussing this position, took the view that although insufficient for the establishment of a criminal charge the position was different in the case of departmental enquiries where punishment could be based merely on general reputation for corrupt conduct.

23. In our view there was no flaw in the enquiry which the Orissa High Court was called upon to examine in that case and the above dictum of the High Court was not really called for.

24. Learned counsel also wanted to rely on a decision of this Court in State of Jammu and Kashmir v. Bakshi Ghulam Mohammed, 1966 (Supp) SCR 401 = (AIR 1967 SC 122), where the Court was dealing with the proceedings of a Commission of Inquiry under the Commissions of Inquiry Act. Section 10 of that Act gave the delinquent a right to be heard but only a restricted right of cross-examination i.e. it was confined only to the witnesses called to depose against the person demanding the right. It was further observed that as "the Act did not contemplate a right of hearing to include a right to cross-examine" "it will be natural to think that the statute did not intend that in other cases a party appearing before the Commission should have any further right of cross-examination". On the facts before it the Court came to the conclusion that no case had been made by Bakshi Ghulam Mohammad that rules of natural justice required that he should have a right to cross-examine all the persons who had sworn affidavits supporting the allegations made against him.

25. In our opinion the above observation regarding the limit of the right to cross-examine dissociated from the context in which it was made cannot help the appellant. Although the case is governed by Article 311 as it stood prior to its amendment in 1963 the respondent could not be deprived of an effective right to make representation against the action of dismissal. In our opinion refusal of the right to examine witnesses who had made general remarks against his character and were available for examination at the inquiry amounted to denial of a reasonable opportunity of showing cause against the action.

26. In the result we hold that the High Court came to the correct conclusion and the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2092
(V 57 C 445)

(From: Gujarat)*

J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

Union of India, Appellant v. Vasant Jayaram Karnik and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1585 of 1969, D/-
7-9-1970.

Constitution of India, Article 16 (1)
— Equality of opportunity in matters of employment — Seniority list —
Selection for promotion on the basis of seniority-cum-merit — List contrary to the rules governing seniority — Public servant in that list entitled to claim relief on footing that he is denied equality of opportunity.

A public servant placed in the list of seniority in a cadre or grade where selection for promotion is on the "basis of seniority-cum-merit" is entitled, on the plea that the list is contrary to the rules governing seniority, to claim relief that he is denied equality of opportunity. (Para 2)

Where the rules governing seniority provided that seniority of Income-tax Officers promoted to higher grade be fixed according to the date of promotion to a regular vacancy and for officers whose promotion was deferred on for not having completed a specific minimum length of gazetted service, to have their seniority in higher grade fixed as if they had been promoted in accordance with the seniority in the grade of Income-tax Officers unless any such officer was found unfit on merit; then the seniority list of Assistant Commissioners is liable to be quashed where Senior Officer in grade of Income-tax Officers is placed below Officers who were junior to him in that grade and was promoted many years after. The rule regarding officers whose promotion to the grade of Assistant Commissioners was deferred on the sole ground of their not having completed a specified minimum length of gazetted service, is not intended and cannot be interpreted contrary to all notions of justice and fair-play, to confer upon an officer, who was junior in the list of Income-tax Officers and who could not be considered for promotion on an earlier occasion, a right to be placed in the list of Assistant Commissioners above an officer senior to him in the list of Income-tax Officers and who was promoted before him. Special Civil Appln. No. 365 of 1967, D/- 6-2-1969 (Guj), Affirmed.

(Paras 14, 15, 16)

Dr. V. A. Seyid Muhammad, Senior
Advocate, (M/s. B. Datta and R. N.
Sachtheye, Advocates, with him), for Appellant; Mr. V. M. Tarkunde, Senior Advocate, (Mr. Jnanendra Lal, Advocate and Mr. B. R. Agarwala, Advocate of M/s. Gagrati and Co. with him)
(for No. 1), M/s. B. P. Maheshwari and
A. N. Parekh, Advocates (for Nos. 7 and 21) and Mr. A. J. Rana, Advocate and Mr. B. R. Agarwala, Advocate of M/s. Gagrati and Co. (for No. 35), for Respondents.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.:—Vasant Jayaram Karnik —hereinafter called 'Karnik'—moved before the High Court of Gujarat a petition praying for an order quashing the "list of seniority" of Assistant Commissioners of Income-tax framed by the Government of India "as of August 1, 1965, in which he was placed below twenty-nine named Officers (who will hereinafter be referred to collectively as respondents 6 to 34). He claimed that thereby he was denied the guarantee of equality of employment or employment to an office under the Union under Article 16 (1) of the Constitution. The High Court of Gujarat upheld his contention and issued a direction requiring the Union of India to determine the seniority of Karnik and other officers in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners of Income-tax in accordance with the law.

2. A public servant placed in the list of seniority in a cadre or grade where selection for promotion to the next higher grade is on the "basis of seniority-cum-merit" is entitled, on the plea that the list is contrary to the rules governing seniority, to claim relief on the footing that he is denied equality of opportunity in matters relating to employment.

3. Prior to September 1944, officers of the Income-tax Department were placed in two classes. In Class I were placed Commissioners of Income-tax and Assistant Commissioners of In-* Special Civil Appln. No. 365 of 1967, D/- 6-2-1969—Guj.

come-tax; in Class II were placed Income-tax Officers Grade I, Grade II and Grade III. In September 1944 the service was reorganised and the Commissioners of Income-tax, Assistant Commissioners of Income-tax and Income-tax Officers Grade I and II were placed in a new Class I; and the Income-tax Officers Grade III were placed in a new Class II. On reorganisation of the service some Income-tax Officers of the former Class II service were promoted to the new Class I. Those promotions were not strictly based on seniority, but on their performance in the former Class II service.

4. This appeal primarily concerns four sets of officers: they are—

(1) B. S. Nadkarni (hereinafter called Nadkarni) who was on reorganisation of the service promoted on August 1, 1946 as Income-tax Officer Grade II Class I and was confirmed in that grade with effect from August 15, 1947. He was promoted as Income-tax Officer Grade I Class I on January 4, 1950 and was confirmed in that grade from that date.

(2) V. J. Karnik (hereinafter called Karnik) who was on June 1, 1947 promoted as Income-tax Officer Grade II Class I and was confirmed in that Class on August 1, 1948. He was promoted as Income-tax Officer Grade I Class I on January 4, 1950 and was confirmed in that Grade with effect from the same date.

(3) Respondents 6 to 34. Out of these Respondents 6 to 21 were directly recruited as Income-tax Officers. Respondents 29 to 34 were promoted as Income-tax Officers from Class II. All these officers were promoted to Class I Grade I after Nadkarni and Karnik were promoted.

(4) Hansraj Chopra, Sham Singh and B. D. Kapoor. These Officers were promoted as Income-tax Officers Grade I Class I after Karnik, Nadkarni and respondents 6 to 34 were promoted.

5. In the "seniority list" of Income-tax Officers Class I Grade I prepared "as of August 1, 1953," Nadkarni was placed at No. 55; Karnik at No. 69; respondents 6 to 21 were placed at Nos. 82, 83, 84, 89, 87, 90, 85, 88 and 93 to 100 respectively (some other officers who are not before us occupying intervening places); respondents 22 to 34 were placed at Nos. 106 to 118; and Hansraj Chopra, Sham Singh and B. D. Kapoor at Nos. 119, 120 and 121 respectively.

6. Under the rules framed by the Central Board of Revenue promotion of Income-tax Officers Grade I Class I to the grade of Assistant Commissioners of Income-tax was to be made on the recommendation of a Committee called the Departmental Promotion Committee. Selection for promotion was to be made on merit, i.e. "giving greatest weightage to outstanding qualifications, record of work and ability rather than to mere seniority." The Committee after considering the cases of the Income-tax Officers Grade I Class I eligible for promotion made recommendations to the Central Government, and the Central Government promoted officers recommended as Assistant Commissioners of Income-tax.

7. At a meeting held in August 1949 the Committee resolved that "in the interest of efficiency of administration the cadre of Assistant Commissioners should be manned by officers who were mature and experienced", and recommended that no officer should be promoted as Assistant Commissioner until he had worked for not less than ten years as Income-tax Officer. The Central Government agreed with that recommendation and in consultation with the Federal Public Service Commission declared that no Income-tax Officer should ordinarily be considered for promotion as Assistant Commissioner unless he had completed at least ten years as Income-tax Officer. It was, however, found that an adequate number of officers with standing for ten years were not available for selection. By letter dated July 21, 1950, the Committee decided that all Income-tax Officers with more than gazetted service for nine years may be considered for selection. At a meeting of the Committee held in November 1951 the cases of officers who had completed gazetted service for nine years as Income-tax Officers were considered, and the Committee selected for promotion fifteen out of those officers as "fit for promotion" to the cadre of Assistant Commissioners. There were several vacancies likely to arise in the near future and to meet that emergency the Committee decided to consider for promotion officers who had not yet completed nine years' service as Income-tax Officers but had completed eight years' service on or before December 31, 1951. Nadkarni and Karnik who fell in this category were accordingly considered with other officers. Respondents 6 to 34 were not then considered as they had not completed the qualifying period of eight years. The Committee found that Nadkarni and Karnik were "not yet fit". Among the officers promoted as Assistant Commissioners on the recommendations made by the Committee at that meeting were Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor. At the next meeting of the Committee held in September 1952, Nadkarni was found fit for promotion, but Karnik was again found "not yet fit". It is not clear from the record whether at that meeting the rule relating to minimum service of nine years as Income-tax Officer was relaxed. It is however not disputed that respondents 6 to 34 were not then considered for promotion. Pursuant to the recommendation of the Committee, Nadkarni was posted as Assistant Commissioner in December 1952 and was confirmed as such with effect from December 18, 1955.

8. At the meeting of the Committee held in November 1953, Karnik was found fit and was selected for promotion. At this meeting again the rule requiring minimum service as Income-tax Officer for nine years was relaxed and Income-tax Officers who had completed service for eight years' as Income-tax Officers were considered for promotion. Karnik was promoted on February 22, 1954 and was confirmed in that post with effect from May 4, 1956. Respondents 6 to 34 were promoted on recommendations made in meetings of the Committee held in June 1954 and subsequent thereto.

9. Accordingly Nadkarni was promoted as Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax on December 22, 1952; Karnik was promoted on February 22, 1954; respondents 6 to 34 were promoted in and after 1955. Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor do not figure in this contest. It is said that they have long ago been superannuated.

10. All the officers who were promoted from the grade of Income-tax Officers on the basis of the recommendations of the Committee were posted initially as Officiating Assistant Commissioners. They were considered for confirmation only after they had put in service for two years as Assistant Commissioners. The first to be confirmed was Nadkarni on December 18, 1955. Karnik was next confirmed on May 4, 1956. Respondents 6 to 34 were confirmed later. At a meeting held some time in September 1959 three posts of Assistant Commissioners of Income-tax which were previously reserved for officers of "the Finance and Commerce Pool" were released with retrospective effect and those posts became available from May 1, 1956, for utilization for confirmation. Respondents 6, 7 and 8 were confirmed in those three posts with effect from May 1, 1956. But in the seniority list of Assistant Commissioners "as of August 1, 1954", published by the Central Board of Revenue, Karnik was shown below Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor. In the next list fixing seniority in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners "as of January 1, 1958" Nadkarni and Karnik were placed below Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor and also below respondents 6 to 34.

11. Representations made by Karnik to the Central Board of Revenue and the Central Government protesting against the determination of his seniority in the list as of January 1, 1958 were unsuccessful. A memorial submitted to the President was also unsuccessful. A fresh seniority list was thereafter issued by the Board of Direct Taxes (which had replaced the Central Board of Revenue) determining seniority "as of August 1, 1965." In that list Nadkarni and Karnik were placed below respondents 6 to 34. Representations made by Nadkarni in March 1966 requesting the Board of Direct Taxes to revise the seniority list were rejected.

12. A petition was then filed by Karnik in the High Court of Gujarat challenging "the legality and propriety of the list of seniority". Karnik prayed for a writ quashing the list determining seniority of Assistant Commissioners as of August 1, 1965. Nadkarni who was impleaded as a party to the petition supported the case set up by Karnik. In the view of the High Court, on a true interpretation of the appropriate rules, Nadkarni and Karnik were entitled to be ranked above respondents 6 to 34 and the interpretation on which the Union of India proceeded to give seniority to respondents 6 to 34 in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners was violative of the guarantee under Article 16 of the Constitution. The High Court accordingly declared that respondents 6 to 34 could not be placed above Nadkarni and Karnik in the grade of Assistant Commissioners, and directed that the "impugned seniority list as of August 1, 1965 must be quashed and set aside"; that the earlier confirmation of respondents 6, 7 and 8 with effect from May 1, 1956 be set aside; and that the Union Government do fix the seniority of Karnik, respondents 6 to 34 and Nadkarni in accordance with law. With certificate granted by the High Court this appeal has been preferred.

13. The relevant rules which governed seniority in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners may now be set out with modifications made from time to time. On January 16, 1950, the rules for determination of seniority of Assistant Commissioners were first made by the Government of India in consultation with the Federal Public Service Commission. The rules were—

"(i) Confirmed Assistant Commissioners should take seniority according to the date of their confirmation in the grade.

(ii) Officiating Assistant Commissioners should take seniority according to the length of continuous service in the grade of Assistant Commissioner, subject to the condition x      x      x      x      x.

(iii) The seniority of officers promoted to the grade of Assistant Commissioner after the date of publication of the final seniority list of Income-tax Officers should be fixed according to the date of promotion to a regular vacancy (not being a promotion as a matter of purely local arrangement) in the grade of Assistant Commissioner, subject, however, to the condition that where two or more officers have been simultaneously selected for promotion to the grade, their relative seniority will be based on their seniority as Income-tax Officers, Class I, Grade I....."

By letter dated September 9, 1952, the Government of India in consultation with the Union Public Service Commission modified rule (iii). The modified rule read as follows:

"The seniority of officers promoted to the grade of Assistant Commissioner after the date of publication of the final seniority list of Income-tax Officers should be fixed according to the date of promotion to a regular vacancy (not being a promotion as a matter of purely local arrangement) in the grade of Assistant Commissioner, provided, however, that—

(a) Where two or more officers have been simultaneously selected for promotion to the grade, their relative seniority will be based on their seniority as Income-tax Officers, Class I, Grade I, and that—

(b) Officers whose promotion to the grade of Assistant Commissioner was deferred on the sole ground of their not having completed a specified minimum length of gazetted service will, on their subsequent promotion to that grade, have their seniority in the grade of Assistant Commissioner fixed as if they had been promoted in accordance with the seniority in the grade of Income-tax Officer, Class I, Grade I, unless any such officer had been passed over for promotion to the Assistant Commissioner's grade on grounds of merit."

Another modification was made by amendment of proviso (b) to rule (iii) on August 31, 1957. The amended proviso (b) read as follows:—

"Officers whose promotion to the grade of Assistant Commissioner was deferred on the sole ground of their not having completed a specified minimum length of gazetted service will, on their subsequent promotion to and confirmation in that grade, have their seniority in the grade of Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax fixed as if they had been promoted in accordance with the seniority in the grade of Income-tax Officers Class I, Grade I, unless any such officer had been passed over for promotion to the Assistant Commissioner's grade on grounds of merit."

Rule (i) applied to Assistant Commissioners confirmed before January 16, 1950 and rule (ii) applied to the cases of Assistant Commissioners who were officiating at that date; and rule (iii) dealt with officers promoted after that date.

14. The interpretation placed by the Government of India was plainly inconsistent with the true intent of the rules. The Government of India determined the seniority inter se of the four sets of officers in the following sequence: Respondents 6 to 34, Chopra, Sham Singh, Kapoor, Nadkarni and Karnik. In the opinion of the Government of India since Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor were selected for promotion at a meeting at which Nadkarni and Karnik were not found fit, the former were entitled to be placed in the list of seniority above Nadkarni and Karnik. No fault may be found with that view. They further held that when Chopra, Sham Singh, Kapoor, Nadkarni and Karnik were considered for promotion, respondents 6 to 34 had not completed the minimum length of service and on that account had not been considered for promotion the latter "fell within the opening part of the proviso (b) to rule (iii)" and were entitled to be placed in the list of seniority above Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor and also above Nadkarni and Karnik, and they must be fitted in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners above Nadkarni and Karnik. This resulted in demoting Nadkarni and Karnik below respondents 6 to 34 — a consequence which could never have been envisaged. In the list of Income-tax Officers Respondents 6 to 34 were placed below Nadkarni and Karnik; they were promoted as Assistant Commissioners many years after Nadkarni and Karnik were promoted and confirmed. It could not however have been intended by the rule that because Nadkarni and Karnik could not claim seniority above Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor, they must in the list of Assistant Commissioners be placed below all Income-tax Officers who could not be considered at the meeting when Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor were promoted. In the seniority list of Income-tax Officers Class I, Grade I, Nadkarni and Karnik were placed above respondents 6 to 34. If under the proviso (b) to rule (iii) respondents 6 to 34 could not be placed below Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor even though those three latter officers were promoted earlier, Nadkarni and Karnik who were graded as senior to respondents 6 to 34 in the list of Income-tax Officers could not be relegated to ranks in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners below respondents 6 to 34. It is clear that different standards have been applied in determining the seniority of respondents 6 to 34 in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners vis-a-vis Chopra, Sham Singh and Kapoor on the one hand, and Nadkarni and Karnik on the other.

15. On a true interpretation of rule (iii) proviso (b) in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners, seniority should have been fixed in the order of Chopra, Sham Singh, Kapoor, Nadkarni, Karnik and respondents 6 to 34. The expression "officers whose promotion to the grade of Assistant Commissioners was deferred on the sole ground of their not having completed a specified minimum length of gazetted service" used in proviso (b) to rule (iii) refers to those Income-tax Officers who could not at a given meeting be considered for promotion, only because they did not satisfy the condition of minimum period of qualifying service for promotion. In our judgment, the following rules emerge. Between Income-tax Officers promoted at the same meeting, their seniority inter se will be reflected in the list of Assistant Commissioners; between an officer promoted earlier and another officer senior to him, but who was not considered in the meeting when the former was promoted, seniority in the list of Income-tax Officers will be reflected in the higher cadre where the senior officer was considered and not promoted, and the junior officer was promoted at that meeting, the order of promotion will govern seniority in the higher grade where a senior officer is promoted and confirmed and at a later meeting a junior officer is promoted, the latter cannot claim to be placed above the senior officer in the higher cadre relying upon the circumstance that he could not be considered for promotion at the earlier meetings, because he had not to his credit the qualifying minimum service. The High Court was, in our judgment right in observing that the proviso was intended to neutralise the effect of the minimum service rule in determining seniority in the grade of Assistant Commissioners. Rule (iii) is not intended, contrary to all notions of justice and fair-play, to confer upon an Officer, who was junior in the list of Income-tax Officers and who could not be considered for promotion on an earlier occasion, a right to be placed in the list of Assistant Commissioners above an officer senior to him in the list of Income-tax Officers and who was promoted before him.

16. If respondents 6 to 34 had been considered and selected for promotion when Nadkarni and Karnik were promoted after their officiation period was over, they could not have been placed in the list of Assistant Commissioners above Nadkarni and Karnik. The circumstance that respondents 6 to 34 were not considered because they had not completed the specified minimum period of gazetted service and were considered and promoted later did not, when they were promoted, confer upon them the privilege of being placed in the list of Assistant Commissioners above Nadkarni and Karnik.

17. We accordingly agree with the High Court that the seniority list must be quashed.

18. Kalwant Rai respondent No. 36 in this appeal has claimed that he is entitled to the benefit of the interpretation placed by us. His case has apparently not been investigated by the High Court and we do not think that at this stage we would be justified in making an order in his favour. We have set out the principles governing the seniority in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners. The Central Government will, we have no doubt, readjust the seniority of all officers including Kalwant Rai in the cadre of Assistant Commissioners in the light of the principles explained by us.

19. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs in favour of Karnik and Nadkarni.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2097
(V 57 C 446)

S. M. SIKRI, J. M. SHELAT,
V. BHARGAVA, G. K. MITTER
AND C. A. VAIDIALINGAM JJ.

(1) Shiv Kirpal Singh (in E. P. No. 1 of 1969), (2) Phul Singh (in E. P. No. 3 of 1969), (3) N. Sri Rama Reddi and others (in E. P. No. 4 of 1969), (4) Abdul Ghani Dar and others (in E. P. No. 5 of 1969), Petitioners v. (1) V. V. Giri (in E. Ps. Nos. 1, 4 and 5 of 1969); (2) Union of India and another (in E. P. No. 3 of 1969), Respondents.

JN/JN/E257/70/DHZ/M

1970 S. C./132 XII G—7

Attorney-General for India, Election Commission of India and Returning Officer, Presidential Election (in all the Petns.) (By notice.)

Election Petns. Nos. 1 and 3 to 5 of 1969, D/- 14-9-1970.

(A) Penal Code (1860), S. 171-A — Electoral right — Interference with — Electors threatened with serious consequences with object of unduly influencing them for changing their decision to nominate certain person as their candidate — This does not constitute any interference with the right to vote or refrain from voting at an election. (Para 10)

(B) Penal Code (1860), S. 171-C — Undue influence at election — Threat to members of Legislative Assembly of Bengal that if certain candidate was elected he would enforce President's rule in Bengal — Held this did not amount to undue influence. (Para 21)

(C) Penal Code (1860), S. 171-C (2) — Expression "Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1)" — Meaning.

When the expression "without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1)" is used anything contained in the provisions following this expression is not intended to cut down the generality of the meaning of the preceding provision. The Court has to look at sub-sec. (1) as it is without restricting its provisions by what is contained in sub-section (2). AIR 1945 PC 156, Relied on. (Paras 41, 42)

(D) Penal Code (1860), Sec. 171-C — Undue influence — What constitutes — There can be undue influence even at the stage when elector goes through mental process of weighing merits and demerits of candidates and makes his choice — (Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), Section 18). (Per majority, Bhargava and Mitter, J. Contra).

(Per Majority, Bhargava and Mitter, JJ. Contra): The scope of S. 171-C is very wide. There can be undue influence even at the stage when the elector goes through the mental process of weighing the merits and demerits of the candidates and makes his choice.

A pamphlet which after giving various fictitious incidents of sexual immorality, describes a candidate as debauch without any sense of shame or morality and asks the electors whether the name of the Congress be lowered to such depths that such moral leper, such depraved man should be set up as the Congress candidate for the highest post of President and further adds that if such candidate becomes President he will turn Rashtrapati Bhavan into a barem, a centre of vice and immorality comes under Sec. 171-C, even if it may be covered under Section 171-G.

If distribution of the pamphlet by post to electors or in the Central Hall of the Parliament is proved it would constitute 'undue influence' within Sec. 18 of Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act and it is not necessary for the election petitioners to go further and prove that statements contained in the pamphlet were made the subject of a verbal appeal or persuasion by one member of the electoral college to another and particularly to those in the Congress fold.

It is the degree of gravity of the allegation which will be the determining factor in deciding whether it falls under Section 171-C or Section 171-G. If the allegation, though false and relating to a candidate's personal character or conduct, made with the intent to affect the result of an election does not amount to interference or attempt at such interference the offence would be the lesser one. If, on the other hand, it amounts to interference or an attempt to interfere it would be the graver offence under Section 171-F read with Sec. 171-C. (1953) 7 Ele LR 457 (Ele. Tri., Kotah) and (1958) 19 Ele LR 203 (Orissa) and AIR 1968 SC 904, Relied on.

(Paras 36, 40, 42, 46, 53, 54, 56)

This pamphlet came under Section 171-C even though it was issued anonymously. If a member of Parliament distributed a pamphlet, he was identifying himself with it unless he expressly dissociated himself from the pamphlet. The distribution in the Central Hall by members of Parliament had the same effect as if they had endorsed the pamphlet in writing.

(Para 55)

Per Bhargava, J.—The offence of undue influence comes in at the stage when the offender interferes or attempts to interfere with the free exercise of the choice of voting in accordance with the decision already taken by the voter. If any acts are done which merely influence the voter in making his choice between one candidate or another, they will not amount to interference with the free exercise of the electoral right. In fact, all canvassing that is carried on and which is considered legitimate is intended to influence the choice of a voter at the first stage when the elector goes through the mental process of taking a decision that he will vote in favour of a particular candidate and that is quite permissible. Mere false propaganda as to the personal character of a candidate or even relating to the party sponsoring the candidate cannot amount to the corrupt practice of undue influence. False statements about the personal character or conduct of the candidate may, of course, be scurrilous and foul; but, even then, the offence committed would fall under Section 171-G, Penal Code. Case law discussed.

(Paras 255, 256, 258A, 265)

Per Mitter, J.—Before any publication of a defamatory matter relating to a candidate can be treated as commission of the offence of undue influence there must be some overt act in addition to the mere publication — some attempt or persuasion of a voter to restrain the free choice of a candidate. If anonymous posters containing defamatory matter about a candidate's personal conduct or character were to be displayed in prominent places in the constituency so as to attract the notice of electors, it would come within the mischief of Section 171-G of the Penal Code but would fall short of exercise of undue influence under Sec. 171-C. But if an unsigned pamphlet containing matter defamatory of the personal conduct or character of a candidate be pressed personally upon an elector by another with an attempt to make the receiver believe that there was some basis for the charges levelled against the candidate, the person receiving the pamphlet would be likely to give credence to the imputations made therein and would thus be subject to a restraint on his franchise. The publication of a false statement of fact relating to the conduct and character of a person coupled with an attempt to persuade electors by such publication would attract the operation of Sec. 171-C (1) of the Penal Code. Case law discussed.

(Paras 304, 305, 314)

(E) Evidence — Appreciation of — Particulars regarding distribution of pamphlet and evidence of witnesses — Conflict between — Field witnesses could not be disbelieved only because particulars were at variance with the evidence — But fact could be taken into consideration while appreciating evidence of witnesses. (Para 63)

(F) Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), S. 18 (1) (b) — Undue influence by stranger — Effect — It should materially affect election — Burden of proof is on petitioner.

Section 18 includes undue influence committed even by a stranger, having nothing to do with the returned candidate, as a ground for declaring the election to be void, the only condition in respect of such an act being that it should have materially affected the election. The burden of proving that the result of the election has been materially affected is on the election petitioners. Case law discussed.

(Paras 38, 152)

(Held it was not proved that the result of the election had been materially affected by distribution by strangers of a certain pamphlet containing filthy allegations about the opposite candidate.) (Para 218)

Per Mitter, J.—A charge of undue influence is in the nature of criminal charge and must be proved by cogent and reliable evidence not on the mere ground of balance of probability but on reasonable certainty that the persons charged therewith have committed the offence on the strength of evidence which leaves no scope for doubt as to whether they had or had not done so. Even if there be no provision in the Act of 1952 of giving notice to the persons who are charged with having committed undue influence or of impleading them as parties it is the duty of the election petitioners to lead direct evidence on the point and the respondent cannot take shelter behind the plea that he owes no duty to call them or to disprove the allegations made against them if he is to have his election maintained by the Court. However onerous the task of the Court may be because of the partisan nature of the witnesses, it cannot reject the oral evidence adduced merely on that ground, but it has to examine the same carefully and come to a conclusion whether the evidence establishes the corrupt practice beyond reasonable doubt.

(Para 321)

(G) Constitution of India, Article 71 — Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), Part III — Validity — Not ultra vires Article 71 (1) of the Constitution.

Even if it is taken that Article 71 (1) defines the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, the manner in which that jurisdiction is to be exercised can only be regulated by an Act of Parliament passed in exercise of its power under Article 71 (3). In the case of Art. 71 no need was felt of making a provision similar to Art. 329 (b) when Art. 71 (1) itself laid down the limitation that all doubts and disputes arising out of or in connection with the election of a President or Vice-President are to be enquired into and decided by the Supreme Court whose decision shall be final. This limitation does not affect or limit the power of Parliament to regulate matters relating to filing of election petitions in the Supreme Court and of the grounds on which the elections can be challenged when the Supreme Court exercises its jurisdiction under Art. 71 (1). Hence Part III of Act of 1952 cannot be held to be ultra vires Art. 71 (1). AIR 1958 SC 139, Relied on. (Paras 226, 227)

(H) Constitution of India, Arts. 71, 245 — Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), Sec. 21 — Validity — Not ultra vires on ground that rule-making power suffers from vice of excessive delegation of legislative powers.

Section 21 of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act does not suffer from the vice of excessive delegation of legislative powers. Parliament laid down the essential matters of policy relating to elections, including election petitions, in the Act itself and, thereafter, in Section 21, delegated the power of making rules to the Central Government, subject to two principles of guidance. One is that the Rules are to be made after consulting the Election Commission, and the second is that the Rules must be such as are needed for carrying out the purposes of the Act. This second limitation clearly requires that the Government, in making rules, has to ensure that the Rules are all required for carrying out the purposes of the Act; and that itself is a sufficient limitation on the exercise of that power arbitrarily by the Government. In fact, Parliament all the time has the power of altering the Rules by amending the Act itself in case it disapproves of any of the Rules made by the Government, while any Rule, which is shown to have been made in contravention of the provisions of the Act or for any reason other than to give effect to the purposes of the Act, would be declared void by the Court not on the ground that there was excessive delegation of legislative power, but that it goes beyond the scope of the power conferred on the Government under Sec. 21.

(Para 228)

(I) Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Rules (1952), R. 4 (1), (2) — Validity — Is intra vires Sec. 21 of Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952).

The requirement in Rule 4 (1) that a certified copy of the entry showing that the candidate is an elector in a Parliamentary constituency is necessary in order to enable the Returning Officer to check whether the candidate is eligible for nomination and election. The requirement relates to the manner of proving that the candidate is an elector in a Parliamentary constituency under Sec. 21 (2) (d). In any case, this provision in Rule 4 (1) would be fully covered by Section 21 (1) of the Act inasmuch as the requirement is for no other purpose except of ensuring a smooth and proper election to the office of the President or Vice-President which object can be achieved by enabling the Returning Officer to ensure that candidates, whose nominations are accepted by him, are eligible for election. Consequently, Rule 4 (1) is within the scope of the power conferred on the Central Government to make rules for giving effect to the purposes of the Act. AIR 1966 SC 1626, Relied on.

(Para 229)

The published electoral roll may be misleading if it is allowed to be filed before the Returning Officer to show eligibility in the case of a Presidential or Vice-Presidential election. That seems to be the reason why Rule 4 (1) lays down that a certified copy of the entry alone will be the proper manner of satisfying the Returning Officer of the eligibility of the candidate. Rule 4

(2), which prescribes the consequence for non-compliance with the requirement of Rule 4 (1) must also be held to be valid as it is intended merely to make the valid Rule 4 (1) effective.

(Para 230)

(J) Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Rules (1952), Rules 4 (3) and 6 (3) (e) — Validity — Rule 4 (3) is validly made under Sec. 21 of Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952) — Is not in derogation of Sec. 5 (2) of the Act — Rule 6 (3) (e) which is consequential is also valid.

Rule 4 (3) is not in derogation of the rights conferred by Sec. 5 (2) of Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952). Section 5 (2) cannot be read as conferring any right either on the candidate or on the electors in respect of signing of nomination papers. Section 5 only lays down the essential ingredients of the process of nomination, leaving the details of the manner of nomination to be filled up by Rules made by the Government under Sec. 21 of the Act. Rule 4 (3), which requires that no elector shall subscribe, whether as proposer or seconder, more than one nomination paper at any election, is supplementary to Sec. 5 (2) as containing a more detailed direction in respect of filing of nomination papers. The fact that there is no ban in Section 5 (2) of the Act on an elector signing more than one nomination paper as a proposer or a seconder does not mean that Rule 4 (3) of the Rules could not have been competently made by the Government. Hence Rule 4 (3) was validly made by the Government in exercise of its rule-making power under Section 21 of the Act. That Rule being valid, Rule 6 (3) (e) which is consequential, must also be held to be valid. AIR 1968 SC 1203, Distinguished.

(Paras 232, 233, 234, 235)

(K) Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Rules (1952), R. 4 (1) — Requirement of certified copy — Every Government servant having custody of document can issue copy.

There is nothing in the Rules framed under the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act, or under the Representation of the People Act, 1950 and Rules framed thereunder, requiring that a certified copy of the electoral roll must necessarily be issued by either an Electoral Registration Officer or an Assistant Electoral Registration Officer. Every Government servant, who has custody of a document, is competent to issue certified copies of that document.

(Para 240)

(L) Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), Sec. 5 (2) — Nomination paper signed by proposer and seconder after candidate had done so — Candidate subsequently presenting nomination paper before Returning Officer — Held by such step candidate indicated his assent to being nominated by the particular proposer and seconder — Nomination not invalid — The Legislature, when enacting the Act, must be presumed to know that this was the law as interpreted in India and, consequently, when the language incorporated in Section 5 (2) of the Act was used, it must have been intended that nomination papers would not be invalid by reason of the candidate making his signature before the proposer and the seconder. Case law discussed.

(Paras 241, 244)

(M) Constitution of India, Article 54 (b) — 'Legislative Assemblies of the States' — Union territories are not States — Legislatures created under Art. 239A are not legislative assemblies of States.

The new definition of "State" in Section 3 (58) of the General Clauses Act as a result of modifications and adaptations under Article 372A introduced in 1956 would, no doubt, apply to the interpretation of all laws of Parliament but it cannot apply to the interpretation of the Constitution, because Article 367 was not amended and it was not laid down that the General Clauses Act, as adapted or modified under any Article other than Art. 372, will also apply to the interpretation of the Constitution. Since, until its amendment in 1956, Sec. 3 (58) of the General Clauses Act did not define "State" as including Union Territories for purposes of interpretation of Art. 54, the Union Territories cannot be treated as included in the word "State". A Legislature created by Parliament under Article 239A of the Constitution is not a Legislative Assembly as contemplated by Article 168 or Article 54. Members of Legislatures created for Union Territories under Art. 239A cannot, therefore, be held to be members of Legislative Assemblies of States.

(Paras 247, 248)

(N) Constitution of India, Art. 58 — Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), S. 5 (2) — Validity — Cannot be considered as curtailing rights under Article 58.

Section 5 (2) of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act was enacted by Parliament in exercise of its power of regulating all matters relating to or connected with the election of a President or Vice-President. The requirement that every person must be nominated by two electors as proposer and seconder is a reasonable requirement relating to regulation of election to the office of a President and cannot be held to be a curtailment of the right of a qualified candidate to stand as a candidate under Art. 58.

(Para 249)

(O) Constitution of India, Article 71 (1) — Part III of Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952) containing S. 18 not being ultra vires Art. 71 (1), petitioners cannot challenge election of President on grounds other than those mentioned in S. 18.

(Para 250)

(P) Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), Sec. 18 (1) (a) — Bribery — Proof — A general allegation that bribery was rampant in the elections could not be made the subject-matter of a specific charge of commission of offence of bribery.

(Para 252)

(Q) Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), Sec. 18 (1) (a) — Bribery — Licence granted to a private limited company with specific purpose of obtaining vote of an elector and a Member of Parliament, for a candidate — That would constitute bribery.

(Para 253)

(R) Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), Sec. 17 (2) — Election petition — Respondent succeeding — However both sides being responsible for putting into witness box large number of persons deliberately giving evidence which was not true — Held proper course was not to award costs even to successful party.

(Para 357)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1970) Civil Appeal No. 1540 of 1969, D/- 20-1-1970 (SC), G. K. Samal v. R. V. Rao	152
(1969) AIR 1969 SC 663 (V 56) = Civil Appeal No. 683 of 1968, D/- 12-8-1968, Paokai Haokip v. Rishang	152
(1969) AIR 1969 SC 734 (V 56) = (1969) 3 SCR 217, Manubhai Nandlal Amersey v. Popatlal Manilal Joshi	264
(1969) AIR 1969 SC 1201 (V 56) = (1969) 3 SCR 603, Samant N. Balakrishna v. George Fernandez	153, 320
(1969) Civil App. No. 1315 of 1968, D/- 9-1-1969 (SC), Lalroukung v. Hoakholal Thangjom	263
(1968) AIR 1968 SC 904 (V 55) = (1968) 2 SCR 133, Baburao Patel v. Dr. Zakir Hussain	51, 260, 313
(1968) AIR 1968 SC 1203 (V 55) = (1968) 3 SCR 246, Amolak Chand v. Raghuveer Singh	233
(1966) AIR 1966 SC 824 (V 53) = (1966) 2 SCR 564, Mahadeo v. Babu Udai Pratap Singh	152
(1966) AIR 1966 SC 1626 (V 53) = (1966) 3 SCR 543, Ranjit Singh v. Pritam Singh	229
(1965) AIR 1965 SC 183 (V 52) = (1964) 6 SCR 750, Jagdev Singh v. Pratap Singh	319
(1964) AIR 1964 SC 1366 (V 51) = (1964) 5 SCR 12, Mohan Singh v. Bhanwarlal	318
(1962) AIR 1962 SC 1156 (V 49) = 1962 Supp (3) SCR 114, Inder Lal v. Lal Singh	262, 313
(1961) AIR 1961 Punj 383 (V 48) = 63 Pun LR 212, Amir Chand Totaram v. Sucheta Kripalani	267
(1959) AIR 1959 SC 855 (V 46) = 1959 Supp (2) SCR 748, Ram Dial v. Sant Lal	261, 312A
(1959) AIR 1959 Madh Pra 58 (V 46) = 15 ELR 219, Inayatullah v. Diwanchand Mahajan	153
(1959) AIR 1959 Orissa 188 (V 46) = 19 ELR 278, Abdul Rahiman Khan v. Radha Krishna Biswas	266, 312
(1958) AIR 1958 SC 139 (V 45) = 1958 SCR 648, Dr. N. B. Khare v. Election Commission of India	226

(1958) 18 Ele LR 209, (Ele Tri Delhi), Amir Chand v. Sucheta Kripalani	271, 308
(1958) 18 Ele LR 403 (Ele Tri Surat), Kataria Takandas Hemraj v. Pinto Frederick Michael	272, 309
(1958) 19 Ele LR 203 (Orissa), Radhakanta Mishra v. Nityananda Mahapatra	49-50, 265, 310
(1957) AIR 1957 SC 242 (V 44) = 1957 SCR 179, Surendra Nath Khosla v. Dalip Singh	152
(1957-1958) 13 Ele LR 1 (SC), Yamuna Prasad v. Jagdish Prasad Khare	244
(1956) 12 Ele LR 378 (Ele Tri Lucknow), Radha Krishna v. Tara Chand	270, 307
(1954) AIR 1954 SC 513 (V 41) = (1955) 1 SCR 509, Vashist Narain Sharma v. Dev Chandra	152, 153
(1953) 6 Ele LR 316 (Election Tribunal Patiala), Sardul Singh v. Hukam Singh	265, 268
(1953) 7 Ele LR 457 (Ele Tri Kotah), Jujhar Singh v. Bhairon Lall	48, 265, 269, 306
(1945) AIR 1945 PC 156 (V 32) = 1945 FCR 195, King Emperor v. Sibnath Banerji	41
(1935-1950) 2 Doabia's EC 150, Amritsar City (Mohammadan) Constituency Case No. 2	47, 308
(1935-1950) 2 Doabia's EC 368, Surendra Narayan Sinha v. Babu Amulyadhane Roy	153
(1935-51) Election Cases at p. 147 Case No. 24 (by Sen & Poddar) Mahant Digvijai Nath v. Sri Prakash	244
(1898) 1898-2 QBD 202 = 67 LJ QB 925, Cox v. Davies	243
(1881) 7 QBD 369 = 50 LJ QB 775, Harmon v. Park	241 242, 243
(1869) 1 O' M & H 22 = 20 LT 11, In re Lich Field Case	296
(1869) 1 O' M & H 236 = 21 LT 264, Norfolk (Northern Case)	307
(1864-1935) 2 Doabia's EC at p. 7 Case No. 121 (1955 Edn.), Jamna Prasad v. Sri Krishna Prasad	242, 244
(1864-1935) 2 Doabia's EC at p. 73 Case No. 120 (1955 Edn.) Prosanna Kumar Das Gupta v. Chattaranjan Das	243
(1864-1935) 2 Doabia's EC 117, Sh. Mohd. Sadig v. Dr. Saifuddin Kitchlew	306

(1864-1935) 2 Doabia's Ele Cas
243, Lyallapur and Jhang
General Constituency Case
No. 2

306

(In E. P. No. 1 of 1969): M/s. K. C. Sharma, M. S. Gupta, K. L. Rath and C. L. Lakhanpal, Advocates, for Petitioner; (In E. P. No. 3 of 1969): The Petitioner in person; (In E. P. No. 4 of 1969): M/s. K. C. Sharma, K. L. Rath, C. L. Lakhanpal, S. K. Dhingra and M. S. Gupta, Advocates, for Petitioners; (In E. P. No. 5 of 1969): M/s. S. C. Malik, M. S. Gupta and K. L. Rath, Advocates, for Petitioners; (In E. P. No. 1 of 1969): M/s. C. K. Daphtary, D. Narasaraaju, Mohan Kumaramangalam and S. T. Desai, Senior Advocates (M/s. S. K. Dholakia and A. S. Nambiar, Advocates, with them), for Respondent; Mr. Jagdish Swarup, Solicitor-General of India and Dr. L. M. Singhvi, Senior Advocate (M/s. R. H. Dhebar and S. P. Nayar, Advocates, with them), for Respondent No. 1 (In E. P. No. 3 of 1969), and the Attorney-General for India, Election Commission of India and Returning Officer, Presidential Election (In E. Ps. Nos. 3 to 5 of 1969); (In E. P. No. 3 of 1969): M/s. C. K. Daphtary, D. Narasaraaju, and Mohan Kumaramangalam, Senior Advocates, (M/s. A. S. Nambiar and S. K. Dholakia, Advocates, with them), for Respondent No. 2; (In E. Ps. Nos. 4 and 5 of 1969): M/s. C. K. Daphtary, D. Narasaraaju, S. T. Desai and Mohan Kumaramangalam, Senior Advocates (M/s. H. K. L. Bhagat and S. K. Dholakia, Advocates, and M/s. J. B. Dadachanji, Ravinder Narain and O. C. Mathur, Advocates of M/s. J. B. Dadachanji and Co., with them), for Respondent; (In E. P. No. 1 of 1969): Mr. Jagdish Swarup, Solicitor-General of India and Dr. L. M. Singhvi, Senior Advocate (M/s. S. P. Nayar, R. H. Dhebar and Miss Lily Thomas, Advocates, with them), for the Attorney-General for India, Election Commission of India and Returning Officer, Presidential Election.

The judgment of Sikri, Shelat and Vaidialingam, JJ. was delivered by SIKRI, J.:— On May 11, 1970, this Court dismissed the above petitions and stated that reasons would be given later. We now proceed to give the reasons.

2. These four election petitions filed under Section 14 of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (XXXI of 1952) (hereinafter referred to as the Act), and Article 71 of the Constitution of India challenge the election of the respondent, Shri V. V. Giri, to the office of the President of India. The petitioner in Election Petition No. 1 of 1969, Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh, was a candidate in the election, and so was the petitioner in Election Petition No. 3, Shri Phul Singh. The nominations of both these petitioners were rejected by the Returning Officer. Election Petition No. 4 was filed by Shri N. Sri Rama Reddy, M. P., and twelve other electors, all members of Parliament. Election Petition No. 5 was filed by Shri Abdul Ghani Dar, M. P., and nine other members of Parliament and eight members of Legislative Assemblies of Haryana, Madhya Pradesh and Bihar. Shri V. V. Giri is the sole respondent in Election Petitions Nos. 1, 4 and 5 while in Election Petition No. 3 he was impleaded as respondent No. 2 and Union of India through the Election Commission, was impleaded as respondent No. 1.

3. After the sad demise of the then President of India, Dr. Zakir Hussain, on May 3, 1969, the Election Commission issued a notification under S. 4 of the Act appointing July 24, 1969, as the last date for filing the nomination papers, July 26, 1969, as the date for scrutiny of the nomination papers, and July 29, 1969, as the last date for withdrawal of nomination papers. Polling was fixed for August 16, 1969. 24 nomination papers were filed before the Returning Officer. On scrutiny which took place on July 26, 1969, the Returning Officer rejected 9 nomination papers, including the nomination papers of Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh, petitioner in Election Petition No. 1, and Shri Phul Singh, petitioner in Election Petition No. 3. He accepted the nomination papers of 15 candidates. No candidate withdrew his nomination by the due date. Counting of votes took place on August 20, 1969, when the result was announced and the respondent, Shri V. V. Giri, was declared elected.

4. The election was sought to be challenged on various grounds in these election petitions. Some of these grounds were common. The grounds may be broadly formulated as follows:

(1) That the nomination papers of Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh, Shri Charan Lal Sahu and Shri Yogi Raj were wrongly rejected by the Returning Officer;

(2) That the nomination papers of Shri V. V. Giri the respondent, were wrongly accepted by the Returning Officer;

(3) That the nomination papers of Shri Rajbhaj Pandurang Nathuji, Shri Santosh Singh Kachhwaha, Shri Babu Lal Mag and Shri Ram Dulare Tripathi were wrongly accepted by the Returning Officer;

(4) That Part III and Section 21 of the Act are ultra vires the Constitution;

(5) That Rules 4 and 6 (3) (a) of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Rules, 1952 (hereinafter referred to as the Rules), promulgated under Section 21 of the Act, are ultra vires the Constitution and the Act;

(6) That the elected members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories were entitled to be included in the Electoral college for the election of the President and their wrongful non-inclusion had not only materially affected the result of the election but also violated Article 14 of the Constitution;

(7) That the petitioners were entitled to dispute the election even on grounds other than those mentioned in Section 18 of the Act;

(8) That the offence of bribery at the election had been committed by the respondent and his supporters with his connivance; and

(9) That the result of the election had been materially affected by the commission of the offence of bribery by persons other than the respondent.

5. In addition to these allegations it was alleged that the offence of undue influence had been committed at the election with the connivance of the respondent. In any event the result of the election had been materially affected by the commission of this offence. We will elaborate the pleadings on this point when we come to deal with the issues arising out of that allegation.

6. We have read the judgment prepared by Bhargava, J. He has dealt fully with the issues arising out of the allegations other than the allegation of undue influence and, as we agree with him, it is not necessary to add anything to his reasoning. We may, however, reproduce the issues and the conclusions thereon.

Issue No. 5 of Election Petitions Nos. 1, 4 and 5/1969

E. P. No. 1: Whether Section 21 of the Act is ultra vires the Constitution of India?

E. P. Nos. 4 & 5: Whether Part III and Section 21 of the Act are ultra vires the Constitution of India?

We hold that Part III and Section 21 of the Act are not ultra vires the Constitution of India.

Issue No. 6 of Election Petitions Nos. 1, 4 and 5/69

E. P. Nos. 1, 4 & 5: Whether Rules 4 and 6 (3) (e) of the Rules are ultra vires the Constitution and the rule-making power of the Central Government?

We hold that Rule 4 (3) of the Rules was validly made by the Government in exercise of its rule-making power under Section 21 of the Act. That rule being valid, Rule 6 (3) (e) of the Rules, which is consequential, must also be held to be valid.

Issue No. 1 in Election Petitions Nos. 1, 4 & 5/1969.

E. P. No. 1: Whether the nomination papers of the petitioner, Charan Lal Sahu and Yogi Raj were wrongly rejected as alleged in paragraphs 5 (a) and (b), 6 and 7 of the petition?

E. P. No. 4: Whether the nomination papers of Shiv Kirpal Singh, Charan Lal Sahu and Yogi Raj were wrongly rejected as alleged in paragraphs 8 (a) and 9 (a), (b) and (c) of the petition?

E. P. No. 5: Whether the nomination papers of Shiv Kirpal Singh, Charan Lal Sahu and Yogi Raj were wrongly rejected as alleged in paragraphs 8 (a) and 9 of the petition?

We hold that the nomination paper of Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh was rightly rejected on the ground that it was not accompanied by a certified copy of the entry relating to him in the electoral roll of the Parliamentary constituency in which he was registered as a voter. We further hold that the nomination paper of Sri Charan Lal Sahu was rightly rejected on the ground that he was not 35 years of age on the date of nomination. We also hold that the nomination paper of Shri Yogi Raj was rightly rejected on the ground that he had been proposed and seconded by the same electors who had proposed and seconded another candidate, Shri Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji, the nomination paper of the latter having been received earlier by the Returning Officer.

Issue No. 2 in Election Petition Nos. 1 and 5 and Issue No. 3 in Election Petition No. 4 of 1969.

E. P. No. 1: Whether the nomination papers of the respondent were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 5 (c) and 8 of the petition?

E. P. No. 4: Whether the nomination papers of the respondent were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 8 (c) and 11 of the petition?

E. P. No. 5: Whether the nomination papers of the respondent were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 8 (b) and 10 of the petition?

We hold that the nomination papers of the respondent were validly accepted. The certified copies of the electoral roll filed with the nomination papers were issued by the appropriate authority.

Issue No. 3 in E. Ps. Nos. 1 and 5 and issue No. 2 in E. P. No. 4/1969.

E. P. No. 1: Whether the nomination papers of Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji and Babu Lal Mag were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 5 (b) and 9 of the petition?

E. P. No. 4: Whether the nomination papers of Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji, Babu Lal Mag and Ram Dulare Tripathi were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 8 (b) and 10 (a), (b) and (c) of the petition?

E. P. No. 5: Whether the nomination papers of Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji, Santosh Singh Kachhwaha, Babu Lal Mag and Ram Dulare Tripathi were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 8 (c) and 11 of the petition?

We hold that the nomination paper of Shri Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji was validly accepted, the certified copy of the electoral roll filed by him was a valid and a good copy. We further hold that the nomination paper of Shri Santosh Singh Kachhwaha was not invalid even though he signed his nomination paper before his seconder had signed it. His nomination paper, therefore, was rightly accepted. We further hold that the nomination paper of Shri Babu Lal Mag was not invalid even though he had signed his nomination paper before it was signed by the proposer and the seconder. His nomination paper was, therefore, rightly accepted. We further hold that the nomination paper of Shri Ram Dulare Tripathi was not invalid. The disputed signatures have not been shown to be not genuine.

Issue No. 4 in E. P. No. 1 and issue No. 7 in E. P. Nos. 4 and 5 of 1969.

(a) Whether the elected members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories were entitled to be included in the electoral college for the election of the President?

(b) If so, whether the non-inclusion of the members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories in the electoral college amounts to non-compliance with the provisions of the Constitution? If so, whether the result of the election has been materially affected by such non-compliance?

(c) Whether the alleged non-compliance with the provisions of the Constitution has violated Article 14 of the Constitution?

We hold that members of Legislatures created for Union Territories under Article 239A cannot be held to be members of Legislative Assemblies of States. They were, therefore, rightly excluded from the electoral college. Issue No. 4 (a) in Election Petition No. 1 and Issues Nos. 7 (a) in Election Petitions Nos. 4 and 5 are accordingly decided against the petitioners. In view of this conclusion Issue No. 4 (b) and Issue No. 4 (c) of Election Petition No. 1 and Issues Nos. 7 (b) and (c) of Election Petitions Nos. 4 and 5 do not arise.

Issues Nos. 1 and 2 in Election Petition No. 3 of 1969.

1. Whether the nomination paper of Phul Singh, the petitioner, was wrongly rejected?

2. What relief, if any, is the petitioner entitled to?

We hold that the nomination paper of Shri Phul Singh was rightly rejected on the ground that his nomination paper was not signed either by a proposer or a seconder. Election Petition No. 3 of 1969 accordingly fails and is liable to be dismissed. Issue No. 8 in Election Petitions Nos. 4 and 5/1969.

E. P. No. 4:

(a) Whether the petitioners are entitled to dispute the election of the respondent on grounds other than those mentioned in Section 18 of the Act?

(b) If issue No. 8 (a) is decided in favour of the petitioners,

(i) whether the respondent or any person with his connivance printed, published and distributed the pamphlet, Annexure A-3, to the petition?

(ii) Whether the pamphlet, at Annexure A-3, contained any false statement of facts relating to the personal character and conduct of N. Sanjiva Reddy, a candidate at the election and other persons named in the pamphlet?

(iii) Whether the persons found responsible for publishing the pamphlet believed the statements made therein as true or had reason to believe them to be true?

(iv) Whether the pamphlet was published with the object of prejudicing the prospects of the election of Sanjiva Reddy and furthering prospects of the election of the respondent?

(v) Whether the election of the respondent is liable to be declared void on this ground?

E. P. No. 5:

Issue No. 8 in Election Petition No. 5 is substantially the same except that the annexure in Petition No. 5 is Annexure A-38 and not Annexure A-3. On the first part of Issue No. 8 we hold that the petitioners are not entitled to dispute the election of the respondent on grounds other than those mentioned in Sec. 18 of the Act. The other parts of the issue, as a consequence, do not arise at all. Issues Nos. 9, 9A and 10 in E. P. No. 5/1969.

9. Whether the respondent or any other person with his connivance committed the offence of bribery as alleged in paragraph 15 of the petition?

9A Whether the allegations in paragraph 15 constitute bribery within the meaning of the Act?

10. Whether the offence of bribery was committed at the election by any other person without the connivance of the respondent as alleged in paragraph 15 of the petition, and if so, whether it materially affected the result of the election?

We hold that no offence of bribery was committed in the matter of grant of licence for the Polyester Factory to Swadeshi Cotton Mills.

7. This leaves Issues No. 4 in Election Petition No. 4 and Election Petition No. 5. These read as follows: E. P. No. 4:

(a) Whether all or any of the allegations made in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 (a) to (m) of the petition constitute in law an offence of undue influence under Section 18 (1) (a) of the Act?

(b) Whether the said allegations made in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 (a) to (m) are true and proved?

(c) In the event of these allegations being proved and constituting undue influence,

(i) whether the returned candidate has committed the offence of undue influence?

(ii) whether the offence of undue influence was committed by his workers, and if so, with his connivance?

(iii) whether the offence of undue influence was committed by others without his connivance, and if so, whether that has materially affected the result of the election?

E. P. No. 5:

(a) Whether all or any of the allegations made in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 of the petition constitute in law an offence of undue influence under Section 18 (1) (a) of the Act?

(b) Whether the said allegations in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 are true and proved?

(c) In the event of these allegations being proved and constituting undue influence—

(i) whether the returned candidate has committed the offence of undue influence?

(ii) whether the offence of undue influence was committed by his workers, and if so, with his connivance?

(iii) whether the offence of undue influence was committed by others without his connivance, and if so, whether that has materially affected the result of the election?

8. We may now refer to the pleadings relevant to Issue No. 5 in Election Petition No. 5.

9. In paragraph 8 (e) of the petition it is stated that the offences of undue influence at the election have been committed by the returned candidate and by his supporters with the connivance of the returned candidate. It is further stated that the material facts in support of this ground are in para. 13 of the petition. In para. 13 (a) are set out the facts which according to the petitioners led to the sharp cleavage between the electors of the Congress Party and all electors in general. In brief the history of the dispute between the two sections of the Party, which we will refer to as Congress (R) led by Shri Jagjivan Ram and Congress (O) led by Shri Nijalingappa, was set out. We need not extract the pleadings on this part of the case in detail because we will briefly refer to the background of the disputes and the facts as proved before us. But we may mention that this Court is not concerned with the merits of the dispute between the two sections of the Congress Party and we will consider this matter only insofar as it throws any light on the question of the offence of undue influence.

10. In paragraph 13 (b) (ii) it was alleged that "Shri Nijalingappa, Shri S. K. Patil, Shri K. Kamraj, Shri Morarji Desai and Shri Y. B. Chavan, electors at the election, were threatened by Smt. Indira Gandhi on July 12, 1969, at Bangalore with serious consequences with the object of unduly influencing these people for changing their decision to nominate Shri N. Sanjiva Reddy as their candidate. The threat given was repeated subsequently between 12th and 16th July, 1969 a number of times." By order dated January 23, 1970, we directed that the petitioners were not entitled to lead evidence on this sub-para because we were of the opinion that these allegations, even if accepted, did not constitute any interference with the electoral right as defined in Sec. 171-A of the Indian Penal Code, i.e. the right to vote or refrain from voting at an election. As far as Shri Sanjiva Reddy was concerned there is no allegation that the Prime Minister had interfered or attempted to interfere with his right to stand as a candidate.

11. In paragraph 13 (b) (iii) it was alleged that a number of supporters of the returned candidate, and in particular Shri Jagjivan Ram, Shri Yunus Saleem, Shri Shashi Bhushan, Shri Krishan Kant and Shri Chandra Shekhar, Shri Jagat Narain, Shri Mohan Dharia and Shri S. M. Banerji, with the consent or the connivance of the returned candidate, published by free distribution a pamphlet, Annexure A-38, in Hindi and English, in cyclostyled form as well as in printed form, in which very serious allegations were made which amounted to undue influence within the meaning of Section 171-C of the Indian Penal Code.

12. In paragraph 13 (b) (iv) it was alleged that "this pamphlet was distributed from 9th to 16th August, 1969, among all the electors of the electoral college for the Presidential election. During these days it was also distributed in the Central Hall of the Parliament by the persons mentioned above. A large number of electors were asked to read the contents of this pamphlet and they were asked 'Will you vote for such a debauch and corrupt man?' The minds of the voters were so unduly influenced and an impression was purposely sought to be created that if Mr. Reddy was elected to the office of the President of India, the Rashtrapati Bhavan will become a centre of vice and immorality and that Shri Reddy will assume dictatorial powers and will bring an end to democracy in India. This scare was created in the minds of the electors with the direct object of interfering with their free exercise of their electoral right to vote for the candidate of their choice. As a single instance Shri Yunus Saleem approached Shri Abdul Ghani Dar, Member of Parliament, one of the petitioners herein, and talked to him in this behalf as stated earlier. This was said in the presence of a number of Members of Parliament."

13. In sub-paragraph 13 (b) (v) it was alleged that the petitioner, Shri Abdul Ghani Dar, "wrote a letter to Shri V. V. Giri, copy of which was endorsed to the Prime Minister and Shri Humayun Kabir." In this letter the petitioner requested Shri V. V. Giri to condemn those who had published this pamphlet and make a public statement dissociating himself from and denouncing the publishers of the pamphlet but Shri V. V. Giri failed to do so.

14. In sub-para. 13 (b) (vi) it was alleged that "this low-level pamphlet had evoked great public and press criticism and it came out openly in the press that such low-level pamphlets were being distributed in the election campaign." It was further alleged that "even news items regarding this pamphlet appeared in almost all leading newspapers of the country. In spite of this, the returned candidate, who was repeatedly harping upon and asking for votes in the name of character, integrity, etc., failed to dissociate himself from the pamphlet or even to condemn the same."

15. It was alleged in sub-para. (viii) that "the language of the pamphlet and the laudatory references to Smt. Indira Gandhi and her followers themselves point to the origin of the pamphlet."

16. In sub-para. (ix) of para. 13 (b) reference was made to a letter issued by Shri Madhu Limaye, M.P., which he wrote to the Election Commission of India, protesting against the alleged pamphlet and requesting him to take appropriate action. In sub-para. (x) reference is made to the reply of the Chief Election Commissioner. It was alleged in sub-para. (xi) that a similar letter was written by Shri Kanwar Lal Gupta, M.P., to the Election Commission and in sub-para. (xii) reference was made to the reply of the Chief Election Commissioner dated August 14, 1969.

17. In sub-para. (xiii) it was alleged that the returned candidate, Shri V. V. Giri, made various statements at various places condemning the decision of the Congress Parliamentary Board in selecting Shri Reddy as its candidate and described it as immature. It is further alleged that Shri V. V. Giri "repeatedly stated that a man of character and integrity should have been selected." "The returned candidate in well-guarded language was stating that Mr. Reddy was not a man of character. He also exhorted Congressmen to demand a right of vote and made capital of the Congress President's appeal to Jan Sangh and Swatantra Party."

18. In sub-para. (c) (i) of para. 13 it was alleged that

"the supporters of the returned candidate, Smt. Indira Gandhi, Shri Jagjivan Ram, Shri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed, Shri Yunus Saleem, Dr. Karan Singh, Shri Dinesh Singh, Shri Swarn Singh, Shri I. K. Gujral, Shri Satya Narain Sinha, Shri K. K. Shah and Shri Triguna Sen were all occupying high ministerial positions in the Central Government and they misused these positions for furthering the prospects of the returned candidate by telephoning a large number of electors from their ministerial telephones of the Government, openly telling them that it was a matter of prestige and existence for them and that if the electors did not vote according to their wishes for Shri V. V. Giri, they would lose all their patronage and that if the electors voted as desired by them, they would receive governmental patronage at every step. So many electors were called by the above named Ministers at their official residences and offices in Delhi and undue influence was brought upon them by ordering them to vote for the returned candidate."

It was further stated that the returned candidate, Shri V. V. Giri, sounded one of the Ministers mentioned above to influence the particular electors who were not found amenable to his own influence or persuasion.

19. In para. 13 (c) (ii) reference was made to Shri Yunus Saleem, Deputy Law Minister, obtaining signatures of the members of Rajya Sabha on some paper which in effect amounted to pledging their support for Shri V. V. Giri, the returned candidate, and what happened in the Rajya Sabha in connection with that incident.

20. In sub-para. 13 (c) (iii) it is alleged that Shri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed and Shri Yunus Saleem threatened the Muslim voters that Shri Sanjiva Reddy was in fact a candidate of the Jan Sangh party and if he was elected the fate of the Muslim community in India will be in danger and in constant threat of extinction. An instance was given when Shri Yunus Saleem met Shri Abdul Ghani Dar, petitioner, and talked to him in the same terms. Further, reference was made to a letter issued by Shri Abdul Ghani Dar to all Muslim electors describing such a threat as baseless and mischievous. In sub-paragraph (iv) reference was made to a letter written by Shri Abdul Ghani Dar to the press in this connection.

21. In paragraphs 13 (c) (v) and (vi) reference was made to a threat issued to the members of the Legislative Assembly of Bengal that if Shri Sanjiva Reddy was elected he would enforce President's rule in Bengal, thus wiping off the United Front Government and the Legislative Assembly. Reference was made to a news item appearing in the papers on August 12, 1969, in this connection. We need not say anything more about this allegation because we refused to allow evidence to be led on this issue, as the allegations do not, even if accepted, amount to "undue influence."

22. In sub-para. (vii) it was alleged that a threat was issued to the members of the Legislative Assembly of Andhra Pradesh that the Assembly would be dissolved if Shri Reddy was elected. By order dated January 23, 1970, we refused to allow evidence to be taken on this point as the allegations do not, even if accepted, amount to "undue influence."

23. Some other allegations of undue influence were made in the subsequent paras but we did not allow the petitioners to lead evidence on those paras and they need not be mentioned.

24. The respondent, Shri V. V. Giri, in his reply first stated that "I propose to traverse the allegations directly made against me and also the insinuations or innuendoes that anything was done at my instance or with my knowledge and consent or connivance. I submit that I cannot traverse the allegations made against the Prime Minister or any other person as I do not have personal knowledge thereof."

The respondent did not, however, admit any of the allegations or insinuations against such persons and it was submitted that the petitioners were put to strict proof of every one of them.

25. The respondent denied the allegation in sub-para. (i) of para. 13 (b) of the petition and said that "I was always appealing to the voters to exercise their vote according to their conscience and free will. I was, in fact, conducting my campaign single-handed."

In reply to sub-para. (iii) the respondent characterised the allegations as most reckless, wild and false and emphatically denied them. He stated that

"nowhere or at no time was it ever alleged within my knowledge that I or my supporters had anything to do with the publication or circulation of the alleged pamphlets."

26. In reply to sub-para. (iv) of para. 13 (b) the respondent stated that he had no knowledge and did not admit any of the allegations made in that para and the petitioners were put to strict proof. He also did not admit that Shri Yunus Saleem approached Shri Abdul Ghani Dar, as alleged.

27. In reply to sub-paras (v) and (vi) of para 13 (b) the respondent denied that he had received any letter from Shri Abdul Ghani Dar. He stated that the only letter he received from Shri Abdul Ghani Dar was a letter dated July 24, 1969, in reply to respondent's circular letter to the electors seeking their support. He further denied that he ever received a copy of the alleged pamphlet. He further stated:

"I say that in fact I saw the letter of August 11, 1969 of Shri Dar and the pamphlet attached as annexure to the Petition only after I received the copy of the Election Petition and the annexures. I entirely repudiate that I had anything to do with the pamphlet before its publication or after its publication. I also deny that any of my workers or supporters had anything to do with it, with my knowledge or connivance."

28. In reply to sub-para (viii) of para 13 (b) the respondent denied that persons alleged to be his workers and supporters were distributing the pamphlet and were telling voters not to vote for Shri Reddy, as alleged. He characterised both these allegations as baseless and false. In reply to sub-para (ix) he said that he was not aware of the letter, Annexure A-39. In reply to sub-para (x) he said that this matter was not relevant. In reply to sub-para (xi) it was asserted that Shri Gupta's allegations were wild and baseless and the matter was irrelevant. In reply to sub-para (xii) he had no submission to make except that the matter was irrelevant.

29. With reference to sub-para (xiii) of para 13 (b) the respondent denied that during his tour of various places mentioned in the said paragraph he stated in any well-guarded language or otherwise that Shri Reddy was not a man of character. He stated that throughout his statements he adhered to the stand he had taken in his first statement of July 13, 1969, announcing his decision to stand as a candidate for the office of the President. He also an-nexed copy of a Press Statement issued on August 10, 1969, in which he reiterated the aforesaid stand.

30. With reference to sub-para. (i) of para. 13 (c) the respondent characterised the allegations as reckless, and irresponsible. The petitioner also denied that he sounded any Minister as alleged in the sub-para.

31. With reference to sub-paras. (ii), (iii), (iv) and (v) of para. 13 (c) the respondent said that he had no personal knowledge but put the petitioners to strict proof.

32. The respondent further replied to other paragraphs but nothing much turns on them. We may mention that at various places the respondent alleged that the paras were vague and no particulars had been given.

33. The respondent asked for particulars on various points and this Court directed particulars to be supplied. Particulars were supplied regarding para. 13 (b) (xiii) and para. 13 (c) (i). We will refer to the particulars whenever it is deemed necessary while appreciating the evidence of the petitioners.

34. We need not refer in detail to the allegations in Election Petition No. 4 which are substantially similar to those in Petition No. 5. The Advocate-on-Record for Election Petition No. 4 and Election Petition No. 5 was the same and common evidence was led in both the petitions and common arguments were addressed thereon.

35. From the pleadings and the evidence led the main points which arise for our determination are:

- (1) What is the true interpretation of Sec. 18 of the Act?
- (2) Was the pamphlet distributed by post to the electors?
- (3) Was the pamphlet distributed in the Central Hall of Parliament?
- (4) Does the distribution of the pamphlet by post and/or in the Central Hall constitute undue influence under Sec. 18 of the Act?
- (5) Was this pamphlet distributed with the connivance of the returned candidate?
- (6) Whether the offence of undue influence was committed by others without his connivance, and if so, whether it had material effect on the result of the election?

36. Let us first address ourselves to the question of interpretation of Sec. 18. We have read the views expressed by Bhargava J., and Mitter J., but with respect we differ from them. Bhargava J., has held that the distribution of the pamphlet amounted to an offence under Sec. 171G, I. P. C., and not under Sec. 171C, I. P. C. According to Mitter J., distribution of the pamphlet by post and in the Central Hall does not by itself fall within Sec. 18 of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act, 1952. According to him, before any publication of a defamatory matter relating to a candidate can be treated as commission of the offence of undue influence there must be some overt act in addition to the mere publication—some attempt or persuasion of a voter to restrain the free choice of a candidate before the law of undue influence is attracted. In our opinion, if distribution of the pamphlet by post to electors or in the Central Hall is proved it would constitute 'undue influence' within Sec. 18 and it is not necessary for the petitioners to go further and prove that statements contained in the pamphlet were made the subject of a verbal appeal or persuasion by one member of the electoral college to another and particularly to those in the Congress fold.

37. The Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act, 1952, was passed to regulate certain matters relating to or connected with elections to the office, inter alia, of the President of India. Part III of the Act deals with disputes regarding elections and Sec. 18 therein contained lays down the grounds for declaring the election of a returned candidate to be void. The relevant part of the section provides:

"If the Supreme Court is of opinion:

(a) that the offence of bribery or undue influence at the election has been committed by the returned candidate or by any person with the connivance of the returned candidate; or

(b) that the result of the election has been materially affected (i) by reason that the offence of bribery or undue influence at the election has been committed by any person who is neither the returned candidate nor a person acting with his connivance..... the Supreme Court shall declare the election of the returned candidate to be void."

Under Sec. 18, therefore, the election has to be declared to be void if, amongst other things, undue influence has been committed (i) by the returned candidate himself, (ii) by a person with his connivance, or (iii) by any person who is neither the returned candidate nor one having acted with his connivance, if the result of the election has been materially affected. Section 18 (2) declares that "for the purposes of this section the offences of bribery and undue influence at an election have the same meaning as in Chapter IXA of the Indian Penal Code."

38. We may here compare the provisions of Sec. 18 (1) (a) and Sec. 18 (1) (b) (i) read with Sec. 18 (2) with Sec. 123 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951. This section lays down corrupt practices for the purposes of that Act which include undue influence upon proof of which an election has to be set aside. Though undue influence for purposes of that Act has the same meaning as in the present Act, that section does not go as far as Sec. 18 of the present Act so as to provide that even if it is committed by a third party, that is to say, not an election agent nor a person with the consent of the returned candidate, the election would still be declared to be void provided of course that it has been materially affected by such undue influence. From the fact that both these Acts were enacted by the same Legislature and Act 31 of 1952 was passed after the Representation of the People Act was passed, it is clear that Parliament deliberately made Sec. 18 stricter than the Representation of the People Act, firstly, by using the words "connivance of the returned candidate" instead of the words "his consent", and secondly, by including undue influence committed even by a stranger, having nothing to do with the returned candidate, as a ground for declaring the election to be void, the only condition in respect of such an act being that it should have materially affected the election. The object of doing so is obvious, namely, that Parliament wanted to ensure that in respect of an election for the highest office in the realm the election should be completely free from any improper influence emanating even from a third party with whom the returned candidate had no connection and without any connivance on his part. The only limitation, as aforesaid, placed in Sec. 18 is that in such a case it has to be established that the election was materially affected. The questions therefore, which would arise under S. 18 would be: (1) Has the offence of undue influence been committed? (2) If so, was it committed by the returned candidate or by a person with his connivance? and (3) even if the offence committed was by a stranger and without the connivance of the returned candidate, has the commission of that offence by such "any person" materially affected the election?

39. Chapter IXA of the Penal Code which deals with offences relating to elections was introduced in the Code by the Indian Election Offences and Inquiries Act (XXXIX of 1920). Section 171A defines 'candidate' and 'electoral right'. An electoral right means the right of a person to stand or not to stand as, or to withdraw from being, a candidate or to vote or refrain from voting at an election. Section 171C, which deals with the offences of undue influence reads as under:

"(1) Whoever voluntarily interferes or attempts to interfere with the free exercise of any electoral right commits the offence of undue influence at an election.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-sec. (1), whoever

(a) threatens any candidate or voter, or any person in whom a candidate or voter is interested, with injury of any kind, or

(b) induces or attempts to induce a candidate or voter to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested will become or will be rendered an object of Divine displeasure or of spiritual censure, shall be deemed to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral right of such candidate or voter, within the meaning of sub-section (1)."

Sub-section (3) lays down that:

"A declaration of public policy or a promise of public action, or the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right, shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this section." Section 171F provides for the penalty for the offence of undue influence which is either imprisonment upto one year or with fine or both. Section 171G provides:

"Whoever with intent to affect the result of an election makes or publishes any statement purporting to be a statement of fact which is false and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate shall be punished with fine."

40. The electoral right of an elector as defined in Section 171-A (b) of the Indian Penal Code, means "the right of a person to stand, or not to stand as, or to withdraw from being, a candidate or to vote or refrain from voting at an election." It was said that the right to vote envisages two stages: the first stage is when the elector goes through the mental process of weighing the merits and demerits of the candidates and then making his choice and the second stage is when having made his choice he goes to cast his vote in favour of the candidate of his choice. The argument was that the language of S. 171C suggests that undue influence comes in at the second and not at the first stage, and therefore, it can only be by way of some act which impedes or obstructs the elector in his freely casting the vote, and not in any act which precedes the second stage, i.e., during the stage when he is making his choice of the candidate whom he would support. This argument was sought to be buttressed by the fact that canvassing is permissible during the first stage, and therefore, the interference or attempted interference contemplated by S. 171C can only be that which is committed at the stage when the elector exercises his right, i.e., after he has made up his mind to vote for his chosen candidate or to refrain from voting. It was further argued that the words used in Section 171C were "the free exercise of vote" and not "exercise of free vote". The use of those words shows that canvassing or propaganda, however virulent, for or against a candidate would not amount to undue influence, and that undue influence can only mean some act by way of threat or fear of some adverse consequence administered at the time of casting the vote.

41. We do not think that the Legislature, while framing Chapter IXA of the Code ever contemplated such a dichotomy or intended to give such a narrow meaning to the freedom of franchise essential in a representative system of government. In our opinion the argument mentioned above is fallacious. It completely disregards the structure and the provisions of Section 171C. Section 171C is enacted in three parts. The first sub-section contains the definition of "undue influence". This is in wide terms and renders a person voluntarily interfering or attempting to interfere with the free exercise of any electoral right guilty of committing undue influence. That this is very wide is indicated by the opening sentence of sub-section (2), i.e., "without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-sec. (1)." It is well settled that when this expression is used anything contained in the provisions following this expression is not intended to cut down the generality of the meaning of the preceding provision. This was so held by the Privy Council in King-Emperor v. Sibnath Banerji, 1945 FCR 195=(AIR 1945 PC 156).

42. It follows from this that we have to look at sub-section (1) as it is without restricting its provisions by what is contained in sub-section (2). Sub-section (3) throws a great deal of light on this question. It proceeds on the assumption that a declaration of public policy or a promise of public action or the mere exercise of a legal right can interfere with an electoral right, and therefore it provides that if there is no intention to interfere with the electoral right it shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this section. At what stage would a declaration of public policy or a promise of public action act and tend to interfere? Surely only at the stage when a voter is trying to make up his mind as to which candidate he would support. If a declaration of public policy or a promise of public action appeals to him, his mind would decide in favour of the candidate who is propounding the public policy or promising a public action. Having made up his mind he would then go and vote and the declaration of public policy having had its effect it would no longer have any effect on the physical final act of casting his vote.

43. Sub-section (3) further proceeds on the basis that the expression

"free exercise of his electoral right" does not mean that a voter is not to be influenced. This expression has to be read in the context of an election in a democratic society and the candidates and their supporters must naturally be allowed to canvass support by all legal and legitimate means. They may propound their programmes, policies and views on various questions which are exercising the minds of the electors. This exercise of the right by a candidate or his supporters to canvass support does not interfere or attempt to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral right. What does, however, attempt to interfere with the free exercise of an electoral right is if we may use the expression, "tyranny over the mind". If the contention of the respondent is to be accepted, it would be quite legitimate on the part of a candidate or his supporters to hypnotise a voter and then send him to vote. At the stage of casting his ballot paper there would be no pressure cast on him because his mind has already been made up for him by the hypnotiser;

44. It was put like this in a book on Elections:

"The freedom of election is two-fold: (1) freedom in the exercise of judgment. Every voter should be free to exercise his own judgment, in selecting the candidate he believes to be best fitted to represent the constituency; (2) Freedom to go and have the means of going to the poll to give his vote without fear or intimidation."* and **

45. We are supported in this view by the Statement of Objects and Reasons attached to the bill which ultimately resulted in the enactment of Chapter IXA. That Statement explains in clear language that "undue influence was intended to mean voluntary interference or attempted interference with the right of any person to stand or not to stand as or withdraw from being a candidate or to vote or refrain from voting, and that the definition covers all threats of injury to person or property and all illegal methods of *Law and Practice of Elections and Election Petitions — Nanak Chand — 1937 Edn., p. 362;

**Law of Elections and Election Petitions — Nanak Chand—1950 Edn., p. 263.

persuasion, and any interference with the liberty of the candidates or the electors". "The legislature has wisely refrained from defining the forms interference may take. The ingenuity of the human mind is unlimited and perforce the nature of interference must also be unlimited."* and **

46. From a reading of Section 171G it is clear that in pursuit of purity of elections the legislature frowned upon attempts to assail such purity by means of false statements relating to the personal character and conduct of a candidate and made such acts punishable thereunder. But the fact that making of such a false statement is a distinct offence under Section 171G does not and cannot mean that it cannot take the graver form of undue influence punishable under Section 171F. The false statement may be of such virulent, vulgar or scurrilous character that it would either deter or tend to deter voters from supporting that candidate whom they would have supported in the free exercise of their electoral right but for their being affected or attempted to be affected by the maker or the publisher of such a statement. Therefore, it is the degree of gravity of the allegation which will be the determining factor in deciding whether it falls under Section 171C or Section 171G. If the allegation, though false and relating to a candidate's personal character or conduct, made with the intent to affect the result of an election, does not amount to interference or attempt at such interference, the offence would be the lesser one. If, on the other hand, it amounts to interference or an attempt to interfere, it would be the graver offence under Sec. 171-F read with Section 171C.

47. We are also supported in our view by a number of decisions given on similar statutory provisions. The Government of India (Provincial Elections) (Corrupt Practices and Election Petitions) Order, 1936, contains the following relevant provisions. The expression "electoral right" was defined in the same manner as in Section 171A (b) of the Indian Penal Code. "Corrupt practice" in relation to an election by the members of a Provincial Legislative Assembly to fill seats in Provincial Legislative Council, means one of the practices specified in Pts. I and II of the First Schedule to this Order. "Undue influence" was defined in cl. 2 of the First Schedule to mean "any direct or indirect interference or attempt to interfere on the part of a candidate or his agent, or of any other person with the connivance of the candidate or his agent with the free exercise of any electoral right, provided that—

(a) without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of this paragraph, any such person as is referred to therein who

(i) threatens any candidate or elector, or any person in whom a candidate or elector is interested, with any injury of any kind, or

(ii) induces or attempts to induce a candidate or elector to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested, will become or will be rendered an object of divine displeasure or spiritual censure, shall be deemed to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral right of that candidate or elector within the meaning of this paragraph;

(b) a declaration of public policy, or a promise of public action, or the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right, shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this paragraph."

Paragraph 5 of the First Schedule is similar to Section 171G and reads as follows:—

"The publication by a candidate or his agent, or by any other person with the connivance of the candidate or his agent, of any statement of fact which is false, and which he either believes to be false or does not believe to be true, in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate, or in relation to the candidature or withdrawal of any candidate, being a statement reasonably calculated to prejudice the prospects of the candidate's election."

These provisions were the subject-matter of decision by the Election Tribunal in Amritsar City (Mohammadan) Constituency Case No. 2, The Indian Election Cases (1935-1950) 2 Doabia's EC 150 at p. 157. It was observed as follows:

"It is true that the definition of undue influence is widely worded and covers all kinds of fraudulent acts or omissions which in any way, directly or indirectly, interfere with the free exercise of any electoral right, and it is also true that the definition extends not only to actual interference but even to an attempt at interference."

But on the facts the Tribunal observed:

"There is no proper evidence of actual interference before us, and as regards the attempt, we have to see if there was the deliberate intent to mislead voters and thus make them exercise their electoral right under the wrong impression that the respondent had been set up as a candidate by the Muslim League."

It was argued before the Commission that threat or element of compulsion was an essential ingredient of the corrupt practice of undue influence. The Commission observed:

"We cannot, however, find any basis in the definition of 'undue influence' for the proposition that unless Mr. Zaffar Ali Khan threatened, or compelled the voters to vote in a particular manner, the offence of 'undue influence' was not complete. The definition of 'undue influence' is very wide in its terms and includes four different forms of interference, viz., direct interference, indirect interference, direct attempt to interfere and indirect attempt to interfere, and it is nowhere laid down that such interference or attempt to interfere should be by the method of compulsion..... although we are prepared to concede that the inducement must be of such a powerful type as would leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his choice. There would, of course, be in such a case mental compulsion in a sense but it is not necessary that there should be physical compulsion or that a threat must be actually held out by the person who interferes or attempts to interfere" (p. 160).

48. In Jujhar Singh v. Bhairon Lali (1953) 7 ELR 457 at p. 461 (Elec. Tribunal, Kotah), the petitioner was a Ram Rajya Parishad candidate, and the respondent, Bhairon Lali, fought on the Congress ticket. It was alleged that a poster was published against the Ram Rajya Parishad and Jagirdars and this constituted undue influence within Sec. 123 (2) of the Representation of the People Act 1951. It was held that the publication of the poster constituted undue influence. The Commission observed:

"It may be observed that an attempt to interfere by the method of compulsion is not necessary and that even the method of inducement may be sufficient, provided it be of such a powerful type as would leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his choice. In other words, actual physical compulsion is not necessary, but, positive mental compulsion may be enough to give rise to an undue influence. For the reasons which we shall presently give, we read this sort of mental compulsion in the poster, and, therefore, hold that it falls within the purview of undue influence."

The slogan of the poster was described thus:

"Vote for Congress in order to put an end to the atrocities of the Jagirdars. On the left-hand side, a person—apparently a tenant—is shown tied up to a tree with a rope. On the right there is a well-dressed Jagirdar asking his man, who is seen waving a whip, to flog the tenant. Evidently, the tenant's wife who, has apparently attempted to intervene, has been thrown down prostrate on the ground. To the right-hand side of the picture, there is symbol of 'two bullocks with yoke on', and nearabout the slit there are the hands of so many voters, male and female, attempting to cast their votes in the ballot-box."

49-50. In Radhakanta Mishra v. Nityananda Mahapatra, (1958) 19 ELR 203 (Orissa), there was a difference of opinion whether the respondent and his agent had committed corrupt practice of undue influence by publishing a booklet entitled "why should you vote for me" where the picture of a dead body with the objectionable caption appeared, and it was stated that the individual had died of police firing and that the Congress had killed him. Barman, J., held that it constituted undue influence while Rao, J., held that it did not. There being difference of opinion, the case went to Das, J., who held that it did not amount to undue influence. Das, J., observed regarding Section 123 (2) of the Representation of the People Act that "there may be some element of mental compulsion, but not necessarily a physical one or a threat actually held out by the person who interferes or attempts to interfere". We are not concerned with the question whether the booklet in that case constituted undue influence or not but only with the interpretation of the section. Barman, J., observed: "A voter must be able to freely exercise his electoral right. He must be a free agent. All influences are not necessarily undue or unlawful. Legitimate exercise of influence by a political party or association or even an individual should not be confused with undue influence. Persuasion may be quite legitimate and may be fairly pressed on the voters. On the other hand, pressure of whatever character, whether acting on the fears, threat, etc., if so exercised as to overpower the volition without convincing the judgment is a species of restraint which interferes with the free exercise of electoral right..... It is not necessary to establish that actual violence had been used or even threatened. Methods of inducement which are so powerful as to leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his choice may amount to undue influence. Imaginary terror may have been created sufficient to deprive him of free agency."

51. The scope of Section 171C, I.P.C., was considered in a recent decision of this Court in Baburao Patel v. Dr. Zakir Hussain, (1968) 2 SCR 133 at p. 145 = (AIR 1968 SC 904 at p. 911). Wanchoo, C. J., speaking for the Court observed:

"It will be seen from the above definition that the gist of undue influence at an election consists in voluntary interference or attempt at interference with the free exercise of any electoral right. Any voluntary action which interferes with or attempts to interfere with such free exercise of electoral right would amount to undue influence. But even though the definition in sub-section (1) of Section 171C is wide in terms it cannot take in mere canvassing in favour of a candidate at an election. If that were so, it would be impossible to run democratic elections. Further sub-sec. (2) of Section 171C shows what the nature of undue influence is though of course it does not cut down the generality of the provisions contained in sub-section (1). Where any threat is held out to any candidate or voter or any person in whom a candidate or voter is interested and the threat is of injury of any kind, that would amount to voluntary interference or attempt at interference with the free exercise of electoral right and would be undue influence. Again where a person induces or attempts to induce a candidate, or voter to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested will become or will be rendered an object of divine displeasure or of spiritual censure, that would also amount to voluntary interference with the free exercise of the electoral right and would be undue influence. What is contained in sub-section (2) of Section 171C is merely illustrative. It is difficult to lay down in general terms where mere canvassing ends and interference or attempt at interference with the free exercise of any electoral right begins. That is a matter to be determined in each case; but there can be no doubt that if what is done is merely canvassing it would not be undue influence.

As sub-section (3) of Section 171C shows the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right would not be undue influence."

52. It is not necessary to consider the provisions of the Indian Contract Act or the English Law on the subject because we have a special definition given by Parliament.

53. The question that then arises is: Whether the publication of this pamphlet can be said to constitute undue influence? We have no doubt that it does fall within that definition. It is not necessary to reproduce the pamphlet in detail as we shall only be giving further publicity to this most objectionable pamphlet. The pamphlet after giving various fictitious incidents of sexual immorality, describes Shri N. Sanjiva Reddy a debauch without any sense of shame or morality. Then the pamphlet asks: "Should the name of the Congress be lowered to such depths that this moral leper, this depraved man should be set up as the Congress candidate for the highest post?" It further adds: "A senior Congress M.P. has expressed the fear: If Sanjiva Reddy becomes President, he will turn Rashtrapati Bhavan into a harem, a centre of vice and immorality."

54. It seems to us that these allegations are covered under Sec. 171C, even if they may be covered under Section 171G. But we are not concerned with Section 171G because that section has not been made a ground for setting aside an election. We are only concerned with Section 171C. Be that as it may, we cannot add another sub-section to S. 171C, as follows:—

"A false statement of fact in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate even if made with the intention of interfering with the electoral right shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this section."

55. It was said that this pamphlet cannot come under Section 171C because it was issued anonymously and, therefore, it was not likely to interfere with the choice of the electorate, particularly as the electorate consisted only of members of Parliament and members of State Legislatures. But, in our opinion, this argument is fallacious. First, this has no relevance to the question whether any attempt to interfere with the electoral right has been made or not. Secondly, a series of anonymous attempts in a country like ours would have as much, if not more, effect as one open powerful attempt. It would be dangerous to provide a sanctuary to anonymous attempts. Thirdly, on the facts of this case, can we say that the distribution in the Central Hall is the same thing as anonymous publication? If a member of Parliament distributes a pamphlet, is he not identifying himself with it unless he expressly dissociates himself from the pamphlet? It seems to us that the distribution in the Central Hall by members of Parliament has the same effect as if they had endorsed the pamphlet in writing.

56. We are accordingly of the opinion that distribution of the pamphlet by post as also distribution in the Central Hall constituted an attempt to interfere with the free exercise of the right to vote within Section 18 of the Act.

57. We must first mention that both the parties led extensive evidence to prove the genesis of the dispute between the Congress party led by Shri Jagjivan Ram and the Congress party led by Shri Nijalingappa. We were told about the proceedings of the Faridabad session and the Bangalore Session and the circumstances attending Shri Morarji Desai's resignation. Further the whole of the correspondence between the Prime Minister and Shri Nijalingappa, and between Shri Jagjivan Ram and Shri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed and Shri Nijalingappa between August 9 and August 18 was exhibited in the case. But as it is not necessary for us to determine the exact genesis of the dispute we will only take note of the fact that both the congress parties were opposed to each other at the time of the election and had different views on certain economic issues and the Presidential election became a vital issue between them. In view of the above we will have to judge the evidence given by the witnesses with care, and wherever possible seek corroboration of the evidence from circumstances or other independent evidence.

58. We may now deal with the question whether it is possible to find out who printed or published the pamphlet and whether it was distributed by post and/or in the Central Hall of Parliament. Regarding the authorship of the pamphlet no evidence has been led by the petitioners but it was contended on their behalf that if the pamphlet is closely scrutinised there are indications in the pamphlet that it is the work of some Congressmen belonging to that party of the Congress which is now led by Shri Jagjivan Ram. Although this argument appears to be attractive, we cannot come to the conclusion that it was the work of the members of any particular party. The fact that certain witnesses have admitted that the first part of the pamphlet represents their ideology leads us nowhere because it would not be difficult for other persons to reproduce their ideology in words. Their ideology is well known and they are not averse to expounding it in great detail, as was done before us. But as we have already said, we cannot hold that it is the work of members belonging to any particular political party.

59. Regarding the distribution by post there is overwhelming evidence that the pamphlet was widely distributed by post. Part of it will be referred to when dealing with the question of distribution of the pamphlet in the Central Hall. Even the Prime Minister Smt. Indira Gandhi, received a copy of it, as is clear from her letter — Exhibit P-85 — dated August 21, 1969, to Shri Madhu Limaye, M.P., in reply to his letter dated August 13 1969. In this letter she, inter alia, wrote:

"The leaflet came to me by post and I immediately asked the Home Ministry to institute an inquiry as to the source so that necessary action could be considered. This was, before I received your letter."

No evidence was led by either side as to whether such an inquiry was made, and if so, whether the authorship of the pamphlet was found out. We may mention that Mr. Daphtary, the learned counsel for the respondent, did not argue the question about the distribution by post and admitted that distribution of the pamphlet by post had taken place.

60. Then we come to the question of distribution of the pamphlet in the Central Hall. On this point the evidence is extremely conflicting. Shri Kanwarlal Gupta, M.P., P.W. 11, stated that he saw the pamphlet being distributed in the Central Hall of Parliament by some members; one was Shri Yunus Saleem and the other was Shri Shashi Bhushan. He said that he was definite about these two members. He further stated that he did not receive it in Parliament but some other members did and it was being openly distributed. In cross-examination he stated that Shri Yunus Saleem gave it to two or three people; he came and gave one pamphlet to each. Shri Gupta produced copy of a letter dated August 14, 1969, which he had written to the Chief Election Commissioner in this connection. In this letter — Exhibit P-37 — it is, inter alia, stated:

"Moreover, pamphlets are being distributed in which vulgar charges have been levelled against another candidate for this high office. Character assassination is going on. I am sending a copy of the pamphlet in which vulgar and filthy attacks have been made against Shri N. Sanjiva Reddy. This amounts to corrupt practice under the Election Law. These pamphlets are being distributed by the supporters of the Prime Minister. Shri M. Yunus Saleem, a Minister in her Cabinet and some others are very active in it." (emphasis supplied).

The Chief Election Commissioner acknowledged this letter by his demi-official letter — Exhibit P-16 — dated August 14, 1969. This letter certainly corroborates Shri Kanwar Lal Gupta's statement that Shri Yunus Saleem was distributing this pamphlet but it would be noted that in the letter to the Election Commissioner there is no mention of the Central Hall of Parliament. We will discuss this letter in detail a little later.

61. Smt. Jayabehn Shah, M.P., P.W. 25, deposed that she saw this pamphlet being distributed in the Central Hall and she saw Shri Shashi Bhushan, M.P., distributing it, although she did not receive it personally from him. We may mention that she belongs to the Congress Party headed by Shri Nijalingappa.

62. Shri Nanubhai Nichhahhai Patel, M.P., P.W. 26, deposed that he saw the pamphlet in the Central Hall of Parliament about the 12th or 13th of August, and Shri Yunus Saleem, Shri Shashi Bhushan, and Shri Chandra Shekhar were distributing the pamphlet; they came to give him this pamphlet but he told them: "Yes, I have received it in my flat". In answer to the question "what did they tell you" he stated:

"They asked me whether I had gone through this pamphlet thoroughly. I said, "Yes". Then they told me "Be careful and before voting you consider all these facts".

In answer to the question "Who told you?", he replied: "Mr. Saleem". In cross-examination he said that he had not told the petitioners or either of them, Shri Rama Reddy or Shri Abdul Ghani Dar, that the pamphlet was distributed by Shri Jagat Narain, Shri Mohan Dharia or by Shri Yunus Saleem. This question was put in cross-examination in view of the particulars supplied by Shri Abdul Ghani Dar, petitioner, that Shri Krishan Kant, Shri Chandra Shekhar, Shri Jagat Narain, Shri Shashi Bhushan and Shri Mohan Dharia had distributed the pamphlet, inter alia, to Shri N. N. Patel, M. P. Shri Abdul Ghani Dar had verified that this was on the information received from the member of Parliament mentioned as recipient of the pamphlet.

63. The learned counsel for the respondent, Mr. Daphtary, had at various times asked questions in cross-examination from the petitioners' witnesses in order to elicit the information they gave to Shri Abdul Ghani Dar or Shri Sri Rama Reddy with a view to show that the particulars and the evidence in most cases are in conflict. He says that we should draw an inference against the evidence of these witnesses wherever there is conflict between what is stated in the particulars and what is ultimately stated in the evidence. In this particular case it appears that some particulars were given by guess-work rather than by ascertaining from the witnesses. We cannot, however, disbelieve witnesses only because the particulars are at variance with their evidence. But we will bear the fact in mind while appreciating their evidence.

(After discussing evidence (Paras 64 to 129) regarding the distribution of the pamphlet His Lordship proceeded.)

130. Viewing the evidence as a whole we are of the opinion that the pamphlet was distributed by post and in the Central Hall of Parliament by some members of Parliament and there was wide discussion about it in the Central Hall. As we have mentioned earlier, the evidence of the witnesses of the petitioners that there was distribution in the Central Hall is corroborated by contemporaneous documents.

131. On the question as to who were the persons who were distributing the pamphlet in the Central Hall it is not, in our opinion, necessary for us to arrive at a finding from a mass of evidence which is both conflicting and partisan. The distribution of the pamphlet in the Central Hall was relied on by the petitioners for the purpose of bringing home to the respondent knowledge about the pamphlet and its publication and his connection with it. The petitioners, however, have failed in their object, for, there is no evidence whatsoever to show that the respondent had any connection with the pamphlet or with its distribution. Nor is there any evidence to show that anyone connected with the distribution either through the post or in the Central Hall had any contact with the respondent, or that he distributed it with his knowledge or connivance. The question of identity of those who distributed it in the Central Hall, therefore, has in these circumstances become unnecessary and even futile. What is also equally important is that there is no provision in the Act for giving notice to and hearing persons alleged to be the distributors. A finding that a particular member or members of Parliament committed the offence of publication, an act punishable under the Penal Code, would thus amount to a finding arrived at without giving such person or persons an opportunity of being heard.

132. It was urged on behalf of the petitioners that the respondent, Shri V. V. Giri, had connived at the distribution of the pamphlet.

[Then again discussing evidence regarding such connivance (Paras 132 to 150) His Lordship observed]: We must, therefore, hold that it has not been proved that there was any connivance on the part of Shri Giri to the printing, publishing or distribution of the pamphlet.

151. We have already said, and we may repeat, that there is no evidence whatsoever that there was any intimate connection between Shri V. V. Giri and the alleged distributors. What they were doing in this connection they were doing on their own and Shri Giri cannot be held responsible for their deeds unless, of course, it is established that the result of the election had been materially affected by the distribution of the pamphlet. This question we shall now consider.

152. It is well settled that the burden of proving that the result of the election has been materially affected is on the petitioners. (See Vashist Narain Sharma v. Dev Chandra, (1955) 1 SCR 509 = (AIR 1954 SC 513); Mahadeo v. Babu Udai Pratap Singh, (1966) 2 SCR 564 = (AIR 1966 SC 824); Paoki Haokip v. Rishang, Civil Appeal No. 683 of 1968, D/- 12-8-1968 = (AIR 1969 SC 663) and G. K. Sainal v. R. V. Rao, Civil Appeal No. 1540 of 1969, D/- 20-1-1970 (SC). The learned counsel, relying on Surendra Nath Khosla v. Dalip Singh, 1957 SCR 179 = (AIR 1957 SC 242), urged that this court should draw a presumption, as was done in the case of a rejection of a nomination paper, that the result of the election has been materially affected, from the nature of the pamphlet and the manner of its distribution. He further stressed the fact that the petitioners were not in a position to compel witnesses to disclose their change of view and say for whom they voted.

153. A similar argument was advanced before this Court in Samant N. Balakrishna v. George Fernandez, AIR 1969

SC 1201 at p. 1225. But the learned Chief Justice rejected it thus:

"In our opinion the matter cannot be considered on possibility. Vashist Narain's case, (1955) 1 SCR 509 = (AIR 1954 SC 513) insists on proof. If the margin of votes were small something might be made of the points mentioned by Mr. Jethamalani. But the margin is large and the number of votes earned by the remaining candidates also sufficiently huge. There is no reason, therefore, for a reasonable judicial guess. The law requires proof. How far that proof should go or what it should contain is not provided by the legislature. In Vashist's case, (1955) 1 SCR 509 = (AIR 1954 SC 513) and in Inayatullah v. Diwanchand Mahajan, 15 ELR 219 = (AIR 1959 Madh Pra 58) the provision was held to prescribe an impossible burden. The law has however remained as before. We are bound by the ruling of this Court and must say that the burden has not been successfully discharged. We cannot overlook the rulings of this Court and follow the English rulings cited to us."

The learned counsel invited us to overrule this decision. It is too late in the day to do this. This view was taken very early by various Election Tribunals. It was observed in Surendra Narayan Sinha v. Babu Amulyadhane Roy, (1935-1950) 2 Doabia's E. C. 368 at p. 378:

"In the direct form in which provision is made for this matter in paragraph 7 (1) (c) of the Order there is no scope for interference on the ground that in the opinion of the Commissioners the result of the election might have been affected by the irregularity. This view has been taken in respect of a similar provision to that laid down in paragraph 7 (1) (c) in three cases reported in Hammond's Election Cases (1936 edition), namely in Bulandshahr District (East) 1921 (page 219), Lahore City (M) 1921 (page 469), and Patna West (N. M. R.) 1927 (page 535). Then the Commissioner goes on to say that "it may be that in some circumstances the provision in this rule may operate harshly, where a tribunal may feel that the result of an election may well have been affected by a serious irregularity, but it may be impossible for the petitioner to establish this positively but we have to interpret and follow the rule as it stands."

154. Parliament, knowing of the views held by various Commissioners and Judges bave failed to intervene, and it is not for us to legislate.

155. Let us then see if the petitioners have been able to affirmatively prove that the result of the election was materially affected by the distribution of the pamphlet. They sought to prove this by showing what the impact of the pamphlet on various electors and their reaction was. The reaction, as is to be expected varied greatly in its intensity. The witnesses describe it variously "It was in bad taste, very derogatory; it was dirty, scandalous, extremely bad, pernicious, contemptible, character assassination, horrible, vulgar and scurrilous, false and malicious, foul and filthy, unpleasant and foul" Shri Madhu Limaye, M. P., thought that it would affect the chances of his candidate, Shri Giri. Shri Kanwar Lal Gupta, M. P., was in doubt what to do and what not to do. Shri K. S. Chavda, M. P., said that he changed his mind. Shri N. P. C. Naidu, M. P., concluded that members would not vote for Shri Reddy. Shri Shiv Narain, M. P., frankly stated that though he thought that 'such a man' should not be the President, yet Shri Rama Reddy convinced him that the pamphlet was totally false and he abided by the decision of the Congress Party Board. Smt. Jayabehn Shah, M. P., felt perplexed right upto the date she cast the vote but failed to positively assert that she voted for some other candidate because of the pamphlet. Shri N. N. Patel, M. P., said that he changed his attitude after reading the pamphlet and adhered to it till the last moment. Shri Mohan Lal Gautam, M. P. does not disclose how he voted. Neither does Shri S. Supakar, M. P., disclose how he voted, although he felt very sad on reading the pamphlet. Shri C. D. Pande, M. P., said that although his faith in the uprightness of Shri Sanjiva Reddy was shaken, it did not affect his vote. Shri P. N. Deb, M. P., felt very much prejudiced against Shri Reddy but did not say that he voted against him because of this pamphlet. Shri Hukum Chand Kachwai, M. P., a member of the Jan Sangh said that at that time he thought the allegations foul and they did influence his mind, but failed to say whom he voted for. Shri Suraj Bhan, M. P., deposed that the pamphlet, so far as he was concerned, affected the directions which had been given by his leaders. Smt. Pushpabehn Mehta, M. P., does not say that the pamphlet affected her vote.

Shri Morarji Desai, M. P., described the impact on his mind thus:

"This would affect an average voter against Shri S Reddy adversely, because the contents are so shocking and in this country people believe many things without going into them, especially wrong things are believed more easily."

Shri Shri Chand Goyal, M. P., admitted that "it is not that I exercised my franchise guided by it." The impact on Shri Ram Krishan Gupta was totally different than intended. He said that after reading the pamphlet "I became a stronger supporter of Shri Sanjiva Reddy because I thought such like posters are not good and should not be issued." Shri R. Muni-swamiah, M. L. A., said that the contents prejudiced his mind, and he could not risk not to believe them, but did not disclose how he voted. He, however, admitted that he is a loyal Congressman and has adhered scrupulously to the directives of his party. Shri S. Nijalingappa said that the pamphlet would adversely affect Shri Reddy's chances of success. Shri M. S. Gurupadaswamy, M. P., did not say that the pamphlet affected him although "the motivation was to defame the candidate Shri Sanjiva Reddy and jeopardise his chances of being elected as President." Shri D. S. Raju, M. P., said that he was shocked by the pamphlet but he had always been a loyal Congressman and scrupulously abided by the directives of the party. Shri Patil Putappa, M. P., felt whether he would be doing the right thing by voting for Shri Sanjiva Reddy after reading the pamphlet but admitted that he had always been disciplined and loyal Congressman and loyal to the directives of the party. Shri Sher Khan, M. P., did not believe in the truth of the allegations in the pamphlet as he had known Shri Sanjiva Reddy personally, but felt that those persons who did not know Shri Sanjiva Reddy might be affected by the pamphlet. Chaudhary A. Mohammad, M. P., said that the pamphlet did affect his mind but he did not view his decision in that light, being a loyal soldier of the Congress. Shri G. M. Kedaria deposed that after reading the pamphlet he could not risk voting for such a candidate for such a high post. Whether he actually voted for Shri Sanjiva Reddy or not is anybody's guess because neither side asked him that question. Shri N. Sri Rama Reddy M. P., one of the petitioners, had known Shri Sanjiva Reddy for the last 35 years, and was his counting agent. It is not suggested that his vote was affected by the pamphlet. Shri Abdul Ghani Dar, M. P., a petitioner, stated that after the pamphlet was read out to him he thought "that country was sinking and extreme danger has been posed to the democracy." It is, however, quite clear from his evidence that he did not believe that Shri Sanjiva Reddy was a debauch. We have not referred to the evidence of electors from U. P. who deposed to meeting Shri Dinesh Singh at Lucknow because, as will presently appear, much reliance cannot be placed on what they say.

156. It will be evident from the above analysis of the evidence that apart from two witnesses it is not certain whether the others were so affected by the pamphlet that they changed their mind. Then there are witnesses who say that there was no effect on their voting, either because they knew Shri Sanjiva Reddy or did not believe the allegations or that they were loyal and disciplined members of the Congress Party. Five witnesses were strongly prejudiced but they do not say that this prejudice finally affected their voting or not. Two remained sad or disgusted but failed to disclose whether it had any effect on them. One thought that the party directive was affected. Apparently he was not personally affected. One witness became a firm supporter of Shri Sanjiva Reddy because of the pamphlet. Some witnesses opined that others would get affected, which evidence cannot assist the petitioners in any manner.

157. On this evidence it is difficult to hold that the petitioners have proved that the publication and distribution of the pamphlet materially affected the result of the election. It only leads to the conclusion that it probably did have some effect but the vast majority of the electors were able to throw off the effect of the pamphlet and vote according to their own personal wish or according to the mandate of their party.

158. There is evidence that there was a great deal of talk about the pamphlet. There was time before voting for the electors to exchange views about the pamphlet and ascertain the truth. Shri Sanjeeva Reddy had been the Speaker of the Lok Sabha and was a well-known and leading political personality.

159. There were various other issues exercising the minds of electors, particularly belonging to the Congress Party.

If in spite of all these factors some were unduly influenced in their thinking it was for them to come and say so. There was no landslide against Shri Sanjiva Reddy. Two hundred and sixty-eight members of Parliament gave him the first preference. Ninety-two members of Parliament, who had given first preference to Shri C. D. Deshmukh gave second preference to Shri Sanjiva Reddy. It is, however, true that if 26 more members of Parliament had voted for Shri Sanjiva Reddy, instead of Shri Giri, the former would have been elected.

160. Therefore, on the evidence before us, it is impossible to sustain the contention of the petitioners. In the result we hold that it has not been proved that the result of the election was materially affected by the publication and distribution of the pamphlet.

161. The learned counsel for the petitioners urged another point in order to impeach the validity of the election. It was said that Shri Dinesh Singh, then Minister for External Affairs, visited Lucknow somewhere round about the 10th of August and exercised undue influence on various members of U. P. Legislature. Shri Dinesh Singh denied having ever visited Lucknow round about that time. He said that he did not go to Lucknow till after the polling date. A number of witnesses have been produced on behalf of the petitioners to establish the visit of Shri Dinesh Singh to Lucknow.

[After discussing the evidence in Paras 162 to 183 His Lordship concluded.]

184. We are satisfied from the evidence which we have extracted above that Shri Dinesh Singh did not visit Lucknow on the 10th of August or any other day thereabout and the case of the petitioners that Shri Dinesh Singh visited Lucknow is not true.

185. We have already mentioned that it was alleged in the petition that Shri V. V. Giri repeatedly stated at various places that "a man of character and integrity should have been selected" and he, in well-guarded language, was stating that Shri Reddy was not a man of character. Shri V. V. Giri denied these allegations and stated that throughout his statements he adhered to the stand as a candidate for the office of the President. The petitioners produced 8 witnesses to substantiate this charge. It is common ground that Shri V. V. Giri visited Lucknow during his election tour —

Lucknow was his first halt—and addressed a meeting at Darulshafa. There is dispute as to what Shri Giri said at the meeting and as to whether he met M. L. As. individually or in groups. The eight witnesses mentioned are: Shri Bansidhar Pandey, P. W. 18, Shri Ram Singh, P. W. 19, Shri Jagdish Pershad, P. W. 20, Shri Rajendra Prasad, P. W. 21, Shri Basant Lal Sharma, P. W. 22, Shri Ram Pyare Panike, P. W. 37, and Shri Abdul Salim Shah, P. W. 38. These witnesses also deposed to Shri Dinesh Singh's visit to Lucknow and we have disbelieved their version. In these circumstances we must view their evidence with extreme care and caution.

186. It will be noticed that the witnesses have given different versions as to what Shri V. V. Giri said.

187. Shri Bansidhar Pandey, P. W. 18, Shri Jagdish Pershad, P. W. 20, and Shri Basant Lal Sharma, P. W. 22, said that Shri Giri told them that they should vote for him in the Presidential election. P. W. 19, Shri Ram Singh's version was: "At that time he asked us that I am the candidate of the Prime Minister and I must be voted for the Presidential Election and she has supported him and therefore I must get the votes". Shri Ram Pyare Panike, P. W. 37, struck a different note. According to him Shri V. V. Giri said: "He told us that we should vote for him because he told us that he was also the Governor of other States and he was also Vice-President. So he told us that a man like him should be voted and we should vote in favour of Mr. Giri". He further deposed that after the meeting he and three or four M. L. As. met Shri Giri separately and he told them the same thing and in addition said: "If you want to progress India a man like me should be voted".

188. P. W. 38, Shri Abdul Salim Shah's version is that Shri V. V. Giri said that he had been the Vice-President and also a Governor on behalf of the Congress and "I have spent the whole of my life in the Congress in the companionship with Mahatma Gandhi. I deserve it more that I should be elected as the President of India."

He added that at a personal meeting along with Shri Mumtaz Khan Shri Giri asked us whether we would vote for him.

189. The last witness on this point, Shri Mumtaz Khan, P. W. 44, gave the most detailed version. According to him Shri Giri

"appealed to the members of the Assembly to vote for him. He said that he has held very high offices. He was the Vice-President of India. He was also the Governor of U. P., he has been doing social service all throughout his life and he was a very fit candidate for the Presidency of India. Besides this, he said that the other candidates are not as good as he is. Besides, he also said this thing that the Congress had done a great blunder in nominating Mr. Sanjiva Reddy as its candidate. He said all these things." At a personal meeting with him and two or three friends, according to this witness, Shri Giri

"appealed to us that you vote for me and besides this he said that Sanjiva Reddy is not a suitable candidate. There are so many spots on his character and the Congress High Command has done a great blunder in nominating him as its candidate. Besides this, he said you see my services and all these things."

190. It will be noticed that Shri Mumtaz Khan, P. W. 44, is the only witness who stated that reference was made to Shri Sanjiva Reddy, and Shri Ram Singh, P. W. 19, is the only witness who mentioned that a reference was made to the Prime Minister.

191. Shri Daphtary, the learned counsel for the respondent, put all the above statements to Shri V. V. Giri. Shri Giri categorically denied meeting M.L.As. individually or in small groups. He said that all his addresses were on the basis of the statement that he issued on July 13, 1969. He stated that at no stage he said that he was supported by the Prime Minister either at Lucknow or elsewhere. He further deposed that he never referred to the "other candidates" and whatever he stated was about his own qualifications. He denied having referred to Shri Sanjiva Reddy and also denied having ever said that Shri Sanjiva Reddy was not a suitable candidate, and further, according to Shri Giri, it was absolutely false that he said that "there are so many spots on his character and the Congress High Command has done a great blunder in nominating him as its candidate".

He admitted that he said about himself, his qualifications, but there also he was very guarded.

192. On the respondent's side Shri Shivanand Nautiyal, M. L. A., R. W. 26, supported Shri Giri's version of the meeting. Shri Nautiyal admitted that he was an active supporter of Shri Giri. According to him, Shri Giri said that he was an independent candidate and told everything about his work and nothing more; in particular he did not, in the course of what he said, refer to Shri Sanjiva Reddy, nor did Shri Giri say that he was Shrimati Indira Gandhi's candidate. According to the witness, after the meeting Shri Giri left, accompanied by 17 or 18 people, and that no talk took place between them and Shri Giri. In cross-examination he stated that Shri Giri talked about his work and his visit to many countries and he explained everything but did not discuss political issues with them.

193. Another witness, Shri Ashraf Ali Khan, M. L. A., R. W. 27, gave an account of Shri Giri's talk to them. He said:

"He talked about his candidature that he was seeking his election as an independent candidate, because he considered that the post of the President was of such a stature that a non-party man should seek election, and that he had always stood for the common man and worked for him throughout his labour movement, and he was seeking the vote of all persons who believed in the ideology of the common man".

He further added that not a single word was said about Shri Sanjiva Reddy or that he was a candidate put up by Smt. Indira Gandhi. The witness admitted that he was elected on the Congress ticket; he only went to the meeting because it was held in the hostel compound. He said that other congressmen also attended the meeting because it was held in the hostel.

194. The statement of Shri V. V. Giri, dated July 13, 1969, is exhibited as P. 66A. Our attention was invited by the learned counsel for the petitioners to the sentence in the statement:

"I would only say that the candidate selected for the highest office should possess character, integrity, patriotism, experience, record of service and sacrifice. I feel in all modesty I could claim to have these attributes in some measure". We are unable to appreciate how this sentence makes it probable that Shri Giri would mention Shri Sanjiva Reddy and say something about his character at Lucknow. Another passage in the statement which was pointed out was:

"The highest office of the land must be one that is above party politics. While the majority party has every right to choose its nominee, in a democracy care should be taken to see the candidate so selected enjoys, as far as possible, the confidence of other groups also. I am deeply pained by the recent events that have tended to lower the dignity and moral authority of this august office."

We are again unable to see how this makes it more probable that Shri Giri would attack the character of Shri Sanjiva Reddy at Lucknow.

195. Further, on August 1, 1969, it was not definitely known whether Smt. Indira Gandhi would support the candidature of Shri Giri. There is no evidence of Shri Giri having met the Prime Minister except on July 20, 1969. Shri Giri said that he had not spoken either to the Prime Minister or to any Minister before he announced his candidature. He further stated that he saw the Prime Minister on July 20, 1969, when she came to see him at a ceremonial function when he was leaving the Rashtrapati Bhavan and she had come to say "good-bye" and he said "good-bye" to her. He categorically stated that they did not meet each other any time between the 20th July and the 16th August, 1969.

195-A. We are of the view that Shri Giri's version is preferable to the version given by the petitioners insofar as there is any conflict, and therefore we hold that the allegations made in the petition in this respect have not been substantiated.

196. We may next deal with the allegations in paragraph 13 (c) (iii) of the petition to the effect that Shri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed and Shri Yunus Saleem threatened Muslim voters that Shri Sanjiva Reddy was in fact a candidate of the Jan Sangh Party and that if he was elected the fate of the Muslim community in India will be in danger and in constant threat of extinction.

[Then after discussing evidence (paras 196 to 213) His Lordship observed.] It seems to us that the evidence on this point is too unsatisfactory to be believed without corroboration from independent sources.

214. In view of these considerations we hold that the allegations in sub-para 13 (c) (iii) have not been proved.

215. Only a few minor points now remain. No evidence was led in connection with the allegation made in sub-para (c) (i) of para 13 of the petition.

It was alleged, to state briefly, that the supporters of the returned candidate, Smt. Indira Gandhi and other Ministers, had misused their position for furthering the prospects of the returned candidate by telephoning large number of electors from their ministerial telephones. No witness was produced to prove these allegations. Telephone records and bills were summoned and produced in Court but no effort was made to connect the telephone records with the Ministers and the electors, who are alleged to have been contacted. There is no evidence regarding the electors who are alleged to have been called by the above named Ministers at their official residences and offices. No evidence was led on the allegation that Shri V. V. Giri sounded one of the Ministers to influence any particular electors who were found not amenable to his influence or persuasions. We must hold these allegations not proved.

216. Regarding the allegations in para 13 (c) (v), para 13 (c) (vi) and para 13 (c) (vii), we did not allow any evidence to be taken on the points because we were of the view that even if they were accepted, the allegations did not amount to undue influence. It seems to us that the threats indicated in those paras were too fanciful and remote and they could not constitute any attempt to interfere with the electoral rights of the electors.

217. It was stated in para 13 (c) (xiii) that

"on August 6, 1969 the U. P. Congress Committee President, Shri Kamalapati Tripathi and Shri C. B. Gupta, Chief Minister, jointly addressed a meeting of the Congress M. L. As. and appealed for solid backing for Shri Reddy. But when undue influence of the scare reached them they changed their stand. On August 13, 1969, Shri Kamalapati Tripathi also pleaded for freedom to vote. The same was the fate of the other State leaders".

According to Shri Kamalapati Tripathi, R. W. 61, he had issued an appeal, Ex. P74, on August 12, 1969, to all Congress legislators of the U. P. State Legislative Assembly, asking them to cast their vote in favour of Shri Sanjiva Reddy. He gave reasons in Ex. P74 why this should be done. But then he changed his stand. He gave the following explanation in answer to the question: "After issuing this appeal did you change your position in relation to the Presidential election?"

"Well, I may say that I made a choice. The letters to the Congress President of that time, Shri Nijalingappa, written by Jagivan Ram and Fakhruddin Ali Ahmad, were published in the papers on the 12th of August, if I remember the date correctly, in which the demand to sanction the freedom to vote was published. I also made a request to the Congress President to allow this freedom of vote in view of the serious situation developing within the organisation regarding this question, and I requested that by sanctioning that freedom of vote, perhaps, it would be possible to maintain the unity and avoid disruption in the organization". He further added:

"It was, perhaps, on the 14th evening. And then I saw very clearly that on this issue a split was going to take place in the organization. So, when the organization was going to be divided, as I saw it, I thought that I should make a choice of my own self as to where I should belong, and I made that choice."

It seems to us that no connection has been proved between the change in his stand and the alleged scare mentioned in sub-para 13 (c) (xiii).

218. In conclusion we hold the pamphlet was sent by post. Further, the pamphlet was distributed in the Central Hall of Parliament. This distribution itself constitutes undue influence within S. 18(1) (a) of the Act. It is, however, not proved that this pamphlet was distributed by workers of the respondent, or with the connivance of the returned candidate. We further hold that it has not been proved that the result of the election has been materially affected by the distribution of the pamphlet. The rest of the allegations either do not amount to undue influence or were not proved.

Issue No. 7 in E. P. No 1/1969, Issue No. 9 in E. P. No. 4/1969 and Issue No. 11 in E. P. No. 5/1969

What relief, if any, are the petitioners entitled to?

219. The petitioners are not entitled to any relief as no ground has been made out for declaring the election of the respondent to be void.

220. In our order dated May 11, 1970, we had directed that the parties will bear their own costs. We passed this order regarding costs because we were satisfied that the pamphlet had been sent by post and distributed in the Central Hall and this justified the petitioners in bringing the two main petitions. Most of the evidence which was led in Court dealt with the question of the distribution of the pamphlet. Further, as pointed out in the judgment, a number of witnesses have not told the whole truth. As a matter of fact we were distressed to see truth being sacrificed at the altar of political advantage by these witnesses.

221. BHARGAVA, J. — These four election petitions all challenge the election of the President of India for which polling was held on the 16th August, 1969, and the result of which was declared on the 20th August, 1969. The petitioners in Election Petitions Nos. 1 and 3 of 1969 were candidates at the election. The nomination papers of both these petitioners were rejected by the Returning Officer. The petitioners in the other two Election Petitions Nos. 4 and 5 of 1969 were electors for the election of the President. The successful candidate, Shri V. V. Giri, is the sole respondent in Election Petitions Nos. 1, 4 and 5 of 1969, while, in Election Petition No. 3 of 1969, he was impleaded as respondent No. 2 and the Union of India, through the Election Commission, as respondent No. 1. In this judgment, the reference to respondent will be to the successful candidate, Shri V. V. Giri.

222. The election was occasioned by the demise of the then President of India on the 3rd May, 1969. The Election Commission issued a notification under S. 4 of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act No. XXXI of 1952 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act") appointing the 24th July, 1969, as the last date for filing nomination papers. The date for scrutiny of the nomination papers was 26th July, 1969, and the last date for withdrawal of nominations was the 29th July, 1969. The polling was fixed for the 16th August, 1969.

223. 24 nomination papers were filed by the last date for filing nominations. The scrutiny took place on 26th July, 1969, in which the Returning Officer rejected 9 nomination papers, including the nomination papers of the petitioners in Election Petitions Nos. 1 and 3 of 1969. He accepted the nomination papers of 15 candidates. None of the 15 candidates withdrew his nomination by 29th July, 1969, the last date for withdrawal. At the poll on 16th August, 1969, consequently, there were these 15 candidates. Counting of votes took place up to the 20th August, 1969, when the result was declared and the respondent, who was one of the candidates whose nomination had been accepted by the Returning Officer, was declared elected. These election petitions have been filed by various persons, as enumerated above, challenging this election of the respondent.

224. Various grounds have been taken in the pleadings in these election petitions for challenging the validity of the election of the respondent which, briefly described, are:—

(1) That the nomination papers of candidates Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh, Shri Charan Lal Sahu and Shri Yogi Raj were wrongly rejected by the Returning Officer;

(2) That the nomination papers of the respondent were wrongly accepted by the Returning Officer;

(3) That the nomination papers of Shri Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji, Shri Santosh Singh Kachhwaha, Shri Babu Lal Mag and Shri Ram Dulare Tripathi were wrongly accepted by the Returning Officer;

(4) That the offence of undue influence had been committed at the election by the respondent and his supporters with the connivance of the respondent;

(5) That the result of the election had been materially affected by the commission of offence of undue influence by persons other than the respondent without his connivance;

(6) That the offence of bribery at the election had been committed by the respondent and his supporters with his connivance;

(7) That the result of the election had been materially affected by the commission of the offence of bribery by persons other than the respondent;

(8) That Part III and Section 21 of the Act are ultra vires the Constitution as well as Rules 4 and 6 (3) (e) of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Rules, 1952 (hereinafter referred to as "the Rules") promulgated under Section 21 of the Act are ultra vires the Constitution and the Act;

(9) That the elected Members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories were entitled to be included in the Electoral College for the election of the President and their wrongful non-inclusion had materially affected the result of the election, as well as it had violated Article 14 of the Constitution; and

(10) That the petitioners were entitled to dispute the election even on grounds other than those mentioned in Section 18 of the Act, viz., that the respondent or any person with his connivance had printed, published and distributed a pamphlet containing scurrilous attacks against the personal and moral character of one of the candidates, Shri N. Sanjiva Reddy, which were false.

225. The detailed facts relating to these grounds will be more conveniently mentioned when dealing with the various issues framed on the basis of these pleadings and, to avoid repetition, they are not being mentioned at this stage. On these pleadings, the following issues were framed in the various election petitions—
Election Petition No. 1 of 1969.

1. Whether the nomination papers of the petitioner, Shri Charan Lal Sahu and Shri Yogi Raj were wrongly rejected as alleged in paragraphs 5 (a) and (b), 6 and 7 of the petition?

2. Whether the nomination papers of the respondent were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 5 (c) and 8 of the petition?

3. Whether the nomination papers of Shri Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji and Pandit Babu Lal Mag were wrongly accepted as alleged in paras 5 (d) and 9 of the petition?

4. (a) Whether the elected members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories were entitled to be included in the Electoral College for the election of the President?

(b) Whether the non-inclusion of the members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories in the Electoral College amounts to non-compliance with the provisions of the Constitution? If so, whether the result of the election has been materially affected by such non-compliance?

(c) Whether the alleged non-compliance with the provisions of the Constitution has violated Article 14 of the Constitution?

5. Whether Section 21 of the Act is ultra vires the Constitution of India?

6. Whether Rules 4 and 6 (3) (e) of the Rules are ultra vires the Constitution and the rule-making power of the Central Government?

7. What reliefs, if any, is the petitioner entitled to?
Election Petition No. 3 of 1969

1. Whether the nomination paper of Shri Phul Singh, the petitioner, was wrongly rejected?

2. What relief, if any, is the petitioner entitled to?

Election Petition No. 4 of 1969.

1. Whether the nomination papers of Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh, Shri Charan Lal Sahu and Shri Yogi Raj were wrongly rejected, as alleged in paragraphs 8 (a) and 9 (a), (b) and (c) of the petition?

2. Whether the nomination papers of Shri Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji, Pandit Babu Lal Mag and Dr. Ram Dulare Tripathi were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 8 (b) and 10 (a), (b) and (c) of the petition?

3. Whether the nomination papers of the respondent were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 8 (c) and 11 of the petition?

4. (a) Whether all or any of the allegations made in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 (a) to (m) of the petition constitute in law an offence of undue influence under Section 18 (1) (a) of the Act?

(b) whether the said allegations made in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 (a) to (m) are true and proved?

(c) In the event of these allegations being proved and constituting undue influence—

(i) whether the returned candidate has committed the offence of undue influence?

(ii) whether the offence of undue influence was committed by his workers, and if so, with his connivance?

(iii) whether the offence of undue influence was committed by others without his connivance, and if so, whether that has materially affected the result of the election?

5. Whether Part III and Section 21 of the Act are ultra vires the Constitution of India?

6. Whether Rules 4 and 6 (3) (e) of the Rules are ultra vires the Constitution and the rule-making power of the Central Government?

7. (a) Whether the elected members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories were entitled to be included in the Electoral College for the election of the President?

(b) If so, whether the non-inclusion of the members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories in the Electoral College amounts to non-compliance with the provisions of the Constitution? If so, whether the result of the election has been materially affected by such non-compliance?

(c) Whether the alleged non-compliance with the provisions of the Constitution has violated Article 14 of the Constitution?

8. (a) Whether the petitioners are entitled to dispute the election of the respondent on grounds other than those mentioned in Section 18 of the Act?

(b) If Issue No. 8 (a) is decided in favour of the petitioners—

(i) whether the respondent or any person with his connivance printed, published and distributed the pamphlet at Annexure A-3 to the petition?

(ii) whether the pamphlet at Annexure A-3 contained any false statement of facts relating to the personal character and conduct of Shri N. Sanjiva Reddy, a candidate at the election and other persons named in the pamphlet?

(iii) whether the persons found responsible for publishing the pamphlet believed the statements made therein as true or had reason to believe them to be true?

(iv) whether the pamphlet was published with the object of prejudicing the prospects of the election of Shri Sanjiva Reddy and furthering the prospects of the election of the respondent?

(v) whether the election of the respondent is liable to be declared void on this ground?

9. What reliefs, if any, are the petitioners entitled to?

Election Petition No. 5 of 1969.

1. Whether the nomination papers of Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh, Shri Charan Lal Sahu and Shri Yogi Raj were wrongly rejected as alleged in paragraphs 8 (a) and 9 of the petition?

2. Whether the nomination papers of the respondent were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 8 (b) and 10 of the petition?

3. Whether the nomination papers of Shri Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji, Shri Santosh Singh Kachhwaha, Pandit Babu Lal Mag and Dr. Ram Dulare Tripathi were wrongly accepted as alleged in paragraphs 8 (c) and 11 of the petition?

4. (a) Whether all or any of the allegations made in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 of the petition constitute in law an offence of undue influence under Section 18 (1) (a) of the Act?

(b) Whether the said allegations in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 are true and proved?

(c) In the event of these allegations being proved and constituting undue influence—

(i) whether the returned candidate has committed the offence of undue influence?

(ii) whether the offence of undue influence was committed by his workers, and if so, with his connivance?

(iii) whether the offence of undue influence was committed by others without his connivance, and if so, whether that has materially affected the result of the election?

5. Whether Part III and Section 21 of the Act are ultra vires the Constitution of India?

6. Whether Rules 4 and 6 (3) (e) of the Rules are ultra vires the Constitution and the rule-making power of the Central Government?

7. (a) Whether the elected members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories were entitled to be included in the Electoral College for the election of the President?

(b) If so, whether the non-inclusion of the members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories in the Electoral College amounts to non-compliance with the provisions of the Constitution? If so, whether the result of the election has been materially affected by such non-compliance?

(c) Whether the alleged non-compliance with the provisions of the Constitution has violated Article 14 of the Constitution?

8. (a) Whether the petitioners are entitled to dispute the election of the respondent on grounds other than those mentioned in Section 18 of the Act?

(b) If Issue No. 8 (a) is decided in favour of the petitioners—

(i) whether the respondent or any person with his connivance printed, published and distributed the pamphlet at Annexure A-38 to the petition?

(ii) whether the pamphlet at Annexure A-38 contained any false statement of facts relating to the personal character and conduct of Shri N. Sanjiva Reddy, a candidate at the election and other persons named in the pamphlet?

(iii) whether the persons found responsible for publishing the pamphlet believed the statements made therein as true or had reason to believe them to be true?

(iv) whether the pamphlet was published with the object of prejudicing the prospects of the election of Shri Sanjiva Reddy and furthering the prospects of the election of the respondent?

(v) whether the election of the respondent is liable to be declared void on this ground?

9. Whether the respondent or any other person with his connivance committed the offence of bribery as alleged in paragraph 15 of the petition?

9A. Whether the allegations in para. 15 constitute bribery within the meaning of the Act?

10. Whether the offence of bribery was committed at the election by any other person without the connivance of the respondent as alleged in paragraph 15 of the petition, and if so, whether it materially affected the result of the election?

11. What reliefs, if any, are the petitioners entitled to?

FINDINGS

Issue No. 5 of Election Petitions
Nos 1, 4 and 5 of 1969.

226. Under this issue in Election Petition No. 1 of 1969, the only point raised relates to the validity of Section 21 of the Act, while, in the other two election petitions Nos 4 and 5 of 1969, the validity of Part III of the Act as a whole is also challenged. It was contended that Part III of the Act is ultra vires Article 71(1) of the Constitution on the ground that it purports to curtail the jurisdiction conferred on the Supreme Court to enquire into and decide all doubts and disputes arising out of or in connection with the election of a President or Vice-President by laying down certain limitations, such as the grounds on which only the election of a President or Vice-President can be challenged in an election petition. The question of validity of the Act was considered by this Court in Dr. N. B. Khare v. Election Commission of India, 1958 SCR 648 = (AIR 1958 SC 139), where the Court dealt with the contention that the Act and the Rules framed thereunder are void on the ground that they derogate from the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to enquire into and decide all disputes and doubts arising out of or in connection with the election of the President or the Vice-President. This proposition was supported by the argument that, under Section 18 of the Act, the election could be set aside only on certain grounds and that, further, under clause (b), it could be done only if the result of the election is shown to have been materially affected and that these are restrictions on the jurisdiction conferred by Article 71 (1) and are ultra vires. The Court held:

"Article 71 (1) merely prescribes the forum in which disputes in connection with the election of the President and Vice-President would be enquired into. It does not prescribe the conditions under which the petition for setting aside an election could be presented. Under Article 71 (3), it is Parliament that is authorised to make law for regulating any matter relating to or connected with the election of the President or Vice-President, and the Act has been passed by Parliament in accordance with this provision. The right to stand for election and the right to move for setting aside an election are not common law rights. They must be conferred by statute and can be enforced only in accordance with the conditions laid down therein. The contention that the Act and the Rules derogate from the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court under Article 71 (1) must accordingly be rejected."

The argument advanced was that the Court, in giving that decision, incorrectly proceeded on the basis that Article 71 (1) merely prescribes the forum for the decision of doubts and disputes arising out of or in connection with the election of a President and Vice-President, and ignored the circumstance that Article 71 (1) actually confers jurisdiction on the Supreme Court which jurisdiction cannot be curtailed by a parliamentary law passed under Article 71 (3) as the power of Parliament to pass the law is subject to the provisions of the Constitution, including the provision contained in Article 71 (1). The distinction sought to be drawn has no force at all. In that case, the Court specifically dealt with the argument that Article 71 (1) confers jurisdiction on the Supreme Court and gave its decision after considering this aspect. In any case, even if the argument advanced is accepted that Article 71 (1) defines the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, the manner in which that jurisdiction is to be exercised can only be regulated by an Act of Parliament passed in exercise of its power under Article 71 (3). In exercise of that power to regulate all matters relating to or connected with the election of a President or Vice-President, Parliament clearly had the power of laying down the grounds on which the election can be challenged and set aside, in addition to other matters relating to the election.

227. In this connection, learned counsel also wanted to draw an inference from the provision in Article 329 (b) of the Constitution which lays down that no election to either House of Parliament or to the House or either House of the Legislature of a State shall be called in question except by an election petition presented to such authority and in such manner as may be provided for by or under any law made by the appropriate Legislature. The argument was that, in this Article, there was specific mention of a law made for calling in question an election by an election petition, whereas there is no such corresponding provision in Article 71 of the Constitution. The argument advanced is clearly misconceived. In the case of elections to either House of Parliament or to the House or either House of the Legislature of a State, Parliament exercises powers to make law with respect to all matters relating to or in connection with the election under Article 327 and not under Article 329 (b). Article 329 (b) is a provision which lays down a limitation on the manner in which an election can be called in question, while the procedure for calling in question the election, as well as the grounds on which the election can be called in question, can only be laid down by Parliament by a law passed under Article 327. In the case of Article 71, it appears that no need was felt of making a provision similar to Article 329 (b) when Article 71 (1) itself laid down the limitation that all doubts and disputes arising out of or in connection with the election of a President or Vice-President are to be enquired into and decided by the Supreme Court whose decision shall be final. This limitation does not affect or limit the power of Parliament to regulate matters relating to filing of election petitions in the Supreme Court and of the ground, on which the elections can be challenged when the Supreme Court exercises its jurisdiction under Article 71 (1). In these circumstances, the argument that Part III of the Act is ultra vires Article 71 (1) of the Constitution must be rejected.

228. So far as the validity of Sec. 21 of the Act is concerned, it was challenged on the ground that the power of making rules suffers from the vice of excessive delegation of legislative powers inasmuch as even essential matters of policy are left to be prescribed by rules by the Government and there are no guiding principles, so that the power can be exercised arbitrarily. It was further stressed that, in the Act, no provision similar to Section 169 (3) of the Representation of the People Act, 1951 or Section 28 (3) of the Representation of the People Act, 1950, was included by Parliament so as to require that the Rules framed under Section 21 of the Act should be laid before each House of Parliament and that the Rules should be subject to modifications or annulment by Parliament. It is not possible to hold that Section 21 suffers from any such defects. Parliament laid down the essential matters of policy relating to elections, including election petitions, in the Act itself and, thereafter, in Section 21, delegated the power of making rules to the Central Government, subject to two principles of guidance. One is that the Rules are to be made after consulting the Election Commission, and the second is that the Rules must be such as are needed for carrying out the purposes of the Act. This second limitation clearly requires that the Government, in making Rules, has to ensure that the Rules are all required for carrying out the purposes of the Act; and that itself is a sufficient limitation on the exercise of that power arbitrarily by the Government. In Part II of the Act, the Legislature has laid down the essential regulations for holding the elections, and in Part III, similarly, the essential matters relating to filing of election petitions and their decision, including the grounds on which the elections can be challenged, have been prescribed by Parliament itself. It is in order to give effect to these principles laid down by Parliament itself in the Act that the Government is to exercise its power of making rules. Such power being already limited by the purposes of the Act cannot be held to be unguided or even arbitrary, even though Parliament did not choose to lay down the requirement that the Rules framed must be laid on the table of the two Houses of Parliament and should be subject to modification or annulment within a specified period. In fact, Parliament all the time has the power of altering the Rules by amending the Act itself in case it disapproves of any of the Rules made by the Government; while any Rule, which is shown to have been made in contravention of the provisions of the Act, or for any reason other than to give effect to the purposes of the Act, would be declared void by the Court not on the ground that there was excessive delegation of legislative power, but that it goes beyond the scope of the power conferred on the Government under Section 21 of the Act. Section 21 of the Act itself cannot, therefore, be held to be void on any ground.

Issue No. 6 of Election Petitions Nos. 1, 4 and 5 of 1969.

229. Under this issue, the petitioners challenged the validity of Rule 4 (1) of the Rules to the extent that it requires that a certified copy of the entry relating to the candidate in the electoral roll for the Parliamentary constituency in which he is registered must accompany the nomination paper, and the validity of the consequential provision in Rule 4 (2) which lays down that a nomination paper, to which the certified copy referred to in sub-r. (1) of this Rule is not attached, shall be rejected. This part of Rule 4 (1) is challenged on two grounds. One is that such a requirement is beyond the rule-making power of the Government under Section 21 of the Act, and the second is that the Rule is arbitrary and unreasonable inasmuch as it lays down only one single manner of showing that a candidate is an elector for a Parliamentary constituency by filing a certified copy of the entry, ruling out all other methods, such as filing of the published electoral roll itself. On the face of it, the first ground raised has no force. Clause (d) of sub-section (2) of Section 21 lays down that the Rules made under that section may, in particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the power granted under sub-section (1), provide for the form and manner in which nominations may be made and the procedure to be followed in respect of the presentation of nomination papers; and the requirement that a certified copy of the entry, showing that the candidate being nominated is an elector for a Parliamentary constituency which alone makes him eligible to stand as a candidate for the office of President or Vice-President, must accompany the nomination paper falls squarely within this clause. The requirement relates to the manner of proving that the candidate is an elector in a Parliamentary constituency. In any case, this provision in Rule 4 (1) would be fully covered by Section 21 (1) of the Act inasmuch as the requirement is for no other purpose except of ensuring a smooth and proper election to the office of the President or Vice-President which object can be achieved by enabling the Returning Officer to ensure that candidates, whose nominations are accepted by him, are eligible for election. In this connection, reference was made to the decision of this Court in Ranjit Singh v. Pritam Singh, (1966) 3 SCR 543 = (AIR 1966 SC 1626), where the Court had to deal with Section 33 (5) of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, and the Court held:—

"The object of this provision obviously is to enable the returning officer to check whether the person standing for election is qualified for the purpose. The electoral roll of the constituency for which the returning officer is making scrutiny would be with him, and it is not necessary for a candidate to produce the copy of the roll of that constituency. But where the candidate belongs to another constituency, the returning officer would not have the roll of that other constituency with him and therefore the provision contained in Section 33 (5) has been made by the legislature to enable the returning officer to check that the candidate is qualified for standing for election. For that purpose the candidate is given the choice either to produce a copy of the electoral roll of that other constituency, or of the relevant part thereof or of a certified copy of the relevant entries in such roll before the returning officer at the time of the scrutiny, if he has not already filed such copy with the nomination paper."

This decision clearly supports the view that the requirement in Rule 4 (1) that a certified copy of the entry showing that the candidate is an elector in a Parliamentary constituency is necessary in order to enable the Returning Officer to check whether the candidate is eligible for nomination and election. The manner in which the Returning Officer should be given the necessary information is a matter of detail relating to nomination and, consequently, this Rule is within the scope of the power conferred on the Central Government to make Rules for giving effect to the purposes of the Act.

230. Based on this very decision cited above, learned counsel for the petitioners urged that, in Section 33 (5) of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, the requirement is the production of either a copy of the electoral roll, or of the relevant part thereof, or a certified copy of the relevant entry in such roll, while, in Rule 4 (1) of the Rules, the only manner of satisfying the Returning Officer about eligibility permitted is the filing of a certified copy of the entry and, consequently, the requirement in Rule 4 (1) is arbitrary and unreasonable. It has to be kept in view that the election for the office of the President or Vice-President does not stand on the same footing as the election for membership of a House of Parliament or a House of the State Legislature. In the latter case the Returning Officer usually has the electoral roll of the constituency, from which election is to be held, with him and, by and large, the candidates standing from a constituency are enrolled as electors in the same constituency. Provision had to be made in Section 33 (5) of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, for those limited cases where the candidate stood for election from a constituency different from the one in which he is enrolled as an elector. In the case of election for the office of President or Vice-President, any elector enrolled in the electoral roll of any Parliamentary constituency in India is entitled to stand as a candidate, and it is clear that the electoral rolls of those constituencies will not be with the Returning Officer. In every case, therefore, it would be necessary that some evidence should be available with the Returning Officer so as to enable him to ensure that the candidate is eligible for election. In order to make certain that the election proceeds smoothly and to minimise the chances of disputes or doubts arising, the requirement laid down in Rule 4 (1) is that a certified copy of the entry alone should be accepted as the proper proof for showing eligibility of the candidate. Electoral rolls are subject to revision from time to time. At the general elections, they are fully revised and, then, subsequent alterations are made in them as occasions arise. The election to the office of a President or Vice-President may not coincide with or be very close to the time when there is general revision of the electoral rolls, so that the electoral rolls printed and published nearabout the time of general elections may be out of date by the time the election for the office of a President or Vice-President is held. The published electoral roll may, therefore, be misleading if it is allowed to be filed before the Returning Officer to show eligibility in the case of a Presidential or Vice-Presidential election. That seems to be the reason why Rule 4 (1) lays down that a certified copy of the entry alone will be the proper manner of satisfying the Returning Officer of the eligibility of the candidate. The original electoral roll, of course, cannot be produced as there is only one original which is retained either by the Electoral Registration Officer or in the office where the Chief Electoral Registration Officer directs it to be preserved in accordance with the Rules framed under the Representation of the People Act, 1950. In such circumstances, if the rule-making authority did not consider it safe to rely on printed copies of the electoral rolls issued generally at the time of general elections to Parliamentary constituency, it cannot be said that the authority acted arbitrarily or unreasonably. The smoothness of the elections could only be ensured by requiring the filing of a certified copy of the entry which would be immune from any doubt or challenge. The mere fact that the requirement of R. 4 (1) of the Rules differs from the requirement of Section 33 (5) of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, cannot be a ground for holding that Rule 4 (1) lays down an unreasonable restriction, so that this Rule must be held to be valid. Rule 4 (2), which prescribes the consequence for non-compliance with the requirement of Rule 4 (1), must also be held to be valid as it is intended merely to make the valid Rule 4 (1) effective.

231. The next challenge is to the validity of Rule 4 (3) and the consequential Rule 6 (3) (e) of the Rules. Rule 4 (3) lays down that no elector shall subscribe, whether as proposer or as seconder, more than one nomination paper at any election, and Rule 6 (3) (e) is the consequential provision laying down that the Returning Officer shall reject a nomination paper on the ground that the proposer or seconder has subscribed, whether as proposer or seconder, another nomination paper received earlier by the Returning Officer at the same election. The validity of Rule 4 (3) has been impugned on the ground that it is in derogation of the rights conferred on a candidate or on electors by Section 5 (2) of the Act. Section 5 reads as follows:—

“5. Nomination of candidates.— (1) Any person may be nominated as a candidate for election to the office of President or Vice-President if he is qualified to be elected to that office under the Constitution.

(2) Each candidate shall be nominated by a nomination paper completed in the prescribed form and subscribed by the candidate himself as assenting to the nomination and by two electors as proposer and seconder.”

The argument is that every candidate, under Section 5 (2), has a right to be nominated by any two electors as proposer and seconder without any limitation as to who those two electors are and irrespective of those electors having done any act, such as having proposed or seconded another candidate. It is also urged that this provision confers a right on every elector to subscribe a nomination paper as proposer or seconder without any limitation as to the number of nomination papers which can be so subscribed by him.

232. The submission that Section 5 (2) should be read as conferring any right either on the candidate or on the electors in respect of signing of nomination papers cannot be accepted. On the face of it, the provision made in Section 5 relates to procedural matters leading up to the exercise of electoral rights of a candidate or an elector. The filing of nomination paper only regulates the manner in which a candidate is to signify the fact that he desires to be elected, and the provision for the nomination paper being signed by two electors as proposer and seconder is meant only to indicate to the electors in general that the candidate is being put forward for election by at least two electors. The nomination paper also serves the purpose of informing the Returning Officer who are the candidates, so that appropriate steps can be taken for holding the poll by having ballot papers printed and appropriate number of ballot boxes provided. The language of Section 5 (2) itself shows that it was while prescribing the manner of subscribing a nomination paper that Parliament laid down that it should be subscribed by the candidate himself as assenting to the nomination and by two electors as proposer and seconder. Had there been an intention to confer a right on any of them, the language would have been different giving such indication by laying down what the candidate and the electors are entitled to do in respect of a nomination paper. Obviously, Section 5 only lays down the essential ingredients of the process of nomination, leaving the details of the manner of nomination to be filled up by Rules made by the Government under Section 21 of the Act. Rule 4 (3), which requires that no elector shall subscribe, whether as proposer or seconder, more than one nomination paper at any election, is, thus, supplementary to Section 5 (2) as containing a more detailed direction in respect of filing of nomination papers.

233. In this connection learned counsel for the petitioners referred to the decision of this Court in Amolak Chand v. Raghuveer Singh, (1968) 3 SCR 246 = (AIR 1968 SC 1203), in which a similar provision contained in Section 33 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, as amended by the Amending Act 27 of 1956, came up for consideration. Prior to the Amending Act 27 of 1956, Section 33, dealing with this subject, specifically laid down that any person, whose name is registered in the electoral roll of the constituency and who is not subject to any disqualification mentioned in Section 16 of the Representation of the People Act, 1950, may subscribe as proposer or seconder as many nomination papers as there are vacancies to be filled, but no more, and there was also a consequential provision in Section 36 (7) (b) which laid down that, where a person has subscribed, whether as proposer or seconder, a larger number of nomination papers than there are vacancies to be filled, those of the papers so subscribed which have been first received, up to the number of vacancies to be filled, shall be deemed to be valid. These provisions were omitted by the Amending Act 27 of 1956, and thereafter, the language of Section 33 became similar to that of Section 5 (2) of the Act inasmuch as it required the candidate to deliver to the Returning Officer a nomination paper completed in the prescribed form and signed by the candidate and by an elector of the constituency as proposer. The question arose whether, if a single elector signed more than one nomination paper as a proposer, any of the nomination papers could be held to be invalid. The Court held that, after the enactment of the Amending Act 27 of 1956, there was no ban in Section 33 on an elector signing more than one nomination paper and, consequently, if an elector signed more than one nomination paper, all the nomination papers would be valid. That case is, thus, limited to the question whether there is or is no ban on an elector signing more than one nomination paper as a proposer. It did not lay down that every elector had been conferred a right to sign the nomination paper of more than one candidate as a proposer. While no right can be read as having been conferred by such a provision, there will be no bar to a rule being made by the rule-making authority limiting the number of nomination papers to be signed by each elector as a proposer or a seconder. In fact, Rules are always meant to fill in details of procedure in respect of which the Act does not contain specific provisions. The Rules are meant to supplement the provisions of the Act and to deal with matters incidental, in respect of which there is no definite provision made in the Act itself. The fact that there is no ban in Section 5 (2) of the Act on an elector signing more than one nomination paper as a proposer or a seconder does not, therefore, mean that Rule 4 (3) of the Rules could not have been competently made by the Government. Rule 4 (3), on the face of it, contains a very reasonable direction. If there is only one vacancy for which election is to be held, an elector can reasonably be expected to nominate only one candidate as proposer and put him forward before the other electors as a suitable person to be chosen. Similarly, when seconding a nomination paper, an elector indicates his preference for that candidate to the general electorate which is to cast votes at the election. If the indication of such choice is restricted to as many candidates as there are vacancies, the provision, is, on the face of it, salutary and conducive to proper election.

234. The historical background of the Rules relating to elections in India also bears out that such a provision has always been considered desirable. The earliest Rules that have been brought to our notice are the Electoral Rules and Regulations made for elections to the Legislative Assembly at the Centre and to the Legislative Councils of Provinces under the Government of India Act. The Rules, as revised up to 25th August, 1934, made by the Central Government, contain a provision in Rule 11(3) of Part IV, similar to that of Section 5 of the Act, by laying down that the nomination paper shall be subscribed by the candidate himself as assenting to the nomination and by two persons as proposer and seconder whose names are registered on the electoral roll of the constituency. This is followed by sub-rule (4) which limits the number of nomination papers to be subscribed as proposer or seconder by an elector to the number of vacancies to be filled but no more. These two requirements having been laid down by the Rules, the further procedure was governed by the Regulations made for each Province for conducting the elections in that Province even in respect of the Central Legislative Assembly. In the Presidency of Madras, Regulation 7 (1) (iii) empowered the Returning Officer to refuse any nomination on the ground that there has been a failure on the part of the candidate or his proposer or seconder to comply with any of the provisions of Rule 11; and it was in exercise of this power that the Returning Officer could reject the nomination paper signed by an elector or proposer in excess of the number of vacancies. For the Presidency of Bombay, a similar provision was made in Regulation 3 of the Legislative Assembly (Bombay) Electoral Regulations dated 13th September, 1923, for rejection of the nomination paper by the Returning Officer. The corresponding provision for the Province of Bengal was contained in Regulation 20, for United Provinces in Regulation 9, for Punjab in Regulation 4; for Burma in Regulation V; for Bihar and Orissa in Regulation 24; for the Central Provinces in Regulation 4; and for Delhi in Regulation 5. All these Regulations were made under Rule 15 of the Legislative Assembly Electoral Rules. Thus, the principle that an elector should not sign nomination papers as proposer or seconder in excess of the number of vacancies was observed throughout India. Similar provisions existed in the various Provinces in respect of elections to be held to the Legislative Councils of the Provinces. Later, when the Council of State came into existence after the Government of India Act, 1935, provision was made in Rule 11 (4) limiting the number of nomination papers, which could be subscribed by an elector as proposer or seconder, to the number of vacancies to be filled and no more. Even in the Representation of the People Act, 1951, when first enacted, there was a similar provision. The Act, with which we are concerned, was passed in 1952 in this state of legislation and it is obvious that Parliament, when enacting Section 5 left it to the rule-making authority to make detailed provisions of this nature.

235. It may also be mentioned that a similar provision exists in the Rules governing elections in England. The Act in question is the Representation of the People Act, 1949, and the Rules for Conduct of Elections were contained in the Second Schedule to that Act. Rule 8 (1) of the Second Schedule was similar to Section 5 (2) of the Act laying down that the nomination paper shall be subscribed by two electors as proposer and seconder, and by eight other electors as assenting to the nomination. Rule 8 (5) laid down the limitation that no person shall subscribe more than one nomination paper at the same election and, if he does, his signature shall be inoperative on any paper other than the one first delivered. The provision is not only similar, but it is significant that, when laying down the limitation in Rule 8 (5), the language used indicates that no right on an elector to subscribe as proposer and seconder any number of nominations was envisaged as having been conferred by Rule 8 (1). If we were to hold that Rule 8 (1), which is similar to Section 5 (2) of the Act, conferred a right on an elector to subscribe any number of nomination papers as proposer and seconder, Rule 8 (5) would have contained words indicating that it will override the provisions of Rule 8 (1). This could have been done either by making Rule 8 (1) subject to Rule 8 (5), or by stating in Rule 8 (5) that it shall prevail notwithstanding anything contained in R. 8 (1). There was, in fact, no need to use such qualifying words, because Rule 8 (1) could not be interpreted as conferring a right on an elector to subscribe more than one nomination paper as proposer or seconder, so that Rule 8 (5) was not a limitation on any right conferred by the earlier sub-rule. In these circumstances, it must be held that Rule 4 (3) of the Rules was validly made by the Government in exercise of its rule-making power under Section 21 of the Act. That Rule being valid, Rule 6 (3) (e) of the Rules, which is consequential, must also be held to be valid.

Issue No. 1 in Election Petitions Nos. 1, 4 and 5 of 1969

236. These issues between them raise the question of the validity of the rejection of the nomination papers of three persons Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh, Shri Charan Lal Sahu and Shri Yogi Raj. The nomination paper of Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh was rejected on the ground that it was not accompanied by a certified copy of the entry relating to him in the electoral roll for the Parliamentary constituency in which he was registered. Instead, his nomination paper was accompanied by a few printed sheets purporting to be part of the electoral roll of that constituency containing his name as an elector. It has already been held above, when dealing with Issue No. 6, that Rule 4 (1), requiring that the nomination paper must be accompanied by a certified copy of the electoral roll containing the entry relating to the candidate is valid and mandatory. Since there was clear non-compliance with that Rule, the rejection of the nomination paper of Shri Shiv Kirpal Singh was correct and justified.

237. The nomination paper of Shri Charan Lal Sahu was rejected on the ground that he was less than 35 years of age on the date of nomination. The nomination paper was, no doubt, accompanied by a certified copy of the entry in the electoral roll in which his age was shown as 32 years on 1st January, 1966. The Returning Officer had some doubt whether Shri Charan Lal Sahu had completed the age of 35 years and, consequently, he asked Shri Charan Lal Sahu, who was present at the time of scrutiny, to state his date of birth. He gave in writing that his date of birth was 15th March, 1935. According to this date of birth given by Shri Charan Lal Sahu himself in his own handwriting to the Returning Officer, he was clearly below 35 years of age on the date of nomination. The nomination paper was rejected on this ground. The rejection is based on Shri Charan Lal Sahu's own statement given before the Returning Officer; and it is significant that in none of these election petitions has any assertion been made that, in fact, the age of Shri Charan Lal Sahu was more than 35 years on the date of nomination. The only attempt made is to challenge the order of the Returning Officer on the ground that the entry in the electoral roll showed that he was qualified as a candidate, having attained the age of 35 years. That entry is of little value after Shri Charan Lal Sahu's own statement in writing indicating that he was less than 35 years of age. While no election petitioner is prepared to assert and prove that Shri Charan Lal Sahu had in fact completed 35 years on the date of nomination, it has to be held that the rejection of his nomination paper was fully justified and correct.

238. So far as the rejection of the nomination paper of Shri Yogi Raj is concerned, his nomination paper was rejected on the ground that he had been proposed and seconded by the same electors who had proposed and seconded another candidate, Shri Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji, and the nomination of the latter was received earlier by the Returning Officer. The Returning Officer rejected the nomination paper by an order made in accordance with Rule 6 (3) (e) read with Rule 4 (3) of the Rules. The correctness of this order was challenged on the ground that these Rules are ultra vires the Act. In dealing with Issue No. 6 it has already been held that these Rules are valid and are not in contravention of Section 5 (2) of the Act. The rejection of his nomination paper, based on these valid Rules, was justified and, consequently, it cannot be held that his nomination paper was wrongly rejected.

Issue No. 2 in Election Petitions Nos. 1 and 5 and Issue No. 3 in Election Petition No. 4/1969.

239. The acceptance of the nomination paper of the respondent has been challenged on the ground that his nomination paper was not accompanied by a certified copy of the entry relating to him in the Parliamentary constituency in which he was registered. After examining the certified copy filed, it is not possible to accept the submission, because, on the face of it, it is a certified copy of the electoral roll issued by the appropriate authority. These issues are, therefore, decided against the election petitioners.

Issue No. 3 in Election Petitions Nos. 1 and 5 and Issue No. 2 in Election Petition No. 4/1969.

240. Under these issues, the validity of the acceptance of the nomination papers of four candidates, Shri Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji, Shri Santosh Singh Kachhwaha, Pandit Babu Lal Mag and Dr. Ram Dulare Tripathi, was challenged. In Election Petition No. 5 of 1969, the nomination paper of Shri Rajbhoj Pandurang Nathuji was challenged on two grounds, but one of the grounds was given up, and the only ground, which was pressed and which was also common to other election petitions, was that the copy of the electoral roll, which accompanied his nomination paper was not certified by the appropriate officer. This submission was made on the wrong basis that the Rules required that the certified copy must be issued either by the Electoral Registration Officer or the Assistant Electoral Registration Officer. The copy was, in fact, issued by one Shri M. V. Madke with a rubber seal under it showing that he was functioning as Tehsildar, Poona City. It appears that the permanent Tehsildar of Poona City was the Assistant Electoral Registration Officer, but at the time of the issue of the copy, he happened to be absent and Shri M. V. Madke, who was Aval Karkun, was acting in his place. Since Shri M. V. Madke was acting in place of the Tehsildar, he was also in charge of the electoral rolls which were in his custody. He was further empowered to exercise all the powers given to the Tehsildar. He, therefore, was competent to issue the certified copy in two capacities, viz., (1) as exercising powers of the Tehsildar conferred on him while he was acting in place of the permanent Tehsildar and (2) in the capacity of custodian of the document of which the copy was required. There is nothing in the Rules framed under the Act, or under the Representation of the People Act, 1950 and Rules framed thereunder, requiring that a certified copy of the electoral roll must necessarily be issued by either an Electoral Registration Officer or an Assistant Electoral Registration Officer. Every government servant, who has custody of a document, is competent to issue certified copies of that document, so that the certified copy issued by Shri M. V. Madke was a valid and good copy and there was no reason for rejection of his nomination paper. It was rightly accepted.

241. In the case of Shri Santosh Singh Kachhwaha, the only ground pressed was that his nomination paper was signed by the proposer and the candidate on 16th July, 1969, while the seconder signed it on 21st July, 1969. Thereafter, the candidate himself presented this nomination paper to the Returning Officer on 23rd July, 1969. His case may be considered with that of Pandit Babu Lal Mag in which also the ground for challenging the validity of the nomination paper is similar. His nomination paper was signed by him on 18th July, 1969, while both the proposer and the seconder signed it on 21st July, 1969. Thereafter, Pandit Babu Lal Mag himself presented the nomination paper to the Returning Officer. The point raised was that, in one case, the seconder signed the nomination paper after the candidate, while, in the other case, both the proposer and the seconder signed after the candidate had done so. The nomination paper shows that the candidate, when signing, purports to "assent to this nomination". It was urged that a signature in token of such assent to that particular nomination must be made by a candidate after both the proposer and the seconder have signed. Reliance was placed in this connection on the decision in Harmon v. Park, (1881) 7 QBD 369. In that case, the question arose about the validity of a nomination paper of a candidate Mark Harmon which, when initially presented, had the name of William Ball as proposer, together with signatures of the seconder and eight burgesses as assenting parties to that nomination. The clerk, on looking at the burgess roll, found that the name of William Ball was on the list of electors, but it was noted in the margin "not entitled to vote here". At the time of presentation, one John Green, a duly enrolled burgess, happened to come into the office and, seeing the nomination paper signed by Ball, and knowing that the name of William Ball was not on the burgess roll as a person entitled to vote struck out Ball's signature and inserted his own name in lieu thereof. At that time, Ball the original proposer, the seconder and the assenting burgesses were not present. Green handed in his nomination paper to the town clerk. It was in these circumstances that the nomination paper was held to be invalid. Grove, J., held.—

"The argument for the appellant was that these eight persons assent to the nomination of the candidate as a proper person to be nominated, an argument which if carried to its full extent must involve the proposition that the assenting burgesses may subscribe a nomination paper with the names of proposer and seconder in blank. But the assents required by the Act are to the nomination in the form in which it is written so that any person assenting may first see who is proposer and seconder. It may well induce them to give their assent if they find that the proposer and seconder are good and responsible persons, in whom they may trust. I think, therefore, that the nomination was had, and the name of the appellant properly rejected as a candidate".
Lindley, J., agreeing with him said:—

"The Act of Parliament requires that the eight burgesses shall assent to the nomination. What then is the nomination in writing to which they assent? The nomination consists in filling up the name of the candidate on the nomination form, with the signatures of the proposer and seconder. The argument for the petitioner comes to this, that the eight persons might sign even before the name of the candidate was on the nomination paper. This is not the kind of assent required by the statute. The nomination must precede the assent, the assent must not precede the nomination."

Thus, in that case, the nomination paper was held to be invalid, because the signature of John Green, who was ultimately the proposer, was put on the nomination paper after the seconder, the candidate and the eight assenting burgesses had all signed it. However, the point to be noticed is that, in that case, the invalidity was found because the circumstances in which John Green substituted his name as the proposer showed that the assenting eight burgesses had no knowledge at all that he had become the proposer, as they had only assented to the nomination signed by William Ball. John Green substituted his name for that of William Ball in the absence of the burgesses. On this ground, it was held that the nomination paper could not be held to contain in it the assent of the eight burgesses. That case is distinguishable from the present case. In the present case, when the candidates concerned signed in token of their assent before the proposers or the seconders had signed their nomination papers, the candidates knew that they were assenting to be put forward as candidates at the election and, subsequently, after the proposers and seconders had signed their nomination papers, they themselves took those nomination papers and presented them before the Returning Officer. Clearly, therefore, they indicated their assent to being nominated by the particular proposers and seconders, who signed their nomination papers, by taking the step, after their signatures, of carrying the nomination papers to the Returning Officer and presenting them as valid nominations.

242. There is further the circumstance that, though, in England, in the particular circumstances of the case in (1881) 7 QBD 369 (supra), it was held that a nomination paper was invalid if signed by the proposer after it had been signed by eight burgesses in token of their assent, the law as to nominations in India has throughout been interpreted differently. As early as the year 1922, when also the provision in respect of signing of nomination papers was similar, it was held by the Election Tribunal in Jamuna Prasad v. Sri Krishna Prasad, (1864-1935) 2, Doab's E. G. at p. 7 Case No. 121 (1935 Edn.) that:

"There is no rule as to the order in which names should be signed. On the other hand, the subscription by the candidate is mentioned in the rule before that by the proposer and seconder. We should not read into the words of the rule any words which do not exist and say that the proposer and the seconder must sign their names before the subscription by the candidate himself; when the requirement is merely that the candidate must also subscribe to the paper as assenting to the nomination, that is to say, the naming of himself as a candidate for the constituency. What has been done by the petitioner does not offend the words or the spirit of the rule."

The Election Tribunal also took notice of the decision in (1881) 7 QBD 369 (supra) and distinguished it on the ground that that case could not apply where the subscription by the candidate himself and the making of signatures by the proposer and the seconder had only to be considered, while there was no question of assent of other persons like elector burgesses.

243. The same view was taken in the year 1924 by the Election Tribunal in the case of Prosanna Kumar Das Gupta v. Chittaranjan Das, (1864-1935) 2 Doabia's E. C. at p. 73 Case No. 120 (1955 Edn.). In that case also, the Tribunal distinguished the decision in (1881) 7 QBD 369 (supra) and, in addition, referred to the decision in Cox v. Davies, (1898) 2 QBD 202. In the latter case, Grantham, J., had occasion to deal with a situation very similar to the one in the present case. He held:—

"The language of the present rule is not the same as that of the section upon which those cases were decided. It would require a good deal to convince me that there is anything wrong in a candidate filling his own name in after those of his proposer and seconder. In my own practical experience of elections it is a thing which is constantly done. If the signatures of the proposer and seconder were used for the purpose of filling in the name of a candidate that they did not intend, that would be another matter. (1881) 7 QBD 369 was a very different case from this".

In this case, the validity of the nomination paper was being challenged on the ground that the candidate had filled in his own name after the proposer and seconder had already signed it and, yet, it was held that the nomination paper was valid on the ground that there was nothing to show that the proposer and seconder did not intend to nominate that particular candidate. In the present case, there is nothing to show that the candidates did not intend to be nominated by the proposers and seconders who had signed their nomination papers after they had signed them in token of their assent. On the other hand, as indicated above, it must be held that the candidates actually signified their assent to being nominated by the proposers and seconders, who had signed earlier, by presenting the nomination papers themselves to the Returning Officer.

244. Another Election Tribunal, in the year 1946, arrived at the same decision in the case of Mahant Digvijai Nath v. Sri Prakash, (1935-51) Election Cases, at p. 147 case No. 24. In that case also, the candidate had signed the nomination paper before it was signed by the proposer and seconder. The Tribunal placed reliance on the decision in (1864-1935) 2 Doabia's E. C. at p. 7 Case No. 121 (1955 Edn.) (supra) and held:—

"Even if it is assumed that strictly speaking the candidate must sign his name after the proposer and seconder have signed it, there is no direction in the rules that it should be so and that there is no "invalidating consequence" provided for in the rules in case this has not been done."

In fact, the Tribunal went to the extent of holding that:—

"It is not open to the returning officer to enquire in what order the signatures had been made so long as the signatures are not found to be not genuine or obtained by fraud."

In that case also, the Tribunal took notice of the two English decisions in (1881) 7 QBD 369 (supra) and (1898) 2 QBD 202 (supra) and inferred that it cannot be held that there is any natural order in which nomination paper should be filled up and signed and, unless there is something specific in the Rules, the fact that a candidate gives his assent on the nomination paper before the proposer and seconder had signed it or before the other entries had been completed is of no consequence. Thus, when the Act was enacted in 1952, the law in India, as administered by various Election Tribunals, was clear that the order, in which signatures are made on a nomination paper by the candidate, the proposer and the seconder, is immaterial and no nomination paper would be invalid if the signatures are made by the candidate before the proposer and the seconder signed it. The Legislature, when enacting the Act, must be presumed to know that this was the law as interpreted in India and, consequently, when the language incorporated in Section 5 (2) of the Act was used, it must have been intended that nomination papers would not be invalid by reason of the candidate making his signature before the proposer and the seconder. Even subsequently, a similar provision in the Representation of the People Act, 1951, and the Rules framed thereunder for conduct of elections and election petitions, was interpreted in the same manner by the Election Tribunal in the case of Yamuna Prasad v. Jagdish Prasad Khare, (1957-1958) 13 ELR 1 (SC). Consequently, it cannot be held that, in the present case, the nomination paper of Shri Babu Lal Mag was invalid because he signed his nomination paper before it was signed by the proposer and seconder, or that the nomination paper of Shri Santosh Singh Kachhwaha was invalid because he signed his nomination paper before his seconder had signed it. The nomination papers of both these candidates, were therefore, rightly accepted.

245. So far as the nomination paper of Dr. Ram Dulare Tripathi is concerned, the allegation was that it did not appear to bear the signature of the proposer and the seconder, because a mere look will make it clear ex facie that the whole of the nomination paper, including the signatures of the proposer, the seconder, and the candidate are in the handwriting of one person. This allegation was controverted by the Returning Officer in his counter-affidavit who has sworn that it did not appear to him that all the signatures were in one handwriting and that he was satisfied that the nomination paper had been properly proposed, seconded and signed. After his counter-affidavit, when the petition was argued, learned counsel for the petitioners did not press this issue and did not try to produce any evidence to show that the signatures of the proposer, the seconder, and the candidate were not genuine. Consequently, the acceptance of the nomination paper of Dr. Ram Dulare Tripathi was not invalid.

Issue No. 4 in Election Petition No. 1 of 1969 and Issue No 7 in Election Petitions Nos. 4 and 5 of 1969.

246. The ground covered by these issues is sought to be raised on the basis of the provisions contained in Article 54 of the Constitution read with the definition of "State" contained in Clause (58) of Section 3 of the General Clauses Act, 1897. It was urged that, under Art. 54, the Electoral College consists of the elected members of both Houses of Parliament, and the elected members of the Legislative Assemblies of the States. Relying on the definition of "State" in Section 3(58) of the General Clauses Act, it is argued that Union Territories are also States and, consequently, the elected members of the Legislative Assemblies of the Union Territories must also be included in the Electoral College. Their omission is a material irregularity which vitiates this election.

247. There are two reasons why, on the face of it, this submission has to be rejected as untenable. Article 54, no doubt, lays down that all elected members of the Legislative Assemblies of the States are to be included in the electoral college, but the word "States" used in this Article cannot include Union Territories. It is true that, under Article 367, the General Clauses Act applies for interpretation of the Constitution as it applies for the interpretation of an Act of the Legislature of the Dominion of India; but that Act has been applied as it stood on 26th January, 1950, when the Constitution came into force, subject only to any adaptations and modifications that may be made therein under Article 372. The General Clauses Act, as it was in 1950 and as adapted or modified under Article 372, did not define "State" so as to include a Union Territory. The Constitution was amended by the Constitution (Seventh Amendment) Act, 1956, which introduced Article 372-A in the Constitution permitting adaptations and modifications of all laws which may be necessary or expedient for the purpose of bringing the provisions of the law into accord with the Constitution as amended by the Seventh Amendment Act, 1956. It was in exercise of this power under Article 372-A that Section 3 (58) of the General Clauses Act was amended, so that, thereafter, "States" as defined included Union Territories also. The new definition of "State" in Section 3 (58) of the General Clauses Act as a result of modifications and adaptations under Article 372-A would, no doubt, apply to the interpretation of all laws of Parliament, but it cannot apply to the interpretation of the Constitution, because Article 367 was not amended and it was not laid down that the General Clauses Act, as adapted or modified under any Article other than Article 372, will also apply to the interpretation of the Constitution. Since, until its amendment in 1956, Section 3 (58) of the General Clauses Act did not define "State" as including Union Territories for purposes of interpretation of Article 54, the Union Territories cannot be treated as included in the word "State".

248. The second reason why it must be held that members of Legislatures of Union Territories cannot form part of the electoral college under Article 54 is that that Article confines the electoral college to members of Legislative Assemblies of the States and there are no Legislative Assemblies in the Union Territories. Under Article 168, for every State there is to be a Legislature which shall consist of the Governor, in certain States two Houses, and in some other States one House. The Article further lays down that where there are two Houses of Legislature; one is to be known as the Legislative Council and the other as the Legislative Assembly and, where there is only one House, it is to be known as the Legislative Assembly. On the face of it only members of Houses known as Legislative Assemblies under Article 168 can be members of the Electoral College under Article 54. In the case of Union Territories, the provision for Legislatures is contained in Article 239-A, but that Article does not mention that any House of the Legislature created for any of the Union Territories will be known as a Legislative Assembly. All that that Article lays down is that Parliament may, by law, create a body, whether elected or partly nominated and partly elected, to function as a Legislature for the Union Territory. Such a Legislature created by Parliament is not a Legislative Assembly as contemplated by Article 168 or Article 54. Members of Legislatures created for Union Territories under Article 239-A cannot therefore, be held to be members of Legislative Assemblies of States. They were, therefore, rightly excluded from the electoral college, so that the issues are decided against the election petitioners.

Issues Nos. 1 and 2 in Election Petition No. 3 of 1969.

249. The nomination paper of Shri Phul Singh, petitioner in this election petition, was rejected on the ground that his nomination paper was not signed either by a proposer or a seconder, so that the nomination paper did not comply with the requirements of Section 5 (2) of the Act and was liable to be rejected under R. 6 (3) of the Rules. This petition was argued by Shri Phul Singh in person, and the only argument that was advanced by him was that Section 5 (2) of the Act, requiring that there must be a nomination signed by two electors as proposer and seconder, is ultra vires the Constitution. According to him, he possessed all the qualifications for being a candidate laid down in Article 58. He had proved that he was an elector registered in a Parliamentary constituency by producing a certified copy of the entry relating to him in the electoral roll. He had also produced a certificate that he had resigned from government service and was not holding an office of profit under the Government. He relied on the electoral roll to show that he was a citizen of India. He also produced a copy of his High School certificate showing that he was not less than 35 years of age. In these circumstances, according to him, his nomination paper could not be rejected on the ground that he had not been nominated by two electors as proposer and seconder. On the face of it, his argument that Section 5 (2) of the Act contravenes Article 58 or any other Article of the Constitution has no force at all. Section 5 (2) of the Act was enacted by Parliament in exercise of its power of regulating all matters relating to or connected with the election of a President or Vice-President and, in exercise of this power, Parliament was fully competent to lay down how a candidate, otherwise qualified, must become a candidate by seeking nomination by two electors and to prescribe the detailed subsequent procedure leading up to the polling and declaration of result. The requirement laid down by Parliament that every person must be nominated by two electors as proposer and seconder is a reasonable requirement relating to regulation of election to the office of a President and cannot be held to be a curtailment of the right of a qualified candidate to stand as a candidate under Article 58. In these circumstances, the ground, on which the election petition has been filed, fails and, consequently, the petition is liable to be dismissed.

Issue No. 8 in Election Petitions Nos. 4 and 5 of 1969.

250. This issue was raised by the petitioners on the plea that Part III of the Act, which includes Section 18, is ultra vires Article 71 (1) of the Constitution, so that the petitioners are entitled to challenge an election of the President on grounds other than those mentioned in Section 18 of the Act. This contention fails in view of the finding on Issue No. 5 that Part III of the Act is not ultra vires Article 71 of the Constitution and that Parliament did not act contrary to the provisions of the Constitution in limiting the grounds of challenge of an election in an election petition by enumerating them in Section 18 of the Act. Consequently, the first part of Issue No. 8 has to be answered in the negative, holding that the petitioners are not entitled to dispute the election of the respondent on grounds other than those mentioned in Section 18 of the Act. The other parts of the issue, as a consequence, do not arise at all. The issue is answered against the petitioners.

Issues Nos. 9, 9-A and 10 in Election Petition No 5/1969.

251. These issues are based on the allegations made in paragraph 15 of the petition in which there is, first, a general charge that the offence of bribery was freely committed at the election by the supporters of the respondent (returned candidate), with his connivance, with the object of inducing the electors to exercise their vote in favour of the respondent. With this object, gratification was offered and given to them. This general allegation is followed by a specific instance in which it is mentioned that a licence for setting up an industry in Polyester Fibre was to be granted by the Government of India. The Punjab State Government also applied for the licence. The licence, was, however refused to the public sector and was, instead, granted to a private limited company in which Shri Sita Ram Jaipuria, a Member of the Rajya Sabha, who was also an influential elector, had financial interest. It was alleged that this licence was granted to the Company as a gratification with the object of inducing Shri Sita Ram Jaipuria and the electors under his influence to exercise their vote in favour of the respondent and against Shri Sanjiva Reddy, in whose favour they were intending to vote earlier. According to the petitioners, this licence was granted during the election period. A further allegation was made that one Shri Kanwar Lal Gupta, a Member of Parliament, wrote a letter to the Election Commission stating that money was being offered to some members to vote for the respondent; and, from this, it was also clear that the offence of bribery was rampant during the elections.

252. So far as this second allegation relating to the letter of Shri Kanwar Lal Gupta, Member of Parliament, is concerned, no evidence was allowed to be tendered on it on behalf of the petitioners, because the allegation was in a very general form stating that the offence of bribery was rampant; and this pleading was also based solely on a letter written to the Election Commission. No specific instances were cited and no particulars were given. On the face of it, a general allegation that bribery was rampant in the elections could not be made the subject-matter of a specific charge of commission of offence of bribery.

253. Evidence was allowed to be led on the first charge which, if the facts had been proved to be true, could possibly constitute the offence of bribery. If, in fact, the licence had been granted to a private limited company with the specific purpose of obtaining the vote of Shri Sita Ram Jaipuria, an elector and a Member of Parliament, for the respondent, that could constitute bribery. However, from the evidence led on this issue on behalf of the petitioners themselves, it appears that no case at all of commission of the offence of bribery during the election period could possibly be established; and that appears to be the reason why, when arguments were heard by the Court after the evidence had been recorded, counsel for the petitioners did not even try to argue that this offence of bribery had been established. The then Chief Minister of Punjab, Sardar Gurnam Singh, and the Director of Industries, Punjab, were examined as witnesses on behalf of the petitioners to prove that an application for grant of the licence for Polyester Fibre Factory was sent to the Central Government on behalf of the Industrial Development Corporation which was a public limited concern owned by the Punjab Government. The petitioners also examined the Director of Industries, U. P., the Registrar of Companies, U. P., and the Secretary of the Swadeshi Cotton Mills Ltd., Kanpur, to prove that an application was also presented for the licence for the same factory on behalf of Swadeshi Cotton Mills in which Shri Sita Ram Jaipuria holds shares in his own name and a large number of shares are also held by his wife, his children, and other close relatives. The Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of Industrial Development, and the Under-Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of Petroleum and Chemicals, were also produced as witnesses and they proved the fact that the licence for the Polyester Fibre Factory was granted in favour of Swadeshi Cotton Mills in preference to the public sector company, the Industrial Development Corporation owned by the Punjab

Government. The evidence of the latter two witnesses also, however, proved the circumstances in which the licence was granted to the Swadeshi Cotton Mills, Kanpur, disregarding the claim of the Industrial Development Corporation of Punjab. According to the evidence of these two witnesses, the procedure obtaining is that all applications for such licences are first processed in the relevant Ministries and are examined and completed if any further material is to be obtained. The Administrative Ministry, which in this case was the Ministry of Petroleum and Chemicals, prepares a note showing the various factors relating to each application which require to be taken into consideration. Thereafter, these applications come up for consideration before a sub-committee of the Licensing Committee of the Government of India. The Licensing Committee is a large body which includes amongst its members Secretaries of various Ministries as well as representatives of State Governments. This Committee appoints sub-committees for licences concerned with specific Ministries of the Government. In the case of the Polyester Fibre Factory, the meeting of the sub-committee took place on the 7th July, 1969 when the decision was taken to grant the licence to Swadeshi Cotton Mills, Kanpur. In accordance with the rules, this decision of the sub-committee was submitted to the Minister in charge of the Ministry of Industrial Development who gave his approval in the second week of July. It was subsequently that a letter of intent for granting the licence to Swadeshi Cotton Mills was issued on behalf of the Government of India on 24th July, 1969. According to the procedure prevailing, any parties who were claimants for licence and whose claims were rejected, had a right to make a representation after the issue of the letter of intent and their representation had to be considered by the full Licensing Committee. The meeting of the full Licensing Committee was actually held on the 13th November, 1969. At this meeting, representatives of the U. P. Government as well as the Punjab Government were present and they argued the cases on behalf of the two parties from their States, viz, the Swadeshi Cotton Mills Ltd., Kanpur, and the Industrial Development Corporation, Punjab. It appears that it was on the basis of the fact that the letter of intent was issued on 24th July, 1969 that this charge of bribery was put forward by alleging that the licence was granted to Swadeshi Cotton Mills during the election period. As has been indicated earlier, the decision about the grant of licence to Swadeshi Cotton Mills was taken by the sub-committee on the 7th July, 1969, and even the Minister in charge of the Ministry of Industrial Development gave his approval in the second week of July. The candidature of Shri Sanjiva Reddy for the office of the President was decided upon by the Parliamentary Board of the Congress on 12th July, 1969, and the respondent announced his candidature for the first time on 13th July, 1969, which was the last but one day before the close of the second week of July. On the face of it, the grant of the licence to Swadeshi Cotton Mills could not possibly have any relation to the candidature of either Shri Sanjiva Reddy or the respondent for the office of the President, and it is impossible to accept that the licence was granted to Swadeshi Cotton Mills for the purpose of inducing Shri Sita Ram Jaipuria to vote and exercise his influence in favour of the respondent. The grant of the licence was in due course in accordance with the procedure prevailing in the Ministry of the Government of India and had no relation at all with the candidature of the respondent for the office of the President which, in fact, was announced after that decision had already been arrived at. Consequently, the conclusion follows that no offence of bribery was committed in the matter of grant of licence for the Polyester Fibre Factory to Swadeshi Cotton Mills; and this ground for setting aside the election of the respondent, therefore, fails and is rejected.

Issue No. 4 (a), (b) and (c) in Election Petitions Nos. 4 and 5 of 1969.

254. This issue relates to the challenge to the validity of the election of the respondent on the ground of commission of a number of offences of undue influence under Section 18 (1) (a) and (b) (i) of the Act which lays down that, if the Supreme Court is of opinion—

(a) that the offence of bribery or undue influence at the election has been committed by the returned candidate or by any person with the connivance of the returned candidate; or

(b) that the result of the election has been materially affected—

(i) by reason that the offence of bribery or undue influence at the election has been committed by any person who is neither the returned candidate nor a person acting with his connivance, the Supreme Court shall declare the election of the returned candidate to be void. Section 18 (2) gives the definition of the words "bribery and undue influence" by laying down that, for the purposes of this section, the offences of bribery and undue influence at an election have the same meaning as in Chapter IX-A of the Indian Penal Code. In the Indian Penal Code, Section 171C which defines "undue influence" is as follows:—

"171C. (1) Whoever voluntarily interferes or attempts to interfere with the free exercise of any electoral right commits the offence of undue influence at an election.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1), whoever—

(a) threatens any candidate or voter, or any person in whom a candidate or voter is interested, with injury of any kind, or

(b) induces or attempts to induce a candidate or voter to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested will become or will be rendered an object of Divine displeasure or of spiritual censure, shall be deemed to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral right of such candidate or voter, within the meaning of sub-section (1).

(3) A declaration of public policy or a promise of public action, or the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right, shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this section."

To appreciate the significance of this definition, reference may also be made to Clause (b) of Section 171A which defines "electoral right" as meaning the right of a person to stand, or not to stand as, or to withdraw from being, a candidate or to vote or refrain from voting at an election. The definition of "undue influence" also uses the word "injury" in S. 171C (2) (a), and this word has also been given a special meaning under the Indian Penal Code, having been defined in Section 44 as denoting "any harm whatever illegally caused to any person, in body, mind, reputation or property".

255. In order to decide whether the various allegations made in the two election petitions do constitute the commission of the offence of undue influence it is necessary to understand properly what acts constitute undue influence as defined in Section 171C of the Indian Penal Code. Sub-section (1) of Section 171C, in general terms, makes any act an undue influence if it interferes or attempts to interfere with the free exercise of any electoral right, and if it is committed voluntarily. The question has arisen what acts can be held to interfere with the free exercise of an electoral right. We are here concerned with the electoral right of a voter which, according to the definition in Section 171A (b), is the right to vote or refrain from voting. Undue influence can be held to be committed if the person charged with the offence interferes or attempts to interfere with the free exercise of this right of voting or refraining from voting. When an elector exercises the right of vote, it can be envisaged that he goes through the mental process of first taking a decision that he will vote in favour of a particular candidate and, thereafter, having made up his mind, he has to go and exercise that electoral right by casting the vote in favour of the candidate chosen by him. The language used in Section 171C indicates that the offence of undue influence comes in at the second stage when the offender interferes or attempts to interfere with the free exercise of that choice of voting in accordance with the decision already taken by the voter. It, therefore, follows that, if any acts are done which merely influence the voter in making his choice between one candidate or another, they will not amount to interference with the free exercise of the electoral right. In fact all canvassing that is carried on and which is considered legitimate is intended to influence the choice of a voter at the first stage and that is quite permissible. Once the choice has been made by a voter, there should be no interference with the free exercise by him of that choice by actually casting the vote, or, in the alternative, there may be a case where a voter may decide that he will not vote for any candidate at all, but some acts are done which compel him to cast his vote. It is in such cases that the offence of undue influence will be held to have been committed. The language used in the definition of "undue influence" implies that an offence of undue influence will be held to have been committed if the elector, having made up his mind to cast a vote for a particular candidate, does not do so because of the act of the offender, and this can only be if he is under a threat or fear of some adverse consequence. Whenever any threat of adverse consequence is given, it will tend to divert the elector from freely exercising his electoral right by voting for the candidate chosen by him for the purpose. In a case where the voter is threatened with an injury as defined in the Indian Penal Code it has to be deemed under S. 171C (2) (a) that it interferes with the free exercise of the electoral right of the voter; and the same applies if the elector is induced or attempt is made to induce him to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested will become or will be rendered an object of Divine displeasure or of spiritual censure. In the first case, under Clause (a), it is a temporal harm illegally caused to the person, in body, mind, reputation or property, while in the second case, under Clause (b), the interference is because of the fear of becoming an object of Divine displeasure or of spiritual censure. There can, however, be cases where the threat may not be of an injury as defined in Section 44, I. P. C. where the harm caused must be illegal. Cases can arise where there may be no illegality in the threatened consequence to the voter and, yet, it may interfere with the free exercise of his right to vote. An instance that can be cited is where a father may threaten to disinherit his son in respect of property solely owned by the father unless his son voted for a particular candidate or refrained from voting for some other candidate. The consequence of non-compliance with the wishes of the father would be the loss of inheritance to the son which is not an injury as defined in Section 44, I. P. C. Such an attempt by the father would clearly amount to exercise of undue influence by him on his son. But, in cases where the only act done is for the purpose of convincing the voter that a particular candidate is not the proper candidate to whom the vote should be given, that act cannot be held to be one which interferes with the free exercise of the electoral right.

256. It has, however, been argued that there may be a case where such virulent propaganda may be carried on against a candidate as may cloud the mind and judgment of the voters and almost compel them to come to a decision that they should not vote for that particular candidate. It was urged that, in such a case, it should be held that undue influence was exercised on the voters. In considering this proposition, various aspects have to be kept in view. The first is that, if it is held that propaganda adverse to a candidate can amount to undue influence, it will be almost impossible to draw a line and differentiate between legitimate propaganda which will amount to undue influence and that which will not. Then comes the question of the reverse type of propaganda where a particular candidate is so highly praised that voters are influenced to the extent of considering him an excellent person well above all other candidates; and the question will be whether such an influence on the mind of a voter can be held to be undue influence. More important than all these aspects is the scheme of the law and the language used in it which, in my opinion, very clearly show that mere propaganda against a candidate cannot be held to be exercise of undue influence. The word "free" is used in Section 171C, I. P. C., as qualifying "exercise" and not as qualifying the word "vote". If undue influence had been defined as interference with the exercise of free vote, possibly the definition could have been construed as indicating that influence brought on the mind of a voter so as to change the manner of his voting by affecting his choice and judgment in selecting the candidate for whom he is going to cast his vote, would be comprised within undue influence. The word "free" having been used as qualifying the word "exercise" gives the indication that the freedom envisaged is to cast the vote in accordance with the choice already arrived at and, if such freedom of casting the vote in that manner is interfered with, the offence of undue influence will be held to have been committed. In Words and Phrases, Permanent Edition, Vol. 17A by West Publishing Company, the meaning of the word "free" in various contexts accepted in America has been given, and the relevant meaning which can assist is in the following words:—

— "Within the constitutional provision, elections are "free" when the voters are subjected to no intimidation or improper influence, and whenever every voter is allowed to vote as his own judgment and conscience dictate."

This meaning clearly indicates that the question of freedom actually arises at the stage when a voter has already exercised his judgment and conscience, has decided which candidate he will vote for, and is then allowed to cast his vote freely without any interference in the form of intimidation or improper influence.

257. A very important aspect in considering this argument is that whatever meaning is given to the expression "undue influence" in the Act will also apply when interpreting the provisions of the Indian Penal Code, because the Act imports the definition of "undue influence" from Section 171C of the Code. In the Indian Penal Code, a new Chapter 1XA was introduced by the Indian Elections Offences and Inquiries Act 39 of 1920. The Statement of Objects and Reasons attached to the Bill which culminated in that Act explained this provision by stating that—

"undue influence at an election is defined as the voluntary interference or attempted interference with the right of any person to stand, or not to stand, or withdraw from being, a candidate, or to vote or refrain from voting. This covers all threats of injury to person or property and all illegal methods of persuasion and any interference with the liberty of the candidates or the electors."

The language used in Section 171C was, thus, intended to cover only cases where the interference comes at the stage when the elector must have liberty to cast his vote freely, having already made up his mind how that vote is going to be cast. It is interference at this stage that was envisaged as amounting to undue influence.

258. The subject of influence at the stage of making a choice was dealt with in Chapter IXA of the Indian Penal Code under a separate and distinct provision which is contained in Section 171C and is as follows:—

"Whoever with intent to affect the result of an election makes or publishes any statement purporting to be a statement of fact which is false and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate, shall be punished with fine."

258A. The section clearly recognises that, at elections, there is bound to be propaganda in which candidates or their supporters may be issuing statements so as to influence the voters against their rival candidates, and it limits the prohibition by law to only those statements of fact which are false, or believed to be false, or believed not to be true, in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate. Propaganda can be not only by attacking the personal character or conduct of a candidate, but even his political or public character and activities. On the face of it, Section 171G envisages that propaganda of the latter type will not be treated as an offence. Only when the propaganda is in the form of false statements of fact relating to the personal character or conduct of the candidate that the law will punish the person indulging in it by making him liable to payment of fine. These false statements about the personal character or conduct of the candidate may, of course, be scurrilous and foul, but, even then, the offence committed would fall under Sec. 171C, I. P. C., which makes the offence punishable with fine only. On the other hand, an offence of undue influence as defined in Section 171C, I. P. C., has been made punishable under Section 171F, I. P. C., with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year or with fine, or with both. If it is held that false propaganda against personal character or conduct of a candidate can amount to undue influence, the person indulging in that propaganda would become liable to punishment under S. 171F, I. P. C., which has been considered a more serious offence by being made punishable with imprisonment in addition to, or, in the alternative, with fine. This interpretation would thus make S. 171G, I. P. C., totally ineffective and otiose. If the false statements as to personal character or conduct are held to be punishable under Section 171F as constituting offence of undue influence, there would be no point in prosecuting the same person for the less serious offence under Sec. 171C. In fact, Section 171G would be fully covered by Section 171F and, consequently, the interpretation sought to be urged in these petitions has to be rejected.

259. It is true, that, in the Act, there is no provision indicating that publication by a candidate, or by any other person with his connivance, of a statement of fact which is false in relation to the personal character or conduct of another candidate will be deemed to be a corrupt practice on the commission of which an election can be declared void. Such omission in the Act cannot, however, be a good reason for enlarging the meaning of the offence of undue influence so as to hold that an election of a President or Vice-President must also be set aside on such a ground. It may be noticed in this connection that, in the Representation of the People Act, 1951 there is a specific provision contained in Sec. 123 (4) laying down that a corrupt practice is constituted by the publication by a candidate or his agent or by any other person, with the consent of a candidate or his election agent, of any statement of fact which is false, and which he either believes to be false or does not believe to be true, in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate, or in relation to the candidature, or withdrawal, of any candidate, being a statement reasonably calculated to prejudice the prospects of that candidate's election. In the Representation of the People Act, 1951 also, undue influence is defined in almost the same language as that contained in Section 171C, I. P. C. In that Act, therefore, an election can be declared void not only on the ground of commission of the corrupt practice of undue influence, but also on the ground of publication of false propaganda as to the personal character or conduct of a candidate. Parliament, however, chose not to include any such provision in the Act which was passed when the Representation of the People Act, 1951 had already been enacted and enforced. The Court is not concerned with the reasons which weighed with the Parliament in making such an omission in the Act when a similar provision had been kept in the earlier enactment in respect of elections to the Central and State Legislatures. The omission may be deliberate or accidental, but, in either case, it is not for the courts to attempt to fill up this gap by enlarging the meaning to be given to the expression "undue influence" which is the corrupt practice included in the Act as a ground for setting aside the election. It is clear from the scheme of Chapter IXA of the Indian Penal Code that false propaganda as to the personal character and conduct of a candidate was created as a separate offence and the definition given in Section 171C of "undue influence" was not intended to lay down that such propaganda will amount to interference with the free exercise of electoral right so as to constitute undue influence.

260. The only case of this Court dealing with the question of undue influence under the Act is reported in (1968) 2 SCR 133 = (AIR 1968 SC 904), where the Court had to consider the distinction between canvassing and exercise of undue influence and held:—

1970 S. C./135 XII G—10

"It is difficult to lay down in general terms where mere canvassing ends and interference or attempt at interference with the free exercise of any electoral right begins. That is a matter to be determined in each case; but there can be no doubt that, if what is done is merely canvassing, it would not be undue influence. As sub-section (3) of Sec. 171-C shows, the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right would not be undue influence." The Court, after reviewing the relevant case law under the Representation of the People Act, then proceeded to hold:—

"It will be seen from the above review of the cases relating to undue influence that it has been consistently held in this country that it is open to Ministers to canvass for candidates of their party standing for election. Such canvassing does not amount to undue influence but is proper use of the Minister's right to ask the public to support candidates belonging to the Minister's party. It is only where a Minister abuses his position as such and goes beyond merely asking for support for candidates belonging to his party that a question of undue influence may arise. But so long as the Minister only asks the electors to vote for a particular candidate belonging to his party and puts forward before the public the merits of his candidate it cannot be said that by merely making such request to the electorate the Minister exercises undue influence. The fact that the Minister's request was addressed in the form of what is called a whip is also immaterial so long as it is clear that there is no compulsion on the electorate to vote in the manner indicated."

In that case, the Court thus envisaged that the question of undue influence will arise if there is some sort of compulsion on the electorate to vote in the manner indicated by the person alleged to have committed that corrupt practice, and a question of such compulsion can obviously arise only when a voter, having made his choice as to the person for whom he will cast his vote, is under some pressure to vote for another candidate owing to the undue influence exercised on him. The nature of interference, which would constitute undue influence, was further clarified when dealing with the letters issued by the Chief Whip of the Congress Party requesting members not to cast their second preference vote, by stating:—

"Such a request or advice does not, in our opinion, interfere with the free exercise of their electoral right, for the electors still would be free to do what they desired in spite of the advice."

The Court, thus, envisaged that undue influence is exercised when an elector is not free to do what he desires, while influencing his desire will not be exercise of undue influence

261. It has already been indicated above that the scheme of Chapter IXA of the Indian Penal Code and Section 123 of the Representation of the People Act is quite similar inasmuch as, in both these enactments, undue influence is defined in almost identical language and the publication of false statements as to the personal character of a candidate has been separately made either a criminal offence or a corrupt practice in practically the same language. Consequently, some assistance can be derived from the interpretation that has been given to the provisions contained in Section 123, sub-sections (2) and (4) of the Representation of the People Act, 1951. Dealing with this aspect in the case of Ram Dial v. Sant Lal, 1959 Supp (2) SCR 748 = (AIR 1959 SC 835) this Court first pointed out that the law in England relating to undue influence at elections is not the same as the law in India and, consequently, proceeded to interpret the law here without taking into account the principles laid down in England. In that case, the question arose whether, what a religious leader had done by issuing a hukam or farman, amounted to undue influence or not. The Court held:—

"There cannot be the least doubt that a religious leader has the right freely to express his opinion on the comparative merits of the contesting candidates and to canvass for such of them as he considers worthy of the confidence of the electors. In other words, the religious leader has a right to exercise his influence in favour of any particular candidate by voting for him and by canvassing votes of others for him. He has a right to express his opinion on the individual merits of the candidates. Such a course of conduct on his part will only be a use of his great influence amongst a particular section of the voters in the constituency; but it will amount to an abuse of his great influence if the words he uses in a document, or utters in his speeches, leave no choice to the persons addressed by him, in the exercise of their electoral rights. If the religious head had said that he preferred the appellant to the other candidate, because, in his opinion, he was more worthy of the confidence of the electors for certain reasons, good, bad or indifferent, and addressed words to that effect to persons who were amenable to his influence, he would be within his rights, and his influence, however great, could not be said to have been misused. But in the instant case, as it appears, according to the finding of the High Court, in agreement with the Tribunal, that the religious leader practically left no free choice to the Nandhari electors, not only by issuing the hukam or farman, as contained in Ext. P.1 quoted above, but also by his speeches, to the effect that they must vote for the appellant, implying that disobedience of his mandate would carry divine displeasure or spiritual censure the case is clearly brought within the purview of the second paragraph of the proviso to Section 123 (2) of the Act."

In that case, thus, the Court envisaged that the hukam or farman issued by the religious leader was a mandate, the disobedience of which would carry divine displeasure or spiritual censure, and it was for this reason that it was held that corrupt practice of undue influence had been committed.

262. In the case of Inder Lal v. Lal Singh, 1962 Supp (3) SCR 114 = (AIR 1962 SC 1156), this Court explained the scope and purpose of sub-section (4) of Section 123 of the Representation of the People Act by pointing out that, for the protection of the constituency against acts which would be fatal to the freedom of election, the statute had provided for the inclusion of the circulation of false statements concerning the private character of a candidate amongst corrupt practices, and dissemination of false statements about the personal character of a candidate had been constituted into a corrupt practice. This corrupt practice was envisaged as separate and distinct from the corrupt practice of undue influence mentioned in Section 123 (2) of that Act.

263. In the case of Lalroukung v. Hoakhohal Tangjom, Civil Appeal No. 1315 of 1963, D/- 9-1-1969 (SC) this Court dealt with a case where there had been an assault close to the polling station after certain pamphlets had been issued, wherein threats were freely canvassed and exhortations made that those, who opposed the candidates supported by the two organisations (which issued the pamphlets), would not be forgotten nor spared. The Court then proceeded to hold:—

“In the light of propaganda of this nature carried on before the polling days, it is impossible to view the assault as an isolated incident nor can it be legitimately argued that the conclusion of the Judicial Commissioner that it was a culmination of those threats was either an unreasonable or an unwarranted conclusion. There can be no doubt that such rowdiness at a polling station was bound to deter voters from coming to the polling station to exercise freely their franchise. We have no doubt that the assault by the appellant's polling agent attracted Section 123 (2), proviso (a), and that also rendered the election void.”

This was again a case where the exercise of their electoral right by the voters was interfered by physical act of assault and threat on voters who intended to vote for the rival candidate.

264. The last case of this Court which may be referred is the decision in Manubhai Nandlal Amersey v. Popatlal Manilal Joshi; AIR 1969 SC 734 in which the effect of a speech came up for consideration and it was held:—

“The actual effect of the speech is not material. Corrupt practice is committed if the speech is calculated to interfere with the free exercise of electoral right and to leave no choice to the electors in the matter. In considering the speeches, the status of the speaker and the character of the audience are relevant considerations.”

This case also, thus, envisaged that there must be some element of compulsion on the voter to vote in a particular manner before the act said to be a corrupt practice can be held to amount to undue influence.

265. Coming to the decisions of the High Courts, the first case that may be cited is the decision of the Orissa High Court in (1958) 19 ELR 203 (Orissa). Barman, J., explained undue influence in the following words:—

“A voter must be able to freely exercise his electoral right. He must be a free agent. All influences are not necessarily undue or unlawful. Legitimate exercise of influence by a political party or association or even an individual should not be confused with undue influence. Persuasion may be quite legitimate and may be fairly pressed on the voters. On the other hand, pressure of whatever character, whether acting on the fears, threat, etc., if so exercised as to overpower the volition without convincing the judgment is a species of restraint which interferes with the free exercise of electoral right. In such an atmosphere, the free play of the elector's judgment, discretion or wishes is overborne and this will constitute undue influence, though no force is either used or threatened. It is not necessary to establish that actual violence had been used or even threatened. Methods of inducement which are so powerful as to leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his choice may amount to undue influence. Imaginary terror may have been created sufficient to deprive him of free agency.”

He, thus, distinguished between influence which is exercised for convincing the judgment of a voter, and influence the result of which is that the free play of the elector's judgment, discretion or wishes is overborne and the elector is left no free will to exercise his choice. In this decision, thus, the distinction, as indicated above, is clearly brought out. In that case, however, a picture with a caption had been published as a part of a cover of booklet, and it was held that its publication amounted to exercise of undue influence. The reason is indicated when the learned Judge, dealing with this poster, held:—

“The picture with the caption, as it stood, was intended to be made catchy with an ulterior motive and was deliberately published in that asked form in order to create a feeling of terror, fear and hatred and was such a compelling appeal to the mind of the voters as to amount to interference with the free exercise of voters' electoral right.”

The picture in question showed a dead boy with a caption in Oriya which, translated in English, was to the effect: “Do not vote for the Congress who killed Sahid Sunil”. That picture, thus, did not contain any false statement or representation as to the personal character of a candidate; but Barman, J., held:—

“The picture of the dead boy with the caption was a direct charge against the Congress that it killed the deceased boy. This was a misrepresentation of fact. It was as a result of firing by the police that the boy unfortunately got involved. We do not know whether the Congress Party took a stern view of the firing, whether the Congress Party itself condemned the firing, and whether ultimately those responsible for the firing were reprimanded and punished for the unfortunate incident. The catchy caption that the Congress killed the boy was false representation made by the respondent No. 1 with intent to strike terror into the mind of the voters and thereby to interfere with the free exercise of electoral right of such terror-stricken voters. The picture with the caption was a distortion of a situation for political ends done with the intention as aforesaid. It was an artful device to catch the imagination of the voters. It terrorised the voters and was likely to create in their mind a feeling of terror, fear, hatred or strong prejudice against the Congress. In the caption under the dead boy's picture was a veiled threat to the voters that if they voted for the Congress who were capable of killing, then such Congress, so retained in power, would again,—as it actually did in the past, resort to such killing of men in which the voters themselves or their children might also be killed in the same way as it was openly demonstrated by the picture of the dead boy with the caption. It at least did create or was likely to create or had the tendency to create terror and an unknown fear in the mind of the voters. The picture of the dead boy with the caption frightened the voters or was likely to frighten them and it was intended to overawe voters which interfered or was likely to interfere or had the tendency to interfere with the free exercise of electoral right of the voters."

It will, thus, be seen that the main reason for holding that the publication of the picture amounted to exercise of undue influence was that it created terror and fear in the minds of voters of personal harm to themselves or their children in case they voted for the Congress candidate. The publication of the picture was not held to be undue influence or interference with the electoral right because it contained false propaganda against the candidate or the Congress Party, but because of the element of compulsion which was envisaged as arising in the minds of the voters not to vote for the Congress because of the fear of consequences which might be visited on themselves or their children in case they voted for the Congress. Barman, J., in this connection, also referred to the decisions of Election Tribunals in Sardul Singh v. Hukam Singh, (1953) 6 ELR 316 (Election Tribunal Patiala) and (1953) 7 ELR 457 (Election Tribunal, Kotah) and agreed with the principles laid down in those cases. I shall indicate later the ratio of those two decisions. The other two Judges, constituting the majority, differed from Barman, J., and held that the publication of the picture did not amount to undue influence, because, in their opinion, no inference could be drawn that the publication of this picture was intended to create a fear in the minds of the voters. Rao, J., dealt with the submission of Mr. Rath, the counsel, that a look at the photo will make the voter think that, if he votes for the Congress Party during whose office the killing took place, he would be similarly killed and therefore it created a fear in his mind and thus interferes with the free exercise of the electoral right. He rejected it by saying that, in his opinion, this was a far-fetched argument. He further held:—

"The picture simply represents Sunil De after being shot at by the police firing with the caption underneath "Do not vote for the Congress who killed Sahid Sunil". It does not say that, if the voters give their votes for the Congress, all the voters or some of them would be shot as Sunil De. Further, the shooting of Sunil De is known to everybody and that is on account of police firing in connection with the States Reorganisation Committee Report's disturbances, the voters therefore cannot be influenced to think by publication of this poster that if they voted for the Congress they would be shot at like that. It is also significant that there is nothing mentioned about this poster in the election campaign in the booklet on whose cover the photo is printed. The respondent No. 1, therefore, could not have intended to cause fear in the minds of the voters by publication of exhibit 3 in order to interfere with the free exercise of their votes."

Das, J., dealt with this aspect as follows:—

"Nothing has been stated in the body of exhibit 3 relating to this picture. The picture simply represented a dead person after being shot by the police firing with the caption: "Do not vote for the Congress who killed Saheed (Martyr) Sund". Nowhere it was stated if the voters gave their votes to the Congress they would be shot at as Sunil. The further fact is that Sunil De was shot at by the police firing in connection with the disturbance arising out of the recommendations of the States Reorganisation Commission of which the electors had known before.

Thus, the voters cannot be said to have been influenced to think that if they voted for the Congress they would be shot at like Sunil. Hence, in my opinion, the respondent No. 1 could not have intended to cause any fear in the minds of the voters by the above publication to constitute interference with the free exercise of the electoral right of the voters."

The decisions by these two Judges are, of course, of no help; but, as indicated earlier, even the decision of Barman, J., is in line with the view taken above and does not indicate that mere false propaganda as to the personal character of a candidate or even relating to the party sponsoring the candidate can amount to the corrupt practice of undue influence.

266. The next case which may be cited is another decision of the Orissa High Court in Abdul Rahiman Khan v. Radha Krishna Biswas Roy, AIR 1959 Orissa 188. In that case, the successful candidate had published a poem and the question arose whether the publication of that poem amounted to exercise of undue influence. The Court first, in general terms, dealt with the scope of undue influence by saying:—

"Section 123 of the Act is rather wide in its term and contemplates four distinct forms of interference with the free exercise of any electoral right, viz., direct interference, indirect interference, direct attempt at interference and indirect attempt at interference. There is nothing in the definition that such interference or attempt at interference should be by any method of compulsion. Evidently, the offence includes such interference or attempts to interfere by any method, and it definitely includes the method of inducement wherein there may not be any compulsion at all. The inducement again must be of such powerful type as would leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his electoral right."

This general explanation does not appear to be inconsistent with the view taken above, because it was held that, even if there be no compulsion at all, the inducement must be of such powerful type as would leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his electoral right. The freedom of will envisaged, obviously, is to vote in accordance with his choice. On the facts in that case, it was found that, in the poem, there were threats against Raja of Kalahandi in whom the defeated candidate was interested. After referring to the Raja of Kalahandi, the objectionable portion read as follows:—

"Without any consideration for your own and others, you acted as a devil. Would anybody now be able to save you if you are beaten mercilessly? Having done all the above mischiefs, now you are appealing to the electors for their vote as a shameless person. If there were a grain of shame left in you, you would not have progressed at all. You are a thief and a Badmas and you should not remain in our land. You who belong to the Ganatantra party are only fit for the gallows."

These words, clearly, contained a threat to the life and were, therefore, rightly held to amount to exercise of undue influence. Similarly, another portion was to the following effect:—

"The leader of your Party was making money by selling widows is well known to the raiyats. Since there is not a bit of sense left in you, you are now seeking votes of these raiyats of Koraput. They will no longer be dissuaded by your words."

It was further stated that:

"the raiyats of this Constituency are bound to take revenge on you. How dare you ask for their votes?"

266-A. Again, the Court, in holding that these publications amounted to exercise of undue influence, was fully justified, because there were clear threats against the life of the candidate.

267. The only other case of a High Court that requires to be noticed is the decision of the Punjab High Court in Amir Chand Tota Ram, Delhi v. Smt. Sucheta Kripalani, AIR 1961 Punj 383. The Court expressed its view by holding:—

"The legal phrase "undue influence" denotes something legally wrong or violative of a legal duty. In order to establish undue influence, it must be proved that the influence was such as to deprive the person affected of the free exercise of his will. It must amount to imposing a restraint on the will of another whereby he is prevented from doing what he wishes to do or is forced to do which he does not wish to do.

An advice, argument, persuasion or solicitation cannot constitute undue influence. Honest intercession, even importunity, falls short of controlling a person's free exercise of his will. A persuasion, which leaves a person free to adopt his own course, is not undue influence. Otherwise a suggestion or an entreaty from somebody, held in esteem, could be treated as undue influence. In the absence of proof that a person has been, in consequence of the alleged influence, deprived of free agency no question of there being an undue influence arises.

It is not objectionable to exercise an influence by acts of kindness or appeals to the free reason and understanding. So long as the free agency of the other person is not prevented or impaired by obtaining a domination over the mind of another, it cannot be deemed as an exercise of an undue influence. The essence of "undue influence" is that a person is constrained to do against his will, but for the influence he would have refused to do if left to exercise his own judgment. It has to be shown that a person's volition had thus been controlled by another whereby he could not pursue his own inclination, being too weak to resist the importunity and in view of the pressure exercised on his mind he could not act intelligently and voluntarily and had become subject to the will of the other who had thus obtained domination over his mind."

267A. This exposition of the scope of "undue influence" is also in line with the view taken above. It envisages that the corrupt practice of undue influence is committed when a person is constrained to do against his will and is unable to act in accordance with his judgment. Such a position can only arise if the influence is brought on the person concerned after he has already formed his judgment and decided how he will exercise his electoral right. Propaganda for the purpose of influencing the judgment, even if undesirable, cannot be held to be undue influence.

268. Coming to the cases of Election Tribunals, the earliest case that needs consideration is the decision in (1953) 6 ELR 316 (Election Tribunal, Patiala) (supra). In that case, the Tribunal held:

"It is not necessary that there should be any actual threat or physical compulsion held out, but the method of inducement as may be adopted should convey to the mind of the person addressed that non-compliance with the wishes of the person offering the inducement may result in physical or spiritual harm to himself or to any other person in whom he is interested. Some fear of harm resulting from non-compliance with the request thus, seems to constitute an essential element in "undue influence".

269. On behalf of the petitioners, emphasis was laid on the decision of the Election Tribunal in (1953) 7 ELR 457 (Elec. Tri., Kotah) (supra).

In that case, it was held:—

"It may be observed that an attempt to interfere by the method of compulsion is not necessary and that even the method of inducement may be sufficient, provided it be of such a powerful type as would leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his choice. In other words, actual physical compulsion is not necessary, but positive mental compulsion may be enough to give rise to an undue influence."

269A. After expressing this view, the Tribunal proceeded to hold that the publication of a particular poster amounted to exercise of undue influence. Referring to it, the Tribunal held:—

"The poster was, therefore, clearly designed not only to catch voters for respondent No. 1, but, also, to overawe voters, the majority of whom were men of no better intelligence than ordinary illiterate villagers and to create a feeling of positive prejudice, if not of terror as well, in their minds against the petitioner."

269B. Reliance was placed primarily on the last part of this quotation where the Tribunal held that the creation of a feeling of positive prejudice in the minds of the voters can amount to undue influence. But this part of the sentence has to be read in conjunction with the earlier part where a clear inference was drawn that the poster was clearly designed to overawe the voters. This was the reason why the Tribunal held that the publication of the poster amounted to undue influence, though, when defining undue influence in general, the Tribunal had clearly stated that the inducement must be of such a powerful type as would leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his choice. In stating this principle, the Tribunal was clearly referring to the stage when, having made his choice, the voter wants to exercise it in accordance with his free will and that free will is interfered with. The Tribunal's decision is also, thus, in line with the view taken above.

270. The next decision of a Tribunal on which reliance has been placed is in Radha Krishna v. Tara Chand, (1956) 12 ELR 378 (Ele. Tri. Lucknow); but that decision appears to be of no help as, in that case, relying on an English decision, the Tribunal held that, before a threat can be said to amount to undue influence, the question must be put, was it a serious and deliberate threat uttered with the intention of carrying it into effect, and proceeded to apply that test to the case before it. The Tribunal, therefore, dealt with a situation where there was clearly a threat to the voters, but even the threat in question contained in the slogan was held not to constitute corrupt practice, as there was nothing to show that the purpose of the slogan was to directly or indirectly interfere with any person's free exercise of his electoral right.

271. In Amir Chand v. Sucheta Kripalani, (1958) 18 ELR 209 (Ele. Tri. Delhi) the Tribunal, after quoting the definition of "undue influence" contained in Section 123 (2) of the Representation of the People Act, 1951, held:—

"The definition, no doubt, is in general terms but it has an element of compulsion and it is an abuse of influence that will constitute undue influence". These remarks also do not go contrary to the view taken above.

272. The last case that requires notice is the decision of a Tribunal in Kataria Takandas Hemraj v. Pinto Frederick Michael, (1958) 18 ELR 403 (Ele. Tri. Surat) in which it was said:—

"A candidate, or as matter of fact, any person has every right to persuade people to vote in his favour at the election and in that respect he is further entitled to be even critical of the policy and the acts of the rival party or its candidate and that way it may as well be legitimate for them to influence the voters, provided they did not transgress the legitimate bounds of criticism. It is only undue influence which can be taken exception of, and, even though that term is wide enough to cover any interference with the exercise of the electoral right, one can justifiably call any act as an interference only when it has in it an element of compulsion so as to give way to free thinking in the exercise of the electoral rights of the voters."

This case also, therefore, envisaged some element of compulsion as a result of which a voter is unable to exercise his electoral right in accordance with his judgment and choice. None of the decisions rendered so far by the Courts or Tribunals in India, thus, go contrary to the view expressed above and, if at all, a majority of them are in line with it. It is in the light of this interpretation of what undue influence means that this Court has to proceed further to see which of the allegations made in the present petitions can amount to charges of undue influence and whether they have been established so as to vitiate the election.

273. The principal charge of undue influence, on which a mass of evidence has been led by the petitioners, relates to the publication of a pamphlet which contained scurrilous and vulgar allegations as to the personal character of Shri Sanjiva Reddy. It is not necessary for me to set out the details of the contents of that pamphlet. It is sufficient to mention that apart from allegations against Shri Sanjiva Reddy, there were no other allegations in it which could amount to a threat of any adverse consequence to any voter in case he cast his vote in favour of Shri Reddy. Even in the evidence, no witness stated that as a result of reading this pamphlet, he apprehended any adverse consequence either to himself or to anyone in whom he may be interested. No doubt, some witnesses stated that, on reading the pamphlet, they felt that, if Shri Sanjiva Reddy is elected as President, the Rashtrapati Bhavan may become a brothel; but that also does not amount to a threat of a nature which would constitute undue influence as explained above. Consequently, the publication of this pamphlet cannot constitute undue influence, so that it is totally unnecessary to go into the question whether it was printed, published and distributed at all; if so, by whom, and, further, whether such printing, publication or distribution was or was not with the connivance of the respondent. As I have held earlier, in the Act there is no provision made for setting aside election on the ground of publication of false statements as to the personal conduct or character of a candidate even if it affects his prospects in the election, so that no evidence need have been taken with regard to the printing, publication or distribution of this pamphlet or with regard to the question as to whether there was any connivance by the respondent in its printing, publication or distribution. The challenge to the election of the respondent based on this petition fails on this preliminary ground. However, I may add that, having had the benefit of reading the judgment proposed to be delivered by my brother Sikri, J., on these issues, I agree with his assessment of the evidence tendered by the parties and the findings recorded by him. These findings of fact are to the effect that, though the pamphlet was distributed by post and in the Central Hall of Parliament, it has not been proved that this distribution was with the connivance of the respondent or that the distribution materially affected the result of the election. Consequently, even on the assumption that the publication of this pamphlet could constitute undue influence, the election of the respondent is not liable to be set aside.

274. Apart from this ground based on the pamphlet, a number of other instances of exercise of undue influence were also cited and relied upon in these two election petitions. These grounds have also been dealt with by my brother Sikri, J., and some by my brother Mitter, J. I agree with their reasons and findings for holding that none of these charges of undue influence has been established, so that the challenge to the election of the respondent on the ground of exercise of undue influence fails altogether.

275. I also agree with the order directing parties to bear their own costs and the reasons for that order given by my brother Sikri, J., in his judgment. Issue No. 7 in Election Petition No. 1 of 1969, Issue No. 9 in Election Petition No. 4 of 1969, and Issue No. 11 in Election Petition No. 5 of 1969.

276. As a result of the findings on other issues, the petitioners in none of these petitions are entitled to any relief, as no ground has been made out for declaring the election of the respondent as void.

MITTER, J.—277. I have had the benefit of reading the judgments of my colleagues. The facts leading up to the filing of these petitions and the issues settled therein have been set out in the judgment of my learned colleague Bhargava, J. I am in agreement with him in his conclusion on issues other than issue No. 4 in Election Petitions 4 and 5 of 1969. I regret to have to differ from my other colleagues on this issue. As Petition No. 5 is more comprehensive than Petition No. 4 I prefer to refer to the allegations made in Petition No. 5 alone. Leaving out of account the technical grounds on which the election has been challenged, the petitioners have asked for a declaration that the election be declared void on the following grounds:

(1) That the offence of undue influence at the election had been committed by the returned candidate (hereinafter referred to as the 'respondent') and by his supporters with the connivance of the respondent as mentioned in paragraph f (a) and various sub-paragraphs of 13 (b) and (c) of the Petition.

(b) The result of the election was materially affected by reason of the offence of undue influence at the election having been committed by persons mentioned in paragraph 13 of the petition.

278. Undue influence is alleged to have been committed in diverse ways on various persons details whereof are given hereinafter.

279. Paragraph 13 of Petition No. 5 purports to give a summary of the events which are alleged to have formed the background in which the offences were said to have been committed. Put briefly they are as follows.

(1) After the demise of the late Dr. Zakir Hussain, the Prime Minister of India who was also an influential leader in the Congress Party took the view that the respondent who was then the Vice-President of India should be adopted as the Congress candidate for the office which had fallen vacant. This was not acceptable to all her colleagues in the Congress Parliamentary Board (hereinafter referred to as the 'Board')—a body which had in the past selected the party's candidate for the office of the President. The controversy which thus arose could not be settled because of want of unanimity of opinion and the matter was left to be decided at the Bangalore Session of the All India Congress Committee (hereinafter referred to as the 'Committee') to be held in July 1969.

(2) No consensus being attained at the meeting of the Board held in Bangalore on July 12, 1969 the matter was decided by voting. The Prime Minister and Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed voted for Sri Jagjiwan Ram while Sri Morarji Desai, Sri Y. B. Chavan, Sri S. K. Patil and Sri Kamaraj voted in favour of Sri N. Sanjeeva Reddy.

(3) The decision of the Board greatly upset the Prime Minister and she then and there threatened the members of the Board that it would lead to serious consequences and that she should not have been over-ruled in that manner.

(4) The official announcement of the selection of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy as Congress candidate for the office of the President of India was made on 13th July, 1969 and on the same day the respondent who was then acting as the President of India called a Press conference at Rashtrapati Bhavan whereat he announced his candidature for the office of the President. He issued a statement condemning the selection of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy as based on partisan considerations and emphasised that a candidate for the highest office in the land should possess character, integrity, patriotism, experience and a good record of service and sacrifice. According to the petitioner there was an insinuation that the above requisite qualifications were lacking in Sri Sanjeeva Reddy.

(5) Being upset by the decision of the Board, the Prime Minister without any consultation with her colleagues in the Cabinet advised the Acting President of India that she would withdraw the Finance portfolio from Sri Morarji Desai. Her advice being accepted Sri Morarji Desai was relieved of his portfolio. She followed it up with the promulgation of the Bank Nationalisation Ordinance, a day before Parliament was to commence its session. This Ordinance was signed by the respondent acting as President.

(6) On the 22nd July, 1969 the Prime Minister proposed Sri Sanjeeva Reddy as a candidate for the office of the President of India which was duly seconded by Sri Swaran Singh, a Cabinet Minister.

(7) The Prime Minister however expressed difficulty in issuing a written appeal in support of the candidature of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy.

(8) At a meeting of the Board held on August 6, 1969 there was a joint address by the Prime Minister and the Congress President, Sri S. Nijalingappa, in support of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy's candidature. At this meeting the Prime Minister stated that she stood by the decision of the party while on his part Sri Nijalingappa said that he had been in contact with leaders of various opposition parties, namely, the P. S. P., the S. S. P., the Jan Sangh, B. K. D. and others and that the response in favour of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy had been encouraging.

(9) On August 9, an anonymous pamphlet in cyclostyled form and a printed pamphlet both without the name of the publisher or the printer were published by free distribution among the members of the electoral college for the Presidential election. In this the leaders of the party like Shri S. K. Patil, Shri Atulya

Ghosh and others were castigated as self-seekers who had tried to become virtual dictators and Sri Sanjeeva Reddy who had been selected by these people was described as a corrupt and immoral person. The pamphlet charged Sri Sanjeeva Reddy not only with lack of probity but as having been guilty of gross misdemeanour towards members of the other sex on a number of occasions culminating in the statement that if he were to become the President he would "turn Rashtrapati Bhavan into a harem, a centre of vice and immorality."

(10) Not satisfied with what the Prime Minister had said at the Congress Parliamentary meeting on August 6, Sri Nijalingappa requested her specifically on August 9 to issue an appeal to the members of the party to vote and work for the success of the Congress candidate. The Prime Minister avoided doing this and merely said that people should abide by the decision of the Board.

(11) This was followed by certain correspondence by and between Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed and Sri Jagjiwan Ram jointly on the one hand and Sri Nijalingappa on the other, as also by and between Sri Nijalingappa and the Prime Minister from August 11 to August 15. The correspondence showed an open cleavage between the members of the party and it became clear that the Prime Minister and her colleagues in the Cabinet and their supporters made the issue of the success at the election by defeating the group which opposed her at the meeting of the Board on July, 12, as one of prestige and political survival of the Prime Minister.

280. Against the above background the offence of undue influence was said to have been committed by the returned candidate and some persons named and unnamed and described as the workers and supporters of the respondent with his connivance by voluntarily interfering and attempting to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral rights of the candidates and the electors in general and some of them named in particular.

(a) According to paragraph 13 (b) (ii) of the petition Sri S. Nijalingappa, Sri S. K. Patil, Sri K. Kamaraj, Sri Morarji Desai and Sri Y. B. Chavan, electors at the election were threatened by the Prime Minister on the 12th July at Bangalore with serious consequences with the object of unduly influencing them so as to make them change their decision to nominate Sri Sanjeeva Reddy as their candidate. The threat is alleged to have been repeated subsequently on a number of occasions. It was also said to be a direct attempt to dissuade Sri Sanjeeva Reddy from standing as a candidate.

(b) In paragraph 13 (b) (iii) of the petition it was stated that with the object of interfering with the free exercise of the electoral rights of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy, Sri Nijalingappa, Sri Kamaraj and others, electors at the election, supporters of the respondent viz., Sri Jagjivan Ram, Sri Yunus Saleem, Sri Sashi Bhushan, Sri Krishna Kant, Sri Chandrasekhar, Sri Jagat Narain Sri Mohan Dharja and Sri S. M. Banerjee in particular and other supporters and workers of the respondent in general with the consent and connivance of the respondent published by free distribution a pamphlet, annexure A-38 to the petition, in Hindi and English, in cyclostyled form as well as in printed form in which serious allegations, as already noted, were made amounting to the commission of undue influence upon the persons named within the meaning of Section 171-C, I. P. C.

(c) According to paragraph 13 (b) (iv) of the petition this pamphlet was distributed from 9th to 16th August among all electors of the electoral college for the Presidential election. It was distributed in the Central hall of Parliament by the abovenamed person i. e., Sri Jagjivan Ram and others. A large number of electors were asked to read the contents of the pamphlet, and were also asked to say whether they would vote for such a debauch and corrupt man. An instance of this is given in paragraph 13 (b) (iv) of the petition: Sri Yunus Saleem approaching Abdul Ganif Dar, one of the petitioners and talking to him as above in the presence of other members of Parliament.

(d) The petitioner, Sri Abdul Ghani Dar took strong exception to what was going on and wrote a letter to the respondent endorsing a copy thereof to the Prime Minister and Sri Humayun Kahir requesting the respondent to condemn those who had published the pamphlet and make a public statement dissociating himself from and denouncing the publishers of the pamphlet.

(e) The respondent himself during his tour of the country addressed pressmen and members of the public at various places and repeatedly stated that a man of character and integrity should have been selected.

(f) according to paragraph 13 (c) (i) the supporters of the respondent, namely, the Prime Minister and some of her Cabinet colleagues like Sri Jagjivan Ram, Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed, Sri Yunus Saleem, Dr. Karan Singh, Sri Dinesh Singh, Sri Swaran Singh, Sri I. K. Gujral, Sri S. S. Sinha, Sri K. K. Shah and Sri Triguna Sen misused their position for furthering the prospects of the returned candidate by contacting a large number of electors on the telephone and openly telling them that if the electors did not vote for the respondent they would lose all the patronage which they would otherwise be given. Electors were called by some of the abovenamed Ministers at their Official residences and offices in Delhi and undue influence brought to bear upon them by ordering them to vote for the returned candidate.

(g) According to paragraph 13 (c) (iii) of the petition Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed and Sri Yunus Saleem threatened the Muslim electors that Sri Sanjeeva Reddy was in fact a candidate of the Jan Sangh Party and if he was elected the fate of the Muslim community in India would be in danger. This undue influence was exercised over all the Muslim electors in the country and specially those in Parliament. An instance of this is given as having taken place between Sri Yunus Saleem and Sri Abdul Ghani Dar.

(h) The workers and supporters of the respondent became desperate and demanded freedom of vote at the election so that the members of the Congress party may not feel themselves bound by their party affiliation to vote for Sri Sanjeeva Reddy. It was stated that such a scare was created that the President of the U. P. Congress Committee, Sri Kamalapati Tripathi and the Chief Minister Sri C. B. Gupta who had on August 6, 1969 addressed a meeting for solidly backing Sri Sanjeeva Reddy changed their stand and on the 13th August, 1969 Sri Kamalapati Tripathi also pleaded for freedom of vote.

(i) According to paragraph 13 (c) (v) a scare was raised and undue influence exercised on the minds of the members of the Legislative Assembly of Bengal that if successful Sri Sanjeeva Reddy would enforce President's Rule in Bengal wiping off the United Front Government and the legislative assembly. According to paragraph 13 (c) (ii) a similar scare was raised with regard to enforcement of President's Rule in Andhra Pradesh. According to paragraph 13 (c) (x) the returned candidate, the Prime Minister, Sri Jagjivan Ram Sri Kakhruddin Ali Ahmed and others entered into a conspiracy calculated to maintain the said Ministers in their office by the allegation that Sri Nijalingappa had entered into an arrangement with the leaders of the Jan Sangh and Swatantra Party to oust the Congress Government from the Centre and to establish a Coalition Government.

280A. There are other allegations of undue influence in the said paragraph but as they were not pressed no further notice need be taken of them.

281. In paragraph 14 of the petition it was stated that the result of the election had been materially affected by reason of the commission of the offence of undue influence at the election by the persons mentioned in paragraph 13 of the petition.

282. In paragraph 16 of the petition it was stated that in case the Court came to the conclusion that the offences mentioned above, though committed were not connived at by the respondent, still the election ought to be declared void as the result of it had been materially affected by the above practices.

283. In the counter affidavit filed by the respondent the above charges were all denied and the correctness of the statements disputed. The respondent stated expressly that for want of knowledge he could not traverse the allegations in the various sub-paragraphs of paragraph 13 of the petition except those which were made against him or imputed to him and alleged to have been said or done at his instance or with his connivance. He stated categorically in paragraph 25 of the counter affidavit that he had been carrying on his campaign single handed and that in between July 30, and 13th August he was out of Delhi most of the time touring different parts of the country. He disputed the correctness of the charges made in the various sub-paragraphs of paragraph 13 and denied that he had been contacted by the Prime Minister at Delhi from Bangalore as alleged or that she had suggested that as soon as an official announcement regarding the selection of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy was made he should announce his own candidature for the office of the President. With regard to his press conference he said that he had only outlined the necessary qualifications for the office of the President and that his statement could by no means be read as an attack on the personal conduct or character of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy. He said further that he had approved of the taking over of the portfolio of Finance from Sri Morarji Desai on the 16th July, on the recommendation of the Prime Minister but the signing of the Bank Nationalisation Ordinance had nothing to do with the Presidential Election. He stated in clear terms that he had no knowledge of any of the statements relating to printing, publishing and distribution of the unsigned pamphlet, whether printed or otherwise and he completely dissociated himself therefrom. He denied the insinuation that he had anything to do with the Prime Minister's alleged call for a free vote to get support for himself. He characterised the allegations regarding the publication and distribution of the pamphlet mentioned in the petition by anybody as his supporters or workers with his consent and connivance, as reckless, wild and false. He denied having received any letter from Sri Abdul Ghani Dar as mentioned in the petition or any copy of the pamphlet. He denied ever having hinted in any of his public addresses anything derogatory to the personal conduct or character of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy. With regard to paragraph 13 (c) (i) of the petition he stated that he was not aware of any of the persons having acted in the manner alleged therein. With regard to paragraph 13 (c) (ii) and (iii) as also 13 (c) (x) he disclaimed all knowledge.

284. On 21st January, 1970, the Court directed the petitioners to furnish several particulars of the petition mostly relating to paragraph 13 (b) (iii), 13 (b) (iv), 13 (c) (i) and 13 (c) (iii). In compliance with the same the petitioners gave inter alia the following particulars.

285. With regard to paragraph 13 (b) (iv) they stated "that the persons who had distributed the pamphlet between the 9th and 16th August, 1969, were already mentioned in paragraph 13 (b) (iii) and some other persons who had done so were being mentioned in particulars furnished to paragraph 13 (b) (iii), namely, Shri Maulana Ishaq Sambali, Sri Akbar Ali, M. P., Sri Bhupesh Gupta M. P. and Sri Randhir Singh M. P. With regard to the place and date on which the persons mentioned in paragraph 13 (b) (iii) were alleged to have distributed the pamphlet it was said that on 9th August, 1969, Sri Sashi Bhushan, M. P. and Sri Krishan Kant, M. P. had together distributed copies of the said pamphlet to various members of Parliament at the latter's resident in New Delhi. It was also said that the pamphlet had been distributed by leaving the same at the residence of nine other electors at their residence on 9th August, late in the evening. Little attempt was made to prove these statements.

286. The names of 18 persons were given as having received the said pamphlet at their residence by post in various places in India. They were all members of the Legislative Assemblies of Uttar Pradesh as also of Madhya Pradesh, Bihar and Chandigarh. Of these some but not all were examined in Court.

287. Further, with regard to distribution of the pamphlet it was said that the persons already mentioned in paragraph 13 (b) (iii) as also those mentioned in reply to the application for particulars given above distributed the same individually and in groups of two or more on all days between 11th and 15th August to the general body of electors frequenting the Central hall of Parliament. The names of 29 members of Parliament were given as the recipients of the pamphlets in the above manner. Further groups of M. Ps. were mentioned as having distributed the said pamphlets to some or other of the petitioners on the 11th August, 1969, in the Central hall of Parliament. With regard to the telephone calls by Ministers exercising undue influence over the members of the electoral college referred to in paragraph 13 (c) (i) about 30 M. Ps. were named as having been so contacted by 11 named Ministers including the Prime Minister, Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed, Sri Jagjivan Ram, Sri Yunus Saleem and Sri I. K. Gujral. With the exception of three of them, namely, Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed, Sri Yunus Saleem and Sri I. K. Gujral, no attempt was made to substantiate the above. I do not think it necessary to dilate more on the correctness of the particulars and the attempt to establish the same except to say that little effort was made to establish the allegations which were verified either as true to the knowledge of the deponent, Sri Abdul Ghani Dar or as being based on information received by him from the persons named, some of whom were called as witnesses but did not support the version of Sri Abdul Ghani Dar as given in the particulars.

288. For the sake of convenience issue No. 4 is reproduced below:

Issue 4 in Election Petitions Nos. 4 and 5.

(a) Whether all or any of the allegations made in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 (a) to (m) of the petitions constitute in law an offence of undue influence under Section 18 (1) (a) of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act of 1952?

(b) Whether the said allegations made in paragraphs 8 (e) and 13 (a) to (m) are true and proved?

(c) In the event of these allegations being proved constituting undue influence, whether

(i) the returned candidate has committed the offence of undue influence?

(ii) Whether undue influence was committed by his workers and if so, with his connivance? and

(iii) Whether undue influence was committed by others without his connivance and if so, whether that has materially affected the result of the election?

289. Before going into the evidence adduced one must note the provisions of the law relating to the election of the President of India and in particular the grounds on which such an election can be challenged and then briefly consider the history of the law of undue influence generally and examine the statutory provisions of the law of undue influence applicable to elections and the exposition thereof in India.

290. Article 71 (1) of our Constitution provides that all doubts and disputes arising out of or in connection with the election of a President or Vice-President shall be enquired into and decided by the Supreme Court whose decision shall be final. Sub-clause (3) of that article lays down that:

"Subject to the provisions of this Constitution, Parliament may by law regulate the matter relating to or connected with the election of a President or Vice-President."

By Act 31 of 1952, the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (hereinafter referred to as the 'Act') Parliament made provisions for the conduct of Presidential and Vice-Presidential elections. Disputes regarding elections are dealt with in Part III of the Act containing Sections 13 to 20. Section 16 of the Act lays down the reliefs which may be claimed by a petitioner and Section 18 specifies the grounds for declaring the election of a returned candidate to be void. The relevant part thereof reads as follows:

"18 (1) If the Supreme Court is of opinion—

(a) that the offence of bribery or undue influence at the election has been committed by the returned candidate or by any person with the connivance of the returned candidate; or

(b) that the result of the election has been materially affected—

(i) by reason that the offence of bribery or undue influence at the election has been committed by any person who is neither the returned candidate nor a person acting with his connivance;

(c) * * *

The Supreme Court shall declare the election of the returned candidate to be void.

(2) For the purposes of this section, the offences of bribery and undue influence at an election have the same meaning as in Chapter IX-A of the Indian Penal Code (Act 45 of 1860)."

291. Section 21 contained in part IV provides for the making of rules to give effect to the Act. The provisions in the Constitution and the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act of 1952 and the Rules framed thereunder form a complete code relating to such election and all doubts and disputes regarding the validity of such elections which can be adjudicated upon by the Supreme Court must arise within the limits specified thereby.

292. Chapter IX-A of the Indian Penal Code which deals with offences relating to elections was introduced by the Indian Elections Offences and Inquiries Act, 39 of 1920, Section 2. Section 171-A in that part defines candidates and electoral right. Bribery is defined in Section 171-B. Undue influence at elections is covered by Section 171-C which runs as follows:—

"(1) Whoever voluntarily interferes or attempts to interfere with the free exercise of any electoral right commits the offence of undue influence at an election.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1), whoever—

(a) threatens any candidate or voter, or any person in whom a candidate or voter is interested, with injury of any kind, or

(b) induces or attempts to induce a candidate or voter to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested will become or will be rendered an object of Divine displeasure or of spiritual censure, shall be deemed to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral right of such candidate or voter, within the meaning of sub-section (1).

(3) A declaration of public policy or a promise of public action, or the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right, shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this section."

Under Section 171-F whoever commits the offence of undue influence or personation at an election shall be punished with imprisonment of either description which may extend to one year or with fine or with both. Under Section 171-G:

"Whoever with intent to affect the result of an election makes or publishes any statement purporting to be a statement of fact which is false and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate shall be punished with fine."

293. It will be noted that the words used in sub-sec. (1) of Sec. 171-C are very wide and sub-sec. (2) though illustrative of sub-section (1) does not purport to comprehend all the facets of undue influence under sub-section (1). The statement of objects and reasons of the Act of 1920 makes the intention of the legislature clear. It reads:

"The second sub-clause is merely explanatory of the general definitions in the first sub-clause and does not restrict the generality of the words used there. We have considered the criticisms of this clause based on the generality of the words employed but we are satisfied that any attempt at specific enumeration would be open to serious danger of loopholes in what we regard as a most salutary provision."

On the facts of this case the vital question before us is, whether the mere publication of a false statement highly derogatory of the personal conduct or character of a candidate or the dissemination of a scurrilous pamphlet depicting a candidate as one of lecherous character will fall under sub-section (1) of Section 171-C or whether in order to prove the commission of the offence the election petitioner must go farther and establish that there was an attempt on the part of some persons to interfere with the free choice of a candidate on the part of the voters by making use of the pamphlet so as to deflect their will and restrict their choice to persons other than the one defamed.

294. Undue influence is an old and well known English legal concept. Before the expression came to be used in litigation over elections it had acquired a definite significance to English lawyers although its exposition in common law was somewhat different from that which the equity lawyers gave it. The concept was developed along a particular line by judges in England trying election disputes and our Indian law has by and large followed the same pattern. According to Anson on English law of Contract (22nd Edition) Chapter VII:

"A contract which has been obtained by means of pressure or intimidation is voidable at common law or in equity on the ground of duress. At common law the definition of duress is a narrow one and only the more extreme forms of coercion will suffice. In equity, however, owing to the development of the doctrine of constructive fraud, a contract may be rescinded in cases where common law provides no remedy. . . . At common law duress consists in actual or threatened violence or imprisonment, the subject of it must be the contracting party himself, or his wife, parent, child, or other near relative, and it must be inflicted or threatened to be inflicted by the other party to the contract, or at least it must be known to him when he entered into the contract." (see p. 243).

The learned author goes on to say at pages 244 and 245:

"Equity, on the other hand, will treat contracts as voidable when they have been induced by forms of pressure of coercion which do not amount to duress at common law. . . . ."

The term 'undue influence' has sometimes been used by the Courts to describe the equitable doctrine of coercion which has just been referred to, but it also includes, and it would perhaps be convenient to confine it, forms of pressure much less direct or substantial than those already discussed. It may arise where the parties stand to one another in a relation of confidence which puts one of them in a position to exercise over the other an influence which may be perfectly natural and proper in itself, but is capable of being unfairly used. . . . .

If it can be shown that one party exercised such domination over the mind and will of the other that his independence of decision was substantially undermined, the party whose will was overborne will be entitled to relief on the ground of undue influence.

There is no need for any special relationship to exist between the parties, although, of course, it may do so. The mere fact that denomination was exercised is sufficient; no abuse of confidence need be proved."

295. According to Cheshire and Fifoot on the Law of Contract (7th Edition) p. 264.

"The Courts have never attempted to define undue influence with precision, but it has been described as 'some unfair and improper conduct, some coercion from outside, some overreaching, some form of cheating, and generally, though not always, some personal advantage obtained by' the guilty party."

296. So far as the English Law of Elections on which principally our election laws are based is concerned, reference may be made to some of the well-known text books on the subject. According to Rogers Parliamentary Elections and Petitions, 20th Edition Chapter XI p. 325;

"In England corruptly influence a voter, whether by the more direct and grosser form of treating or the more indirect and subtler form of wagers was always an offence as a species of bribery; but unduly influencing a voter was not, before the 17 and 18 Vict. c. 102, an offence in the strict sense of the word, although its prevalence is mentioned in many resolutions of the House of Commons, and many statutes have been passed to prohibit the evil in particular instances; and although a vote unduly influenced is void at common law and will be struck off on a scrutiny."

The learned author goes on to add:

"As early as 3 Edw. 1, c. 5, which is declaratory of the common law, in affirming the vital principles of freedom of election, said, 'Because elections ought to be free, the King commandeth, upon forfeiture, that no man by force of arms, nor by malice or menacing, shall disturb any to make free election.'"

Rogers notes that in the case of Lichfield (1869) 1 O'M & H. 25, Willes, J., defined undue influence as

"using any violence or threatening any damage, or resorting to any fraudulent contrivance to restrain the liberty of a voter, so as either to compel or frighten him into voting or abstaining from voting otherwise than he freely will."

In the same case the learned Judge added (at p. 28):

"The law cannot strike at the existence of influence. The law can no more take away from a man, who has property, or who can give employment, the insensible but powerful influence he has over those who he can benefit by the proper use of his wealth, than the law could take away his honesty, his good feeling, his courage, his good looks, or any other qualities which give a man influence over his fellows. It is the abuse of influence with which alone the law can deal. Influence cannot be said to be abused because it exists and operates. It is only abused in cases of this kind, where an inducement is held out by a promise . . . . . to induce voters to vote or not to vote at an election." This case was decided upon 17 and 18 Vict. c. 102, Section 5.

297. According to Rogers the following are the principal kinds of improper influence:

1. The use of open force or violence, or the threat thereof.

2. The infliction of any temporal injury, damage, harm or loss or by the threat thereof.

3. The infliction of any spiritual injury, damage, harm or loss, or by the threat thereof.

4. The impeding etc. the due exercise of the franchise etc. by abduction, duress, or any fraudulent device or contrivance.

298. Section 101 of the Representation of the People Act, 1949 appears to be the latest codification of the English law on the subject of undue influence. Under sub-section (1) a person shall be guilty of corrupt practice if he is guilty of undue influence. Sub-section (2) of the section is in two parts. Under clause (b) a person shall be guilty of undue influence if, by abduction, duress or any fraudulent device or contrivance, he impedes or prevents the free exercise of the franchise of an elector or proxy for an elector, or thereby compels, induces or prevails upon an elector or proxy for an elector either to vote or to refrain from voting.

299. Under Section 91(1) of the Representation of the People Act, 1949:

"Any person who, or any director of any body or association corporate which, before or during an election, shall, for the purpose of affecting the return of any candidate at the election, make or publish any false statement of fact in relation to the personal character or conduct of the candidate shall be guilty of an illegal practice, unless he can show that he had reasonable grounds for believing, and did believe, the statement to be true."

300. It will thus be noticed that in England the law of undue influence as regards elections is somewhat akin to that branch of the law as expounded by the courts of equity and both have a common facet, namely, the inducement of a person to act otherwise than under his free will by resort to any fraudulent device or contrivance.

301. Coming now to our Indian law, Section 16 of the Contract Act which came on the statute book in 1872 laid down by sub-section (1) that:

"A contract is said to be induced by "undue influence" where the relations subsisting between the parties are such that one of the parties is in a position to dominate the will of the other and uses that position to obtain an unfair advantage over the other."

In substance our law of contract with regard to undue influence stresses upon the domination of the will by another to obtain an unfair advantage by the exercise thereof. So far as our election law is concerned the earliest attempt seems to have been the codification in 1919 under Chapter IX-A of the Indian Penal Code. This was followed by the Government of India (Provincial Elections) Corrupt Practices and Election Petitions Order, 1936 which will be shortly described as the Corrupt Practices Order. This law was passed after the Government of India Act of 1935. Corrupt practice in relation to an election by the members of a Provincial Legislature to fill seats in Provincial Legislative Council, meant one of the practices specified in Parts I and II of the First Schedule to the Order, and in relation to any other election, meant one of the practices specified in Parts, I, II and III of that Schedule. Part I of the First Schedule defined undue influence in Clause 2 in the following terms:—

"Undue influence, that is to say, any direct or indirect interference or attempt to interfere on the part of a candidate or his agent, or of any other person with the connivance of the candidate or his agent, with the free exercise of any electoral right:

Provided that—

(a) without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of this paragraph, any such person as is referred to therein who—

(i) threatens any candidate or elector, or any person in whom a candidate or elector is interested, with any injury of any kind, or

(u) induces or attempts to induce a candidate or an elector to believe that he, or any person in whom he is interested, will become or will be rendered an object of divine displeasure or spiritual censure, shall be deemed to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral right of that candidate or elector within the meaning of this paragraph:

(b) a declaration of public policy, or a promise of public action, or the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right, shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this paragraph."

302. It will be noticed that there is a good deal of similarity between this provision and that in Section 171-C of the Indian Penal Code. There is greater similarity between undue influence as defined in Section 171-C and the definition of that expression in Section 123 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951 — another Parliamentary Act. Under the Act of 1951 undue influence is defined as follows in Section 123 (2):

"Undue influence, that is to say, any direct or indirect interference or attempt to interfere on the part of the candidate or his agent, or of any other person with the consent of the candidate or his election agent with the free exercise of any electoral right:

Provided that —

(a) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of this clause any such person as is referred to therein who—

(i) threatens any candidate or an elector or any person in whom a candidate or an elector is interested, with injury of any kind including social ostracism and excommunication or expulsion from any caste or community; or

(ii) induces or attempts to induce a candidate or an elector to believe that he, or any person in whom he is interested, will become or will be rendered an object of divine displeasure or spiritual censure, shall be deemed to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral right of such candidate or elector within the meaning of this clause:

(b) a declaration of public policy, or a promise of public action, or the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right, shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this clause."

This Act contains a further provision in clause (4) of Section 123 laying down that "the publication by a candidate or his agent or by any other person with the consent of a candidate or his election agent of any statement of fact which is false and which he either believes to be false or does not believe to be true in relation to the personal conduct or character of any candidate in relation to the candidature or withdrawal, of any candidate being a statement reasonably calculated to prejudice the election of that candidate at an election" will be deemed to be a corrupt practice for the purpose of that Act.

303. It will be noted that under sub-section (4) publication of a false statement relating to the personal conduct or character of a candidate only becomes a corrupt practice when it is done by a rival or his agent or any other person with his consent. However opprobrious such publication may be it is not an electoral offence under the Act of 1951 and would not be a ground for setting aside an election although it might become culpable under Section 499 of the Indian Penal Code and as such punishable with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years or with fine or with both. Clearly such publication per se would not amount to any direct or indirect interference or attempt to interfere with the free exercise of an electoral right so as to attract Section 123 (2) of the Act. Even in England it would be an illegal practice within the meaning of Section 91 (1) of the Representation of the People Act. By itself it would not make the publisher of the statement guilty of undue influence. While enacting the statute of 1952 the legislature had before it the electoral offences codified in Chapter IX-A of the Indian Penal Code. It recognised the necessity of a law prescribing for the annulment of an election only if bribery or undue influence was committed thereat. Such offence if committed by a candidate or by any person with his connivance was enough for declaring the election void. But if committed by any person who was not the returned candidate nor one acting with his connivance, it was not to affect the election unless the result of it had been materially affected by such malpractices. So far as this branch of the law is concerned the only difference between the Act of 1951 and the Act of 1952 lies in the fact that under the latter Act corrupt practices of bribery or undue influence by one who was not a party to the election or his agent are also brought in. But the nature and character of undue influence under both the Acts remains the same. I see no reason for taking a view that what would not be undue influence under the Act of 1951 can become one under the Act of 1952.

304. If publication of any defamatory matter relating to a candidate was to be treated as a direct or indirect interference or attempt to interfere with the free exercise of any electoral right under the wide words of Section 171-C (1) there would have been no occasion for the legislature to provide for it separately under Section 123 (4) of the Act of 1951. In my view the same position would obtain under the Act of 1952 and before any publication of a defamatory matter relating to a candidate can be treated as commission of the offence of undue influence there must be some overt act in addition to the mere publication — some attempt or persuasion of a voter to restrain the free choice of a candidate before the law of undue influence is excited.

305. The above proposition may be illustrated as follows: If anonymous posters containing defamatory matter about a candidate's personal conduct or character were to be displayed in prominent places in the constituency so as to attract the notice of electors, it would come within the mischief of Section 171-G of the Indian Penal Code but would fall short of exercise of undue influence under Sec. 171-C. An attempt to denigrate a person in such a way could not be said to be directed to thwarting the free choice of electors inasmuch as the poster by itself would give no indication as to the source of information on which the imputations were made or of their authenticity. But if an unsigned pamphlet containing matter defamatory of the personal conduct or character of a candidate be pressed personally upon an elector by another with an attempt to make the receiver believe that there was some basis for the charges levelled against the candidate, the person receiving the pamphlet would be likely to give credence to the imputations made therein and would thus be subject to a restraint on his franchise. As a mere attempt to interfere with the free exercise of an electoral right is sufficient for the purpose of Section 171-C (1) of the Indian Penal Code it is not necessary to prove positively that there was actual domination of or overbearing of the will of the elector to lead to the inference that undue influence was exercised: it would be sufficient to show that there was an attempt to pervert the unfettered choice of a voter by resort to illegitimate persuasion inter alia by pressing upon him a document containing such a false statement of fact relating to the conduct or character of a candidate as would make any right-thinking man shrink from selecting him and shun him in the process of selection of a candidate. In such a case it would not be difficult to hold that there was in fact malice behind the publication and the adoption of a fraudulent device calculated to defeat or deflect the will of the elector. In this view of the matter the publication of a false statement of fact relating to the conduct or character of a person coupled with an attempt to persuade electors by such publication would attract the operation of Section 171-C (1) of the Indian Penal Code. It would also fall within the definition of undue influence in Section 123 (2) of the R. P. Act of 1951 and the definition given in Clause 2 of the Corrupt Practices Order, 1936.

306. I may now proceed to note some of the reports of Election Commissions under the Corrupt Practices Order 1936 before examining more recent decisions. In Amritsar City (Mohammadan) Constituency — Sh. Mohammad Sadiq v. Dr. Saifuddin Kitchlew, (1864-1935) 2 Doabia's E. C. 117 before the Second Election Petitions Commission Bench the scope of undue influence under the First Schedule to the Corrupt Practices Order, 1936 came to be considered. It was the case of the petitioner that one Feroze-ud-Din Ahmed by administering oaths to his audience which included numerous voters, restricted their choice to the returned candidate Dr. Kitchlew, under pain of spiritual penalties and thereby interfered with the free exercise of their right to vote. Counsel for the respondent argued that the element of compulsion was an essential ingredient of the corrupt practice of undue influence and contended that it was not even alleged that Feroze-ud-Din Ahmed had compelled his audience to take the alleged oaths. The Commissioners found that “such oaths were taken and that Feroze-ud-Din Ahmed also reminded his audiences of the penalties provided for breach of such oaths by their religion. It is evident that the element of compulsion was present in the minds of those voters who had taken oaths to vote for Dr. Kitchlew at the time when they marked their ballot-papers, they had given an undertaking, supported by the sanction of loss of faith, which inevitably leads to divine displeasure and spiritual censure; that they would vote for Dr. Kitchlew and for no other person."

The Commissioners however could not find in the definition of 'undue influence' any basis for the proposition that unless Feroze-ud-Din Ahmed had compelled voters to take these oaths, the offence of undue influence was not complete ob-serving:

"That definition, as is obvious, gives a very wide scope of the meaning of 'undue influence' . . . . Evidently the offence includes such interference or attempt to interfere by any method, and one, possible method is the method of inducement, which is proved to have been practised in this case. In fact the word 'induces' occurs in the second proviso to the definition of 'undue influence' reproduced above. Further, we have seen that the inducement was of a very powerful type, supported as it was by references to the demolition of the Shahidganj Mosque and the deaths of Muslims which resulted from the firing during the ensuing disturbances in regard to which the feeling among the rank and file of the Muslim community is undoubtedly very deep."

In Amritsar City (Mohammadan) Constituency Case No. 2, (1935-50) 2 Doabia's E. C. 150, D/- 28-9-1938 the meaning of undue influence under the Corrupt Practices Order, 1936 again fell to be considered. There a question arose as to whether certain news items and posters in which the unsuccessful person was wrongly and falsely described as standing as a candidate on a Muslim League ticket would fall within the mischief of the Order. In their report the Commissioners stated (at p. 157):

"There is no proper evidence of actual interference before us, and as regards the attempt, we have to see if there was the deliberate intent to mislead voters and thus make them exercise their electoral right under the wrong impression that the respondent had been set up as a candidate by the Muslim League."

The case for the petitioner there was that one Maulana Zaffar Ali Khan by making an appeal to the voters restricted their choice to Mohammad Sadiq under pain of spiritual penalties and even otherwise and thereby exercised undue influence in the free exercise of their right to vote. In the opinion of the Commissioners an inducement could not amount to undue influence unless it was of such a powerful type as would leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his choice. In Lyallapur and Jhang General Constituency Case No. 2 (1864-1935) 2 Doabia's E. C. 243 at p. 256 one of the questions canvassed was whether fraud was a corrupt practice within the meaning of Government of India (Provincial Legislative Assemblies) Order 1936, paragraph 4-B. According to the Commissioners fraud may in some cases come within the ambit of the corrupt practice of undue influence. Referring to the definition of undue influence in the said order the Commissioners observed:

"It is obvious that the definition of undue influence is very widely worded and covers all kinds of fraudulent acts or omissions which, in any way directly or indirectly interfere with the exercise of any electoral right. The definition in the English Act specifically makes a fraudulent device or contrivance a type of undue influence. As devices based on fraud which interfere with the exercise of electoral right, are not mentioned by name in the definition given in Schedule I, it has been intentionally framed in very general terms so as to cover all kinds of such devices."

(1953) 7 Ele LR 457 (Ele. Tri. Kotah) was a case in which there were two candidates, one a jagirdar and the other a Congressman. The Congress committee published a poster containing the picture of a tenant tied up to a tree and a well dressed jagirdar asking another who had a waving whip in his hand, to flog the tenant and the tenant's wife was shown lying prostrate on the ground. It was held that the publication of the poster amounted to the exercise of undue influence on the voters who were mostly illiterate villagers and the case fell under Section 123 (2) of the Representation of the People Act.

307. In (1956) 12 Ele LR 378 at p. 415 (Ele. Tri. Lucknow) one of the questions before the Election Tribunal was whether the shouting of a slogan in various villages and bazars that people who vote in a particular way would be given a shoe-beating amounted to exercise of undue influence. Relying on the observations of Norfolk (Northern case) (1869) 1 O'M & II 238 at p. 242 that before a threat can be considered to amount to undue influence, a question must be put, 'was it a serious and deliberate threat uttered with the intention of carrying it into effect?' Applying that test, the Election Commissioners held that they had no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that the shouting of the slogan could not amount to undue influence inasmuch as it was shouted for several months before the election was held and not a single instance was brought on record in which the threat contained in the slogan was carried out. On the facts of the case, it was held that none of the parties could be said to have uttered slogans for the purpose of directly or indirectly interfering with any person's free exercise of his electoral right. Reference was also made to the fact that there was no evidence that any complaint even had been made about the shouting of the slogans to the agents of the petitioners.

308. In (1958) 18 Ele LR 209 (Ele. Tri. Delhi) one of the questions which engaged the attention of the election Tribunal was whether a false statement in a daily newspaper to the effect that the respondent Smt. Sucheta Kriplani was going to be taken as a Rehabilitation Minister in the forthcoming Union Cabinet after the election thereby giving currency to the rumour amounted to undue influence as contemplated under Section 123 (2) of the Representation of the People Act. The view taken by the Tribunal was that (p. 252):

"The so-called device namely, that some one from Lucknow sent the news as a rumour or opinion of the member of the Congress High Command, does not fall within the ambit of the definition" in Section 123 (2). It was said that though the definition was no doubt in general terms it has an element of compulsion and it was an abuse of influence that would constitute undue influence.

309. In (1958) 18 Ele LR 403 (Ele. Tri. Surat) an appeal was made to Maharashtrais not to vote for the Congress candidate as the Congress Government had resorted to firing and killing Maharashtrian leaders for demanding a separate Maharashtra State and photographs of martyrs who had been killed were attached to the appeal and it was even stated that the ballot box of the Congress Party was filled with the blood of Maharashtrian martyrs. Negating the plea of undue influence sought to be raised in the above appeal, the Tribunal stated that although the expression 'undue influence' was wide enough to cover any interference with the exercise of the electoral right, there is in it an element of compulsion so as to give way to free thinking in the exercise of the electoral right of the voters.

310. In (1958) 19 Ele LR 203 (Ele. Tri. Orissa) a case of undue influence was sought to be made out inter alia by the publication of a booklet which had in its cover page a photograph of one S. who had been killed during the police firing with the caption "Do not vote for the Congress who had killed S". In the judgment in appeal from the Election Tribunal Barman, J., remarked (at p. 217):

"A voter must be able to freely exercise his electoral right. He must be a free agent. All influences are not necessarily undue or unlawful. Legitimate exercise of influence by a political party or association or even an individual should not be confused with undue influence. Persuasion may be quite legitimate and may be fairly pressed on the voters. On the other hand, pressure of whatever character, whether acting on the fears, threat, etc., if so exercised as to overpower the volition without convincing the judgment is a species of restraint which interferes with the free exercise of electoral right. In such an atmosphere, the free play of the elector's judgment, discretion or wishes is overborne and this will constitute undue influence though no force is either used or threatened. It is not necessary to establish that actual violence had been used or even threatened. Methods of inducement which are so powerful as to leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his choice may amount to undue influence. Imaginary terror may have been created sufficient to deprive him of free agency."

310-A. With regard to the poster with the picture, the learned Judge said (at p. 219):

"It was an artful device to catch the imagination of the voters. It terrorised the voters and was likely to create in their mind a feeling of terror, fear, hatred or strong prejudice against the Congress. .... It at least did create or was likely to create or had the tendency to create terror and an unknown fear in the mind of the voters. The picture of the dead boy with the caption frightened the voters or was likely to frighten them and it was intended to overawe voters which interfered or was likely to interfere or had the tendency to interfere with the free exercise of electoral right of the voters."

310-B. The learned Judge was in favour of allowing the appeal but his colleague, Rao, J., expressed a different view. According to him (p. 234):

"The picture simply represents Sunil De after being shot at by the police firing with the caption underneath 'Do not vote for the Congress who killed Sahid Sunil.' It does not say that if the voters give their votes for the Congress all the voters or some of them would be shot as Sunil De."

311. The matter was referred to Das, J., by the Chief Justice in view of difference of opinion between Barman and Rao, JJ. According to this Judge no undue influence was exercised because nothing had been stated in the photo Ex. 3 relating to the picture and there was no statement that if the voters gave their votes to the Congress, they would be shot at as Sunil and accordingly

"respondent No. 1 could not have intended to cause any fear in the minds of the voters by the above publication to constitute interference with the free exercise of the electoral right of the voters."

312. In AIR 1959 Orissa 188 an unsuccessful candidate charged the returned candidate along with other persons with having committed undue influence by publication of a pamphlet in which it was alleged that deliberate false statements of facts in relation to his personal conduct and character had been made. In hearing the appeal Das, J., who delivered the judgment of the Court referred to the definition in Section 123 (2) of the Representation of the People Act and said:

"There is nothing in the definition that such interference or attempt at interference should be by any method of compulsion. Evidently, the offence includes such interference or attempt to interfere by any method, and it definitely includes the method of inducement wherein there may not be any compulsion at all. The inducement again must be of such powerful type as would leave no free will to the voter in the exercise of his electoral right."

312-A. On the evidence the learned Judge held (at p. 193) that there was admission by the respondent himself and it was abundantly clear that the returned candidate had acted conjointly with his agent in publishing and circulating Ex. 5 as a result of which the election of the petitioner was materially affected. In 1959 Supp (2) SCR 748 = (AIR 1962 SC 835) a question arose as to whether a command from Shri Sat Guru Sacha Padshah to the Namdharis Halqa — Sirsa that every Namdhari should vote for the success of Ram Dayal Vaid, it being a primary duty to make him successful in the election amounted to the exercise of undue influence. No doubt the command was from a person who was a religious leader and as such had a great influence on the Namdharis. The Court expressed the view that the religious leader has a right to exercise his influence in favour of any particular candidate by voting for him and by canvassing votes of others for him, and has the right freely to express his opinion on the comparative merits of the contesting candidate and to canvass for such of them as he considers worthy of confidence of the electors. Such a course of conduct on his part, would amount to an abuse of his great influence if the words used in a document, or utterances in his speeches leave no choice to the person addressed by him in the exercise of his electoral right. Incidentally it may be noted that the learned Judges stressed what was material under the Indian law was not the actual effect produced but the doing of such acts as were calculated to interfere with the free exercise of an electoral right.

313. In 1962 Supp (3) SCR 114 = (AIR 1962 SC 1156) the charge against the returned candidate was that he had been guilty of the exercise of undue influence inasmuch as a pamphlet containing a false statement that the respondent No. 2 was "purchaser of the opponents of the Congress by means of money" was issued by the agent of the respondent with his consent. Respondent No. 1 contended that the statement related to the public or political character of respondent No. 2 and not to his private character. In his judgment, Gajendragadkar, J., said (p. 122 of SCR Supp) = (at p. 1159 of AIR):

"Circulation of false statements about the private or personal character of the candidate during the period preceding elections is likely to work against the freedom of election itself inasmuch as the effect created by false statements cannot be met by denials in proper time and so the constituency has to be protected against the circulation of such false statements which are likely to affect the voting of the electors."

With regard to the allegation in the pamphlet already mentioned the Court took the view that:

"In plain terms, the statement amounts to an allegation that respondent No. 2 buys by offering bribes the votes of the opponents of the Congress. ....: Offering a bribe in an election introduces an element of moral turpitude and it cannot be denied that a person who offers bribe loses reputation as an individual in the eyes of the public."

The scope of Section 171-C, Indian Penal Code was considered in the recent decision of (1968) 2 SCR 133 = (AIR 1968 SC 904). This case is not an authority directly in point but some observations made by Wanchoo, C. J., may not be out of place. Delivering the judgment of the Court his Lordship remarked (p. 145) (of SCR) = (at p. 911 of AIR) that:

"..... the gist of undue influence at an election consists in voluntary interference or attempt at interference with the free exercise of any electoral right. Any voluntary action which interferes with or attempts to interfere with such free exercise of electoral right would amount to undue influence. But even though the definition in sub-section (1) of Sec. 171-C is wide in terms it cannot take in mere canvassing in favour of a candidate at an election. If that were so, it would be impossible to run democratic elections. Further sub-section (2) of Section 171-C shows what the nature of undue influence is though of course it does not cut down the generality of the provisions contained in sub-section (1). Where any threat is held out to any candidate or voter or any person in whom a candidate or voter is interested and the threat is of injury of any kind, that would amount to voluntary interference or attempt at interference with the free exercise of electoral right and would be undue influence. .... What is contained in sub-section (2) of Section 171-C is merely illustrative. It is difficult to lay down in general terms where mere canvassing ends and interference or attempt at interference with the free exercise of any electoral right begins. This is a matter to be determined in each case."

The question which primarily engaged the attention of this Court in the above case was, whether a letter addressed by the Prime Minister to all the electors in which she commended Dr. Zakir Husain and requested the electors to vote for him amounted to the exercise of undue influence and on the facts of the case the answer was in the negative.

314. The above citation of the cases is in our view sufficient to reject the contention of Mr. Daphtary that in order to establish undue influence it must be shown that there was some threat to a voter or at least an element of compulsion in the appeal to him. The cases also show that it would be futile to attempt to lay down a simple test applicable to all sets of facts and circumstances where undue influence is alleged to have been exercised. It can however be said that an attempt on the part of anybody to deflect a voter's will away from a particular candidate by creating prejudice against or hatred for him, as for instance by casting false aspersions on his personal character and conduct whether by spoken words or in writing may be sufficient for the purpose of establishing the commission of undue influence. Much would however depend on the nature of the attempt, the position of the person making it and the manner in which it is made. The mere publication by postal despatch of an anonymous but scurrilous pamphlet regarding the personal character of a candidate to voters all and sundry might attract the operation of Sec. 171-G of the Indian Penal Code but would fall short of Section 171-C. But if such a pamphlet is pressed upon voters and methods of inducement applied to them, specially by others who are equally interested in the election different considerations may well arise. In such a case a court of law may legitimately hold that the disseminators of the pamphlet were attempting to canalise or force the will of others away from the person whose character was assailed. Few would take any serious notice of an anonymous pamphlet however scurrilous it may be, if it were pasted on the walls of houses within the constituency where the election is to be held. Similar would be the fate of such a pamphlet disseminated by post. Persons who receive such a pamphlet would either throw it away or express surprise that such aspersions were being made against a person like Shri. Sanjeeva Reddy who has held high offices. I do not think that such dissemination, although mean and ignoble, would have any effect on the minds of persons who belong to the electoral college for the election of a person to the office of the President of India. But if the disseminators of such pamphlets were persons holding responsible offices or persons who belonged to the same category as the recipients and tried to induce the latter to take a particular line of action in a forthcoming election on a personal appeal based on such pamphlets, it would not be difficult to hold that their influence was being exercised unduly and corruptly and an offence committed within the meaning of Section 171-C. Mere dissemination of such pamphlets even by hand of well-placed persons would not be enough for such purpose. The pamphlet in this case plumbs depths of filth and meanness seldom reached. It was not a mere attempt to dub Sri Sanjeeva Reddy as a man generally devoid of good principles. It accused him of conduct wholly unbecoming a gentleman not to speak of a person who aspired for election to the high office of the President of India and charged him with acts of misdemeanour towards members of the other sex giving instances and in most cases mentioning the occasions at which he is said to have committed the indecent acts imputed to him. It was calculated to engender strong prejudice in the minds of electors against Sri Sanjeeva Reddy both in his personal capacity and as being the nominee of a group of persons described as usurpers of power in the Congress Party. It is difficult to find suitable words to condemn the making and publication of such a vile pamphlet in an election to the highest office in the land and it is certainly a great pity that the authors thereof have not been tracked or suitably dealt with.

315. Having concluded that the use of scurrilous pamphlet of the type disclosed in this (sic) (Case?) may be a step in the commission of undue influence within the meaning of Section 171-C of the Penal Code, I have to consider the evidence adduced to find out the extent of its publication and the manner in which it was published and used before it can be held that undue influence was in fact brought to bear upon the minds of certain electors. One has next to ascertain whether the offence of undue influence was committed by the respondent or by any of his workers with his connivance. If neither of these be proved, we have to sift the evidence to see whether the offence was committed by others to an extent which materially affected the result of the election.

316. Counsel for the parties argued at some length on the question as to the standard of proof required to establish the commission of the offence of undue influence. As the malpractice is an offence under the Indian Penal Code and attracts punishment by way of imprisonment, Mr. Daphtary argued that the standard of proof required is a much higher one than in ordinary civil cases. According to him the charge must be well and truly laid in the petition and its particulars and evidence adduced in proof thereof as would leave no scope for any reasonable doubt that the offence has been committed by the persons charged therewith. Mr. Daphtary laid great stress on the production of evidence strictly following the pleadings and contended that no deviation therefrom was permissible. The petitioners according to him could not be allowed to abandon or jettison the case raised in the pleadings and ask the Court to hold on the evidence adduced that the offence of undue influence has been committed by some persons although the manner of commission as laid down in the pleadings was not borne out by the evidence. He also argued that as these persons were not parties to the proceedings they were under no compulsion to come and give evidence in Court and the respondent owed no duty to call all or any of them to disprove the charges levelled against them. Mr. Daphtary's argument seemed to suggest that the petition and the particulars thereof supplied later were to be considered in the same light as the first information report in a criminal case and the Court should weigh the evidence given at the hearing in the same way as in a criminal trial and if there was a significant departure in the evidence from the charges levelled in the petition, hold that the commission of the offence pleaded was not established.

317. Counsel for the petitioners argued that the paramount duty of the Court in such cases was to uphold the validity of an election only if it was pure and although the Court should be slow in upsetting the result of an election on mere trivialities or irregularities it should not hesitate to do so when the evidence disclosed commission of corrupt practice on a large scale merely because of the deviation of the evidence from the pleading. It was further suggested that although the charges savoured of criminality they were not investigated as in a criminal case but the hearing of the election petition was more akin to that in a civil proceeding and the Court should come to its conclusion on the issues framed and the evidence adduced not on the balance of probabilities but on the strength of the direct evidence adduced.

318. This question has engaged the attention of this Court on prior occasions and reference may be made to some of them to see the views expressed therein. In Mohan Singh v. Bhanvarlal, (1964) 5 SCR 12 = (AIR 1964 SC 1366) where charges of corrupt practice had been levelled it was said:

"The onus of establishing a corrupt practice is undoubtedly on the person who sets it up, and the onus is not discharged on proof of mere preponderance of probability, as in the trial of a civil suit; the corrupt practice must be established beyond reasonable doubt by evidence which is clear and unambiguous."

319. Much to the same effect was the decision of this Court in Jagdev Singh v. Pratap Singh, AIR 1965 SC 183.

320. In Samant N. Balakrishna v. George Fernandez, (1969) 3 SCR 603 = (AIR 1969 SC 1201) it was said (see at p. 637) (of SCR) = (at p. 1221 of AIR):

"Although the trial of an election petition is made in accordance with the Code of Civil Procedure, it has been laid down that a corrupt practice must be proved in the same way as a criminal charge is proved. In other words, the election petitioner must exclude every hypothesis except that of guilt on the part of the returned candidate or his election agent."

All the three cases mentioned above were tried under the Representation of the People Act, 1951 the relevant provisions of which are somewhat different from those in the Act of 1952. Under the 1951 Act an election can be declared to be void, if, inter alia, the High Court is of opinion that any corrupt practice has been committed by a returned candidate or his election agent or by any other person with the consent of the returned candidate or his election agent. Section 123 of the Act of 1951 specifies what are the corrupt practices for the purposes of the Act. Section 99 of the Act of 1951 makes it incumbent upon the High Court when it declares the election of a returned candidate to be void on the basis of a charge made in the petition of any corrupt practice having been committed at the election, to record a finding whether any corrupt practice has or has not been proved to have been committed; but a person who is not a party to the petition is not to be named by the High Court under this section unless he has been given notice to appear before the High Court and to show cause why he should not be so named. Liberty is also given to him in case he appears in pursuance of the notice to cross-examine any witness who has already been examined by the High Court and calling evidence in his defence and of being heard. The Act of 1952 does not contain any similar provision.

321. There can be no doubt that a charge of undue influence is in the nature of a criminal charge and must be proved by cogent and reliable evidence not on the mere ground of balance of probability but on reasonable certainty that the persons charged therewith have committed the offence on the strength of evidence which leaves no scope for doubt as to whether they had or had not done so. It must also be remembered that even if there be no provision in the Act of 1952 of giving notice to the persons who are charged with having committed undue influence or of impleading them as parties, it is the duty of the election petitioners to lead direct evidence on the point and the respondent cannot take shelter behind the plea that he owes no duty to call them or to disprove the allegations made against them if he is to have his election maintained by the Court. There is a special provision in the Act of 1952 which is absent from the Act of 1951 in that an election may be set aside on the ground of the commission of undue influence by persons who are not agents of the returned candidate and whose action has not been connived at by him if the Court finds that the result of the election has been materially affected by the commission of undue influence by outsiders and complete strangers to the election. The analogy of the trial of an election petition with that of a criminal charge cannot be pushed too far. There are inherent differences between the two in the matter of investigation. The vital point of identity in the two trials is that the Court must be able to come to a conclusion beyond any reasonable doubt as to the commission of a corrupt practice. The Court looks for reliable independent evidence to establish charges of a criminal nature but unfortunately such evidence is found to be lacking in a great many cases. It is well known that even in cases where persons are charged with murder, independent witnesses fight shy of the witness box and are not called to support the prosecution case; the Judge hearing such a case has to make up his mind on this evidence of witnesses who are partisan in the sense that they are related to the victim and sift the same carefully to make up his mind whether the charge is established. The same is the case in the trial of most of the election petitions. Election petitioners nearly always examine persons who are their supporters, while the returned candidate follows the same course. This takes place in particular where charges of undue influence and bribery are levelled. However onerous the task of the Court may be because of the partisan nature of the witnesses, it cannot reject the oral evidence adduced merely on that ground, but it has to examine the same carefully and come to a conclusion whether the evidence establishes the corrupt practice beyond reasonable doubt. Even in a criminal trial the Court can hold a person guilty of a crime on the strength of evidence of partisan witnesses if they are found to be reliable although there may be no independent corroboration thereof and I see no reason to depart from that principle in the trial of an election petition where charges of offences culpable under the Indian Penal Code are levelled.

322. In this case no less than 116 witnesses were examined, 55 on the side of the petitioners and 61 on the side of the respondent. A good many of the witnesses are persons who have held or still hold high offices. Excluding a few nearly all of them are elected representatives of the people either to the Houses of Parliament or to the Legislative Assemblies of the States. They are men whose evidence in the ordinary course of things should carry great weight but unfortunately a good many of them are members of two hostile camps who came to Court resolved to do their best for one side or the other. It is well known that the old Congress Party is no longer united and that there has been a sharp cleavage among its members and before the hearing of the election petitions one group came to be known as Congress (O) and the other Congress (R). The cleavage is referred to in the petition itself. Persons who have figured as witnesses but do not belong to either of these parties generally but not universally have their affinity for one side or the other. It has also come out in evidence that the split in the Congress Party originated back in April 1969 when there was a meeting of the A.I.C.C. at Faridabad. The difference of opinion seemed to stem from opposite views held by some leading members about the steps to be taken for the economic progress of the country. It came out clearly in the evidence of Sri Shankar Dayal Sharma (a witness for the respondent) and a member of Madhya Pradesh Legislative Assembly who had been in public life for about 32 years. He became a member of the All India Congress Working Committee in January 1968 and was appointed General Secretary of the Indian National Congress in April 1968. He continued in that post till the 1st November, 1969, when he submitted his resignation at the request of the then Congress President, Sri Nijalingappa. His evidence which was not challenged in cross-examination shows that at Faridabad session a new procedure was adopted for splitting the A. I. C. C. into three panels. In the economic panel serious differences arose between the members specially between the Chairman, Sri Morarji Desai and some of its members and no report could be finalised. According to the witness there was a demand for nationalisation of banks by some members which was resisted by the Chairman and some others. It is not necessary to mention the various points of difference between the members of the panel but according to this witness the Prime Minister and Sri Morarji Desai held contrary views on this point.

323. According to Sri Nijalingappa who figured as a witness for the petitioners the question of selecting a person fit for the office of the President arose very soon after the demise of Dr. Zakir Hussain early in May 1969. He claimed to have sounded the Prime Minister on more than one occasion in the months of May and June to fix upon a proper person for the office but nothing resulted. When they met at Bangalore in July 1969 the question cropped up again. The Prime Minister told him at the meeting of the 12th July that she had the respondent in her mind but she found no encouraging response to her proposal. Sri Nijalingappa then said that members might suggest other names whereupon the Prime Minister proposed the name of Sri Jagjivan Ram and Sri S. K. Patil suggested the name of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy. As no agreement could be arrived at, the matter was put to vote and Sri S. K. Patil, Sri Morarji Desai, Sri Chavan and Sri Kamaraj Nadar were in favour of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy while the Prime Minister and Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed supported Sri Jagjivan Ram. Neither Sri Jagjivan Ram nor Sri Nijalingappa expressed any opinion. According to Sri Nijalingappa, the Prime Minister expressed unhappiness over it and said that serious consequences may follow.

324. It is the case of the petitioners as brought out in the evidence that although the Prime Minister signed the nomination paper of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy within a few days thereafter she did not take any other step to ensure his success at the election. It is also in evidence — and is a matter of common knowledge — that immediately after the conclusion of the Bangalore Session the portfolio of Finance was withdrawn from Sri Morarji Desai and the Bank Nationalisation Ordinance was promulgated just before the meeting of Parliament in July 1969. The split in the party which had been dormant before came to limelight soon afterwards. Although the two conflicting groups came to be known as Congress (O) and Congress (R) some time thereafter, there can be little doubt that the seed of dissemination was bearing fruit and mutual suspicion between the members of the two groups came to the surface. The Presidential election which was held on 16th August, 1969, was in the offing but it seemed to have been made the venue for clash of ideologies and test of strength. According to Sri I. K. Gujral a witness for the respondent, the undercurrent of difference between the parties since the Bangalore Session of the Congress came to the surface early in August 1969, the decisive factor being Smt. Tarkeshwari Sinha's article in the Search Light suggesting a move to throw out the Prime Minister. According to Sri Gujral many people were of the view that the Congress President Sri Nijalingappa had tried to make a deal with Sri Ranga of the Swatantra Party and Jan Sangh for a coalition Government and the election of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy as President was considered to be a step in that direction.

325. That there was a sharp difference of opinion and the arraying of members into two warring camps at or about that time admits of no doubt or dispute. Whoever be the authors or the printers of it, the distribution of the pamphlet started round about 9th or 10th August. From the 11th August correspondence started between Sri Jagjivan Ram and Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed on the one side and Sri Nijalingappa on the other, as well as between the Prime Minister and Sri Nijalingappa. As a matter of fact the correspondence between the Prime Minister and Sri Nijalingappa had started as early as 16th July. In the letter of that date (Ex. P-41) the Prime Minister complained that she was deeply distressed by the stories in the Press attributing all kinds of motives to her and said that newspaper speculations about her alleged reaction to the decision of the Parliamentary Board were wholly misconceived and inspired by interested elements. On August 11, 1969 Sri Jagjivan Ram and Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed wrote to Sri Nijalingappa:

"Considerable confusion exists in the minds of numerous members of our Parliamentary Board regarding the talks made on your own initiative with some of the leaders of the Jan Sangh and Swatantra Party and that it was claimed that as a direct result of your talks the Jan Sangh Executive has decided to support Sanjeeva Reddy."

The writers complained that the members of the Congress Party were considerably agitated over this and ugly rumours were afloat and the situation had worsened because those whom Sri Nijalingappa had approached and their representatives had openly demanded the removal of the Prime Minister. They ended the letter by saying:

"Unless the whole position was fully clarified and the basis of Sri Nijalingappa's talks and the readiness of the other parties to support Shri Sanjeeva Reddy were satisfactorily disclosed it might have great repercussions on the Presidential election."

To this Sri Nijalingappa replied on August 13th saying that although he had met the writers the day before the points raised in the letter had never been canvassed. Sri Nijalingappa further stated that he had been approaching every party for its support and requesting every voter for his vote in favour of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy in accordance with past traditions. Correspondence went on in the same vein upto the 18th August, even after the taking of the poll. According to Sri Nijalingappa's letter to the Prime Minister dated the 15th August, the members of the Parliamentary Board had agreed on the 1st August that he might contact all parties and voters to seek for their support and he had reported to the Congress Parliamentary Board meeting held on the 5th about his talks with the opposition parties. Further there never was any understanding with Jan Sangh or the Swatantra Party beyond seeking their support at the Presidential Election and the demand for a free vote which had already been raised was in fact a claim of right to vote for the respondent, a candidate nominated by the Communists and Communalists.

326. No useful purpose will be served by referring to the said correspondence in detail and mention has been briefly made of the same only to bring out in sharp focus the difference between the two groups. Members of the two groups who have appeared as witnesses in this case had definitely taken sides some days before the date of the poll. According to some witnesses examined on behalf of the respondent, the manner of selection of Sri Sajeeva Reddy was against all past traditions of the Congress as no attempt at consensus was made before the matter was put to vote. Some even felt that the Prime Minister should not have been over-borne in the way she has done on the 12th July. Whatever might be the individual reactions of the members of the two groups, there is no gainsaying that there was a strong current of opposition to the election of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy as President of India and more than one witness for the respondent including Sri Yunus Saleem admitted that there was a campaign for getting signatures of members of Parliament on a document demanding the right to vote freely in the election. This in effect meant the right to vote against the party affiliation although it was termed a right to vote according to conscience.

327. I now proceed to consider the contents of the pamphlet in detail and then examine the evidence adduced to find out whether any and if so, what use was made of it by any one in a manner which could be said to amount to an attempt to interfere with the free exercise of any person's electoral right within the meaning of Section 171-C of the Indian Penal Code. It is also necessary to scrutinise the evidence to see whether the charge levelled by the petitioners that the pamphlet was the work of a group of people supporting the Prime Minister and secretly working for the success of the respondent is borne out. -

328. Although the pamphlet on the face of it was anonymous, there are certain indications in it to show its probable origin. The document purports to be addressed to "Fellow Congress Members of Parliament and the Vidhan Sahbas" by "Congress Workers Committee to combat the Syndicate" and bears the date 9th August. It starts off thus:

"Our great Party (obviously referring to the Congress Party) which led the entire nation in the struggle against British rule and had the glory of bringing independence for our motherland, has to-day fallen into a slur of despondence and demoralisation. Into its leadership have crept in men whose record shows that they have sold their conscience to the rich and the corrupt, who are seeking to destroy all attempts of harnessing the Congress once again to the service of the common people."

It then goes on to charge that:

"Self-seekers infiltrated into this great organisation . . . After Panditji's death it is a small coterie of unscrupulous persons who landed themselves into what is called the Syndicate and have tried to become virtual dictators."

It ascribes the heavy defeat suffered by the Congress Party in the general election of 1967 to the management of its affairs by evil men. The reference seems to be to Sri S. K. Patil, Sri Atulya Ghosh and Sri Kamaraj. It then proceeds to state (a) that at the then recent Bangalore session of All India Congress Committee the Prime Minister set out a programme for immediate reforms in the economy of the country, (b) this not being to the liking of a small coterie described as gangster politicians they decided to set up one of their men, a corrupt and immoral person, Sanjeeva Reddy as the Congress candidate for the august post of President of India" and (c) this selection was made not only against the wishes of the Prime Minister of India but also without caring to consult the Congress Working Committee, Pradesh Congress leaders and the addressees. The pamphlet then seeks to analyse the reason behind this choice. To quote the words of the pamphlet itself:

"That is because Sanjeeva Reddy himself belongs to this gang. Also the syndicate's plan is that if Sanjeeva Reddy could be made President of India then it will be easier to block all enlightened measures; as President he will obstruct the present Government at every step whenever any action is taken against corruption or in the interest of the common people. The syndicate's agents in Parliament have been openly saying that if Sanjeeva Reddy becomes the President, they will drive out Smt. Indira

Gandhi in a few weeks. They are all the more enraged at the nationalisation of the 14 big banks which were only helping big capitalists to profiteer and amass black money. The syndicate is scared that such measures would make Indira Gandhi more popular with the common man while they themselves have forfeited the confidence of the vast millions of our country. How panicky they are could be seen from the scurrilous writings of one of their lieutenants Tarakeshwari Sinha openly threatening that the syndicate will fight and defeat Indira Gandhi. These unscrupulous bosses prefer that the Congress should suffer a crushing defeat in next general elections in 1972 rather than that our Prime Minister becomes stronger. For they look upon Indira Gandhi as a thorn in their path; and they think the only way to corner her would be to make Sanjeeva Reddy the President.....

It is as part of this conspiracy of the syndicate that Nijalingappa, another syndicate boss (against whom there are many grave charges of corruption) has already approached the Swatantra Party and the Jan Sangh, secretly planning with those anti-national parties for a coalition government with the syndicate leaders."

329. The rest of the pamphlet is aimed at denigrating Sri Sanjeeva Reddy. It charges him with being a corrupt and unscrupulous politician whose misdeeds had been severely condemned by the High Court of Andhra Pradesh in 1964 and whose record as a Minister for Steel in the Central Cabinet had been so bad that he had to be dropped after the general election of 1967 and was put up as a Speaker of Lok Sabha on the pressure of the syndicate. The pamphlet proceeds to give instances of acts of misdemeanour committed by Sri Sanjeeva Reddy towards members of the other sex. It ends up with an exhortation to the addressees that if they have to carry forward the programme of the Congress in the service of the Indian people and to weed out corruption, nepotism and racketeering, they have to use their powers to defeat the syndicate inter alia by rejecting Sri Sanjeeva Reddy. The pamphlet winds up with the following:

"On each and every one of us lies the sacred responsibility of seeing to it that this living monument of moral depravity does not become the President of India. Remember this when you cast your vote in the ballot box on 16th August, 1969."

330. Although Mr. Daphtary put up a faint argument that this might be the work of any party or group opposing the Congress and interested in its decline and fall, one cannot unreasonably take the view that in all likelihood a group of disgruntled Congress members were at the back of it. It is to be noted that in the whole of the pamphlet which is a fairly long one, there is no reference to any other party excepting where Sri Nijalingappa is described as having approached the Swatantra and Jan Sangh for a coalition Government. There is no reference to the respondent or any other candidate at the election and there is no attempt to belittle or ridicule the members of any of the many other political parties in the country.

331. At or about this time there was frequent reference in the daily newspapers to a group in the Congress dubbed as syndicate and another group described as young Turks who were in open rebellion against the syndicate. The pamphlet shows that the authors thereof were of the view that the Prime Minister was attempting to give what according to them was a correct lead to the country and that she was sought to be thwarted by the members of the syndicate. So much so that the latter were said to have entered into a conspiracy to oust the Prime Minister from her position and set up a coalition government. This is sought to be supported by writing ascribed to Smt. Tarkeshwari Sinha as openly threatening the defeat of the Prime Minister by the syndicate. There are thus strong indications in the pamphlet to show where it could have come from and who were interested in the defeat of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy and the motive behind this move. It has come out in the evidence of a number of persons examined on behalf of the respondent some of whom admitted themselves to have been described in the press as young Turks, that their views about the management of the affairs of the Congress Party by some senior members of it described as syndicate was similar to that expressed in the pamphlet. Sri Krishna Kant (R. W. 32) admitted that he himself, Sri Chandrasekhar (R. W. 5) Sri Mohan Dharja (R. W. 17) Sri Santi Kothari (not examined) Sri Amrit Nahta (R. W. 3), Sri Sashi Bhushan (R. W. 38) Sri R. K. Sinha (R. W. 8) and others were described as young Turks and that the syndicate was composed, according to the press, of members like Sri Nijalingappa, Sri Atulya Ghosh, Sri S. K. Patil and others. Sri Sanjeeva Reddy according to this witness was also considered to be a part of the Syndicate. Most of these persons when examined openly stated that they had decided to go against the selection of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy by the syndicate, that they were supporting the candidature of the respondent and that there was a signature campaign in favour of freedom of vote. Sri Krishna Kant himself admitted having been responsible for getting such signatures and so did Sri Yunus Saleem (R. W. 51). Sri Krishna Kant frankly admitted that when they could not support Sri Sanjeeva Reddy they could not possibly support Sri Deshmukh, another candidate at the election who was a Jan Sangh candidate which left only the respondent on the field. Evidence on much the same line was given by other witnesses examined on behalf of the respondent.

332. Shri R. K. Sinha (R. W. 8) stated that "the syndicate was taking the Congress to the funeral pyre in West Bengal, Madras and Kerala". He also said that the majority of the group known as young Turks had declared their support for the respondent. He admitted having made a public speech about this time to the effect that the members of the syndicate were opposed to the formation of Congress Socialist Party and had "planned to fill the political vacuum after Pandit Nehru". When his attention was drawn to the pamphlet Sri Sashi Bhushan (R. W. 38) approved of the statements made in the first three paragraphs namely that a set of self-seeking, corrupt and unscrupulous persons had grabbed power in the Congress organisation after the death of Pandit Nehru and it was because of their misdeeds that the party had suffered reverses in the election of 1967. It should be noted that Mohan Dhar's attitude in the Presidential election was somewhat different from that of the other young Turks. It would appear that the proclivity of this group of persons described as young Turks and their support for the Prime Minister and opposition to the senior members of the Congress fold like Sri S. K. Patil, Sri Kamaraj and others was sought to be utilised in the election petitions by openly averring that the supporters of the Prime Minister were behind the publication and dissemination of the impugned pamphlet. The evidence adduced does not bear this out.

333. The authorship of the pamphlet not being traced, we have to see whether the dissemination of it in the manner deposed to was sufficient to establish the commission of undue influence. I have no doubt that if the statement contained in the pamphlet were made the subject of a verbal appeal by one member of the electoral college to another and particularly those in the Congress fold, a very strong case for the exercise of undue influence would be made out. There would not in my opinion be much difference between such an appeal and an appeal in writing signed by one elector to another. In such a case it could be said that the elector making the appeal was trying to misuse his position and seeking to influence the other and attempting to interfere with the free exercise of the other's electoral right. But the evidence adduced falls far short of the proof of any such case. It is the admitted case of the parties that the pamphlet was very widely disseminated through the post among members of Parliament and members of the Legislative Assemblies hailing mostly from U. P. but not being confined to that State alone. The case of the petitioners is that not only was the pamphlet broadcast by post but there was free distribution of it among members of both Houses of Parliament i. e., in the Central Hall of Parliament from the 9th to 15th August. Reference was made to the proceedings of the two Houses to show that complaints about the distribution of filthy pamphlets in the Central hall of Parliament bearing on the Presidential election were being made in the Lok Sabha. Although in the pleadings a specific case was made that some prominent members of the Congress Party supporting the Prime Minister like Shri Jagjivan Ram had gone to the residence of certain members of the electoral college for personal delivery of the copies of the pamphlet to them, practically no attempt was made to substantiate such allegation by oral evidence in court. As regards distribution of the pamphlet in the Central Hall of Parliament there was evidence given by the following witnesses for the petitioners, namely, Sri Kanwarlal Gupta (P. W. 2) Sri K. S. Chawda (P. W. 3) Sri N. P. C. Naidu (P. W. 6) Sri Shiv Narain (P. W. 12), Smt. J. B. Shah (P. W. 13) Sri N. N. Patel (P. W. 14) Sri Mohanlal Gautam (P. W. 27) Sri C. D. Pandey (P. W. 17) Sri D. N. Deb (P. W. 18) Sri Hukumchand Kachwai (P. W. 20) Sri M. Rampura (P. W. 23) Smt. Pushpa Mehta (P. W. 24) Sri Morarji Desai (P. W. 27), Sri Bab Kishan Gupta (P. W. 30) Sri D.

S. Raju (P. W. 35), Sri Patil Putappa (P. W. 36) Sri Sher Khan (P. W. 37) Sri Choudhuri A. Mohamed (P. W. 38) Sri C. M. Kedaria (P. W. 39) Sri N. Ramreddy (P. W. 40) and Sri Abdul Ghani Dar (P. W. 41). On the other hand a substantial number of witnesses examined by the respondent numbering no less than twenty gave evidence to the effect that they never saw any such distribution. Effort was made by counsel for the respondent to establish by cross-examination that such distribution of the pamphlet would not have been allowed by the Watch and Ward department of the Houses of Parliament. Among the persons who were supposed to have been responsible for the distribution in the Central Hall of Parliament the prominent figures were Sri Yunus Saleem, Sri Chandrasekhar, Sri Sashi Bhushan, Sri Mohan Dharja and some others. It is somewhat strange that most of these people when examined not only denied having participated in the distribution but went to the length of stating that they had never seen the pamphlet before they came to court, although some admitted having heard discussion between members regarding it. According to some witnesses for the petitioners prominent among whom were Sri Morarji Desai, Sri S. K. Patil and some others, the pamphlet was the talk of the town for days and the Central hall of Parliament was full of it.

334. There is thus a direct conflict of testimony about the distribution of the pamphlet but there can be little doubt that the pamphlet did find its way in the Central hall and I have no doubt that quite a few copies of it had been distributed in the hall itself. That there was a good deal of talk among the members and discussion over the pamphlet admits of no doubt. It is difficult to believe that unless the pamphlet was there in the Central hall people would be discussing the contents of it in the abstract. No witness suggested that he himself had taken a copy of it to the Central hall. The obvious inference from all this is that there was some distribution in that hall although probably the petitioners were trying to exaggerate the extent of the distribution while witnesses for the respondent were equally interested in denying it wholesale. Hardly any witness came to the witness box to state that he was not only given a copy of the pamphlet in the Central hall but approached and appealed to personally carry out the mandate contained in the concluding portion thereof. The substantial evidence of the witnesses for the petitioners was merely to the effect that copies were being distributed in much the same fashion as hand-bills are distributed by advertising agents of tradesmen on the street.

[Then after discussing evidence (paras 335 to 338) His Lordship proceeded.]

339. In my view the evidence falls far short of any personal appeal through the means of the pamphlet and I cannot hold that the offence of undue influence was committed by some people by merely distributing the same. Such distribution may attract culpability under S. 171-G of the Indian Penal Code but would not per se attract Section 171-C.

340. I do not, therefore, find it necessary to refer to the evidence of witnesses for the respondent on the question of the exercise of undue influence by distribution of the pamphlet. While I find myself unable to say that they were all speaking the truth when they said that they had not seen the distribution of it in the Central Hall or that they had not seen a copy of the pamphlet before they came to the witness-box, I cannot hold in favour of the petitioners merely because some of the witnesses for the respondent were not witnesses of truth. It would be unprofitable to examine the evidence closely to find out where they lied or the extent of untruth uttered by them. Such an analysis might have become necessary if I had come to the conclusion that there was a prima facie case made out by the petitioners about the exercise of undue influence by mere dissemination of the pamphlet which could be contradicted by the respondent's witnesses.

341. The above being my view on the question of the exercise of undue influence by means of the publication of the pamphlet and the dissemination of it, the question of the respondent's conniving at it does not arise. I may however indicate shortly the respective cases of the parties. It was the case of the petitioners that the pamphlet originated from the camp of the Prime Minister and her supporters who were actively helping the respondent in his election campaign and it was these supporters who had taken to the mean trick of publication of the pamphlet at the eleventh hour before the election so that there could be no effective counter-action to the wild propaganda. Whatever the charges raised against the Prime Minister in the petition, no evidence was adduced to show that she was helping the respondent although it may be said that she did not help the cause of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy in the way she had done in the case of Dr. Zakir Hussain. Three witnesses for the petitioners stated in their examination that they had been to the respondent's house in Defence Colony after the commencement of the publication of the pamphlet requesting him to make a statement himself in contradiction of the allegations contained therein and making it clear that he himself had nothing to do with it. It is difficult to appreciate what led these persons to think that the respondent had anything to do with the pamphlet or that he was the proper person to issue a contradiction to the imputations therein made against Sri Sanjeeva Reddy. As I have already noted, the name of the respondent does not occur at all in the pamphlet nor is there any remote reference to him in it. The respondent was not the only other contestant for the office. Shri Madhu Limaye, P.W. 8, and some witnesses for the respondent thought that it was the work of enemies of the respondent. Any statement of the respondent disowning the pamphlet or even asking the electors to ignore it would only excite suspicion against him as involved in its publication. Sri N. P. C. Naidu, P.W. 17 who claimed to have a copy of the pamphlet from Sri Yunus Saleem on the 11th or 12th August, said that he had gone to the respondent's house in Defence Colony to get a contradiction to the pamphlet but could not meet him, as a result of the talk he had with the respondent's supporters who were there and later wrote a letter to him asking him to counteract the propaganda in the pamphlet. The respondent, however, denied having received any such letter. Smt. Tarkeshwari Sinha, P.W. 34, said that she had gone to the respondent's house in Defence Colony on the 14th August and had met him in a verandah and shown the pamphlet to him and asked him to repudiate the contents thereof when the respondent had said "What can I do about it?". As the respondent was unresponsive she had to come away. Not only was this visit openly disputed by the respondent but several witnesses were examined to show that she had not gone there. The security man said to have been posted in the respondent's house deposed to the effect that he knew Smt. Tarkeshwari Sinha and was positive that she had not gone there on the 14th August. The respondent himself said that the suggestion that in the month of August a visitor of the position of Smt. Tarkeshwari Sinha would have been received by him not in the air-conditioned drawing-room where he was sitting but outside in the uncomfortably hot verandah was fantastic. The respondent's son-in-law also gave evidence to the same effect. Sri R. K. Gupta, P.R. 43, said that he had met the respondent two or three days before the date of the poll and told him that the pamphlet should be contradicted by his party when the respondent gave him the same reply as he had done to Smt. Tarkeshwari Sinha. Again, this evidence was denied by the respondent as well as by his son-in-law. The evidence adduced on the two sides is directly contradictory to each other and it would have been the duty of the Court to analyse the same in greater detail and indicate the reasons for accepting one version and rejecting the other if the Court was to take the view that there was exercise of undue influence by the mere dissemination of a sordid pamphlet. In the circumstances of the case it would be useless to go into the question any further.

342. Another allied question which loomed large during the examination of the witnesses was whether the respondent had in his election campaign gone to Lucknow and addressed members of the Legislative Assembly there and canvassed their support in his favour, basing his claim on the support of the Prime Minister. This was deposed to in a general way by Sri Ram Singh, P.W. 19, while Sri Mumtaz Mohammad Khan, P.W. 44, went further and said that the respondent had told people at Lucknow openly that Sri Sanjeeva Reddy was not a suitable candidate and that there were many stains on his character. Both these witnesses as also Sri Bansidhar Pandey, P.W. 18, Sri Jagdish Prasad, P.W. 20,

Sri Rajendraprasad Singh, P.W. 21, Sri Basant Lal Sharma, P.W. 22, Sri Rampyare Panika, P.W. 37 and Sri Abdul Saleem Shah, P.W. 38, deposed to the effect that two or three days after the visit of the respondent to Lucknow, Sri Dinesh Singh, the External Affairs Minister, had also gone there, met the members of the Legislative Assembly in groups of four or five in their hostel known as Darul-Shafa and openly told them that the respondent was the candidate of the Prime Minister and that if the addressées did not support his candidature they would lose all the patronage of the Prime Minister in the future. Some even said that Sri Dinesh Singh had threatened them with refusal of party tickets in future elections if they were to go against the wishes of the Prime Minister. So far as the part imputed to Sri Dinesh Singh is concerned, he denied having moved out of Delhi between the 1st and 16th August and said that his first visit to Lucknow about this time was on 22nd August after the poll had taken place. It was put to him in his examination-in-chief as to whether he did go to Lucknow on the 9th, 10th or 11th August and his answer was in the negative and he averred that so far as he could recollect he had not gone to Lucknow before the 22nd. Sri Dinesh Singh was subjected to prolonged cross-examination and the diaries of his engagements maintained by his secretaries were made the subject of close scrutiny before the Court. The evidence of Sri Dinesh Singh and of several other witnesses for the respondent was to the effect that whenever Sri Dinesh Singh left Delhi a tour programme would be issued for the guidance of officers in places to be visited by him and no such tour programme was issued in the month of August before the 22nd. Sri Dinesh Singh further stated that he had attended an invitation to a party at Mysore House given by Sri G. S. Pathak the then Governor of Mysore. In this he was supported by Sri I. K. Gujral who produced a letter of invitation confirming the throwing out of a party at the Mysore Home by Sri G. S. Pathak on the 10th August and invitation to him thereat and stated that he distinctly remembered having met Sri Dinesh Singh in that party. Quite a number of witnesses examined on behalf of the respondent gave evidence to the effect that if Sri Dinesh Singh had gone to Lucknow between the 1st and 16th August they would have come to know of it and so far as their recollection went Sri Dinesh Singh did not go there during that period. While it is true that the diaries produced by the Secretaries of Sri Dinesh Singh were not as full or complete as regards his engagements as one might expect them to be, I have no hesitation in holding that Sri Dinesh Singh did speak the truth in that he did not go to Lucknow during the period 1st to 16th August. It has come out in evidence that Sri Abdul Ghani Dar was preparing to launch an election petition against the respondent practically immediately after the declaration of the result and that he was busy collecting evidence in support of his petition. Apart from the absence of any tour programme of Sri Dinesh Singh it should not have been difficult for the petitioners to produce evidence either from the records of the railways or the Indian Airlines to show that some reservation of accommodation had been made for Sri Dinesh Singh's journey to Lucknow and back at or about this time. No attempt was made to produce any such records. Counsel for the petitioners even went to the length of suggesting to Sri Dinesh Singh in cross-examination that it was possible for him to have travelled to Lucknow from Delhi by road and come back the same way so as to leave no record of reservation either by rail or by air. In my view, the suggestion is of little value. After all even according to the evidence of witnesses for the petitioners Sri Dinesh Singh's visit was not a secret one. He is supposed to have gone there to meet people in order to canvass support for the respondent from a large number of members of the U. P. Legislative Assembly and there was no reason why he should try and avoid a more comfortable journey by rail or air rather than undertake motor-car journeys of over 300 miles each way. My definite conclusion is that Sri Dinesh Singh did not go to Lucknow as alleged by some of the witnesses for the petitioners at or about the time alleged and consequently he did not canvass support in favour of the respondent as imputed to him.

343. As regards the evidence of the two witnesses about the respondent addressing members of the Legislative Assembly of U.P. in his own support by saying that he was the candidate of the Prime Minister or that Sri Sanjeeva Reddy was not a fit person for election to the high office of the President of India, I have no hesitation in holding that it cannot be true. According to the evidence of Sri Mumtaz Mohammad Khan, P.W. 44, the persons present at the time when the respondent was castigating Sri Sanjeeva Reddy were Sri Basant Lal Sharma, Sri Abdul Saleem Shah and Sri Kalpanath Singh. Sri Kalpanath Singh was not examined but the other two were and neither of them had anything to say on this subject. According to Sri Abdul Saleem Shah it was Sri Dinesh Singh who had told the members of the Legislative Assembly at Darul-Shafa that Sri Sanjeeva Reddy and his group were working in collusion with Jan Sangh and it would not be proper to vote for him. Sri Dinesh Singh is also alleged to have said that Sri Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed wanted that no Muslim should vote for Sri Sanjeeva Reddy as he and his supporters were anti-Muslim. As I have held that Sri Dinesh Singh did not go to Lucknow at the time alleged he could not have canvassed support for the respondent as deposed to by the witnesses.

344. In his evidence the respondent stated that he had not spoken to the Prime Minister or any other Minister before announcing his candidature for the office of the President of India. He had nothing to do with the Congress Party after 1957. After demitting office of the Vice-President of India working as the President, he had left Rashtrapati Bhavan and gone to his son-in-law's place in Defence Colony. He had been out of Delhi from the 28th July to 13th August going round to the different States; he had come back to Delhi on the 10th August only for a few hours. He admitted having gone to Lucknow on his tour but he did not meet the legislators there in groups as suggested by some of the witnesses but had spoken to them at a fairly well-attended meeting. He denied ever having referred to Sri Sanjeeva Reddy in his speech or said anything about his character. He denied having any knowledge of the distribution of the pamphlet and stated expressly that nobody had ever complained to him that a pamphlet against the personal conduct and character of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy was being distributed. He did not see Sri Abdul Ghani Dar's letter alleged to have been written to him on the 11th August. He did not meet the Prime Minister between the 20th July and 16th Aug. He said that he had published a programme of his intended tour to the capitals of the different States like Lucknow, Patna, Calcutta, etc. and had informed some of his friends who were taking interest in him about his proposed visits. He stated further that although he had toured the States fairly extensively he did not approach the members of Parliament in Delhi personally as he was fairly well known to them.

345. Counsel for petitioners tried to make out a case that the respondent did not do any canvassing in his own support in Delhi because he was aware that others were effectively doing it. It was even suggested that some sort of arrangement must have been arrived at in July 1969 that if his name was not acceptable to the Congress Parliamentary Board he would immediately announce his own candidature for the office of the President. The respondent stoutly denied this and said there was no truth in it.

346. In my view the charges levelled against the respondent as mentioned above were not borne out by the evidence.

347. Another aspect of the case of the petitioners under the heading of undue influence was that an attempt was made by a number of persons supporting the respondent to raise a scare to the effect that a vote in favour of Sri Sanjeeva Reddy would be against the interest of persons professing the Muhamedan faith.

[After discussing evidence (Paras 347 to 353) His Lordship proceeded.]

354. Inasmuch as I have come to the conclusion that the evidence adduced does not establish the exercise of undue influence in the election in any of the forms raised in the petition, the question of the result of the election being materially affected thereby does not arise. But I may point out that in order to substantiate such a ground for setting aside an election is not enough for witnesses to come and say that they were shocked or pained by reading the pamphlet as most of them gave out. Only two witnesses came to the witness box and said that they had changed their minds to vote for Sri Sanjeeva Reddy after perusal of the pamphlet. Mr. Daphary argued that there was nothing in the Act of 1952 which forbade a person from disclosing in his evidence which way he had voted and that it was open to witnesses to come and state the reaction of the pamphlet on their minds and express how it had affected their conduct at the poll. While I do not think it necessary to express any opinion on this it can be safely held that even if the exercise of undue influence had been proved the evidence of only two witnesses to show that their electoral right had been interfered with thereby would not have been enough for the purpose of setting aside the election.

355. My conclusion, therefore, on the issues regarding undue influence may be summed up as follows. There was a fair amount of circulation of the pamphlet, in the Central Hall of Parliament among members of the electoral college by a number of them. Undeniably there was considerable publication of it by post both to electors in Delhi and outside. The mere dissemination of the pamphlet did not amount to exercise of any undue influence or interference with any electoral right. It had to be followed up either by a personal verbal appeal or an appeal in writing but there was no evidence thereof in this case. There was no appeal to Muslim members on grounds of religion to vote in favour of the respondent in preference to Sri Sanjeeva Reddy. There was no evidence of exercise of undue influence by Central Ministers over any members of the electoral college by any threat that in case they failed to vote for the respondent they would lose the patronage of the Prime Minister. The offence of undue influence was not committed by the respondent or any of his workers. The respondent himself was not guilty of any such commission. There was no commission of the offence of undue influence by anybody with the connivance of the respondent and the result of the election was not materially affected as a result of any commission of the offence of undue influence.

356. As regards issue 4 (a) in Election Petitions Nos. 4 and 5 of 1969 my view is that some of the allegations made in the paragraphs 8 (3) and (13) of the petition would be sufficient pleading of commission of undue influence under Section 18 (1) (a) of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act, 1952. As regards issue 4 (b), the only allegation which was substantiated was a fair amount of publication and dissemination of the scurrilous pamphlet which by itself did not amount to the exercise of undue influence. Sri Abdul Ghani Dar's evidence on this point is wholly unacceptable. My answer to issue 4 (c) in all its branches is in the negative.

357. We indicated on the 11th May 1970 that we would not award any costs to either side. As the respondent has succeeded in the petition normally he could expect to get an award of costs in his favour. But one cannot overlook the fact that the bulk of the oral evidence in this case centred round the question as to whether there was publication of the scurrilous pamphlet in the Central Hall of Parliament. A very large number of petitioner's witnesses came to give evidence in support of it while the respondent examined a host of witnesses to disprove this fact. Although in the view I have taken it was not necessary to name the persons who were guilty of such publication, I have already indicated that quite a number of members of Parliament was responsible for it. The hearing of this case was protracted unreasonably by the examination of witnesses on this one question and as the respondent has not succeeded in disproving dissemination of the pamphlet in the Central Hall it would not be right to make an award of costs in his favour. The litigation was not one of an ordinary type and it was conducted with great zeal on either side. It has divulged a sad lack of responsibility and uprightness in the elected representatives of the people figuring either as witnesses for the petitioners or as witnesses for the respondent. In a case like this, where both sides are responsible for putting into the witness-box a large number of persons who deliberately gave evidence which was not true, the proper course is not to award costs even to the successful party.

Petitions dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2178
(V 57 C 447)

M. HIDAYATULLAH, C. J., J. C.
SHAH, K. S. HEGDE, A. N.
GROVER, A. N. RAY
AND I. D. DUA, JJ.

Ganga Ram and others, Petitioners
v. The Union of India and others, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 124 of 1967, D/-2-2-1970.

Constitution of India, Arts. 14, 16—Equality before law and equality of opportunity in matters of public employment — Determination of seniority of Grade I Accounts Clerks of Railway Establishment — Procedure for, contained in provisions of Indian Railways Establishment Manual is not violative of Arts. 14 and 16.

The procedure for determining seniority of Gr. I Accounts Clerks as contained in Indian Railways Establishment Manual, by which seniority of direct recruits to Grade I is determined on the basis of their appointment whereas seniority of promotees from Grade II is determined with reference to their substantive or basic seniority in Grade II irrespective of whether they qualify for promotion by passing the examination prescribed for the purpose does not violate Articles 14 and 16. (Para 3)

No right to immediate promotion is conferred on those Grade II clerks who pass the qualifying examination and the only benefit which accrues to them is that they become eligible for being considered for promotion. The qualifying examination is considered to be a continuous examination and success at this examination does not constitute the basis of seniority which continues to be dependent on the substantive or basic seniority in Grade II.
The direct recruits and the promotees from Grade II clearly constitute different classes and this classification is sustainable on intelligible differentia which has a reasonable connection with the object of efficiency sought to be achieved. Promotion to Grade I is guided by the consideration of seniority-cum-merit. Hence, no fault can be found with the provisions which place in one group all those Grade II clerks who have qualified by passing the qualifying examination. The fact that the promotees from Grade II who have officiated for some time are not given the credit of this period when a permanent vacancy arises also does not attract the prohibition contained in Arts. 14 and 16. It does not constitute any hostile discrimination and is neither arbitrary nor unreasonable. It applies uniformly to all members of Grade II clerks who have qualified and become eligible. (Para 3)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1967) AIR 1967 SC 52 (V 54) —
(1966) 3 SCR 600, Mervyn
Continho v. Collector of Customs, Bombay 4

M/s. S. K. Mehta and K. L. Mehta, Advocates of M/s. K. L. Mehta and Co., for Petitioners; Mr. N. S. Bindra, Senior Advocate (Mr. S. P. Nayar, Advocate with him), for Nos. 1 to 3 and Mr. Harbans Singh, Advocate, for Respondents.

The following Judgment of the Court
was delivered by

DUA, J.: Out of the five petitioners in this petition under Art. 32 of the Constitution, Kashmiri Lal, petitioner
No. 5 having since retired, is no longer interested in the result of these proceedings. The claim of only 4 petitioners thus survives for consideration. They are officiating clerks, Grade
I, in the office of Deputy Chief Accounts Officer (Traffic Accounts Br.), Northern Railway. They were promoted from Grade II after passing the departmental qualifying examination described as Appendix 2 examination.
They claim that their seniority should be determined as from the date of their appointment as officiating clerks, Grade I, and not on the basis of their position in the gradation list of Clerks, Grade II. Their grievance is that they were appointed as officiating clerks,
Grade I, after passing the Appendix 2 examination long before respondents 4 to 6 and 11 but these four respondents are shown as senior to the petitioners on the ground of their seniority in Grade II. The petitioners seek to support their claim by relying on Arts. 14 and 16 of the Constitution.
The seniority of the direct recruits to Grade I, the petitioners complain, is determined on the basis of their appointment, whereas the seniority of the petitioners, who are promotees from Grade II to officiate in Grade I, continues to be determined on the basis of their seniority in Grade II. It is emphasised that both the direct recruits and the promotees, like the petitioners, have to pass the Appendix 2 examination. But their seniority is determined by different methods. It is further complained that Grade II clerks who pass the qualifying Appendix 2 examination are not promoted immediately. They have to wait till a vacancy occurs and even at the time of filling the vacancy the senior-most qualified clerk is selected for promotion without giving any preference to those who have qualified earlier in point of time. Again, when a permanent post falls vacant, all the eligible clerks in Grade II are considered at par without giving any credit or preference to those who have already officiated as Clerks, Grade I. A junior clerk, Grade II, qualifying earlier, according to the petitioners' grievance, continues to remain junior for the purpose of promotion and confirmation in the permanent post in Grade I and a senior clerk, Grade II, qualifying later retains his seniority for this purpose. Similarly, in filling leave vacancies it is complained that if a clerk is appointed to officiate in short term leave vacancy, then on the return of the incumbent of the post, instead of reverting the clerk so appointed to officiate, the juniormost according to the gradation list in Grade II, officiating in Grade I, is reverted even though he may have qualified earlier than the former and may also have officiated for some time against a regular post in Grade I. The petitioners' right of equality before the law and equality of opportunity in matters of public employment is stated thus to have been violated.

2. The right of equality is guaranteed by Arts. 14 to 16 of our Constitution. The petitioners rely on Arts. 14 and 16 (1). Article 14 is an injunction to both the legislative and the executive organs of the State and other subordinate authorities not to deny to any person equality before the law or the equal protection of the laws. Article 16 is only an instance of the general rule of equality laid in Art. 14. Sub-article (1) of Art. 16 guarantees to every citizen equality of opportunity in matters of public employment thereby serving to give effect to the equality before the law guaranteed by Art. 14. The equality of opportunity in the matter of services undoubtedly takes within its fold all stages of service from initial appointment to its termination including promotion but it does not prohibit the prescription of reasonable rules for selection and promotion, applicable to all members of a classified group. Mere production of inequality is not enough to attract the constitutional inhibition because every classification is likely in some degree to produce some inequality. The State is legitimately empowered to frame rules of classification for securing the requisite standard of efficiency in services and the classification need not be scientifically perfect or logically complete. In applying the wide language of Arts. 14 and 16 to concrete cases a doctrinaire approach should be avoided and the matter considered in a practical way, of course, without whittling down the equality clauses. The classification, in order to be outside the vice of inequality, must, however, be founded on an intelligible differentia which on rational grounds distinguishes persons grouped together from those left out. The differences which warrant a classification must be real and substantial and must bear a just and reasonable relation to the object sought to be achieved. If this test is satisfied, then the classification cannot be hit by the vice of inequality. It is in the background of this broad principle that the petitioners' grievance is to be considered.

3. The relevant provisions in the Indian Railways Establishment Manual directly applicable to the petitioner's case may now be seen. They are contained in paras 48 and 49, Chapter I, Section B and paras 16 and 20 (b) of Chapter II. As the petitioners also rely upon paras 17 to 19 and 21 of Chapter II in support of the argument that para 20 (b) is discriminatory it is desirable to reproduce all these paragraphs.

"48. The classes included in this group and the normal channel of their promotion are as under:—
(For chart showing promotion etc., see page 2180)

Directly recruited Clerks, Grade I, will be on probation for one year and will be eligible for confirmation only after passing the prescribed departmental examination in Appendix 2. Necessary facilities will be given to them to enable them to acquire a

Clerks, Grade II (110—180)
Clerks, Grade I (Rs. 130—300)

Sub-Heads (Rs. 210—380)

Stock Verifiers (Rs. 210—380)

Junior Accountants
(Rs. 270—435)Jr. Inspectors of Station Ac/s
(Rs. 270—435)Jr. Inspectors of Store Accounts
(Rs. 270—435)Sr. Accountants
(Rs. 435—575)Sr. Inspectors of Station Ac/s
(Rs. 435—575)Sr. Inspectors of Stores Ac/s
(Rs. 435—575)

Recruitment.—Initially in the grade of Clerks, Grade II Direct recruitment for 20 per cent vacancies in the grade of Clerks, Grade I.

Qualifications.—

(a) Age

(i) For clerks, Grade II 18—21

(ii) For clerks, Grade I 18—25

(b) Education

For clerks, Grade II, Matriculation, till replaced by Higher Secondary.For clerks, Grade I University Degree, preference being given to persons with I and II Division Honours and Master's Degree.

working knowledge of the rules and procedure.

49. Such of the Clerks, Grade II, as qualify in the departmental examination as prescribed in Appendix 2 or those who may have been permanently exempted from passing the said examination will be eligible for promotion as Clerks, Grade I, and sub-heads. They will be eligible for a minimum starting pay of Rs. 150 per month or will be granted four advance increments on promotion to Grade I after their pay has been fixed under the ordinary rules. Promotion to the grade of sub-heads will be by seniority-cum-suitability."

Chapter II:

"17. Subject to what is stated in paragraphs 18 and 19 below, where the passing of a departmental examination or trade test has been prescribed as a condition precedent to the promotion to a particular non-selection post, the relative seniority of the railway servants passing the examination/test in their due turn and on the same date or different dates which are treated as one continuous examination, as the case may be, shall be determined with reference to their substantive or basic seniority.

18. A railway servant who, for reasons beyond his control, is unable to appear in the examination/test in his turn along with others, shall be given the examination/test immediately he is available and if he passes the same, he shall be entitled for promotion to the post as if he had passed the examination/test in his turn.

19. Seniority for promotion as Junior Accountants, Junior Inspectors of Station or Stores Accounts.—Seniority for promotion to the rank of junior accountant or junior inspector of Station or Stores Accounts should count entirely according to the date of passing the examination qualifying for promotion to those ranks. Candidates who pass the examination in a year are ipso facto senior to those who qualify in subsequent years irrespective of their relative seniority before passing the examination. In the case of staff of ex-Company Railways, who are exempted from passing the examination, the date on which they are declared fit for promotion to the rank of Accountant or Inspector should be considered as the date of their passing. On receipt of the result of the above examination each railway administration should immediately hold a selection test of the candidates declared successful along with any eligible ex-Company or ex-State Railway staff, who may be asked to appear before the selection board in accordance with the procedure laid down by the Railway Board from time to time. While the selection board will determine in the case of the ex-Company or ex-State Railway staff, their suitability for promotion as Accountant/Inspector tor before placing them on the panel, no candidate who has qualified in the said examination will be declared ineligible for promotion as a junior Accountant/Inspector, the selection board only assigning a suitable place to each such candidate in order of merit. The staff placed on the panel in any year will rank senior to those empanelled in subsequent years.

20. Date of passing the departmental examination/test to regulate seniority:

(a) Except as provided for in subparagraph (b) below, seniority of two or more railway servants, who pass the departmental examination/test on different dates, not treated as one continuous examination, will be regulated entirely by the date of passing the examination or test.

(b) The seniority of Accounts Clerks, Grade I and Stock Verifiers is to be determined with reference to their substantive or basic seniority in Grade II irrespective of the dates they qualify for promotion as Clerks, Grade I, by passing the examination prescribed for the purpose.

21. Seniority on Promotion to Non-selection posts. — Promotion to non-selection posts shall be on the basis of seniority-cum-suitability being judged by the authority competent to fill the post, by oral and/or written test or a departmental examination as considered necessary and the record of service. The only exception to this would be in cases where for administrative convenience, which should be recorded in writing, the competent authority considers it necessary to appoint a railway servant other than the senior-most suitable railway servant to officiate in a short term vacancy not exceeding two months as a rule and 4 months in any case. This will, however, not give the railway servant any advantage not otherwise due to him."

Appendix 2, in addition to the syllabus for the examination, provides:

"3. The examination will be conducted by the Head of each office, who will also decide the intervals at which it should be held.

4. (a) Normally no railway servant will be permitted to take the examination more than three, but the Financial Adviser and Chief Accounts Officer may in deserving cases permit a candidate to take the examination for a fourth time, and in very exceptional cases, the General Manager may permit a candidate to take the examination for the fifth and the last time.

(b) No railway servant, who has less than six months' service in a Railway Accounts Office or who had not a reasonable chance of passing the examination will be allowed to appear in the examination prescribed in this Appendix.

In exceptional circumstances, the condition regarding six months' minimum service may be waived by the General Manager.

(c) Temporary railway servants may be permitted to sit for the examination but it should be clearly understood that the passing of this examination will not give them a claim for absorption in the permanent cadre.

(d) A candidate who fails in the examination but shows marked excellence by obtaining not less than 50 per cent in any subject may be exempted from further examination in that subject in subsequent examination."

It is quite clear that para 49 does not confer any right to immediate promotion on those Grade II clerks who pass the qualifying Appendix 2 examination. The only benefit which accrues to them is that one hurdle is removed from their way and they become eligible for being considered for promotion to Grade I. This promotion is governed by the test of seniority-cum-suitability. All those who qualify for promotion are treated at par for this purpose and they are grouped together as constituting one class. The fact that one person has qualified earlier in point of time does not by itself clothe him with a preferential claim to promotion as against those who qualify later. This examination is considered to be a continuous examination and as is clear from para 17, success at this examination does not constitute the basis of seniority which continues to be dependent on the substantive or basic seniority in Grade II. The question which directly arises for determination is: does the procedure laid down in these instructions violate the petitioners' right as guaranteed by Arts. 14 and 16? The State which encounters diverse problems arising from a variety of circumstances is entitled to lay down conditions of efficiency and other qualifications for securing the best service for being eligible for promotion in its different departments. In the present case the object which is sought to be achieved by the provisions reproduced earlier is the requisite efficiency in the Accounts Department of the Railway Establishment. The departmental authority is the proper judge of its requirements. The direct recruits and the promotees like the petitioners, in our opinion, clearly constitute different classes and this classification is sustainable on intelligible differentia which has a reasonable connection with the object of efficiency sought to be achieved. Promotion to Grade I is guided by the consideration of seniority-cum-merit. It is, therefore, difficult to find fault with the provision which places in one group all those Grade II clerks who have qualified by passing the Appendix 2 examination. The fact that the promotees from Grade II who have officiated for some time are not given the credit of this period when a permanent vacancy arises also does not attract the prohibition contained in Arts. 14 and 16. It does not constitute any hostile discrimination and is neither arbitrary nor unreasonable. It applies uniformly to all members of Grade II clerks who have qualified and become eligible. The onus in this case is on the petitioners to establish discrimination by showing that the classification does not rest upon any just and reasonable basis. The difference emphasised on behalf of the petitioners is too tenuous to form the basis of a serious argument. Their challenge, therefore, fails.

4. The decision in Mervyn Continho v. Collector of Customs, Bombay, 1966-3 SCR 600 = (AIR 1967 SC 52), on which reliance has been placed on behalf of the petitioners dealt with a different problem though the principle of law laid down there seems to go against the petitioners' submission. It was expressly observed there that there is no inherent vice in the principle of fixing seniority by rotation in a case when a service is composed in fixed proportion of direct recruits and promotees. The distinction between direct recruits and promotees as two sources of recruitment being a recognised difference, not obnoxious to the equality clauses, the provisions which concern us cannot be struck down on the ratio of this decision.

5. The petition accordingly fails and is dismissed but without costs.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2182 (V 57 C 448)

(From Punjab : AIR 1966 Punj 232)

J. C. SHAH, V. RAMASWAMI AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

Municipal Committee, Amritsar and others, Appellants v. The State of Punjab and another, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1321 of 1966, D/-12-9-1969.

(A) Education—Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959) Ss. 3, 6 — Taking over Government Aided Schools of Local Bodies — This is nothing short of compulsory acquisition — Art. 31 (2) must be satisfied — Section 3 (2) and amendments in respect of Ss. 52 (1) (g) and 59 of Punjab Municipal Act are void. AIR 1966 Punjab 232, Reversed.

Power under S. 5 to take over aided schools can be done only after the local authority has been given a reasonable opportunity for showing cause against the proposed action. The proviso, however, arms the State Government with powers in case of emergency and in the interests of students to take over the management straightway after publication of a notification to that effect. The amendments which are effected in Sections 52 and 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act vest in the State not only the management of the schools taken over but also all interests in the lands, buildings etc. of the school along with the movable properties pertaining thereto which shall be deemed to have been transferred to the State. There is no provision whatsoever for an automatic retransfer of these properties after a lapse of period of 10 years for which the taking over of the schools can be effective. This means that the action taken under Section 5 is nothing short of compulsory acquisition within the meaning of Article 31 (2) of the Constitution. There is no provision in the Act or in the amendment of Section 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act made by the Act for payment of any compensation which is essential under Art. 31 (2). On the assumption that taking over of the property for a period of 10 years would be an act of requisitioning, the requirements of Art. 31 (2) must be satisfied to sustain the validity of the law. Property cannot be acquired while taking over management and control under Art. 31A (1) (b) in complete negation and contravention of Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution.

Section 3 (2) of the Act and the amendments which would become operative under Section 6 in respect of Sections 52 (1) and 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act are void and unconstitutional. AIR 1966 Punj 232, Reversed. (Paras 14, 15)

(B) Education—Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959), Sec. 5 — For applicability of Sec. 5 there must be emergency — Actual emergency which had arisen need not be mentioned in notification — State need not show by placing material before Court that it was a case of emergency justifying action under proviso to Section 5 where no foundation for this has been laid in this behalf in writ petition. AIR 1966 Punj 232, Affirmed. (Para 8)

(C) Education—Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959), Section 5 — Notification D/- 26-9-1960 of Government has no retrospective effect. AIR 1966 Punj 232, Reversed.

The mere fact that the Act in terms was retrospective would not make the notifications issued under the proviso to Sec. 5 retrospective in the absence of express words or appropriate language from which retrospectivity would be implied. Where all that the notification says is that the Governor of Punjab is taking over for a period of 10 years the management of the schools of the Committee in exercise of the powers conferred by the proviso to Section 5 of the Act, it clearly means that the management is taken over from the date of the notification and not from any prior date. It would follow that whatever was done before the date of the notification regarding the assumption of management and vesting of the Committee's properties was wholly void and illegal. AIR 1966 Punj 232, Reversed. (Para 10)

(D) Education—Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959), Sec. 5 — Notification not retrospective — Amendment of Sections 52 and 59 Punjab Municipal Act would be effective only after date of notification — Provisions of Section 52 (1) (g) Punjab Municipal Act are however void.

Under Section 6 of the Act it is only after the local authority has passed a resolution under Section 3 or the State Government has taken over management of the aided schools under Sec. 5 that Sections 52 and 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act would be deemed to have been amended in the manner specified in the schedule with effect from October 1, 1957, or from the date aided schools are taken over as the case may be. Where the notification under Section 5 dated September 26, 1960, could not be given retrospective operation the amendments in the aforesaid provisions of the Punjab Municipal Act would be effective only after the date of the notification and not for the prior period. Thus even on the assumption that the provisions of the Act are valid the State could not ask for any contribution. (Para 11)

(E) Municipalities — Punjab Municipal Act (3 of 1911), Sec. 52 (1) (g) — Clause (g) inserted by S. 6 of Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959) is void as contravening Art. 31 (2) of Constitution.

Clause (g) which has now been inserted in Section 52 (1) of Punjab Municipal Act by means of Sec. 6 of the Act 22 of 1959 has to be tested by the guarantees in Part III of the Constitution. By asking the Committee to make contributions from its funds to the cost of the schools which have been taken over by the State part of its funds are being compulsorily acquired by the State. This is something which could not be done except in accordance with the provisions contained in Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution. Clause (g), therefore, which has been inserted in Section 52 of the Punjab Municipal Act is void and illegal as it contravenes Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution. AIR 1969 SC 1100, Rel. on. (Para 12)

(F) Constitution of India, Article 31 (2) — Taking over aided schools of local bodies — It is compulsory acquisition — Article must be satisfied — Section 3 (2) of Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act (22 of 1959) and S. 52 (1) (g) of Punjab Municipal Act are void. AIR 1966 Punj 232, Reversed. (Paras 14, 15)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1969) AIR 1969 SC 1100 (V 56) =
Writ Petn. No. 295 of 1968, D/-
30-1-1969, Municipal Committee, Amritsar v. State of Punjab 12
- (1954) AIR 1954 SC 119 (V 41) =
1954 SCR 674, Dwarkadas
Shrinivas v. Sholapur Spinning and Weaving Co., Ltd. 7
- (1951) AIR 1951 SC 41 (V 38) =
1950 SCR 869, Charanjit Lal
Chowdhury v. Union of India 7

Mr. Niren De, Attorney-General for India, (Mr. Naunit Lal, Advocate with him), for Appellants; M/s. Hardev Singh and R. N. Sachtbey, Advocates, for Respondents.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

GROVER, J.—This is an appeal by special leave from a judgment of the Punjab High Court dismissing a petition under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution which had been filed by the appellant Municipal Committee challenging the taking over by the State of all the schools which were being run by it together with all the buildings in which the schools were functioning and other movable and immovable properties connected with these institutions which belonged to the Committee. The order of the State for payment of an annual contribution which upto the date of the filing of the writ petition i.e., May 10, 1964 and reached the figure of 53 lakhs was also challenged.

2. The appellant Committee is a first class Municipal Committee and has been in existence from a long time. It has been managing its local affairs through the elected representatives from the city who are called Municipal Commissioners. It is constituted and functions under the provisions of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911. A number of primary schools were being run by the Committee within the municipal limits of the town of Amritsar for which it was getting grant-in-aid from the Punjab Government. It was, however, running schools upto the middle and high standards for girls and boys for which all the expenses were incurred by itself without any grant from the Government. The primary liability, however, for incurring the extra expenditure even in connection with the aided schools was of the Committee. The Punjab Government took an administrative decision to provincialise all the schools run by all local bodies in the State with effect from October 1, 1957. This information was conveyed by means of a letter dated July 19, 1957 by the Secretary to the Government, Education Department, through the Deputy Commissioners in Jullundur and Ambala Divisions. At a meeting of the appellant Committee held on July 31, 1957 a resolution was passed that a strong representation be made to the Government against the decision to provincialise the schools run by the local bodies. On September, 26, 1957 the Assistant Director of Schools wrote to the District Inspector that "as the local body schools are being provincialised with effect from October 1, 1957 the tuition fees etc., to be realized in such schools after that date should be credited to the Government in the treasury under the head.....". Without enacting any legislation the State took over all the schools run by the local bodies on October 1, 1957. A memorandum from the Director of Public Instructions, Punjab to the District Inspector of Schools sent on October 5, 1957 conveyed the following direction:

"All the erstwhile Local Body Schools which have been provincialised with effect from the 1st October, 1957 will henceforth be known as Government High/Middle/Primary Schools for Boys or Girls as the case may be". The Executive Officer of the appellant Committee (appointed under the Punjab Municipal Executive Officers Act 1931) wrote to the Deputy Commissioner, Amritsar on November 21, 1957 that no formal orders had been received from the Government requiring the Committee to give up possession of the schools and it appeared that no procedure had so far been devised in that behalf or for the settlement of terms and conditions on which the buildings, furniture, fittings and other materials were to be transferred. He pressed for proper steps being taken. The Secretary to the Government Punjab, Health and Local Government Department sent a memorandum dated September 10, 1958 to all the Deputy Commissioners saying that the work of proper maintenance of the buildings of the provincialised schools of the local bodies would be entrusted to the Public Works Department, Buildings and Roads. A letter was addressed by the same authority dated September 30/October 4, 1958 to the Deputy Commissioners requesting them to supply immediate information showing the contributions actually deposited into the treasuries by the local bodies in respect of the provincialisation of the schools. This was followed by the memorandum dated December 12, 1958 to the effect that all local bodies "be advised to execute the transfer notes in respect of the school buildings etc., by their respective Engineering Establishments in favour of the Superintending Engineers concerned". By means of another memorandum dated December 26, 1958, orders of the Government were conveyed that immediate steps should be taken for getting the contribution from local bodies and also for obtaining transfer of buildings and equipment. The Deputy Commissioners were requested to get the requisite resolutions passed by the local bodies in the prescribed form. The appellants Committee at its meeting held on January 10, 1959 decided not to pay any contribution for the time being. It was also resolved that the Committee was not in favour of transferring the property rights in movable and immovable property which was in possession of the schools.

3. It appears that up-till June 17, 1959 the State continued the process of provincialisation of the schools mentioned before without any authority of law. There was no statutory provision which entitled the State to take over the schools of the local bodies including the buildings in which the schools were being run as also furniture etc., which belonged to the local bodies. Moreover the extraordinary step of demanding annual contribution was also taken without any sanction or authority of law. The appellants Committee which is one of the biggest Committees in the State seems to have resisted the attempt on the part of the Government to take over the schools and acquire and requisition its properties in the manner in which it was done. Legislation was for the first time enacted in the shape of the Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act 1959, (Act No. XXII of 1959), hereinafter called the Act. It received the assent of the President on June 9, 1959. According to the preamble the Act was enacted to provide for the management and control of local authorities' schools receiving grants in aid from the State of Punjab. By a deeming provision the Act was to come into force with effect from October 1, 1957. Section 2 gave the definitions of "aided schools", "local authority", and "school". "School" has been defined to include lands, buildings, playgrounds and hostels of the school and the movable property such as furniture, books, apparatus, maps and equipment pertaining to the school. The following provisions of the Act as amended may be reproduced:

S. 3. "Power of local authorities to transfer management and control of aided schools to State Government.—(1) A local authority may pass a resolution to transfer the management and control of aided school to the State Government and communicate the same to the State Government.

(2) On receiving such a resolution, the State Government may direct that the aided schools shall be taken over under its management and control and thereafter all rights and interests including the right of maintenance, management and control shall be transferred to and vest in the State Government and the rights and interests of the local authority in respect of such schools shall cease."

S. 4. "Power to withdraw grant-in-aid.—The State Government may withdraw the grant-in-aid from any local authority in respect of aided schools if the resolution mentioned in Sec. 3, has not been passed and communicated to the State Government within a period of three months from the date on which this Act is published in the Official Gazette."

S. 5. "Power to take over aided schools where local authority neglects to perform duty.—(1) Wherever the State Government is satisfied that a local authority has neglected to perform its duties in respect of aided schools or that it is necessary in public interest to take over their management for a period not exceeding ten years, it may, after giving the local authority a reasonable opportunity for showing cause against the proposed action, make an order to take over the management:

Provided that in cases of emergency, where the State Government is satisfied that such a course is necessary in the interests of the students, it may, without giving such notice, take over the management of such schools after publication of a notification to that effect in the Official Gazette."

(2) and (3) .....

S. 6. "Amendment of Punjab Acts No. III of 1911 and No. XX of 1883.—Where a local authority has passed a resolution under Sec. 3 or the State Government has taken over management of aided schools of a local authority under Sec. 5, the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911, and the Punjab District Boards Act, 1883, shall be deemed to have been amended in the manner specified in the Schedule appended to this Act with effect from the 1st October, 1957."

Section 52 (1) of the Punjab Municipal Act, relates to the setting apart of the municipal funds and apply the same for different purposes as mentioned in clauses (a) to (f). By means of the Schedule to the Act after clause (f) of sub-section (1), clause (g) was added which is in the following terms:

"(g) seventhly, such sum to be paid annually by the committee to the State Government by way of contribution as is equivalent to:—

(i) the total provision made in the budget for the year 1957-58 under the main head 'Education' excluding educational grants and the provision made for 'original works' relating to schools; and

(ii) a sum representing one per centum of the total income from its own resources for the year 1957-58, in lieu of the deductions made for 'original works' made under clause (i):

Provided that in respect of the financial year 1957-58 the committee shall make a payment to the State Government of the sums which have remained unexpended on 31st March, 1958, out of the provisions under the head "Education" in the budget of 1957-58". Section 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act provides that the Committee may with the sanction of the State Government transfer to the Government any property vesting in the Committee under Section 56 or Section 57 but not so as to affect any trusts or public rights subject to which the property is held. A proviso was added to the section by the Schedule which was as follows:—

"Provided that where a committee has passed a resolution under Section 3 of the Punjab Local Authorities (Aided Schools) Act, 1959, or the State Government has taken over the management of aided schools of a committee under Section 5 of that Act, all rights and interests in the establishment, maintenance and management of the aforesaid schools immediately before the 1st October, 1957, including all interests in the lands, buildings, playgrounds, hostels of the said schools as also in the movable properties like furniture, books, apparatus, maps and equipment pertaining thereto shall be deemed to have been transferred to the State Government on that date, and all unspent balances in respect of grants and contributions received for the maintenance and promotion of these schools shall be deemed to have been surrendered to the State Government."

After the promulgation of the above legislation the appellant Committee passed a resolution on February 24, 1960 reiterating the decision taken in the Local Bodies Conference held at Jullundur and its own decision to request the Punjab Government to restore the schools run by the local bodies to them. At another meeting held on June 9, 1960 the appellant Committee decided not to pass the resolution under Section 3 of the Act transferring its schools and property to the State Government. The Punjab Government, however, issued a notification dated September 26, 1960 saying that the Governor was satisfied that it was necessary in the interests of the students to take over for a period of ten years the management of the schools specified in the Schedule and administered by the Municipal Committee, Amritsar, and therefore in exercise of the powers conferred by the proviso to Section 5 of the Act the Government took over for a period of ten years the management of the said schools. The schedule contained the list of 42 such schools. The question of the payment of the contribution which was being demanded by the Government came up for consideration at a meeting of the Appellant Committee on January 3, 1962. It was decided that the payment be made on the basis of a formula laid down by State Government in that behalf with effect from October 1, 1957 but that the proprietary rights of the Committee in the school buildings be retained and the use of these buildings free of charge be allowed to the Government for the purpose of running the schools. At a subsequent meeting held on March 28, 1963, the appellant Committee, however, revised its previous decision in view of a resolution passed in the meeting of the Standing Committee of Urban Local Bodies Conference held on June 21, 1962. It was decided that the State Government was not entitled to charge contributions from the Municipal Committee. On April 10, 1964 the Deputy Commissioner, Amritsar, made an order in exercise of the powers vested in him under Section 234 (1) of the Punjab Municipal Act requiring the appellant committee to pay an amount of Rs. 53,66,146 on account of contribution for the maintenance of the provincialised schools for the period 1957-58 to 1963-64 failing which realization was to be made under sub-section (2) of that section. Thereupon the petition under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution was filed by the appellant Committee in which apart from other matters the validity and constitutionality of the Act were challenged. In the return filed on behalf of the State reliance was placed on the provisions of the Act, the resolution passed by the Committee itself on January 3, 1962 agreeing to pay the contributions and allow the use of school buildings to the Government free of charge and the notification which had been issued under Section 5 of the Act on September 26, 1960 whereby the management of the schools of the Committee had been taken over for a period of 10 years.

4. The High Court was of the view that since the Government had taken over the control and management of the aided schools it was considered necessary that the property in possession of these institutions should also be taken over and managed for a limited period of 10 years. Since no compensation was being paid for what may be called compulsory acquisition the legislation could be struck down as being in contravention of Article 31 (2) of the Constitution. In the present case, however, the management of the property in possession of the schools was being taken over for a period of 10 years in the public interest by virtue of the provisions of Article 31-A (1) (b) and the contravention of Article 31 (2) was of no consequence. The argument raised on behalf of the State that the resolution of the appellant Committee dated January 3, 1962 consenting to the payment of the contribution with effect from October 1, 1957 had been passed in terms of Section 3 of the Act was refuted. As regards the notification issued on September 26, 1960 under the Act the High Court was of the opinion that although it did not contain any provision for retrospective operation it should be considered that it had retrospective effect since the Act itself had been enforced from October 1, 1957. It was conceded before the High Court that the notification did not apply to those schools which did not receive any aid from the Government.

5. The learned Attorney General for the appellant Committee raised the following main contentions: (1) The material provisions of the Act were ultra vires Article 31 (2) of the Constitution. (2) The taking over of movable and immovable property of the Committee could not possibly fall within Article 31-A (1) (b) and such action was in direct contravention of Article 31 (2). (3) The notification dated September 26, 1960 could not have been issued under the proviso to Section 5 because there was no question of any emergency nor such an emergency has been pleaded or proved by the State. (4) The said notification could not and did not validate the action taken prior to the date when it was issued nor Section 6 of the Act could be attracted which effected amendments of the provisions of the Punjab Municipal Act as per the Schedule. (5) The annual contributions which were being demanded from the appellant Committee were wholly illegal and could not be levied on account of legislative incompetence.

6. Now the scheme of the Act is that it is initially left to the local authority to pass a resolution to transfer the management and control of aided schools to the State Government.

In order to employ compulsive persuasion the State Government can withdraw the grant-in-aid from any local authority in respect of aided schools if such authority does not pass a resolution in terms of Section 3 within a period of three months from the date of enactment of the Act (vide Section 4). Section 5 gives the power to the State Government to take over aided schools where the local authority neglects to perform the duty but that can be done only after the local authority has been given a reasonable opportunity for showing cause against the proposed action and also if it is considered necessary in public interest to take over the management for a period not exceeding 10 years. The proviso, however, arms the State Government with powers in case of emergency and in the interests of students to take over the management straightway after publication of a notification to that effect. The amendments which are effected in Sections 52 and 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act enable the State Government to get an annual contribution from the local bodies and further to vest in the State not only the management of the school taken over but also all interests in the lands, buildings etc. of the school along with the movable properties pertaining thereto which shall be deemed to have been transferred to the State. There is no provision whatsoever for an automatic re-transfer of these properties after a lapse of a period of 10 years for which the taking over of the schools can be effective. This means that once action is taken under S. 5 which can be done pursuant to a resolution passed under Section 3 or after giving a notice to the local authority or without giving such notice in case of emergency all the properties movable and immovable belonging to the local body pertaining to the schools taken over become the property of the State. This is nothing short of compulsory acquisition within the meaning of Article 31 (2) of the Constitution. Under that Article no property can be so acquired or requisitioned unless it is under an authority of law which either fixes the amount of compensation or specifies the principles on which and the manner in which the compensation is to be determined and given. There is no provision in the Act or in the amendment of Section 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act made by the Act for payment of any compensation. On the assumption that taking over of the property for a period of 10 years would be an act of requisitioning, the requirements of Article 31 (2) must be satisfied to sustain the validity of the law. The High Court entertained no doubt that under that Article property could not be acquired or requisitioned without complying with its provisions but it fell into an error in applying Article 31-A (1) (b) to the provisions under consideration.

7. Under the above Article it is only the management of any property which can be taken over for a limited period either in the public interest or in order to secure its proper management. According to the High Court the Committee was indisputably the owner of the property which was being taken over by the State but P. C. Pandit, J., who delivered the judgment of the Division Bench proceeded to say:

"In the present case, the management of the property in possession of the schools was being taken over for ten years in public interest and, as such, by virtue of the provisions of Article 31-A (1) (b), the contravention of Article 31 (2) was of no consequence. Learned Counsel for the petitioner submits that Article 31-A (1) (b) does not apply to the facts of the instant case, because here the management and control of an institution namely, the school, was being taken over by the Government, whereas this Article applied where the management of any property was being taken over by the Government for a limited period in the public interest. This argument is without any merit, because the property may belong to anybody, whether it be an individual, or a Committee or an industrial or commercial undertaking or any kind of other institution. In all these cases, where the management of the property is taken over for a limited period in public interest, this Article would be attracted and the legislation would not be hit by the provisions of Article 31 of the Constitution".

Clause (b) in Article 31-A (1) came to be inserted for the first time by the Constitution (Fourth Amendment) Act, 1955. It was intended apparently to counteract the effect of the decisions in the two Sholapur cases: Charanjit Lal Chowdhury v. Union of India, 1950 SCR 869 = (AIR 1951 SC 41) and Dwarkadas Shrinivas v. Sholapur Spinning and Weaving Co. Ltd., 1954 SCR 674 = (AIR 1954 SC 119). The purpose, therefore, of inserting this provision was to remove any legislation from the pale of attack on the ground of contravention not only of Article 31 but also of Articles 14 and 19. Although management and control of the aided schools under the impugned legislation could be taken over for a limited period in the public interest it is not possible to understand how even the proprietary interests in the movable and immovable property pertaining to the schools, which have been found to belong to the Committee, could have been acquired under Cl. (b) of Art. 31-A (1). With all deference to the High Court we have not been able to properly appreciate the decision on this point given in the paragraph extracted above. The High Court did not consider the true import and effect of the amendment made in Section 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act by virtue of which all rights and interests in the lands, buildings, playgrounds, hostels of the schools as also in the movable property like furniture, books, apparatus, maps and equipment pertaining thereto shall be deemed to have been transferred to the State Government with effect from October 1, 1957. We are, therefore, unable to uphold the view which leads to the result that property can be acquired while taking over management and control under Article 31-A (1) (b) in complete negation and contravention of Article 31 (2) of the Constitution.

8. The next question is whether there was due compliance with the provisions of the proviso to Section 5 of the Act. In the notification which was issued on September 26, 1960 there is no indication that the management of the schools was being taken over because of certain emergency having arisen. If any emergency existed it was the creation of the government itself which had proceeded to take over the management and control of the aided schools along with the properties pertaining to them without any authority of law prior to the enactment of the Act. That was the reason why the Act had to be given retrospective operation. According to the High Court the moment the State Government was satisfied that it was in the interest of the students to take over the management of the schools it became a case of emergency. It also relied on the principle that it was not necessary to mention the actual emergency which had arisen in the notification itself or to make a recital that an emergency had arisen. The State could not show by placing material before the Court that it was a case of emergency justifying the action under the proviso to Section 5 because no foundation in this behalf had been laid in the writ petition. The third point pressed by the learned Attorney General, therefore, cannot be acceded to.

9. The fourth point of the learned Attorney General may now be considered. There was some argument before the High Court and the same has been repeated before us on behalf of the State that the question of validity of the notification and the action taken thereunder did not arise because the Committee itself had passed a resolution on January 3, 1962 which should be regarded as having been passed under the provisions of Section 3 transferring the management and control of the schools to the Government and agreeing to pay the contribution with effect from October 1, 1957. The High Court has rightly pointed out that a reading of the resolution would show that the Committee agreed to the payment of contribution with effect from October 1, 1957, in accordance with the formula laid down by the State Government. It was, however, made clear that the proprietary rights of the Committee in the movable and immovable property pertaining to the schools would be retained by it. The Committee had subsequently passed several resolutions which had the effect of almost rescinding the previous resolution. The submission on behalf of the State that the resolution dated January 3, 1962, passed by the Committee fell within the first part of Section 3 of the Act is wholly devoid of merit and has rightly not been accepted.

10. As regards the notification having retrospective operation we are unable to agree with the High Court that any such effect could be given to it. There is nothing to indicate in the notification that it was intended to operate retrospectively. The mere fact that the Act in terms was retrospective would not make the notification issued under the proviso to Section 5 retrospective in the absence of express words or appropriate language from which retrospectivity would be implied. All that the notification says is that the Governor of Punjab is taking over for a period of 10 years the management of the schools of the Committee in exercise of the powers conferred by the proviso to Section 5 of the Act. This clearly means that the management is taken over from the date of the notification and not from any prior date. It would follow that whatever was done before the date of the notification regarding the assumption of management and vesting of the Committee's properties was wholly void and illegal.

11. Under Section 6 of the Act it is only after the local authority has passed a resolution under Section 3 or the State Government has taken over management of the aided schools under Section 5 that Sections 52 and 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act would be deemed to have been amended in the manner specified in the schedule with effect from October 1, 1957, or from the date aided schools are taken over as the case may be. If the notification dated September 26, 1960 could not be given retrospective operation, the amendments in the aforesaid provisions of the Punjab Municipal Act would be effective only after the date of the notification and not for the prior period. Thus even on the assumption that the provisions of the Act are valid the State could not ask for any contribution from the Committee for the period prior to the date of the notification. But the addition of Clause (g) after Clause (f) in sub-section (1) of Section 52 of the Punjab Municipal Act is void and wholly ineffective for the reasons which will be presently noticed.

12. Chapter IV of the Punjab Municipal Act relates to municipal fund and property. Section 51 deals with the constitution of the municipal fund. Section 52 provides for the application of the fund. Before the amendment made by the Act sub-section (1) had six clauses containing the provisions for the application of the fund. It is noteworthy that although the State Government has been empowered to require the Committee to make contributions but in each case that is confined to an eventuality or a situation where certain cost has been incurred by the Government which had to be defrayed by the Committee e.g., Clauses (b), (d) and (f). According to Clause (e), however, the Committee may be required by the State Government to contribute towards the maintenance of pauper lunatics or lepers sent from any place in the State to mental hospitals or public asylums whether in or outside the State. Sub-section (2) says that subject to the charges specified in sub-section (1) the municipal fund shall be applicable to the payment of the matters set out in Clauses (a) to (i). Clause (c) is in these terms:

"the constitution, establishment and maintenance of schools, hospitals and dispensaries, and other institutions for the promotion of education or for the benefit of the public health .....

In the context of Section 52 it is difficult to envisage that the municipal fund of a particular Committee could be diverted to such institutions which had no connection with the Committee. We are, however, not called upon to pronounce upon the true scope, ambit and validity of all the provisions in Section 52. Clause (g) which has now been inserted by means of Section 6 of the Act has to be tested by the guarantees in Part III of the Constitution. By asking the Committee to make contributions from its funds to the cost of the schools which have been taken over by the State part of its funds are being compulsorily acquired by the State. This is something which could not be done except in accordance with the provisions contained in Art. 31(2) of the Constitution. In Writ Petn. No. 295 of 1968, D/- 30-1-1969 = (reported in AIR 1969 SC 1100), Municipal Committee, Amritsar v. State of Punjab in which the provisions of the Punjab Cattle Fairs (Regulation) Act, 1968, came up for examination, it was laid down by this Court that the State was incompetent to declare land belonging to the Municipal Committee as falling within the fair area and to take possession of that land in exercise of the power conferred by the Act without providing for payment of compensation guaranteed by Article 31 (2). Clause (g), therefore, which has been inserted in Section 52 of the Punjab Municipal Act is void and illegal as it contravenes Article 31 (2) of the Constitution.

13. It may be mentioned that the learned Attorney General has also pointed out that the State legislature did not have the competence, under any of the entries in List II of the Seventh Schedule, to enact legislation of the nature embodied in Clause (g) which was inserted in Section 52 relating to compulsory contribution by the Committee to the State Government. Counsel for the State has sought to rely on Entries 5 and 11 in List II which relate to local Government and education. It is unnecessary to decide this matter since it has been held by us that the impugned provisions with regard to contribution contravene Article 31 (2) of the Constitution.

14. We may now determine the provisions of the Act which are unconstitutional and invalid. There is nothing in Sections 3 (1), 4 and 5 of the Act per se which would bring them into conflict with the constitutional provisions, particularly, in view of Article 31-A (1) (b) under which the management of the schools could be taken over by the State for a limited period in public interest. But the difficulty arises about Sections 3 (2) and 6 which have to be read together. When the State Government makes a direction under Section 3 (2) that the aided schools shall be taken over all rights and interests of the Committee including the rights of maintenance, management and control shall be transferred to and vest in the State Government. This essentially has reference to proprietary and ownership rights apart from the rights pertaining to management and control. Section 6 comes into operation as soon as a local authority has passed a resolution under Section 3 or the State Government has taken over management under Section 5. Then the provisions relating to acquisition of property of the Committee as also of its funds by way of contribution come immediately into operation by virtue of the amendments effected in Sections 52 (1) and 59 of Punjab Municipal Act. These provisions are clearly unconstitutional as they contravene Article 31 (2) of the Constitution.

15. In the result the appeal is allowed with costs and the judgment of the High Court is set aside. It is declared that Section 3 (2) of the Act and the amendments which would become operative under Section 6 in respect of Sections 52 (1) and 59 of the Punjab Municipal Act are void and unconstitutional. The orders by which the movable and immovable property of the Committee have been transferred to the State are hereby quashed and such transfers are declared to be wholly void. The respondents are further directed not to recover any contribution in accordance with Cl. (g) of Section 52 of the Punjab Municipal Act as also the sum of Rs. 53 lakhs mentioned in the order of the Deputy Commissioner dated April 10, 1964, form the appellant Committee. Appropriate writs and directions shall issue in this behalf.

Appeal allowed.

---

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 2191
(V 57 C 449)

J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

State of U. P. and others, Appellants v. Sushil Chandra and another, Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 1303 and 1304 of 1970, D/- 10-8-1970.

Constitution of India, Articles 136 and 226 — Appeal to Supreme Court — Ad interim injunction granted by High Court in petition challenging validity of order of State Government regarding sale of liquor — High Court reserving liberty of State to move High Court for vacating order — Petition by State for vacating order — High Court directing all remaining applications in proceedings to be listed for hearing and confirming its previous order granting stay — Held that the order of the High Court granting ad interim injunction was purely temporary made with a view to investigate whether the petitioners had right to the relief claimed and the appeal by the State Government was not maintainable. (Para 4)

IN/IN/D948/70/MVJ/F

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.—In our judgment these two appeals are frivolous. They should never have been brought to this Court.

2. The High Court of Allahabad made an order on April 24, 1970 in a writ petition (challenging the validity of certain order of the State of Uttar Pradesh) issuing an ad interim injunction restraining the State of U. P. and its officers from interfering with the sale of country liquor at their country liquor shop by the respondents in this appeal. The Court however reserved liberty to the State and its officers to move for vacating the order "if and when the occasion arose". It was also directed that the State and its officers will not prevent the respondents from "lifting their quota of country liquor."

3. On April 30, 1970, an application was submitted on behalf of the State for vacating the order pursuant to the liberty reserved by the Court. The High Court made another order on May 7, 1970 by which the previous order dated April 24, 1970 was confirmed.

4. It is urged on behalf of the State that the second order was made on the application dated April 30 1970. That contention appears to be wholly unsustainable. It is clear from the terms of the order that the High Court had directed that all the remaining applications which were filed in the proceedings should be listed for hearing on May 14, 1970, and that in the meantime the State and its officers will comply with the previous order dated April 24, 1970. The High Court had, with a view to investigate the question as to whether the respondents had right to the relief claimed, given ad interim relief staying the operation of an order challenged by the respondents. The order was purely temporary. The matter was going to be dealt with by the High Court. We fail to see any reason why the State should have rushed to this Court and asked this Court to entertain the proceedings and to grant a stay of the proceedings.

5. The appeals are dismissed with costs. One hearing fee.

Appeals dismissed.

END

ever, the Fifth Amendment was offended in Lookretis precisely because the defendant had succumbed to the statutory compulsion by furnishing the requested incriminatory information. Knox does not claim that his prosecution is based upon any incriminatory information contained in the forms he filed, nor that he is being prosecuted for a failure to supply incriminatory information. He has taken a course other than the one that the statute was designed to compel, a course that the Fifth Amendment gave him no privilege to take.

6. This is not to deny that the presence of Ss. 4412 and 7203 injected an element of pressure into Knox's predicament at the time he filed the forms. At that time, this Court's decisions in United States v. Kahriger, (1953) 345 US 22=97 L Ed 754=73 S Ct 510, and Lewis v. United States, (1955) 348 US 419=99 L Ed 475=75 S Ct 415, established that the Fifth Amendment did not bar prosecution for failure to file a form such as 11-C. But when Knox responded to the pressure under which he found himself by communicating false information, this was simply not testimonial compulsion. Knox's ground for complaint is not that his false information inculpated him for a prior or subsequent criminal act; rather, it is that under the compulsion of Ss. 4412 and 7203 he committed a criminal act, that of giving false information to the Government. If the compulsion was unlawful under Marchetti,<sup>(6)</sup> Knox may have a defense to this prosecution under the traditional doctrine that a person is not criminally responsible for an act committed under duress. See generally Model Penal Code Ss. 2.09, 3.02 (Proposed Official Draft, 1962); id., S. 2.09, Comment (Tent Draft No. 10, 1960). It is only in this sense that there is any relevance to Knox's attempted distinction of this case from Dennis,

6. We stressed in Marchetti "that we do not hold that these wagering tax provisions are as such constitutionally impermissible; we hold only that those who properly assert the constitutional privilege as to these provisions may not be criminally punished for failure to comply with these requirements. If, in different circumstances, a taxpayer is not confronted by substantial hazards of incrimination, or if he is otherwise outside the privilege's protection, nothing we decide today would shield him from the various penalties prescribed by the wagering tax statutes." 390 US, at 61, 19 L Ed 2d at 905. Nothing before us indicates that the hazard of incrimination faced by Knox was less substantial than that faced by Marchetti, or that Knox would have been disqualified for any other reason from asserting the privilege in defense of a prosecution for failure to comply with S. 4412.

1970 U.S.S.C./6 XII G—12A

Bryson, and their predecessors, United States v. Kapp, (1937) 302 US 214=82 L Ed 205=58 S Ct 182, and Kay v. United States, (1938) 303 US 1=82 L Ed 607=58 S Ct 468, on the ground that in those cases the false statements were voluntarily filed for the purpose of obtaining benefits from the Government.

7. Knox argues that the criminal sanction for failure to file, coupled with the danger of incrimination if he filed truthfully, was more coercive in its effect than, for example, the prospect that the petitioners in Dennis would lose their jobs as union officers unless they filed non-Communist affidavits. While this may be so, the question whether Knox's predicament contains the seeds of a "duress" defense, or perhaps whether his false statement was not made "willfully" as required by S. 1001, is one that must be determined initially at his trial.<sup>(7)</sup> It is not before us on this appeal from dismissal of the indictment, and we intimate no view on the matter.

8. The judgment of the District Court is Reversed.

SEPARATE OPINION

Mr. JUSTICE DOUGLAS, with whom Mr. JUSTICE BLACK concurs, dissenting.

9. In this case, as in ante, (1969) 24 L Ed 2d p. 264, the relevant inquiry is whether "constitutionally speaking it was 'within the jurisdiction' of a Government agency to require the filing of certain information. Id., (1969) 24 L Ed 2d 264 at 272 (dissenting opinion). In (1968) 390 US 39, 61=19 L Ed 2d 889, 905=88 S Ct 697 we held that the statutory requirement of filing Internal Revenue Service Form 11-C is not unconstitutional per se. It is clear, however, that under Marchetti, (1968) 390 US 39=19 L Ed 2d 889 (supra) and (1968) 390 US 62=19 L Ed 2d 906=88 S Ct 709, the "jurisdiction" of the Internal Revenue Service to require this form to be filed is subject to the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination.

10. This is not a case where an individual, with knowledge that he has a right to refuse to provide information, nonetheless provides false information. Under the decisions in (1953) 345 US 22=97 L Ed 754=73 S Ct 510 and (1955) 348 US 419=99 L Ed 475=75 S Ct 415,

7. Rule 12(b) (1) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, which cautions the trial judge that he may consider on a motion to dismiss the indictment only those objections that are "capable of determination without trial of the general issue," indicates that evidentiary questions of this type should not be determined on such a motion.

which were controlling at the time Knox filed his wagering form, Knox faced prosecution under 26 USC S. 7203 for failure to file the form, despite claims of self-incrimination. The Government's requirement to file the wagering form was unconditional. The majority argues that by the terms of Marchetti the Government is not prohibited from requesting the form, but is only prohibited from prosecuting an individual for his failure to comply with the request. Ante, n. 3, (1969) 24 L Ed 2d at 264, 279. The question in this case, however, is not whether the Government has the power to request the form to be filed, but whether it has the power to require the form to be filed. If Knox had merely been requested to file the form and, with full knowledge of his right to silence under the Fifth Amendment, had done so voluntarily, we would have quite a different case. That is not this case. Under the scheme then in effect, the Government demanded unconditionally that Knox file the form, regardless of the fact that it would incriminate him. Heavy penalties were placed on a failure to file the form.

11. Marchetti and Grosso held that those in Knox's position have the Fifth Amendment right to remain silent irrespective of the statutory command that they submit forms which could incriminate them. Had Knox asserted his right of silence under the Fifth Amendment, it is clear that the Internal Revenue Service could not, consistent with Marchetti and Grosso, have required him to file the wagering form.* Thus any argument that the Internal Revenue Service did have "jurisdiction" to require the form to be filed in this case would have to rest on a theory that Knox had "waived" his Fifth Amendment right by not asserting it in lieu of filing the form. A similar claim was made in Grosso, where the petitioner had not asserted his Fifth Amendment right as to certain counts which concerned his failure to pay the special occupational tax imposed by 26 USC S. 4411. The Court there said:

"Given the decisions of this Court in Kahriger and Lewis, supra, which were on the books at the time of petitioner's trial, and left untouched by Albertson v. SACB [(1965) 382 US 70=15 L Ed 2d 165 =85 S Ct 194], we are unable to view his failure to present this issue as an effective waiver of the constitutional privilege." (1968) 390 US, 62 at 71=19 L Ed 2d 906 at 913, 914.

*As the majority opinion states: "Nothing before us indicates that the hazard of incrimination faced by Knox was less substantial than that faced by Marchetti, or that Knox would have been disqualified for any other reason from asserting the privilege." Ante, at —, n. 6, 24 L Ed 2d at 280.

That reasoning is equally applicable here, for Kahriger and Lewis were still on the books at the time Knox filed his form. And see Leary v. United States, (1969) 395 US 6, 27-29=23 L Ed 2d 57, 76-78=89 S Ct 1532.

12. For the reasons stated in my dissent in Bryson, ante, (1969) 24 L Ed 2d 264 and in Mr. Justice Black's dissent in (1968) 384 US 855, 875=16 L Ed 2d 973, 937=86 S Ct 1840, if the Internal Revenue Service had no constitutional authority to require Knox to file any wagering form at all, his filing of a form which included false information in no way prejudiced the Government and is not, in my view, a matter "within the jurisdiction" of the Internal Revenue Service.

13. I would affirm the judgment below.

AIR 1970 U.S.S.C. 82 (V 57 C 12)

(1969-24 L Ed 2d 610)*

James Turner, Petitioner v. United States, Respondent.

(No. 190) Decided on 20-1-1970.

Evidence Act (1872), Sec. 114, Illus. (a) — Case from America — Illegal possession of heroin and cocaine in large quantities — Presumption as to illegal importation — (Customs Act (1962), Section 135) — (Constitution of India, Article 20 (3)) — (Dangerous Drugs Act (1930), Section 32).

Where the accused were charged with knowingly receiving, concealing and transporting heroin and cocaine which he knew had been illegally imported and knowingly purchasing, dispensing and distributing heroin and cocaine, because all or nearly all heroin consumed in the United States is illegally imported, in the absence of explanation as to possession, the Jury can properly infer that the heroin in the possession of the accused had been illegally imported and that he had knowledge of illegal importation. Evidence of the possession by the accused of a great quantity of heroin is sufficient to support conviction for distributing such heroin. Drawing of such an inference does not violate the accused's right to be convicted only on a finding of guilt beyond reasonable doubt. Drawing of inference "unless the defendant explains the possession satisfactorily" does not place impermissible pressure on the accused to testify in his own defence.

(Paras 5, 6)

As regards charge of possession of cocaine, however, no presumption of illegal importation can be drawn, since it is lawfully produced in greater quantities in the United States than is illegally imported. (Para 22)

*Reproduced from 1969-24 L Ed 2d 610 with kind permission of the Publishers.

†Reference is given to a parallel Indian provision for the convenience of Indian lawyers.

CN/CN/C459/70/RCD/T

Cases Referred:	Chronological	Paras
(1969) 395 US 6 = 23 L Ed 2d 57 = 89 S Ct 1532, Leary v. United States	3, 18, 19, 42
(1965) 382 US 136 = 15 L Ed 2d 210 = 86 S Ct 279, United States v. Romano	4, 25
(1965) 380 US 63 = 13 L Ed 2d 658 = 85 S Ct 754, United States v. Gainey	42, 43
(1965) 380 US 609 = 14 L Ed 2d 106 = 85 S Ct 1229, Griffin v. California	43
(1964) 378 US 1 = 12 L Ed 2d 653, Malloy v. Hogan	43
(1963) 323 F 2d 674, Erwing v. United States	21
(1960) 362 US 199 = 4 L Ed 2d 654 = 80 S Ct 624 = 80 ALR 2d 1355, Thompson v. Louisville	69
(1959) 359 US 19 = 3 L Ed 2d 597 = 79 S Ct 560, Harris v. United States	6
(1957) 353 US 53 = 1 L Ed 2d 639 = 77 S Ct 623, Roviano v. United States	4
(1955) 350 US 11 = 100 L Ed 8 = 76 S Ct 1, United States Ex rel. Toth v. Quarles	39, 42
(1947) 330 US 160 = 91 L Ed 818 = 67 S Ct 645, Bozza v. United States	69
(1943) 319 US 463 = 87 L Ed 1519 = 63 S Ct 1241, Tot v. United States	4, 25
(1925) 268 US 178 = 69 L Ed 934 = 45 S Ct 470, Yee Hem v. United States	4
(1928) 276 US 413 = 72 L Ed 632 = 48 S Ct 373, Casey v. United States	4
(1910) 219 US 35 = 55 L Ed 78 = 31 S Ct 136, Mobile J. and K. C. R. v. Turnipseed	10
Josiah E. DuBois, Jr., for Petitioner; Lawrence G. Wallace, for Respondent; Steven R. Rivkin, for Cleveland Burgess as amicus curiae.

SUMMARY

The defendant, tried before a jury in the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, was charged with (1) knowingly receiving, concealing, and transporting heroin and cocaine which he knew had been illegally imported, and (2) knowingly purchasing, dispensing, and distributing heroin and cocaine which were not in or from the original stamped package. The evidence indicated that the defendant had been in possession of a 14.68-gram package containing a cocaine and sugar mixture and a 48.25-gram containing 275 bags of heroin, and that no federal stamps were affixed to the packages. No evidence was presented as to the origin of the cocaine or heroin, and the defendant did not testify. The trial judge instructed the jury, in accordance with the language of certain federal statutory provisions, that (1) the defendant's unexplained possession of the heroin and cocaine would support an inference that he knew that they had been illegally imported, and (2) the defendant's possession of heroin and cocaine which were not in a stamped package constituted prima facie evidence that he knowingly purchased, dispensed, or distributed such heroin and cocaine. The jury found the defendant guilty on all counts, and the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit affirmed (404 F2d 782).

On certiorari, the United States Supreme Court affirmed in part and reversed in part. In an opinion by WHITE, J., expressing the views of five members of the court, the convictions involving heroin were affirmed and it was held that (1) because all or nearly all heroin consumed in the United States is illegally imported, the jury could properly infer, as authorized by statute, that the heroin in the defendant's possession had been illegally imported and that the defendant had knowledge of its illegal importation, (2) evidence of the defendant's possession of 275 bags of heroin was sufficient to support his conviction for distributing such heroin, and (3) because it was extremely unlikely that a package containing heroin would be legally stamped, and because most persons in possession of heroin could be presumed to have obtained it by purchase, the defendant was properly convicted for purchasing heroin which was not in or from the original stamped package; but the convictions involving cocaine were reversed and it was held that (1) because much more cocaine is lawfully produced in the United States than is illegally imported, the statutory presumption was invalid to the extent that it authorized the jury to infer that the cocaine in the defendant's possession had been illegally imported and that the defendant had knowledge of its illegal importation, (2) because the defendant's possession of 14.68 grams of a cocaine and sugar mixture might have been exclusively for his personal use, evidence of such possession was insufficient to support his conviction for distributing cocaine, and (3) because there was a reasonable possibility that the defendant had stolen the cocaine himself or had obtained it from a stamped package in the possession of the actual thief, the statutory presumption was invalid to the extent that it authorized the jury to infer that the defendant had purchased the cocaine other than in or from the original stamped package.

MARSHALL, J., while concurring in the court's judgment, dissented from that part of the opinion which affirmed the defendant's conviction on the ground of his having purchased heroin.

BLACK, J., joined by DOUGLAS, J., dissenting, would reverse all of the defendant's convictions because (1) the trial judge's instructions impermissibly interfered with the defendant's constitutional right to have the jury determine when evidence is sufficient to justify a finding of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, and (2) the statutory presumptions unconstitutionally deprived the defendant of the presumption of innocence, cast upon him the burden of proving that he was not guilty, and by obligating him to rebut the presumptions, tended to compel him to testify in violation of his privilege against self-incrimination.

OPINION OF THE COURT

MR. JUSTICE WHITE delivered the opinion of the Court.

Petitioner was found guilty by a jury on four counts charging violations of the federal narcotics laws. The issue before us is the validity of the provisions of 21 USC S. 174 and 26 USC S. 4704 (a) which authorize an inference of guilt from the fact of possession of narcotic drugs, in this case heroin and cocaine.

The charges arose from seizures by federal narcotics agents of two packages of narcotics. On June 1, 1967, Turner and two companions were arrested in Weehawken, New Jersey, shortly after their automobile emerged from the Lincoln Tunnel. While the companions were being searched but before Turner was searched, the arresting agents saw Turner throw a package to the top of a nearby wall. The package was retrieved and was found to be a foil package weighing 14.63 grams and containing a mixture of cocaine hydrochloride and sugar 5% of which was cocaine. Government agents thereafter found a tinfoil package containing heroin under the front seat of the car. This package weighed 48.23 grams and contained a mixture of heroin, cinchonin alkaloid, mannitol, and sugar, 15.2% of the mixture being heroin. Unlike the cocaine mixture, the heroin mixture was packaged within the tinfoil wrapping in small double glassine bags; in the single tinfoil package there were 11 bundles of bags, each bundle containing 23 bags (a total of 253 bags). There were no federal tax stamps affixed to the package containing the cocaine or to the glassine bags or outer wrapper enclosing the heroine.

Petitioner was indicted on two counts relating to the heroin and two counts relating to the cocaine. The first count charged that Turner violated 21 USC S. 174(i) by receiv-

(i) Insofar as here relevant, this section provides:

"Whoever fraudulently or knowingly imports or brings any narcotic drug into the United States or any territory under its control or jurisdiction, contrary to law, or receives, conceals, buys, sells, or in any manner facilitates the transportation, concealment, or sale of any such narcotic drug after being imported or brought in knowing the same to have been imported or brought into the United States contrary to law, or conspires to commit any of such acts in violation of the laws of the United States, shall be imprisoned.....

ing, concealing, and facilitating the transportation and concealment of heroin while knowing that the heroin had been unlawfully imported into the United States. The third count charged the same offense with regard to the cocaine seized. The second count charged that petitioner purchased, possessed, dispensed, and distributed heroin not in or from the original stamped package in violation of 26 USC S. 4704 (a)(1). The fourth count made the same charge with regard to the cocaine.

2. At the trial, the Government presented the evidence of the seizure of the packages containing heroin and cocaine but presented no evidence on the origin of the drugs possessed by petitioner. Petitioner did not testify. With regard to Counts 1 and 3, the trial judge charged the jury in accord with the statute that the jury could infer from petitioner's unexplained possession of the heroin and cocaine that petitioner knew that the drugs he possessed had been unlawfully imported. With regard to Counts 2 and 4, the trial judge read to the jury the statutory provision making possession of drugs not in a stamped package "prima facie evidence" that the defendant purchased, sold, dispensed or distributed the drugs not in or from a stamped package. The jury returned a verdict of guilty on each count. Petitioner was sentenced to consecutive terms of 10 years' imprisonment on the first and third counts; a five year term on the second count was to run concurrently with the term on the first count and a five-year term on the fourth count was to run concurrently with the term on the third count.

3. On appeal to the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, petitioner argued that the trial court's instructions on the inferences

"Whenever on trial for a violation of this section the defendant is shown to have or to have had possession of the narcotic drug, such possession shall be deemed sufficient evidence to authorize conviction unless the defendant explains the possession to the satisfaction of the jury."

Heroin, a derivative of opium, and cocaine, a product of coca leaves, are within the meaning of the term "narcotic drug" as used in 21 USC S. 174. 21 USC S. 171, referring to Int Rev Code of 1939, c 27, S. 3228 (g) added by Act of August 8, 1953, c. 894, S. 1, 67 Stat 505 (now 26 USC S. 4731 (a)).

(ii) "It shall be unlawful for any person to purchase, sell, dispense, or distribute narcotic drugs except in the original stamped package or from the original stamped package; and the absence of appropriate taxpaid stamps from narcotic drugs shall be prima facie evidence of a violation of this subsection by the person in whose possession the same may be found."

The term "narcotic drugs" is defined to include derivatives of opium and products of coca leaves. 26 USC S. 4731 (a).

that the jury might draw from unexplained possession of the drugs constituted violations of his privilege against self-incrimination by penalizing him for not testifying about his possession of the drugs. The Court of Appeals rejected this claim and affirmed, finding that the inferences from possession authorized by the statutes were permissible under prior decisions of this Court and that therefore there was no impermissible penalty imposed on petitioner's exercise of his right not to testify. (1968) 404 F2d 782. After the Court of Appeals' decision in this case, this Court held that a similar statutory presumption applicable to the possession of marihuana was unconstitutional as not having a sufficient rational basis. Leary v. United States, (1969) 395 US 6 = 23 L Ed 2d 57 = 89 S Ct 1532. We granted a writ of certiorari in this case to reconsider in light of our decision in Leary whether the inferences authorized by the statutes here at issue are constitutionally permissible when applied to the possession of heroin and cocaine.

4. The statutory inference created by S. 174 has been upheld by this Court with respect to opium and heroin. Yee Hem v. United States, (1925) 268 US 178 = 69 L Ed 904 = 45 S Ct 470; Roviaro v. United States, (1957) 353 US 53 = 1 L Ed 2d 639 = 77 S Ct 623 as well as by an unbroken line of cases in the courts of appeals.<sup>(iii)</sup> Similarly, in a case involving morphine, this Court has rejected a constitutional challenge to the inference authorized by S. 4704 (a). Casey v. United States, (1928) 276 US 413 = 72 L Ed 632 = 48 S Ct 373. (1969) 395 US 6 = 23 L Ed 2d 57 = 89 S Ct 1532 (supra), dealt with a statute,

(iii) Decisions of the Court of Appeals accepting application of the presumption to persons found in possession of opium, morphine or heroin include Gee Woe v. United States, 250 F 428 (CCA5th Cir, cert denied, 248 US 562, 63 L Ed 422, 39 S Ct 8 (1918) (smoking opium); Charley Toy v. United States, 266 F 326 (CCA2d Cir, cert denied, 254 US 639, 65 L Ed 452, 41 S Ct 13 (1920) (smoking opium); Copperthwaite v. United States, 37 F2d 846 (CCA6th Cir 1930) (morphine); United States v. Moe Liss, 105 F2d 144 (CCA2d Cir 1939) (morphine); Dear Check Quong v. United States, 82 US App DC 8, 160 F2d 251 (1947) (unspecified narcotics); Cellino v. United States, 276 F2d 941 (CA9th Cir 1960) (heroin); Walker v. United States, 285 F2d 52 (CA5th Cir 1960) (heroin); United States v. Savage, 292 F2d 264 (CA 2d Cir), cert denied, 369 US 880, 7 L Ed 2d 80, 82 S Ct 129 (1961) (heroin); United States v. Gibson, 310 F2d 79 (CA2d Cir 1962) (heroin); Lucero v. United States, 311 F2d 457 (CA10th Cir 1962), cert denied sub nom Maestas v. United States, 372 US 936, 9 L Ed 2d 767, 83 S Ct 883 (1963) (heroin); Garcia v. United States, 373 F2d 806 (CA10th Cir 1967) (heroin).

21 USC S. 176 (a), providing that possession of marihuana, unless explained to the jury's satisfaction, "shall be deemed sufficient evidence to authorize conviction" for smuggling, receiving, concealing, buying, selling, or facilitating the transportation, concealment or sale of the drug, knowing that it had been illegally imported. Referring to prior cases (iv) holding that a statute authorizing the inference of one fact from the proof of another in criminal cases must be subjected to scrutiny by the courts to prevent "conviction upon insufficient proof," (1969) 395 US 6 at p. 37 = 23 L Ed 2d 57 at 82, the Court read those cases as requiring the invalidation of the statutorily authorized inference "unless it can at least be said with substantial assurance that the presumed fact is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact on which it is made to depend." (1969) 395 US, 6 at p. 36 = 23 L Ed 2d 57 at 82. Since, judged by this standard, the inference drawn from the possession of marihuana was invalid, it was unnecessary to "reach the question whether a criminal presumption which passes muster when so judged must also satisfy the criminal 'reasonable doubt' standard if proof of the crime charged or an essential element thereof depends upon its use." (1969) 395 US, 6 at 36 n 64 = 23 L Ed 2d 57 at 82.

We affirm Turner's convictions under Ss 174 and 4704 (a) with respect to heroin (Counts 1 and 2) but reverse the convictions under these sections with respect to cocaine (Counts 3 and 4).

5. We turn first to the conviction for trafficking in heroin in violation of S. 174. Count 1 charged Turner with (1) knowingly receiving, concealing and transporting heroin which (2) was illegally imported and which (3) he knew was illegally imported. See Harris v. United States, (1959) 359 US 19 = 23, 3 L Ed 2d 597, 599 = 79 S Ct 560. For conviction, it was necessary for the Government to prove each of these three elements of the crime to the satisfaction of the jury beyond a reasonable doubt. The jury was so instructed and Turner was found guilty.

6. The proof was that Turner had knowingly possessed heroin; since it is illegal to import heroin or to manufacture it here.<sup>(v)</sup> he was also chargeable with knowing that his heroin had an illegal source. For all practical purposes, this was the Government's case. The trial judge noting that there was no other evidence of importation or of Turner's knowledge that his heroin had come from abroad, followed the usual practice and

(iv) Especially Tot v. United States, 319 US 463, 87 L Ed 1519, 63 S Ct 1241 (1943), United States v. Gancy, 350 US 63, 13 L Ed 2d 653, 85 S Ct 754 (1965), and United States v. Romano, 382 US 136, 15 L Ed 2d 210, 86 S Ct 279 (1965).

(v) See infra, nn. 12, 13.

instructed the jury — as S. 174 permits but does not require — that possession of a narcotic drug sufficient evidence to justify conviction of the crime defined in S. 174.(vi)

7. The jury, however, even if it believed Turner had possessed heroin, was not required by the instructions to find him guilty. The jury was instructed that it was the sole judge of the facts and the inferences to be drawn therefrom, that all elements of the crime must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt and that the inference authorized by the statute did not require the defendant to present evidence. To convict, the jury was informed, it "must be satisfied by the totality of the evidence irrespective of the source from which it comes of the guilt of the defendant . . . ." The jury was obligated by its instructions to assess for itself the probative force of possession and the weight, if any, to be accorded the statutory inference. If it is true, as the Government contends, that heroin is not produced in the United States and that any heroin possessed here must have originated abroad, the jury, based on its own

(vi) Under prior decisions, principally United States v. Gainey, 350 US 63, 13 L Ed 2d 658, 85 S Ct 754 (1965), such statutory provisions authorize but do not require the trial judge to submit the case to the jury when the Government relies on possession alone, authorize but do not require an instruction to the jury based on the statute and authorize but do not require the jury to convict based on possession alone. The defendant is free to challenge either the inference of illegal importation or the inference of his knowledge of that fact, or both. Harris v. United States, 359 US 19, 23, 3 L Ed 2d 597, 599, 79 S Ct 560 (1959); Roviaro v. United States, 353 US 53, 63, 1 L Ed 2d 639, 646, 77 S Ct 623 (1957); Yee Hem v. United States, 268 US 178, 185, 69 L Ed 904, 906, 45 S Ct 470 (1925); United States v. Peoples, 377 F2d 205 (CA2d Cir 1967); Chavez v. United States, 345 F2d 85 (CA 9th Cir 1965); Griego v. United States, 293 F2d 845 (CA10th Cir 1962). Even when the defendant challenges the validity of the inference as applied to his case, the instruction on the statutory inference is normally given. See, e.g., McIntyre v. United States, 350 F2d 746 (CA9th Cir), cert denied, 359 US 932, 19 L Ed 2d 360, 88 S Ct 334 (1967); United States v. Peoples supra; Vick v. United States, 113 US App DC 12, 364 F2d 379 (1962); Griego v. United States, supra; Walker v. United States, 285 F2d 52 (CA5th Cir 1960); Feinberg v. United States, 123 F2d 425 (CCA7th Cir 1941), cert denied, 315 US 801, 86 L Ed 1201, 62 S Ct 626 (1942). See also Erving v. United States, 323 F2d 674 (CA9th Cir 1963); Caudillo v. United States, 253 F2d 513 (CA9th Cir), cert denied sub nom Romero v. United States, 337 US 931, 2 L Ed 2d 1373, 78 S Ct 1375 (1953).

store of knowledge, may well have shared this view and concluded that Turner was equally well informed. Alternatively, the jury may have been without its own information concerning the sources of heroin, and may have convicted Turner in reliance on the inference permitted by the statute, perhaps reasoning that the statute represented an official determination that heroin is not a domestic product.(vii)

8. Whatever course the jury took, it found Turner guilty beyond a reasonable doubt and the question on review is the sufficiency of the evidence, or more precisely, the soundness of inferring guilt from proof of possession alone. Since the jury might have relied heavily on the inferences authorized by the statute and included in the court's instructions, our primary focus is on the validity of the evidentiary rule contained in S. 174.(viii)

(vii) In United States v. Peoples, 377 F2d 205 (CA2d Cir 1967), the jury, after deliberating for a time, asked the judge about the percentage of heroin in the United States that is produced illegally in this country. "As there was no evidence in the record concerning areas of the world where heroin is produced, the judge declined to answer the . . . inquiry . . ." 377 F2d, at 208. The defendant was found guilty by the jury; however, the Court of Appeals reversed for reasons not directly related to the trial judge's treatment of the question about the origins of heroin possessed in this country.

(viii) See Leary v. United States, 395 US 6, 31-32, 23 L Ed 2d 57, 78, 79, 89 S Ct 1532 (1969); United States v. Romano, 392 US 136, 138-139, 15 L Ed 2d 210, 212, 213, 86 S Ct 279 (1965); Bailey v. Alabama, 219 US 219, 234-235, 53 L Ed 191, 198, 199, 31 S Ct 145 (1911).

Arguably, in declaring possession to be ample evidence to convict for trafficking in illegally imported drugs, Congress in effect has made possession itself a crime as an incident to its power over foreign commerce. Cf., Ferry v. Ramsey, 277 US 88, 72 L Ed 796, 48 S Ct 443 (1923). But the crime defined by the statute is not possession and the Court has rejected this basis for sustaining this and similar statutory inferences. Leary v. United States, supra, at 34, 37, 23 L Ed 2d at 80, 82; United States v. Romano, supra, at 142-144, 15 L Ed 2d at 214-216; Harris v. United States, 359 US 19, 23, 3 L Ed 2d 597, 599, 79 S Ct 560 (1959); Roviaro v. United States, 353 US 53, 62-63, 1 L Ed 2d 639, 646, 77 S Ct 623 (1957); Tot v. United States, 319 US 463, 472, 87 L Ed 1519, 1529, 63 S Ct 1241 (1943).

The Court has also refused to accept the suggestion that since the source of his drugs is perhaps more within the defendant's knowledge than the Government's, it violates no rights of the defendant to permit conviction based on possession alone when the defen-

9. We conclude first that the jury was wholly justified in accepting the legislative judgment — if in fact that is what the jury did—that possession of heroin is equivalent to possessing imported heroin. We have no reasonable doubt that at the present time heroin is not produced in this country and that therefore the heroin Turner had was smuggled heroin.

10. Section 174 or a similar provision has been the law since 1909 (ix). For 60 years defendants charged under the statute have known that the section authorizes an inference of guilt from possession alone, that the inference is rebuttable by evidence that their heroin originated here, and that the inference itself is subject to challenge for lack of sufficient connection between the proved fact of possession and the presumed fact that theirs was smuggled merchandise. Mobile, J. and K. C. R. v. Turnipseed, (1910) 219 US 35, 43 = 55 L Ed 78, 80 = 31 S Ct 136. Given the statutory inference and absent rebuttal evidence as far as a defendant is concerned the S. 174 crime is the knowing possession of heroin. Hence, if he is to avoid conviction, he faces the urgent necessity either to rebut or to challenge successfully the possession inference by demonstrating the fact or the likelihood of a domestic source for heroin, not necessarily by his defendant refuses to demonstrate a legal source for his drugs. Leary v. United States, supra, at 32-34, 23 L Ed 2d at 79,81. See also Tot v. United States supra, at 469-470, 87 L Ed at 1525, 1526. The difficulties with the suggested approach are obvious: if the Government proves only possession and if possession is itself insufficient evidence of either importation or knowledge, but the statute nevertheless permits conviction where the defendant chooses not to explain, the Government is clearly relieved of its obligation to prove its case, unaided by the defendant, and the defendant is made to understand that if he fails to explain he can be convicted on less than sufficient evidence to constitute a prima facie case. See Tot v. United States, supra, at 469, 87 L Ed at 1525.

(ix) The original provision, applicable to opium and derivatives, was contained in the Act of February 9, 1909, c 100, S. 2, 35 Stat 614. It was revised and extended to cover cocaine and coca leaves by the Act of May 26, 1922, c 202, S 1, 42 Stat 596. The provision establishing the presumption was adopted without extended discussion or debate; it was consciously modelled on a provision of S. 3082 of the Revised Statutes (now 18 USC S. 545), originating in the Smuggling Act of 1866, c 201, S. 4, 14 Stat 179. See HR Rep No. 1878, 60th Cong, 2d Sess, 1-2 (1909) HR Rep No. 2003, 60th Cong, 2d Sess, 1 (1909). See also Sandler, The Statutory Presumption in Federal Narcotics Prosecutions, 57 J Crim L. C and P S 7 (1966).

own testimony but through the testimony of others who are familiar with the traffic in drugs, whether government agents or private experts. Over the years thousands of defendants, most of them represented by retained or appointed counsel, have been convicted under S. 174. Although there was opportunity in every case to challenge or rebut the inference based on possession, we are cited to no case, and we know of none, where substantial evidence showing domestic production of heroin has come to light. Instead, the inference authorized by the section although frequently challenged, has been upheld in this Court and in countless cases in the district courts and courts of appeal, these cases implicitly reflecting the prevailing judicial view that heroin is not made in this country but rather is imported from abroad. If this view is erroneous and heroin is or has been produced in this country in commercial quantities, it is difficult to believe that resourceful lawyers with adversary proceedings at their disposal would not long since have discovered the truth and placed it on record.

11. This view is supported by other official sources. In 1956, after extensive hearings, the Senate Committee on the Judiciary found no evidence that heroin is produced commercially in this country. (x) The Pre-

(x) In 1955 the Sub committee on Improvements in the Federal Criminal Code of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary held hearings throughout the country on the illicit narcotics traffic in this country. The subcommittee heard 345 witnesses, including government officials, law enforcement officers, and addicts and narcotics law violators; the testimony heard covers several thousand pages. Hearing on Illicit Narcotics Traffic before the Subcommittee on Improvements in the Federal Criminal Code of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, 84th Cong, 1st Sess (1955) (hereinafter cited as 1955 Senate Hearings). The evidence gathered in these hearings was the basis of S. 3760, 84th Cong, 2d Sess (1956). The Senate bill contained a section (proposed S. 1402, Tit 18) very similar to S. 174 but applicable exclusively to heroin; this proposed section included the S. 174 presumption. Another proposed section (proposed S. 1403, Tit 18, enacted with minor changes and now codified in 21 USC S. 176b) authorized special, severe penalties for the sale of unlawfully imported heroin to juveniles; this section contained a provision that possession of heroin was sufficient to prove that the heroin had been illegally imported. See S Rep No. 1997, 84th Cong, 2d Sess 30 (1956) (proposed SS. 1402, 1403). The presumption that heroin found in this country has been illegally imported was based on findings of the Committee that foreign sources supply all important quantities of heroin circulating in this country. S. Rep. No. 1997 84th Cong, 2d Sess 3-7 (1956); and this find-sident's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice stated in 1967 that "[a]ll the heroin that reaches the American user is smuggled into the country from abroad, the Middle East being the reputed primary point of origin." (xi)

12. The factors underlying these judgments may be summarized as follows: First, it is plain enough that it is illegal both to import heroin into this country (xii) and to manufacture it here; (xiii) heroin is contraband and is subject to seizure. (xiv)

13. Second, heroin is a derivative of opium and can be manufactured from opium or from morphine or codeine, which are also derived from opium. (xv) Whether heroin can ing was in turn based on ample evidence presented to the Sub committee on Improvements in the Federal Criminal Code. See 1955 Senate Hearings 90 (testimony of Commissioner Anslinger of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics).

(xi) President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice, Task Force Report: Narcotics and Drug Abuse 3 (1967) (hereinafter cited as Task Force Report). See also U. N. Commission on Narcotic Drugs, Report of the Eighteenth Session 15 (1963); S. Jeffee, Narcotics—An American Plan 12-14, 63-71 (1966).

(xii) 21 USC S. 173 makes it unlawful to import any narcotic drug except amounts of crude opium and coca leaves necessary to provide for medical and legitimate uses. In addition, for more than 45 years, it has been unlawful to import opium for the purpose of manufacturing heroin. Act of June 7, 1924, c 352, 43 Stat 657 (now codified in 21 USC S. 173). Though 21 USC S. 513 permits the Secretary of the Treasury to authorize the importation of any narcotic drug for delivery to governmental officials or to any person licensed to use the drugs for scientific purposes, the Secretary has never authorized the importation of any heroin under this provision. Brief for the United States 18, n. 12.

(xiii) the Narcotics Manufacturing Act of 1960, 21 USC Ss. 501-517, prohibits the manufacture of narcotic drugs except under a license issued by the Secretary of the Treasury for the production of an approved drug. Since heroin is not considered useful for medical purposes, no production for medical use has been authorized; heroin used in scientific experimentation is supplied entirely from quantities seized by law enforcement officials. Brief for the United States 17, n. 10.

(xiv) 21 USC S. 173. See S. Rep No. 1897 84th Cong. 2d Sess 7 (1956). In 1956, all heroin then lawfully outstanding was required to be surrendered. Act of July 18, 1956, c 629, S. 201, 70 Stat 572 (codified as 18 USC S. 1402).

(xv) The clandestine manufacture of heroin from opium or morphine is said in one report to be "child's play". Vaille and Baillieu be synthesized is disputed, but there is no evidence that it is being synthesized in this country. (xvi)

14. Third, opium is derived from the opium poppy which cannot be grown in this country without a license. (xvii) No licenses are outstanding for commercial cultivation (xviii) and there is no evidence that the opium poppy is illegally grown in the United States. (xix)

Clandestine Heroin Laboratories, 5 Bulletin on Narcotics, No. 4, Oct.-Dec. 1953 at 1, 6. The possibility of producing heroin from codeine (with a yield of about 22%) was first reported in Rapoport, Lovell and Tolbert, The Preparation of Morphine-N-methyl-C-14 73 J Am Chem Soc 5900 (1951), and was verified in Gates and Tschudi, The Synthesis of Morphine, 74 J Am Chem Soc 1109 (1952) The Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs reports that conversion of codeine into morphine (from which heroin may be produced) is relatively simple and requires inexpensive equipment but produces an extremely noxious and penetrating odor which would make concealment of such conversion operations virtually impossible. Supplemental Memorandum for the United States 2.

(xvi) The Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs reports that it knows of no case in which synthetic heroin has been produced; it reports that experiments indicate that production of synthetic morphine would be extremely difficult. Brief for the United States 20, n. 17. Amicus Burgess suggests the possibility of synthetic production of heroin but cites in support only a case involving an unsuccessful attempt to synthesize morphine, United States v. Liss, 137 F2d 995 (CCA2d Cir), cert denied, 320 US 773, 88 L Ed 462, 463, 64 S Ct 78, 79 (1943). Brief for Cleveland Burgess as Amicus Curiae 11.

(xvii) Opium Poppy Control Act of 1942, 21 USC Ss. 188-188n.

(xviii) The regulations provide that a license to produce opium poppies shall be issued only when it is determined by the Director of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs that the medical and scientific needs of the country cannot be met by the importation of crude opium. 21 CFR S. 303.5(a). Imports of crude opium have been sufficient to meet all domestic medical and scientific needs and the United States is therefore not an opium-producing country. Blum and Braunstein, Mind-Altering Drugs and Dangerous Behaviour: Narcotics, in Task Force Report App A-2, at 40. See also Brief for the United States 23, n. 25.

(xix) The most recent reported case involving a prosecution for unlawful production of opium poppies is Az Din v. United States, 232 F2d 283 (CA9th Cir), cert denied, 352 US 827, 1 L Ed 2d 49, 77 S Ct 39 (1956). Unlike the case of marihuana, see Leary, supra, at 42-43, 23 L Ed 2d at 85, 86, there are no reports of the discovery in this coun-

15. Fourth, the law forbids the importation of any opium product except crude opium required for medical and scientific purposes;(xx) importation of crude opium for the purpose of making heroin is specifically forbidden.(xxi) Sizable amounts of crude opium are legally imported and used to make morphine and codeine.(xxii)

16. Fifth, the flow of legally imported opium and of legally manufactured morphine and codeine is controlled too tightly to permit any significant possibility that heroin is manufactured or distributed by those legally licensed to deal in opium, morphine, or codeine.(xxiii)

17. Sixth, there are recurring thefts of opium, morphine, and codeine from legal channels which could be used for the domestic, clandestine production of heroin.(xxiv) It is extremely unlikely that heroin would be made from codeine since the process involvtry of fields of opium poppies requiring destruction. This fact together with the facts that opium poppies are hard to conceal because of their color and that the harvesting of opium is only economically feasible in countries with an abundant supply of cheap labor justifies a conclusion that little if any opium poppy production is going on in this country. See Brief for the United States 21-23.

(xx) 21 USC S. 173.

(xxi) 21 USC S. 173. See supra, N. 12

(xxii) In 1966, the United States imported 173, 951 kilograms of crude opium; in the same year, 715 kilograms of morphine and 30,662 kilograms of codeine were produced from imported opium. U. S. Treasury Department, Bureau of Narcotics, Traffic in Opium and Other Dangerous Drugs, Report for the Year Ended December 31, 1967, at 41 (1968).

(xxiii) The manufacture of narcotic drugs is very carefully controlled and monitored under the Narcotics Manufacturing Act of 1960, 21 USC Ss. 501-517. The subsequent distribution of narcotic drugs is controlled and monitored under the laws enforcing the taxes imposed on those dealing in narcotic drugs. 26 USC Ss. 4701-4707, 4721-4736, 4771-4776.

(xxiv) Because of the controls and reporting requirements applicable to those handling narcotic drugs, see supra, n. 23, the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs can compile accurate figures on the quantities of narcotic drugs stolen from legitimate channels. From 1964 through 1968 total thefts of medical opium per year ranged from 9.6 kilograms to 12.9 kilograms; thefts of morphine for the same period ranged from 6.7 kilograms to 10.2 kilograms per year; annual thefts of codeine for the same years ran between 30.0 kilograms and 81.8 kilograms. Brief for the United States 44. On the possibility of clandestine manufacture of heroin from opium, morphine, and codeine, see supra, n. 15.

ed produces an unmanageable, penetrating stench which it would be very difficult to conceal.(xxv) Clandestine manufacture of heroin from opium and morphine would not be subject to this difficulty; but, even on the extremely unlikely assumption that all opium and morphine stolen each year is used to manufacture heroin, the heroin so produced would amount to only a tiny fraction (less than 1%) of the illicit heroin illegally imported and marketed here.(xxvi) Moreover, a clandestine laboratory manufacturing heroin has not been discovered in many years.(xxvii)

(xxv) See supra, n. 15.

(xxvi) Using figures on the number of known addicts and the average daily dose, federal agencies estimate that roughly 1,500 kilograms of heroin are smuggled into the United States each year. Task Force Report 6. The Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs estimates that no more than about one kilogram of heroin could have been produced if all the opium stolen in any recent year had been clandestinely converted into heroin. The largest total amount of morphine stolen in a recent year would have yielded about 10.2 kilograms of heroin if it had all been converted into heroin. Brief for the United States 19, n. 15.

If it were assumed that all stolen codeine is converted into heroin, the figure for the possible clandestine domestic production of heroin would be well over 1% of the total heroin marketed in this country. Codeine can be made to yield about 22% heroin. See supra, n. 15. Applying this conversion rate to the largest annual amount of codeine stolen in the last five years (81.8 kilograms, see supra, n. 24) would give a figure of about 18 kilograms for the maximum amount of heroin that might have been produced from stolen codeine in any recent year. On the assumption that all stolen opium, morphine, and codeine is converted into heroin, the amount of heroin domestically produced from stolen opium and its derivatives would amount to no more than about 30 kilograms, only about 2% of the 1500 kilograms of heroin estimated to be illegally imported each year. Whether such a percentage, rather than the figure of less than 1% obtained by excluding codeine from consideration, would alter our conclusions need not be discussed, for the fact that the conversion process creates a stench makes it unrealistic to assume that stolen codeine is clandestinely converted into heroin. See supra, n. 15.

(xxvii) Statement by the United States Delegation on the Illicit Traffic to the Twenty-third Session of the U. N. Commission on Narcotic Drugs, January 1969, at 3. One respected work on narcotics makes the claim, without further elaboration, that "recent information" leads to the conclusion that some illicit laboratories used for the conversion of opium or morphine into heroin are located in the United States. D. Maurer & Vogel, Nar-

18. Concededly, heroin could be made in this country, at least in tiny amounts. But the overwhelming evidence is that the heroin consumed in the United States is illegally imported. To possess heroin is to possess imported heroin. Whether judged by the more likely than not standard applied in (1969) 395 US 6 = 23 L Ed 2d 57 = 89 S Ct 1532, supra, or by the more exacting reasonable-doubt standard normally applicable in criminal cases, S. 174 is valid insofar as it permits a jury to infer that heroin possessed in this country is a smuggled drug. If the jury relied on the S. 174 instruction, it was entitled to do so.(xxviii)

19. Given the fact that little if any heroin is made in the United States, Turner doubtless knew that the heroin he had came from abroad. There is no proof that he had specific knowledge of who smuggled his heroin or when or how the smuggling was done, but we are confident that he was aware of the "high probability" that the heroin in his possession had originated in a foreign country supra, (1969) 395 US 6 at 45-53 = 23 L Ed 2d 57 at p. 86-92.(xxix)

20. It may be that the ordinary jury would not always know that heroin illegally circulating in this country is not manufactured here. But Turner and others who sell or distribute heroin are in a class apart.(xxx) cotics and Narcotic Addiction 64 (3d ed 1967). However, the same statement, without elaboration, appears in the 1954 edition of the work, D. Maurer & V. Vogel, Narcotics and Narcotic Addiction 50 (1954), and this fact together with the absence of any cited basis for the claim and the lack of supporting evidence elsewhere in the literature leads us to believe that the statement, if it was ever correct, is no longer accurate.

(xxviii) It is, of course, possible for the situation to change either through the development of a simple method of synthesizing heroin or through the creation of substantial clandestine operations utilizing opium or morphine which has been illegally imported or which, though legally here, has been stolen.

(cix) The Court in Leary, 395 US, at p. 46, n. 93, 23 L Ed 2d at p. 87, employed the definition of "knowledge" in Model Penal Code S. 2.02(7) (proposed official draft, 1962): "When knowledge of the existence of a particular fact is an element of an offense, such knowledge is established if a person is aware of a high probability of its existence, unless he actually believes that it does not exist."

(cxi) Though the federal narcotics laws are in terms applicable to most possessors of illicit drugs regardless of whether the possessor is a user or a dealer, the enforcement efforts of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs are directed to the development of evidence against "major sources of supply, wholesale peddlers, interstate and international violators." Hearings on the Narcotic Rehabilitation Act of 1966 before a Special

Sub-committee of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, 89th Cong., 2d Sess 448 (1966) (hereinafter cited as 1966 Senate Hearings) (testimony of Commissioner Glordano of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics). The undisputed evidence that Turner possessed 275 glassine bags of heroin clearly shows that Turner was more than a mere user of heroin and was engaged in the distribution of the drug.

Such people have regular contact with a drug which they know cannot be legally bought or sold; their livelihood depends on its availability; some of them have actually engaged in the smuggling process. The price, supply, and quality vary widely;(xxxi) the market fluctuates with the ability of smugglers to outwit customs and narcotics agents at home and abroad.(xxxi) The facts concerning heroin are available from many sources, frequently in the popular media. "Common sense," supra, (1969) 395 US 6 at 46 = 23 L Ed 2d 57 at p. 87, tells us that those who traffic in heroin(xxiii) will inevitably become aware that the produce they deal in is smuggled, unless they practice a studied ignorance to which they are not entitled.(xxiv) We therefore have little doubt that the inference of knowledge from the fact of possessing smuggled heroin is a sound one; hence the court's instructions on the inference did not violate the right of Turner to be convicted only on a finding of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt and did not place impermissible pressure upon him to testify in his own defense.(xxv) cial Sub-committee of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, 89th Cong., 2d Sess 448 (1966) (hereinafter cited as 1966 Senate Hearings) (testimony of Commissioner Glordano of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics). The undisputed evidence that Turner possessed 275 glassine bags of heroin clearly shows that Turner was more than a mere user of heroin and was engaged in the distribution of the drug.

(xxxi) See Task Force Report 8. See also 1955 Senate Hearings 3859, 4219.

(ccii) For example, a seizure of a large amount of pure heroin in Montreal, Canada, caused a "panic" in New York City that lasted almost three months. 1966 Senate Hearings 87.

(ccxiii) Such a conclusion is also justified with regard to those users and addicts who frequently purchase supplies of heroin on the retail market. Such persons are of course aware of the variations in price and availability of the drug and of the fact that the success of anti-smuggling efforts of law enforcement officials affects the supply of heroin on the market. See supra at —, — and nn. 31, 32, 24 L Ed 2d at 673, 624.

(ccxiv) See Grigo v. United States, 298 F2d 845, 849 (CA 10th Cir 1962).

(ccv) "The same situation might present itself if there were no statutory presumption and a prima facie case of concealment with knowledge of unlawful importation were made by the evidence. The necessity of an explanation by the accused would be quite as compelling in that case as in this; but the constraint upon him to give testimony would arise there, as it arises here, simply from the force of circumstances and not from any form of compulsion forbidden by the Constitution." See Hem v. United States, 263 US 178, 185 = 69 L Ed 904, 907 = 45 S Ct 470 (1925).

His conviction on Count 1 must be affirmed.

III

21. Turning to the same S. 174 presumption with respect to cocaine, we reach a contrary result. In Erwing v. United States, 323 F2d 674 (CA 9th Cir 1963), a case involving a prosecution for dealing in cocaine, two experts had testified, one for the Government and one for the defense. It was apparent from the testimony that while it is illegal to import cocaine, coca leaves, from which cocaine is prepared, are legally imported for processing into cocaine to be used for medical purposes. There was no evidence that sizable amounts of cocaine are either legally imported or smuggled. The trial Court instructed on the S. 174 presumption and conviction followed, but the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit reversed, finding the presumption insufficiently sound to permit conviction.

22. Supplementing the facts presented in Erwing, supra, the United States now asserts that substantial amounts of cocaine are smuggled into the United States. However, much more cocaine is lawfully produced in this country than is smuggled into this country.(xxxvi) The United States concedes that thefts from legal sources, though totaling considerably less than the total smuggled.(xxvii) are still sufficiently large to make the S. 174 presumption invalid as applied to Turner's possession of cocaine.(xxviii) Based on our own examination of the facts now before us, we reach the same conclusion. Applying the more likely than not standard employed in Leary, supra, we cannot be sufficiently sure either that the cocaine that Turner possessed came from abroad or that Turner must have known that it did. The judgment on Count 3 must be reversed.(xxix)

(xxxvi) In 1966, 609 kilograms of cocaine were produced. U. S. Treasury Department, Bureau of Narcotics, Traffic in Opium and Other Dangerous Drugs, Report for the year Ended December 31, 1967, at 42 (1968), Annual seizures of cocaine at ports and borders for the years 1963 through 1967 ranged from 1.44 kilograms to 17.71 kilograms; the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs estimates that no more than about 10% of cocaine that is attempted to be smuggled into the United States is discovered and seized at ports and borders. Brief for the United States 31, n. 31.

(xxvii) From 1963 through 1968, the amount of cocaine stolen from legal channels annually ranged for 2.8 kilograms to 6.2 kilograms. Brief for the United States 44.

(xxviii) Brief for the United States 28-32.

(xxix) Since the illegal possessor's only source of domestic cocaine is that which is stolen, the United States urges that the S. 174 presumption may be valid with respect to sellers found with much larger amounts of cocaine than Turner had,

23. 26 USC S. 4704(a) (xl) makes it unlawful to purchase, sell, dispense or distribute a narcotic drug not in or from the original package bearing tax stamps. In this case, Count 2 charged that Turner knowingly purchased, dispensed and distributed heroin hydrochloride not in or from the original stamped package.(xli) Count 4 made the identical charge with respect to cocaine. Section 4704(a) also provides that the absence of appropriate tax stamps shall be prima facie evidence of a violation by the person in whose possession the drugs are found. This provision was read by the trial Judge to the jury.

24. The conviction on Count 2 with respect to heroin must be affirmed. Since the only evidence of a violation involving heroin was Turner's possession of the drug, the jury to convict must have believed this evidence. But part and parcel of the possession evidence and indivisibly linked with it, was the fact that Turner possessed some 275 glassine bags of heroin without revenue stamps attached. This evidence, without more, solidly established that Turner's heroin was packaged to supply individual demands and was in the process of being distributed, an act barred by the statute. The general rule is that when a jury returns a guilty verdict on an indictment charging several acts in the conjunctive, as Turner's indictment did, the verdict stands if the evidence is sufficient with respect to any one of the acts charged.(xlii) Here the evidence proved Turner was distributing heroin. The status of the case with respect to the other allegations is amounts which, it is claimed, are too large to have been removed from legal channels and which must therefore have been smuggled. Brief for the United States 31. We find it unnecessary to deal with these problems and postpone their consideration to another day, hopefully until the facts are presented in an adversary context in the district Courts.

(xl) See supra, n. 2.

(xli) The indictment charged that Turner possessed heroin as well as purchasing, dispensing and distributing the drug. The instructions to the jury made the same error. No objection was made in the trial Court and the issue was not raised in the Court of Appeals or in this Court. The error was harmless in any event since the possession evidence proved that Turner was distributing heroin. See infra, at —, 24 L Ed 2d at 626.

(xlii) Crain v. United States, 162 US 625, 634-636 = 40 L Ed 1097, 1099, 1100 = 16 S Ct 952 (1896); Smith v. United States, 234 F2d 385, 389-390 (CA 5th Cir 1956); Price v. United States, 150 F2d 283 (CCA 5th Cir 1945), cert denied, 326 US 789 = 93 L Ed 479 = 66 S Ct 473 (1946). See also Claassen v. United States, 142 US 140, 35 L Ed 966 = 12 S Ct 169 (1891); The Confiscation Cases, 20 Wall 92, 104 = 22 L Ed 320, 322 (1874).

irrelevant to the validity of Turner's conviction. So, too, the instruction on the presumption is beside the point, since even if invalid, it was harmless error; the jury must have believed the possession evidence which in itself established a distribution barred by the statute.

25. Moreover, even if the evidence as to possession is viewed as not in itself proving that Turner was distributing heroin, his conviction must be affirmed. True, the statutory inference, which on this assumption would assume critical importance, could not be sustained insofar as it authorized an inference of dispensing or distributing (or of selling if that act had been charged), for the bare fact of possessing heroin is far short of sufficient evidence from which to infer any of these acts. (1943) 319 US 463 = 87 L Ed 1519 = 63 S Ct 1241 supra; (1965) 382 US 136 = 15 L Ed 2d 210 = 86 S Ct 279 supra. But the inference of purchasing in or from an unstamped package is another matter.

26. Those possessing heroin have secured it from some source. The act of possessing is itself sufficient proof that the possessor had not received it in or from the original stamped package, since it is so extremely unlikely that a package containing heroin would ever be legally stamped. All heroin found in this country, is illegally imported. Those handling narcotics must register, (xlii) registered persons do not deal in heroin and only registered importers and manufacturers are permitted to purchase stamps, (xlii) For heroin to be found in a stamped package, stamps would have to be stolen and fixed to the heroin container and even then the stamps would immunize the transactions in the drug only from prosecution under S. 4704 (a); all other laws against transactions in heroin would be unaffected by the presence of the stamps. There can thus be no reasonable doubt that one who possesses heroin did not obtain it from a stamped package.

27. Even so, obtaining heroin other than in the original stamped package is not a crime under S. 4704 (a). Of the various ways of acquiring heroin, e.g., by gift, theft, bailment or purchase, only purchasing is prescribed by the section. Since heroin is a high priced product, (xlii) it would be very unreasonable to assume that any sizable number of possessors have not paid for it, one way or another. Perhaps a few acquire it by gift and some heroin undoubtedly is stolen, but most users may be presumed to purchase what they use. The same may be said for those who sell, dispense or distribute the drug. There is no reasonable doubt that a possessor of heroin who has purchased it, did not purchase the heroin in or from the original stamped package. We thus would sustain the conviction on Count 2 on the basis of a purchase not in or from a stamped package even if the evidence of packaging did not point unequivocally to the conclusion that Turner was distributing heroin not in a stamped package.

28. Finally, we consider the validity of the S. 4704 (a) presumption with respect to cocaine. The evidence was that while in the custody of the police, Turner threw away a tinfoil package containing a mixture of cocaine and sugar, which, according to the Government, is not the form in which cocaine is distributed for medicinal purposes. (xlii) Unquestionably, possession was amply proved by the evidence, which the jury must have believed since it returned a verdict of guilty. But the evidence with respect to Turner's possession of cocaine does not so surely demonstrate that Turner was in the process of distributing this drug. Would the jury automatically and unequivocally know that Turner was distributing cocaine simply from the fact that he had 1468 grams of a cocaine and sugar mixture? True his possession of heroin proved that he was dealing in drugs, but having a small quantity of a cocaine and sugar mixture is itself consistent with Turner's possessing the cocaine not for sale but exclusively for his personal use.

29. Since Turner's possession of cocaine did not comprise an act of purchasing, dispensing or distributing, the instruction on the statutory inference becomes critical. As in the case of heroin, bare possession of cocaine is an insufficient predicate for concluding that Turner was dispensing or distributing. As for the remaining possible violation, purchasing other than in or from the original stamped package, the presumption valid as to heroin is inapplicable as to cocaine.

30. While one can be confident that cocaine illegally manufactured from smuggled coca leaves or illegally imported after manufacturing would not appear in a stamped package at any time, cocaine, unlike heroin, is legally manufactured in this country; (xlii) and we have held that sufficient amounts of cocaine are stolen from legal channels to render invalid the inference authorized in S. 174 that any cocaine possessed in the United States is smuggled cocaine. Ante, at —, —, (1969) 24 L Ed 2d 610 at pp. 624, 625 = (AIR 1970 USSC 82 at p. 91)). Similar reasoning undermines the S. 4704(a) presumption that a defendant's possession of unstamped cocaine is prima facie evidence that the drug was purchased not in or from the original stamped container. The thief who steals cocaine very probably obtains it in or from a stamped package. There is a reasonable possibility that Turner either stole the cocaine himself or obtained it from a stamped package in possession of the actual (xlii) 26 USC Ss. 4721, 4722. See also 26 USC S. 4702 (a) (2) (C).

(xlii) 26 CFR SS. 151.130, 151.41.

(xlii) Heroin is reported to sell for around $5 per "bag" or packet. Task Force Report 3.

(xlii) Brief for the United States 33.

(xlii) See supra, n. 36.

thief. The possibility is sufficiently real that a conviction resting on the S. 4704 (a) presumption cannot be deemed a conviction based on sufficient evidence. To the extent that Casey v. United States, supra, is read as giving general approval to the S. 4704(a) presumption, it is necessarily limited by our decision today. Turner's conviction on Count 4 must be reversed.

31. For the reasons stated above, we affirm the judgment of conviction as to Counts 1 and 2 and reverse the judgment of conviction as to Counts 3 and 4.

It is so ordered.

SEPARATE OPINIONS

MR. JUSTICE MARSHALL, concurring.

32. I concur in the judgment of the Court, affirming petitioner's conviction on Counts 1 and 2 and reversing his conviction on Counts 3 and 4. In so doing, however, I can agree with the majority on Count 2 only insofar as it concludes that evidence of possession of 275 glassine bags of heroin proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Turner was distributing heroin in violation of 26 USC S. 4704 (a). That same evidence does not establish that he had purchased the heroin in violation of that statute.

33. The opinion of the Court establishes convincingly the virtual certainty that the heroin in Turner's possession had been illegally imported into the country. It was thus proper with regard to Count 1 for the trial judge to instruct the jurors in effect that if they found that Turner did indeed possess the drug, they could infer that the heroin had been illegally imported and impute knowledge of that fact to Turner. However, the instruction that possession is prima facie evidence of a violation of S. 4704(a) is quite different. It may be true that most persons who possess heroin have purchased it not in or from a stamped package. However, Turner himself may well have obtained the heroin involved here in any of a number of ways—for example, by stealing it from another distributor, or by manufacturing or otherwise acquiring it abroad and smuggling it into this country. Given the dangers that are inherent in any statutory presumption or inference, some of which are set out in the dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Black, I cannot agree with the wholly speculative and conjectural holding that because Turner possessed heroin he must have purchased it in violation of S. 4704(a).

Mr. JUSTICE BLACK, with whom Mr. JUSTICE DOUGLAS joins, dissenting.

34. Few if any decisions of this Court have done more than this one today to undercut and destroy the due process safeguards the federal Bill of Rights specifically provides to protect defendants charged with crime in United States courts. Among the accused's Bill of Rights' guarantees which the Court today weakens are:

1. His right not to be compelled to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury;

2. The right to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him;

3. The right not to be compelled to be a witness against himself;

4. The right not to be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law;

5. The right to be confronted with the witnesses against him;

6. The right to compulsory process for obtaining witnesses for his defense;

7. The right to counsel;

8. The right to trial by an impartial jury.

35. The foregoing rights are among those which the Bill of Rights specifically spells out and which due process requires that a defendant charged with crime must be accorded. The Framers of our Constitution and Bill of Rights were too wise, too pragmatic, and too familiar with tyranny to attempt to safeguard personal liberty with broad, flexible words and phrases like "fair trial," "fundamental decency," and "reasonableness." Such stretchy, rubberlike terms would have left judges constitutionally free to try people charged with crime under will-o'-the-wisp standards improvised by different judges for different defendants. Neither the Due Process Clause nor any other constitutional language vests any judge with such power. Our Constitution was not written in the sands to be washed away by each wave of new judges blown in by each successive political wind which brings new political administrations into temporary power. Rather our Constitution was fashioned to perpetuate liberty and justice by marking clear, explicit, and lasting constitutional boundaries for trials. One need look no further than the language of that sacred document itself to be assured that defendants charged with crime are to be accorded due process of law—that is, they are to be tried as the Constitution and the laws passed pursuant to it prescribe and not under arbitrary procedures that a particular majority of sitting judges may see fit to label as "fair" or "decent." I wholly, completely, and permanently reject the so-called "activist" philosophy of some judges which leads them to construe our Constitution as meaning what they now think it should mean in the interest of "fairness and decency" as they see it. This case and the Court's holding in it illustrate the dangers inherent in such an "activist" philosophy.

36. Commercial traffic in deadly mind, soul, and body-destroying drugs is beyond doubt one of the greatest evils of our time. It cripples intellects, dwarfs bodies, paralyzes the progress of a substantial segment of our society, and frequently makes hopeless and sometimes violent and murderous criminals of persons of all ages who become its victims. Such consequences call for the most vigorous laws to suppress the traffic as well as the most powerful efforts to put these vigorous laws into effect. Unfortunately, grave evils such as the narcotics traffic can too easily cause threats to our basic liberties by making attractive the adoption of constitutionally forbidden shortcuts that might suppress and blot out more quickly the unpopular and dangerous conduct. That is exactly the course I think the Court is sanctioning today. I shall now set out in more detail why I believe this to be true.

37. Count 1 of the indictment against Turner, as the Court's opinion asserts, and as I agree,

"charged Turner with (1) knowingly receiving, concealing and transporting heroin which (2) was illegally imported and which (3) he knew was illegally imported. For conviction, it was necessary for the Government to prove each of these three elements of the crime to the satisfaction of the jury beyond a reasonable doubt." Ante, (1969) 24 L Ed 2d 610 at p. 617 = (AIR 1970 USSC 82 at p. 85). The Court in the above statement is merely reaffirming the fundamental constitutional principle that the accused is presumed innocent until he is proven guilty and that the Government, before it can secure a conviction, must demonstrate to the jury beyond a reasonable doubt each essential element of the alleged offense. This basic principle is clearly reflected in several provisions of the Bill of Rights. The Fifth and Sixth Amendments provide that as a part of due process of law a person held for criminal prosecution shall be charged on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury and that the defendant shall "be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation." The purpose of these requirements is obviously to compel the Government to state and define specifically what it must prove in order to convict the defendant so that he can intelligently prepare to defend himself on each of the essential elements of the charge. And to aid the accused in making his defense to the charges thus defined, the Bill of Rights provides the accused explicit guarantees—the privilege against self-incrimination, the right to counsel, the right to confront witnesses against him and to call witnesses in his own behalf—all designed to assure that the jury will as nearly as humanly possible be able to consider fully all the evidence and determine the truth of every case.

38. Having invoked the above principles, however, the Court then proceeds to uphold Turner's conviction under Count 1 despite the fact that the prosecution introduced absolutely no evidence at trial on two of the three essential elements of the crime. To show this I think one need look no further than the Court's own majority opinion. The Court says:

"The proof was that Turner had knowingly possessed heroin; since it is illegal to import heroin or to manufacture it here, he was also chargeable with knowing that his heroin had an illegal source. For all practicable purposes, that was the Government's case." Ante, (1969) 24 L Ed 2d 610 at p. 617 = (AIR 1970 USSC 82 at p. 85):

"Whatever course the jury took, it found Turner guilty beyond a reasonable doubt and the question on review is the sufficiency of the evidence, or more precisely, the soundness of inferring guilt from the proof of possession alone." Ante, (1969) 24 L Ed 2d 610 at p. 618 = (AIR 1970 USSC 82 at p. 86). (Emphasis added).

These passages show that the Government wholly failed to meet its burden of proof at trial on two of the elements Congress deemed essential to the crime it defined. The prosecution introduced no evidence to prove either (1) that the heroin involved was illegally imported or (2) that Turner knew the heroin was illegally imported. The evidence showed only that Turner was found in possession of heroin.

39. I do not think a reviewing court should permit to stand a conviction as wholly lacking in evidentiary support as is Turner's conviction under Count 1. Bozza v. United States, (1947) 330 US 160, 91 L Ed 818, 67 S Ct 845. See also Thompson v. Louisville, (1960) 362 US 199 = 4 L Ed 2d 654 = 80 S Ct 624 = 80 ALR 2d 1355. When the evidence of a crime is insufficient as a matter of law as the evidence here plainly is, a reversal of the conviction is in accord with the historic principle that "independent trial judges and independent appellate judges have a most important place under our constitutional plan since they have the power to set aside convictions." United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, (1955) 350 US 11, 19 = 100 L Ed 8, 15 = 78 S Ct 1. I would therefore reverse Turner's conviction under Count 1 without further ado. Moreover, as the majority opinion and the record in this case indicate, petitioner's convictions under Counts 3 and 4 are also based upon totally insufficient evidence, for as in Count 1 the prosecution failed to introduce any evidence to support certain essential elements of the crimes charge under these Counts. They, too, should be reversed for lack of evidence.

40. The Court attempts to take the stark nakedness of the evidence against Turner on these counts and clothe it in "presumptions" or "inferences" authorized by 21 USC S. 174 and 28 USC S. 4704(a). Apparently the Court feels that the Government can be relieved of the constitutional burden of proving the essential elements of its case by a mere congressional declaration that certain evidence shall be deemed sufficient to convict. Such an idea seems to me to be totally at variance with what the Constitution requires. Congress can undoubtedly create crimes and define their elements, but it cannot under our Constitution even partially remove from the prosecution the burden of proving at trial each of the elements it has defined. The fundamental right of the defendant to be presumed innocent is swept away to precisely the extent judges and juries rely upon the statutory presumptions of guilt found in 21 USC S. 174 and 26 USC S. 4704(a). And each of the weapons given by the Bill of Rights to the criminal accused to defend his innocence—the right to counsel, the right to confront the witnesses against him and to subpoena witnesses in his favor, the privilege against self-incrimination—is nullified to the extent that the Government to secure a conviction does not have to introduce any evidence to support essential allegations of the indictment it has brought. It would be a senseless and stupid thing for the Constitution to take all these precautions to protect the accused from governmental abuses if the Government could by some sleight-of-hand trick with presumptions make nullities of those precautions. Such a result would completely frustrate the purpose of the Founders to establish a system of criminal justice in which the accused—even the poorest and most humble—would be able to protect himself from wrongful charges by a big and powerful government. It is little less than fantastic even to imagine that those who wrote our Constitution and the Bill of Rights intended to have a government that could create crimes of several separate and independent parts and then relieve the government of proving a portion of them. Of course, within certain broad limits it is not necessary for Congress to define a crime to include any particular set of elements. But if it does, constitutional due process requires the Government to prove each element beyond a reasonable doubt before it can convict the accused of the crime it deliberately and clearly defined. Turner's trial therefore reminds me more of Daniel being cast into the lion's den than it does of a constitutional proceeding. The Bible tells us Daniel was saved by a miracle, but when this Court says its final word in this case today, we cannot expect a miracle to save petitioner Turner.

41. I would have more hesitation in setting aside these jury verdicts for insufficiency of the evidence were I confident that the jury had been allowed to make a free and unhampered determination of guilt or innocence as the jury trial provisions of Art. III of the Constitution and the Sixth Amendment require. The right to trial by jury includes the right to have the jury and the jury alone find the facts of the case, including the crucial fact of guilt or innocence. See, e. g., (1955) 350 US 11, 15-19 = 100 L Ed 8, 14-16 = 76 S Ct 1. This right to have the jury determine guilt or innocence necessarily includes the right to have that body decide whether the evidence presented at trial is sufficient to convict. Turner's conviction on each count were secured only after the jury had been explicitly instructed by the trial judge that proof of Turner's mere possession of heroin and cocaine "shall be deemed sufficient evidence to authorize conviction" under 21 USC S. 174, and "shall be prima facie evidence of a violation" of 26 USC S. 4704(a). App., at 15-18. In my view, these instructions to the jury impermissibly interfered with the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to have the jury determine when evidence is sufficient to justify a finding of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

42. The instructions directing the jury to presume guilt in this case were not, of course the trial judge's own inspiration. Congress, in enacting the statutory presumptions purporting to define and limit the quantum of evidence necessary to convict, has injected its own views and controls into the guilt-determining, factfinding process vested by our Constitution exclusively in the Judicial Branch of our Government. The Fifth Amendment's command that cases be tried according to due process of law includes the accused's right to have his case tried by a judge and a jury in a court of law without legislative constraint or interference. These statutory presumptions clearly violate the command of that Amendment. Congress can declare a crime, but it must leave the trial of that crime to the courts. See (1969) 395 US 6, 55 = 23 L Ed 2d 57, 92 = 89 S Ct 1532 (concurring opinion); and United States v. Gainey, (1965) 380 US 63, 84-85 = 13 L Ed 2d 658, 670, 671 = 85 S Ct 754 (dissenting opinion).

43. It is my belief that these statutory presumptions are totally unconstitutional for yet another reason, and it is a critically important one. As discussed earlier, the Constitution requires that the defendant in a criminal case be presumed innocent and it places the burden of proving guilt squarely on the Government. Statutory presumptions such as those involved in this case rob the defendant of at least part of his presumed innocence and cast upon him the burden of proving that he is not guilty. The presumption in 21 USC S. 174 makes this shift in the burden of proof explicit. It provides that possession of narcotic drugs shall be deemed sufficient evidence to justify a conviction "unless the defendant explains the possession to the satisfaction of the jury." However, so far as robbing the defendant of his presumption of innocence is concerned, it makes no difference whether the statute explicitly says the defendant can rebut the presumption of guilt (as does the provision of 21 USC S. 174 just quoted), or whether the statute simply uses the language of "prima facie case" and leaves implicit the possibility of the defendant's rebutting the presumption (as does 26 USC S. 4704(a)). Presumptions of both forms tend to coerce and compel the defendant into taking the witness stand in his own behalf, in clear violation of the accused's Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination. This privilege has been consistently interpreted to establish the defendant's absolute right not to testify at his own trial unless he freely chooses to do so. As we observed in Malloy v. Hogan, (1964) 378 US 1, 8 = 12 L. Ed 2d 653, 659 = 84 S Ct 1489 "the privilege is fulfilled only when the person is guaranteed the right to remain silent unless he chooses to speak in the unfettered exercise of his own will. . . . .". The defendant's right to free and unfettered choice in whether or not to testify is effectively destroyed by the coercive effect of the statutory presumptions found in 21 USC S. 174 and 28 USC S. 4704(a). See (1965) 380 US 63, 71-74, 87 = 13 L. Ed 2d 658, 664, 665, 672 = 85 Ct 754 (dissenting opinions). Moreover, when the defendant declines to testify and the trial judge states to the jury as he did in this case that evidence of possession of narcotics shall be deemed sufficient to convict "unless the defendant explains the possession to the satisfaction of the jury," such an instruction is nothing less than judicial comment upon the defendant's failure to testify, a practice which we held violative of the Self-Incrimination Clause in Griffin v. California, (1965) 380 US 609 = 14 L. Ed 2d 108 = 85 S Ct 1229.

44. How does the Court respond to the grave constitutional problems raised by these presumptions of guilt? It says only that these presumptions are, in its view, "reasonable" or factually supportable "beyond a reasonable doubt." In other words, the Court has concluded that the presumptions are "fair" and apparently thinks that is a sufficient answer. It matters not to today's majority that the evidence which it cites to show the factual basis of the presumptions was never introduced at petitioner's trial, and that petitioner was never given an opportunity to confront before the jury the many expert witnesses now arrayed against him in the footnotes of the Court's opinion. Nor does it apparently matter to the Court that the factfinding role it undertakes today is constitutionally vested not in this Court but in the jury. If Congress wants to make simple possession of narcotics an offense, I believe it has power to do so. But this Court has no such constitutional power. Nor has Congress the power to relieve the prosecution of the burden of proving all the facts which it as a legislative body deems crucial to the offenses it creates.

45. For the reasons stated here, I would without hesitation reverse petitioner's conviction under Counts 1, 2, 3 and 4.

E N D.

53. In my opinion there is no force in Civil Revision No. 619 of 1967, and it must be dismissed.

Connected Civil Revision No. 1269 of 1967.

54. In this connected revision also the same point arises for consideration. The plaintiff had filed a suit for the recovery of Rs. 324 as arrears of rent of a shop for the period 1st October, 1961 to 31st October, 1962, at the rate of Rs. 27 per month. The defendant had contested the suit on the allegation that the rate of rent was Rs. 16 per month. The Judge, Small Cause Court, accepted the plaintiff's contention and decreed the suit at Rs. 27 per month. The revision applications moved before the District Judge and also before the High Court were dismissed. Suit No. 144 of 1965, out of which this revision application arises, was instituted in the year 1965 for the recovery of Rs. 972 as the rent of that very shop at the rate of Rs. 27 per month from 1st December, 1960, to 30th November, 1963. Again the defendant contested the suit on the ground that the rate of rent was Rs. 16 per month only. But his defence was held to be barred by res judicata and the plaintiff's claim was decreed. The first appeal filed against the decision of the Munsif was dismissed. The revision application is directed against the order of the appellate court.

55. I have held in the connected revision No. 619 of 1967 that the court of small causes is not a court of exclusive jurisdiction and that it is a court of preferential jurisdiction only and that its decision will not bar re-agitating the same question in any subsequent suit which the court of small causes was not competent to try. The fact that the revision application filed in the High Court against the judgment of the Small Cause Court was dismissed by the High Court will not make any difference. The matter can be re-agitated in the civil court and could not be disposed of merely on the ground that the rate of rent had already been decided by the court of small causes.

56. The revision application must, therefore, be allowed, the decree of the trial court as well as of the appellate court must be set aside, and the case should be sent back to the court of the Munsif for disposal in accordance with law in the light of the observations made above.

SINHA, J. 57. I have the advantage of having read the judgments proposed by my learned brothers Khare and Tripathi, JJ. I find myself in agreement with the conclusions arrived at by my brother Khare J. I briefly give my reasons for the same.

58. Two points are involved for consideration in this case:

(1) Whether the Courts of Small causes created under the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act are courts of exclusive jurisdiction or they are courts of preferential jurisdiction?

(2) Whether a decision given by a Court of Small Causes in a suit for arrears of rent will operate as res judicata in a suit later filed in the court of Munsif for the recovery of arrears of rent for a different period and for ejection.

Point No. 1

39. My brother Khare, J. in his proposed judgment has already made a reference to the different provisions contained in the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and to the relevant decisions to make out that a court of Small Causes is not a court of exclusive jurisdiction, but that it is only a court of preferential jurisdiction. Brother Tripathi, J. has, however, arrived at a contrary conclusion and reliance for that purpose has been placed by him particularly on Sections 15 and 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. Section 15 reads thus:

"15. (1). A Court of Small Causes shall not take cognizance of the suits specified in the Second Schedule as suits excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes.

(2) Subject to the exceptions specified in that Schedule and to the provisions of any enactment for the time being in force, all suits of a civil nature of which the value does not exceed five hundred rupees shall be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes.

(3) Subject as aforesaid, the State Government may, by order in writing, direct that all suits of a civil nature of which the value does not exceed one thousand rupees shall be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes mentioned in the order."

40. A perusal of the section, as reproduced above, would show that it is only an enabling provision and not a disabling provision. In other words, it only says that a Court of Small Causes shall have the jurisdiction to take cognizance of all suits of the nature specified in sub-clause (2) thereof. It does not say that no other court shall have jurisdiction to take cognizance of such suits. Therefore, so far as section 15 is concerned, in my view, it cannot form the basis of an argument that a Court of Small Causes is a court of exclusive jurisdiction.

41. Section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act reads thus:

"16. Save as expressly provided by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force, a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes shall not be tried by any other Court having jurisdiction within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by which the suit is triable."

42. Now, a perusal of Section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, as reproduced above, would show that it starts with the words "Save as expressly provided by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force". The effect of the above words occurring in Section 16 is that a court other than a Court of Small Causes can also take cognizance of a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes if any provision contained in the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act or in any other enactment for the time being in force permits it. Further, as has been pointed out by my brother Khare, J., in places where no Courts of Small Causes exist, the ordinary civil courts shall have the jurisdiction to take cognizance of the suits specified in Section 15 (2) of the Act.

43. Aid was sought to be taken before us from the marginal note of Section 16 for the contention that the Courts of Small Causes are courts of exclusive jurisdiction. Now, it is a well entrenched principle of interpretation of Statutes that when the language of a section is plain and unambiguous and leads to a certain conclusion, it is not permissible to take the aid of the marginal notes of the section to draw a different conclusion (See Legislation and Interpretation by Jagdish Swarup, I Edition, Pages 161-164, and Maxwell on Interpretation of Statutes, XII Edition, page 9).

44. Coming to the case law on the subject, I need not refer again to those Single Judge decisions which have already been noticed by my brothers Khare and Tripathi, JJ. in the judgments prepared by them. I would, however, add to that list the case of Smt. Anantamoni Dasi v. Bhola Nath, AIR 1941 Cal 104. In this case, a suit for rent had first been filed in the court of Small Causes. One of the contentions raised in that suit was whether the tenancy was governed by the Bengal Tenancy Act or by the Transfer of Property Act and the Court of Small Causes decided that it was governed by the Transfer of Property Act. In the subsequent suit, it was urged that the decision of the Court of Small Causes on that point operated (sic) (as a bar-Ed.) on the general principles of res judicata. Aid was sought to be taken for the contention from a Privy Council case. The contention was negatived with the following observation:—

"But, obviously, those decisions cannot be interpreted to mean that the provisions of Section 11 may be flouted or overridden or that the prohibitions or reservations express or implied in that section may be ignored. To adopt such an interpretation would lead to the impossible position where one would have to hold that the provisions of the Code have been abrogated by judicial decision."

Further on, it was said:

"None of the decisions referred to by the learned advocate for the appellant has laid down that the rule of res judicata could be invoked in a case when the Court which tried the first suit had not the jurisdiction to try the second suit."

45. For his conclusions, the learned Single Judge placed reliance on two decisions of the Privy Council in Gokul Mandar v. Pundmanind Singh, (1902) 29 Ind App 196 (PC) and Rajah Run Bahadur Singh v. Mt. Lachoo Koer, (1884) 12 Ind App 23 (PC).

46. It would thus appear that so far as Single Judge decisions are concerned, the consensus is in favour of the view that the Court of Small Causes is not a Court of exclusive jurisdiction and that the decision of that Court will not act as res judicata in a subsequent suit not cognizable by it.

47. As for the Bench decisions on this subject, it has been explicitly held in the case AIR 1959 Punj 420 that a Court of Small Causes is not a Court of exclusive jurisdiction, but that it is a Court of preferential jurisdiction.

48. Reference was, however, made before us to the Bench decision in case AIR 1954 Cal 506 in support of the contention that the decisions of a Court of Small Causes also act as res judicata. I have carefully gone through this case and I find that it is clearly distinguishable. In that case, the Court of Small Causes while giving its decision exercised a special jurisdiction under Section 16 of West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950, which read as follows:—

"Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law, a suit by a landlord against a tenant in which recovery of possession of any premises to which this Act applies is claimed, shall lie to the Courts, as set out in Schedule B, and no other Court shall be competent to entertain or try such suit." (The underlining is by me.)

49. The underlined portion in Section 16, as reproduced above, would show that it imposed a blanket bar on the jurisdiction of every other court to take cognizance of suits specified therein. Section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act is, however, differently worded. It starts with the words "Save as expressly provided by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force."

50. Because of the above words, occurring in Section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, the bar imposed by it on taking cognizance of the suits cognizable by the Courts other than Court of Small Causes is not as complete as that imposed by Section 16 of West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950. The observations made in the case of AIR 1954 Cal 506 (supra) cannot, therefore, be applicable to the case before us.

51. The only other Bench decision to which reference had been made before us in support of the contention that the Court of Small Causes is a court of exclusive jurisdiction is the case AIR 1969 Madh Pra 56. A perusal thereof reveals that for the conclusion that the Court of Small Causes is a Court of exclusive jurisdiction, the Hon'ble Judges deciding the case relied on two earlier decisions of their own High Court. No reference has been made to any of other decisions. With respect I confess my inability to agree with the view expressed by the Madhya Pradesh High Court in the said case.

52. Therefore, having given my careful thought to the relevant provisions of law and to the cases cited at the bar, I feel inclined to take the view that the Court of Small Causes is not a Court of exclusive jurisdiction. I am thus in total agreement with my brother Khare, J. on point No. 1.

Point No. 2

53. The principle that when both the cases are suits, general principles of res judicata cannot be made applicable to the previous decision finds support, in the first instance, from the case AIR 1953 SC 33. After taking into account various decisions on the subject it was observed:—

“A plea of res judicata on general principles can be successfully taken in respect of judgments of Courts of exclusive jurisdiction like revenue Courts, land acquisition Courts, administration Courts. etc.”

54. At an early stage, while commenting upon the view taken by the High Court, it was observed by the Supreme Court:

“The learned Judges posed certain questions and then attempted to answer them in view of the limited provisions of Section 11, Civil P. C., which in terms apply only to suits, forgetting for the moment, if we may say so with respect, that the doctrine of res judicata is based on general principles of jurisprudence.” (The underlining is by me).

55. From the two observations of the Supreme Court reproduced above, a conclusion can be culled to the effect that in the view of the Supreme Court when both the proceedings are suits, it is only Section 11, Civil P. C. which can be made use of and that a plea of res judicata on general principles cannot be invoked in that situation, but, if one of the two proceedings is not a suit or if both the proceedings are not suits then a plea of res judicata can be successfully taken in respect of courts of exclusive or competent jurisdiction.

56. This view further finds support from the case AIR 1962 SC 633 at p. 641. Both the cases were suits. The Supreme Court observed:

“Where Section 11 is thus inapplicable it would not be permissible to rely upon the general doctrine of res judicata. We are dealing with a suit and the only ground on which res judicata can be urged against such a suit can be the provisions of Section 11 and no other. In our opinion, therefore, there is no substance in the ground that the present suit is barred by res judicata.”

57. Another case relevant on the subject is AIR 1965 SC 1153. Reliance was placed on this case for the contention that the principles of res judicata will be applicable in that situation also where both the cases are suits. I have carefully gone through the report of this case and I confess my inability to find anything therein lending support to such a contention. On the contrary, there are certain observations in that report of the case which clearly point to the conclusion that in the opinion of the Supreme Court, principles of res judicata cannot be invoked when both the proceedings are suits. In the case before the Supreme Court, the previous decision was given in writ proceedings and the subsequent proceedings were proceedings in suit. The main point for consideration before the Supreme Court was whether the decision given in writ proceedings could operate as res judicata in the subsequent proceedings in suit. The various observations contained in the judgment should be appreciated in this background.

58. The Supreme Court in this case mainly confined itself to a consideration of the point whether section 11, Civil P. C. is exhaustive and whether in a subsequent suit, general principles of res judicata can bar the consideration of matters decided in a previous proceeding other than suits. This would be borne out from the following observations (at page 1161):—

“We would limit the consideration of the contentions raised before us to two main points, whether Section 11, Civil P. C. is exhaustive with respect to the application of the principles of res judicata in a suit and whether in a subsequent suit general principles of res judicata can bar the consideration of matters directly in issue and identical with those which had been earlier and after full contest, decided on merits by a competent Court in any other proceeding including proceedings on a writ petition” (The underlining is by me).

Further on, while considering the above point in the context of the arguments raised, the Supreme Court said:

“It appears to us that the reason for the specific provisions of Section 11 is not that the Legislature intended to bar the application of the general principles of res judicata to suits when the previous decision is arrived at in proceedings other than suits. The legislature was providing in the Code of Civil Procedure for the trial of suits over which the Civil Court was given jurisdiction under the provisions of the Code” (The underlining is by me).

Then, after making a reference to a Privy Council case, the Supreme Court said:

“Whatever the reason may be, the provisions of Section 11 will govern a previous decision in a suit barring a subsequent suit with respect to the same matter in controversy and general principle as of res judicata in such particular circumstances will neither be available to bar a subsequent suit nor will be needed.” (The underlining is by me).

59. In the above observation, the Supreme Court appears to have explicitly said that when both the proceedings are suits, it is only Section 11 which can be made use of and that general principles of res judicata cannot be made use of.

60. I am, therefore, of the view that the observations contained in the case AIR 1965 SC 1153 (supra) also lend support to the view that when both the proceedings are suits, the decision in the previous suit cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit on general principles of res judicata.

61. Thus, on the second point also, my conclusion is the same as that of my learned brother Khare, J.

62. In the result, I am of the view that Civil Revision No. 619 of 1967 should fail and Civil Revision No. 1269 of 1967 should succeed.

TRIPATHI, J.: 63. I have read the order proposed by my learned brother Khare, J. I regret my inability to agree.

64. The facts of the case are detailed in the judgment of my learned brother and I do not propose to recount them.

65. In these revisions, the following questions fall for consideration:—

(1) What is the nature of the jurisdiction exercised by a court of Small Causes. Is it exclusive or preferential?

(2) Whether the general principles of res judicata can be invoked in the context of a subsequent suit when the conditions requisite for the applicability of Section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure were not satisfied?

66. There is a divergence of judicial opinion on the first question. In a series of single Judge decisions observations have been made which indicate that a court of small causes cannot be regarded to be such a court as has exclusive jurisdiction to decide a particular matter, and therefore, its decision cannot operate as res judicata for the purposes of other suits not cognizable by it. AIR 1914 All 229, AIR 1922 All 241, AIR 1939 Nag 130, AIR 1959 Punj 420, AIR 1960 Pat 494.

67. There is another line of cases in which a contrary view has been expressed. See AIR 1937 Lah 346, AIR 1938 Lah 811 and AIR 1967 All 125, which are all single Judge decisions and in AIR 1954 Cal 506 and AIR 1969 Madh Pra 56 which are Division Bench cases, it has been held that a Court of Small Causes exercises exclusive jurisdiction.

68. I find myself in respectful agreement with the view propounded in the second category of cases for the reasons detailed below:

69. Courts of Small Causes are constituted in accordance with Section 5 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act of 1887. Section 15 of the Act provides that,

"A Court of Small Causes shall not take cognizance of the suits specified in the Second Schedule as suits excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes.

Subject to the exceptions specified in that Schedule and to the provisions of any enactment for the time being in force, all suits of a civil nature of which the value does not exceed a particular amount shall be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes."

Section 16 reads:

"Save as expressly provided by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force, a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes shall not be tried by any other Court having jurisdiction within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by which the suit is triable." The marginal note of this section reads:

"Exclusive jurisdiction of Courts of Small Causes."

The provisions of Section 16 are imperative in terms and exclude the jurisdiction of other Courts from the suits cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. In other words, as is evident from the marginal note to this section, the jurisdiction exercised by the Courts of Small Causes is exclusive in nature and there is no apparent reason why it should be held otherwise when the legislature has termed it as exclusive jurisdiction in unequivocal terms.

70. Section 17 of the Act provides a special procedure for such a Court and the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure have been made applicable only in an amended form as indicated in the aforesaid section. It is true that under Section 28 of the Act, the Court of Small Causes shall be subject to the administrative control of the District Court and to the superintendence of the High Court but that does not derogate from the fact that it is not a link in the regular hierarchy of the Civil Courts as is evident from Section 33 of the Act which provides that:

"A Court invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes, with respect to the exercise of that jurisdiction, and the same Court, with respect to the exercise of its jurisdiction in suits of a civil nature which are not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, shall, for the purposes of this Act and the Code of Civil Procedure be deemed to be different Courts."

71. It is true that Section 35 of the Act provides for the continuance of proceedings of abolished Courts but that is not in derogation of the special nature of the jurisdiction exercised by the Small Cause Courts. I am, therefore, of opinion that the jurisdiction exercised by the Small Cause Courts is not only preferential but exclusive in nature.

72. On the second question posed above, also, there is a conflict of judicial opinion but in view of the latest decision of the Supreme Court it is not necessary to notice each case on the point.

73. In 1966 All LJ 481 = (AIR 1967 All 28) and in 1967 All LJ 32 = (AIR 1967 All 442), two Division Benches of this Court have successively held that, where both the proceedings are civil suits, the general principles of res judicata have no application and the case must be confined to the four corners of Section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

74. In the case of AIR 1953 SC 33 it was, inter alia, observed:

"The condition regarding the competency of the former Court to try the subsequent suit is one of the limitations engrafted on the general rule of res judicata by Section 11 of the Code and has application to suits alone. When a plea of res judicata is founded on general principles of law, all that is necessary to establish is that the Court that heard and decided the former case was a Court of competent jurisdiction. It does not seem necessary in such cases to further prove that it has jurisdiction to hear the later suit. A plea of res judicata on general principles can be successfully taken in respect of judgments of Courts of exclusive jurisdiction, like revenue Courts, land acquisition Courts, administration Courts, etc. It is obvious that these Courts are not entitled to try a regular suit and they only exercise special jurisdiction conferred on them by the statute." This case was relied upon by a learned single Judge of this Court in 1966 All VR (HC) 782 = (AIR 1967 All 125) for holding that a decision by the Court of Small Causes will operate as res judicata by the application of the general doctrine governing the principles of res judicata.

75. In the case of Ramchandra Rao v. Ramachandra Rao, AIR 1922 PC 80 it was inter alia observed that,

"the importance of a judicial decision is not to be measured by the pecuniary value of the particular item in dispute. The principle which prevents the same case being twice litigated is of general application, and is not limited by the specific words of the Code in this respect."

76. In Janakirama Iyer's case, AIR 1962 SC 633 it was observed that:

"It has been fairly conceded that in terms Section 11 of the Code cannot apply because the present suit is filed by the creditors of the defendants 1 to 6 in their representative character and is conducted as a representative suit, under Order 1, Rule 8, and it cannot be said that defendants 1 to 6, who were plaintiffs in the earlier suit and the creditors who have brought the present suit, are the same parties or parties who claim through each other. Where Section 11 is thus inapplicable it would not be permissible to rely upon the general doctrine of res judicata. We are dealing with a suit and the only ground on which res judicata can be urged against such a suit can be the provisions of Section 11 and no other. In our opinion, therefore, there is no substance in the ground that the present suit is barred by res judicata."

77. In AIR 1965 SC 1153 the decision in Janakirama Iyer's case, AIR 1962 SC 633 (supra) was noticed and explained by Hon'ble Raghubar Dayal, J., who was delivering the majority judgment, and it was, inter alia, held that:

"The judgment of a Court of exclusive jurisdiction is to be treated as res judicata upon the same matter in another Court which will not be a Court having jurisdiction over that matter....."

and further that,

"the provisions of Section 11, Civil P. C. are not exhaustive with respect to an earlier decision operating as res judicata between the same parties on the same matter in controversy in a subsequent regular suit and that on the general principle of res judicata any previous decision on a matter in controversy, decided after full contest or after affording fair opportunity to the parties to prove their case by a Court competent to decide it, will operate as res judicata in a subsequent regular suit. It is not necessary that the Court deciding the matter formerly be competent to decide the subsequent suit or that the former proceeding and the subsequent suit have the same subject-matter. The nature of the former proceeding is immaterial."

78. In this case the minority opinion was expressed by Hon'ble Mr. Justice Subba Rao who held that the observations in Janakirama Iyer's case, AIR 1962 SC 633 that, correctly represented the law on the subject. In view of the majority decision in the aforesaid case it is obvious that on the general principles of res judicata a previous decision on a matter in controversy, decided after full contest, will operate as res judicata in a subsequent regular suit irrespective of the fact whether the Court deciding the matter formerly had or had not been competent to decide the subsequent suit.

"where Section 11 is thus inapplicable it would not be permissible to rely upon the general doctrine of res judicata. We are dealing with a suit and the only ground on which res judicata can be urged against such a suit can be the provision of Section 11 and no other",

79. The dispute between the parties in the Court of Small Causes was about the rate of rent. That dispute had been determined by that Court in a fair manner. In the subsequent suit out of which the revision applications arise, the plaintiffs, while praying for ejectment of the defendants, claimed rent for the period preceding the second suit on a different rate. In these circumstances the question arose whether the decision given by the Judge Small Cause Court about the rate of the rent will operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit filed before the Munsif for arrears of rent and ejectment. In the light of the principle laid down by the Supreme Court in the case of Gulabchand Chhotatalal, AIR 1965 SC 1153 (Supra), I am of opinion that the decision of the Judge Small Cause Court shall operate as res judicata on the question of the rate of rent both because it is a Court of exclusive jurisdiction and also on the basis of the general principles of res judicata.

80. I would, therefore, allow Civil Revision No. 619 of 1967, set aside the impugned order of the Munsif, but I will dismiss the connected Civil Revision No. 1269 of 1967.

BY THE COURT (in accordance with the opinion of the majority):

81. Civil Revision No. 619 of 1967 is dismissed.

82. Civil Revision No. 1269 of 1967 is allowed and it is directed that the case be sent back to the court of learned Munsif for decision in accordance with law in the light of the observations made by this Court.

83. We make no order as to costs in any of these revisions.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 614 (V 57 C 88)
YASHODANANDAN AND H. N. SETH, JJ.

State of U. P., Appellant v. Kunji Lal, Accused-Respondent.

Government Appeal No. 2665 of 1965,
D/- 7-4-1970 from order of Temporary S. J.
Mathura, in Criminal Appeal No. 369 of 1964.

Penal Code (1860), Section 292 — Obscenity — What constitutes — Tests laid down.

The test of obscenity is whether the tendency of the matter in question is to deprave and corrupt those whose minds are open to immoral influence and into whose hands a publication of the sort may fall. (1868) 3 QB 360, Rel. on. (Para 13)

If propagation of idea, opinion or information be for public interest or profit it would not be considered to be obscene though such a propagation in different context may be considered to be so. AIR 1965 SC 881, Rel. on. (Para 16)

In the present day society in India though great emphasis is being laid on family planning and therefore it has become absolutely necessary to impart education about sex to masses, even so the books dealing with sex matters are to be so composed that they do not cross the bounds of decency and do not tend to become pornographic. (Para 18)

Held though the books Kamasutra, Rati Rahasya, Anang Rang and Panch Sahayak published by the accused were alleged to be translations in Hindi of the works of old eminent writers, the inclusion of nude pictures of women in the books which had no connection with the subject matters discussed in the books and which were not in the original books was intended not to impart healthy sexual education to the masses but to obtain greater circulation by pandering to lascivious prurient or sexually preocious minds. The accused was therefore guilty under Section 292. (Para 20)

Cases Referred: Chronological . Paras
(1965) AIR 1965 SC 881 (V 52) =
1965 (2) Cri LJ 8, Ranjit D. Udeshi
v. State of Maharashtra 15, 17
(1959) AIR 1959 All 49 (V 46) =

1959 Cri LJ 9, State v. Thakur
Prasad 14

(1868) 3 QB 360 = 37 LJM 89,
Queen v. Hicklin 13, 15

Govt. Advocate, for Appellant; R. P. Goyal, for Respondent.

H. N. SETH, J.: This appeal has been filed on behalf of the State of U. P. against the order dated 10th September, 1965 passed by Temporary Sessions Judge, Mathura in Criminal Appeal No. 369 of 1964 acquitting the respondent Kunji Lal of an offence under Section 292, I. P. C.

2. Allegations on which the respondent was made to stand his trial under Sec. 292, I. P. C. were that he was the owner of Shyam Kashi Press and carried on the business of publication of books. On 16th of January, 1964 Sri Sarwan Singh of Police Station Kotwali reached his press and found 66 books which are alleged to be obscene. These 66 books were copies of those books which were exhibited in the case as Exs. 1 to 6. These six books were entitled:—

- (1) Kamsutra
- (2) Rati Rahasya,
- (3) Anang Rang
- (4) Panch Sahayak
- (5) Kamkala and
- (6) Suhagraat.

The respondent admitted recovery of these books. He contended that these books were not obscene. According to him they were scientific works meant to give healthy sex education to masses. They were works of eminent writers. He stated that book Ex. 1 was translation of the work of Vatsayan, Ex. 2 was translation of a book written by Koka, known as Rati Rahasya, Ex. 3 was translation of a book entitled Ananrang written by Poet Kalyan Mal, Ex. 4 Panch Sahayak was translation of a book written by Jyotishivcharya.

He stated that Vatsayan lived in the year 200 A. D. Koka in 200 A. D. Jyotishivcharya in 1200 A. D. and Kalyanmal in 1600 A. D. Works of these eminent writers have been translated in several languages. The books Exs. 1 to 4 were meant for married people and were to be used by private circulation. The language used in these books is terse and cannot be understood by children and ordinary persons. Object of these books is to remove the dissensions between husband and wife for proper reproduction of the progeny and to make the married life happy. The books Exs. 5 and 6 were also meant for married people only. According to him he forwarded copies of each of these books to the Collector as required by Press and Registration Act, and to the National Library of Calcutta. Had the books been considered to be obscene an objection to this effect should have been raised by the authorities much earlier.

3. Only point that arises for consideration in this case is whether the books in question were obscene or not. If they are held to be obscene, it is conceded that all the ingredients for an offence under Section 292, I. P. C. would be made out and the respondent would be guilty of an offence under that section.

4. Learned Magistrate recorded the following findings in respect of each of the six books.

(1) Ex. 1 — Kamsutra. Its contents were not obscene except the pictures of nude women at pages 40, 41 and 80-81. These pictures are obscene and have no relevance to the text.

(2) Ex. II — Rati Rahasya. This book also contains pictures of nude women which has no relevance to the text and were obscene. Moreover at pages 127-130, 141-146 and 161-162, the author had discussed methods for subjugating woman, to increase the retention power in man during cohabitation. These passages were also obscene.

(3) Ex. III — Anang Rang. The book also contained pictures of nude women which had no relevance to the subject hence rendered the book obscene. These pictures were printed at pages 16-17, 48-49. At pages 51-60 the author had given some prescriptions which deal with increasing retention power of male during cohabitation, which was most unscientific. Any suggestion made in the book for making a woman reach her climax before the man during cohabitation was for se (sic) obscene. Similarly the description given by the author at pages 76 to 82 to overpower woman was also obscene. The book was therefore held to be obscene.

(4) Ex. IV. — Panch Sahayak. — Printing of the pictures of nude women which had no relevance to the subject matter and the prescription given at pages 59-80 which are unnatural and unscientific, meant for widening and narrowing the mouth of vagina for purposes of obtaining greater satisfaction during sexual intercourse and increasing the size of the male organ are certainly not matters which deal with healthy sexual education. These things have a tendency to deprave and corrupt the minds of young men in whose hands the book may fall. The book was therefore held to be obscene.

(5) Ex. V. Kamkala — Except for the nude pictures which have no bearing on the subject matter, there was nothing else in the book which could be described as obscene. Because of the pictures this book was held to be obscene.

(6) Ex. VI. Suhagraat — There is nothing in this book which could be described as obscene.

The learned Magistrate accordingly held the books Exs. 1 to V to be obscene and held the respondent guilty of an offence under Section 292, I. P. C. and sentenced him to pay a fine of Rs. 500. He also directed that copies of the book 'Suhagraat' be returned to the respondent and rest of the books destroyed after the period of filing an appeal against his order was over.

5. The respondent went up in appeal and contended that so far as nude pictures in these books were concerned they were 'in-offensive and were such as were commonly found in magazines. They could not be said to be obscene. These books were translation from Sanskrit diction of the works of well-known authors on the subject. The prescriptions mentioned therein, even if unscientific from the point of view of western methods, were well known Ayurved prescriptions and this description could not render the book obscene as they could not have a tendency to deprave and corrupt the morals of young men. It was also contended that the books had been submitted to the Government for the sole purpose of scrutiny and if no objection was taken to it it meant that the declaration had been given that the books were not obscene. In respect of the books that had been marked, "for the use of married people only", the finding that some one may hand them over to young men was purely conjectural and did not affect the bona fides of the publication.

6. After discussing the case law on the subject the learned Sessions Judge came to the conclusion that pictures of the nude women which appear to be reprints from various health magazines commonly sold in the market did not fulfil the test of obscenity as laid down in various authorities. He held that there was no suggestive element in the pictures which may be provocative of the lustful ideas so as to deprave or debauch the reader in all events and even though each of these pictures were out of context, they could not be said to be obscene for the reason mentioned above.

7. According to the learned Sessions Judge, these books dealt with sex matters, but there was nothing in the language used in those books so as to excite sexual feelings or to give rise to lustful ideas. So far as the book Kamsutra was concerned mere description of unnatural method for obtaining sexual gratification could not render the book obscene. He referred to the works of authorities like Vatsayan Kam Sutra published by D. B. Tarpurwala, Bombay, Kamsutra by Upadhya and others, and pointed out that similar methods have been advocated in those books. He therefore held that the books Kamsutra could not be held to be obscene.

8. The book Rati Rahasya was marked for private circulation only. In this book certain Mantras were mentioned from pages 127-130 for subjugating woman. They were derived from old Sanskrit Text and were translated into Hindi. According to the learned Judge these Mantras may be foolish and may not have any efficacy; but as there was nothing in the language to render them lewd or libidinous so as to suggest impure ideas in the minds of the individual who may read them. Recitation of these Mantras therefore could not be said to be obscene. Similarly at pages 141 to 146 certain recipes were mentioned for increasing the retention power. Again there was nothing in the language used by describing the recipes to render them obscene. According to the learned Judge the language used was full of restraint and there was nothing therein to suggest lustful ideas. He was also of opinion that the treatment of the subject of importance at pages 161 to 162 was also not such as to render this passage as obscene.

9. In the book entitled 'Anangrang' at pages 51 to 60 certain prescriptions were given for increasing retention power in men during cohabitation. The learned Judge felt that merely because these prescriptions may be considered to be unscientific that by itself could not be a ground for holding the book to be obscene. Similarly the methods mentioned at pages 76 to 86 for overpowering the woman could also not be said to be obscene as there was nothing lustful in the language used therein.

10. The book 'Panch Sahayak' was marked for married people only but certain prescriptions were mentioned at pages 89 to 80 which may be unscientific. But there was nothing in the language used therein to suggest libidinous or lustful thoughts. He therefore held that none of the six books could be said to be obscene and acquitted the accused of an offence under Sec. 292, I. P. C.

11. State of Uttar Pradesh has now come up in appeal before us. In this appeal it was contended that the books Ex. I to Ex. V were in fact obscene and the finding of the learned Sessions Judge to the contrary is erroneous.

12. When the appeal came up for hearing before a Bench of this Court, it was discovered that the books that were the subject matter of the charge were missing from the record. In the absence of these books it was not possible to proceed with the hearing of the appeal. Efforts were therefore made to get the record reconstructed and the respondent filed before the court one copy each of the four books Ex. I to Ex. 4. He did not have in his possession any copy of the book entitled Kamkala Ex. V. The book 'Suhagraat' Ex. VI had not been held to be obscene by the Magistrate and the State did not question the correctness of the finding in any appropriate proceeding. We have therefore heard the arguments only in respect of books Exs. 1 to 4. In the absence of the book 'Kamkala' it is not possible for us to test the conclusion of the learned Sessions Judge that the book was not obscene.

13. The word "obscene" used in Section 292, I. P. C. has not been defined anywhere in the Code. A long string of authorities of various High Courts in India seems to adopt the meaning given to this word by Cockburn, C. J., in Hicklin's case reported in (1868) 3 QB 360 at p. 371. Test laid down by Cockburn, C. J. is in the following words:

"The test of obscenity is this, whether the tendency of the matter charged as obscenity is to deprave and corrupt those whose minds are open to such immoral influence and into whose hands a publication of this sort may fall."

14. In the case of State v. Thakur Prasad, reported in AIR 1959 All 49, a Division Bench of this Court observed as follows:—

"The word 'obscene' is not defined in the Penal Code, but it must be taken as meaning offensive to chastity, modesty, expressing or personating to the mind or view something that decency, purity or decency forbids to be expressed. The test of obscenity is this, whether the tendency as obscene is to deprave and corrupt those whose minds are open to such immoral influence and in whose hands a publication of this sort may fall."

15. Meaning and scope of the word obscene as used in Section 292 of the Penal Code came up for consideration before the Supreme Court of India in the case of Ranjeet D. Udeshi v. State of Maharashtra reported in AIR 1965 SC 881, in connection with the question whether the provisions of Section 292, I. P. C. contravene the fundamental right guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (a) of the Constitution or not. While commenting on the test of obscenity as laid down in Hicklin's case, (1868) 3 QB 360 their Lordships of the Supreme Court observed at page 888 of the report as follows:—

"But even if we agree thus far, the question remains still whether the Hicklin test is to be discarded?" We do not think that it should be discarded. It makes the Court the judge of obscenity in relation to impugned book etc., and lays emphasis on the potentiality of the impugned object to deprave and corrupt by immoral influence. It will remain a question as to be decided in each case and it does not compel an adverse decision in all cases."

Their Lordships however, made it clear that it is the obscenity in speech and expression which is offensive to modesty and decency, which is not protected by Art. 19(1) of the Constitution. The freedom of speech and expression is subject to reasonable restrictions, which may be thought necessary in the interest of the general public and such interest is the interest of general public (public decency — Ed.) and morality. It is the interest of general public which is of paramount importance and in this view of the matter, reasonable restrictions in the exercise of this right can be imposed. In this connection their Lordships observed as follows:—

"Speaking in terms of Constitution it can hardly be claimed that obscenity which is offensive to modesty or decency is within the constitutional protection given to free speech or expression because the Article dealing with the right itself excludes it. That cherished right on which our democracy rests is meant for the expression of free opinion to change political or social conditions or for advancement of human knowledge. This freedom is subject to reasonable restrictions which may be thought necessary in the interest of general public and one such interest is the interest of public decency and morality. Section 292, Indian Penal Code manifestly embodies such a restriction because the law against obscenity, of course, correctly understood and applied, seeks no more than to promote public decency and morality. The word obscenity is not really vague because it is a word which is well understood even if persons differ in their attitude to what is obscene and what is not. Lawrence thought James Joyce's Ulysses to be an obscene book deserving suppression, but it was legalised and he considered James Joyce to be pornographic but very few people will agree with them.

The former he thought so because it dealt with excretory functions and the latter because it dealt with sex repression (see sex Literature and Censorship pp. 26, 201). Condemnation of obscenity depends as much upon the mores of the people as upon the individual. It is always a question of degree or as the lawyers are accustomed to say of where the line is to be drawn. It is, however, clear that obscenity itself has extremely poor value in the propagation of idea, opinion and information of public interest or profit. When there is propagation of ideas opinions and informations of public interest or profit the approach to the problem may become different because then the interest of society may tilt the scale in favour of free speech and expression. It is thus that "books on medical science with intimate illustrations and photographs, though in a sense immoral, are not considered to be obscene, but the same illustration and photograph collected in book form without the medical text would certainly be considered to be obscene. Section 292, Indian Penal Code dealt with obscenity in this sense and cannot thus be said to be invalid in view of second clause of Article 19."

While dealing with the test laid down in Hicklin's case their Lordships observed as follows:—

"The important question is whether this test of obscenity squares with the freedom of speech and expression guaranteed under the Constitution, or it needs to be modified and, if so, in what respect. The first of these questions invited the Court to reach a decision on a constitutional issue of most far-reaching character and we must beware that we may not lean too far away from the guaranteed freedom. The laying down of the true test is not rendered any the easier because art has such varied facets and such individualistic appeals that in the same object the insensitive sees only obscenity because his attention is arrested, not by the general or artistic appeal or message which he cannot comprehend, but by what he can see, and the intellectual sees beauty and art but nothing gross. The Indian Penal Code does not define the word 'obscene' and this delicate task of how to distinguish between that which is artistic and that which is obscene has to be performed by Courts, and in the last resort by us. The test which we evolve must obviously be of a general character but it must admit of a just application from case to case by indicating a line of demarcation not necessarily sharp but sufficiently distinct to distinguish between that which is obscene and that which is not. None has so far attempted a definition of obscenity because the meaning can be laid bare without attempting a definition by describing what must be looked for. It may, however, be said at once that treating with sex and nudity in art and literature cannot be regarded as evidence of obscenity without something more. It is not necessary that the angles and saints of Michael Angelo should be made to wear breeches before they can be viewed. If the rigid test of treating with sex as the minimum ingredient were accepted hardly any writer of fiction today would escape the fate Lawrence had in his days. Half the book-shop would close and the other half would deal in nothing but moral and religious books, which Lord Campbell boasted was the effect of his Act."

16. Aforesaid discussion by the Supreme Court indicates that their Lordships of the Supreme Court were of opinion that if propagation of idea, opinion, or information be for public interest or profit it would not be considered to be obscene though such a propagation in different context may be considered to be so. It is in this view of the matter that intimate illustrations in photographs though in a sense immodest are not considered obscene if included in books of medical science. The same illustrations or photographs collected in a book bereft of its medical text may be considered to be obscene. Similarly something which on the face of it may be immodest if contained in a work or art or literature may not be considered to be obscene. The Court has to apply and consider each work at a time, but this examination is not to be done in a spirit of finding fault with the work. If such an attitude towards art and literature is adopted it would make the Court a Board of Censor. An overall view of the matter alleged to be obscene in the setting of the whole work is necessary. But the obscene matter must be considered by itself and separately to find out whether it is so gross and its obscenity so decided that it is likely to deprave and corrupt those whose minds are open to influence of this sort and into whose hands the book is likely to fall. In this connection the interest of our contemporary society and particularly the influence of the book on it must not be overlooked. Where obscenity and art are mixed art must be so preponderating as to throw the obscenity into a shadow or the obscenity so trivial or insignificant that it can have no effect and may be overlooked. In other words treating the sex in a manner offensive to public decency and morality judged by our national standard and considered likely to pander to lascivious prurient or sexually precocious minds, must determine the result. A balance has to be struck between freedom of speech and expression and public decency and morality but when the latter is substantially transgressed the former must give way.

17. Further while considering what would constitute obscenity in dealing with the subject-matter of sex their Lordships of the Supreme Court in the case of AIR 1965 SC 851 at p. 859 observed as follows:—

"In other words, treating with sex in a manner offensive to public decency and morality (and these are the words of our fundamental law), judged by our National standards and considered likely to pander to lascivious, prurient or sexually precocious minds, must determine the result. We need not attempt to bowdlerize all literature and thus rob speech an expression of freedom. A balance should be maintained between freedom of speech and expression and public decency and morality, but when the latter is substantially transgressed the former must give way."

18. It should also be borne in mind that there is some difference between obscenity as such and pornography. Pornography denotes writings, pictures etc. intended to arouse sexual desire while the former may include writing etc., not intended to do so, but to arouse such desire which have a tendency. Both of course offend against public decency and morals but pornography is obscene in a more aggravated form. Regarding pornographic pictures and writings there can never be a doubt that they would be obscene within the meaning of Section 292 of the Indian Penal Code. Practical difficulty arises in applying the test laid down in Hicklin's case as explained by the Supreme Court only in cases where it is doubtful if the writing or photograph was intended for arousing erotic feelings, but they may have a tendency towards it. It is in such cases alone that the Courts are required to go into the question of finding whether the subject-matter charged as obscene has a tendency to deprave and corrupt whose minds are open to such immoral influence and in whose hands the publication is likely to fall. If evidence on the record indicates that a writing or a picture was intended to arouse sexual desire the further enquiry, about its likely effect on the persons who are open to immoral influences and in whose hands the publication is likely to fall, becomes unnecessary. In the present day society in India a book or a publication which deals with such matters cannot per se be said to be obscene. Great emphasis is being laid on family planning and in that connection it has become absolutely necessary to impart education about sex to the masses. Even so the books dealing with sex matters are to be so composed that they do not cross the bounds of decency and do not tend to become pornographic. Even a slight variation in the treatment of the subject in a book dealing with sex matters, from the correct path may have the effect of converting it into an obscene book.

19. It is in the light of above discussion that we have to see whether the four books, object of which is to place before its readers various methods for obtaining sexual gratification are obscene or not. The respondent claims to have translated the well known works of Vatsyana, Kamasutra, Koka's Rati Rahasya, Kalyanmal's Anang Rang and Ravishankar's Jyotishacharya Panch Sahayak in Hindi for the benefit of married people. All these books have been divided into various chapters and have classified men and women according to their sexual potentiality. They describe how the man and woman should approach and some prescriptions have also given for obtaining greater sexual prowess. Needless to say that treatment of such a subject has got to be very cautious and circumspect as even slightest deviation from the path of rectitude in treating this subject will certainly have a tendency to deprave and corrupt those whose minds are open to immoral influences.

20. Although these books purport to be translation of the works of old writers, we find inherent evidence in them to show that the author did not intend to keep upto the path of a absolute rectitude in dealing with such a delicate subject. His intention did not appear to be to impart healthy sexual education to the masses but was to obtain greater circulation of these books by pandering to lascivious prurient or sexually precocious minds. The respondent admitted that the pictures which had been included in the books had no connection or reference to the subject-matters which have been discussed in the books. He also admitted that the original books which he translated into Hindi did not contain any nude pictures. He tried to explain this by saying that when the original books were written there was no photography at that time. The pictures in all these books show nude women in various poses. Some of them also show men and women embracing each other in a particular manner. One of the pictures depicts a man peeping towards a scantily clad, practically nude woman.

It is difficult to agree with the learned Sessions Judge that the expression of women and their poses in the pictures are not suggestive at all. The accused in his cross-examination admitted that he would not display such nude pictures in his house. When such pictures are included in a book which deals with intimate side of sex life, without any reference to the subject-matter, the only inference that can be drawn is that they have been included therein with an idea to arouse sexual desire in the readers. The author used these pictures as a cheap medium for obtaining greater circulation of the books. In the setting of the whole book the pictures included in all of them are certainly pornographic and as such obscene.

21. After considering the way in which the subject-matter of sex has been dealt with in all these books we very much doubt that these books serve any public good. The matter has not been dealt with on any scientific lines and it cannot be considered to be a piece of literature or art. We are also doubtful whether these books are calculated to serve any useful purpose. Since however we have come to the conclusion that the intention of the publisher in publishing these books was to arouse erotic feeling in the minds of the readers, as is evidenced by inclusion of the photographs, it is not necessary to go into the question whether the books would be obscene even if the objectionable pictures had not been there.

22. The inclusion of these pictures certainly render all the four books obscene.

23. The book entitled Kamsutra was marked "for the benefit of married men and women only". Rati Rahasya by Koka was marked by private circulation, absolutely confidential and for the benefit of married men and women. Similarly the book Panchsahayak was meant for married people only and absolutely confidential. No such remark was contained on the book Anang Rang. It was argued that because of these markings the books were meant for use of married people only and the pictures and the subject-matter of these books was not such which would produce any improper thought in their minds and as such these books could not be said to be obscene.

We are unable to agree with this argument. The markings made on these books are meaningless. Some of these books were being openly sold in market and no steps whatsoever had been taken to see that these books should reach the hands of married people only for whose benefit they purport to have been written. They were priced at Rs. 3/- to Rs. 5/- only and were most certainly likely to fall in the hands of young adolescent boys and girls. The markings made on these books also indicate that the author was conscious of the pernicious effect that these books may have on the minds of unmarried adolescents. We also do not agree that the photographs of the nature contained in these books were not intended to generate sexually impure and filthy ideas in the minds of the readers whether they be married or unmarried. In our opinion even if reasonable steps had been taken by the publisher to see that the books circulated to married people only, these books still would have been pornographic in nature.

24. We therefore, disagree with the learned Sessions Judge and hold that in the circumstances and setting in which the pictures in the four books have been published certainly render them obscene. These books were meant to pander to the prurient taste of the public and to appeal to their baser instinct. These books again are not books of scientific nature and they cannot be described as works of literature either. They are merely collections of certain verses in Sanskrit by writers like Koka, Vatsayan, Jyotishcharya, Kalyan Mal into Hindi. The argument that the books are translations of the works of well known writers does not in our opinion afford a defence to the respondent in publishing an obscene book. In the first instance the petitioner himself admitted that the Sanskrit rendering of the books of the well known authors did not contain any nude or objectionable photographs. In the second place, it may be that the treatment of the subject by the well known writers at the time when they wrote their books may not be considered to be obscene in the setting of the society as it existed then but the circulation of their ideas in the context of the contemporary society may be considered to be obscene. It is also possible that a book which may be considered to be obscene in the contemporary social condition may not be so considered at some future date.

We therefore feel that the argument that the books are translation of the various works of authors of the past would by itself be not a defence to the charge of obscenity if the translated matter has a tendency to pander to the prurient taste in the context of the contemporaneous society. Since we have come to the conclusion that the very object with which these books have been published was to pander to the prurient taste of the public and to appeal to their baser instinct an offence under Section 292 I.P.C. has been committed by the respondent, and it is not necessary to express any final opinion on the question whether or not the treatment of subject matter of the book by itself is obscene or not.

25. Accordingly, we allow the appeal, set aside the order of the learned Sessions Judge acquitting the respondent. We convict him for an offence under Section 292 I. P. C. Since he is being punished on account of four books instead of five books as was done by the learned Magistrate, we sentence him to pay a fine of Rs. 400/-. In default of payment of fine the respondent shall undergo rigorous imprisonment for a period of one month. We restore the order made by the learned Magistrate regarding disposal of books Ext. I to Ext IV and their copies.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 620 (V 57 C 69)

FULL BENCH

SATISH CHANDRA, T. P. MUKERJEE
AND R. L. CULATI, JJ.M/s. Raghunandan Prasad Mohan Lal, Bareilly, Petitioner v. The Income Tax Appellate Tribunal and others, Opposite Parties.Civil Misc. Writ No. 789 of 1968, D/- 3-11-1969.

(A) Constitution of India, Article 226 — Extraordinary jurisdiction — Exercise of — Writ petition challenging penalty proceedings — Validity of assessment order cannot be challenged — Statutory remedy cannot be allowed to be by-passed — Income-tax Act (1922), Section 66.

When Parliament has enacted that a question of law ought to be raised before the Tribunal before the High Court can give an opinion on it, it will not be right for the High Court to circumvent the legislative mandate, by exercising the discretionary jurisdiction in favour of an assessee who did not raise the question before the Tribunal, either in the assessment or the penalty proceedings, and who has not given any explanation for the omission. A litigant is not entitled to raise a question of jurisdiction for the first time in a writ petition unless he satisfactorily explains why he did not raise the plea before the appropriate authority.

(Para 52)

Where a writ petition is filed for challenging the penalty proceedings, the petitioner cannot be allowed to raise the validity of the assessment order which formed the basis of the penalty proceedings. When remedy by way of appeal to Tribunal and reference to High Court is available, the petitioner cannot by-pass that procedure.

(Paras 6, 52)

(B) Constitution of India, Article 20 — Penalty proceedings under Section 297 (2) (g) of Income-tax Act (1961) — Article 20 is not applicable.

Article 20 contemplates proceedings of the nature of criminal proceedings and the prosecution in this context means an initiation of proceedings of a criminal nature. The first part of Article 20 (1) prohibits a conviction while the second part deals with penalty that may be inflicted on conviction by way of punishment. Article 20 affords protection against conviction and punishment for an offence by a court of law. Penalties imposed by the Income-tax authorities cannot be regarded as punishment awarded for an offence. In fact, prosecution for an offence under the Income-tax Act is provided separately under the two Acts. Section 52 of the 1922 Act provides for a prosecution and conviction before a Magistrate with regard to offences enumerated therein. Similar provisions are to be found in the new Act of 1961 in Chapter 22. AIR 1953 SC 825, Foll. (Paras 9, 10, 55)

It is well known that the Legislature can impose both a criminal as well as civil sanction for the same act or omission. Invocation of one does not exclude resort to the other. Penalty proceedings are revenue in nature, to which Article 20 does not apply. (1967) 64 ITR 669 (Ker), Rel. on; (1938) 303 US 391 and (1943) 317 US 492, Ref. to.

(Paras 56, 57)

(C) Constitution of India, Article 14 — Income-tax Act (1961), Section 297 (2) (a), (b) — Classification between Clauses (a) and (b) — Being based on date of filing return, it is well defined — No violation of Art. 14.

(Per Full Bench):—

Looking at Clauses (a) and (b) of Section 297 (2) it becomes immediately apparent that a classification was made amongst the assessee whose cases for the assessment years prior to the year 1962-63 were pending when the new Act came into force repealing the old Act. The classification is based on the date of filing of the returns. Those assessee who had filed their returns prior to 1st April, 1962 were to be dealt with for the purposes of assessment under the old Act, while those who had filed their returns after that date were to be dealt with under the new Act. This classification for purposes of assessment appears to be well defined and reasonable even though the better basis for the classification would have been the commencement of the assessment proceedings. The assessment proceedings under the Income-tax Act commence against an assessee when he files voluntary return or when a notice is issued to him calling for a return. Had that basis been adopted all pending assessments would have been dealt with under the old Act. However, it was for the Parliament to have chosen the basis of the classification and as, in its wisdom, it chose the date of the filing of the return to be the dividing line, no fault can be found with such a classification. (Para 12)

(D) Constitution of India, Article 14 — Income-tax Act (1961), Section 297 (2) (f) and (g) — Classification between Cls. (f) and (g) — It is based on date of completion of assessment — No nexus with object to be achieved — Clause (g) is ultra vires — (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All), Overruled; (1967) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) and AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 and C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), Dissented from.

Per Majority (Satish Chandra, J. contra):—

The classification brought about by Cls. (f) and (g), is based on the date of the completion of the assessment, which has no rational nexus with the object sought to be achieved. Clause (g) of Section 297 (2), therefore, is discriminatory and ultra vires Article 14. (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All), Overruled; (1967) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) and AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 and C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967,

D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), Dissented from. (Case law discussed). (Paras 14, 21, 33)

It is open to the legislature to form a classification on the basis of time just as much as it can have a basis on geographical or territorial considerations. But if the legislature brings about a classification on the basis of time, the point of time selected must be for some rational and intelligible consideration. A purely arbitrary or capricious selection of time cannot possibly form the basis of a rational classification. (Para 15)

The object of penalty provisions in a taxing statute like the Income-tax Act is to punish and prevent evasion of tax. The measure of penalty depends upon the nature and gravity of the default committed by an assessee. Under both the acts the quantum of penalty varies according to the tax which is quantified by an assessment order. The imposition of penalty has thus some relation to the assessment of tax, but the time of making the assessment has no bearing whatsoever upon the penalty itself. The default for which the assessee is to be penalised is neither aggravated nor mitigated by the time when the assessment comes to be made. The time for making the assessment is neither an attribute or a quality of the assessee nor does it have any relation to the nature or gravity of the default for which penalty is to be imposed. In fact the making of an assessment order is a fortuitous circumstance over which the assessee has no control. (Para 16)

Section 297 (2) (g) is ultra vires also on the ground that Section 271 of the 1961 Act, which contains penal provisions and which is made applicable to cases falling under Clause (g) of Section 297 (2) is more harsh and stringent than its corresponding section i. e., Section 28 of the 1922 Act. (Para 27)

(E) Income-tax Act (1961), Sections 271, 297 (2) (g) — Institution of penalty proceedings on basis of assessment under Income-tax Act (1922) — Case falling under Cl. (g) of Section 297 (2) — Section 271 is, however, inapplicable — Section 297 (2) (g) is not charging section — Expression “any proceeding under this Act” in Section 271 — Interpretation — (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All), Overruled; (1967) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) and AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 and C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), Dissented from.

Per Majority (Satish Chandra, J. contra):— Where the assessment is made under the 1922 Act and the appeal is also instituted and disposed of under the 1922 Act, even assuming that Clause (g) of Section 297 (2) is intra vires, Section 271 is inapplicable in terms and no penalty can be imposed under that section, when the assessment is made under the old Act. The condition precedent for an action under Section 271 is the satisfaction of the officer concerned in the course of proceedings under the new Act. Section 297 (2) (g) is not a charging section and hence penalty cannot be imposed by its own force. Notwithstanding, the use in this provision of the expression “any such penalty may be imposed under this Act”, it is merely an enabling provision. It provides for neither the measure of penalty nor does it contain the defaults in respect of which penalty may be levied nor indeed does it specify the authorities empowered to levy the penalty. All these provisions are to be found in Chapter 21 which becomes applicable by virtue of this provision. (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All), Overruled; (1967) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) and AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 and C. M. W. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), Dissented from. (Case law discussed.) (Paras 34, 35, 38)

(F) Constitution of India, Article 226 — Natural justice — Institution of penalty proceedings under inapplicable or unconstitutional law — Proceedings must be quashed — Plea that penalty imposed is less than minimum prescribed under law is not tenable — Income-tax Act (1961), S. 297 (2) (g).

Justice has to be done in accordance with law. If the penalty has been imposed with the aid of a provision which is unconstitutional and under a law which is inapplicable, the penalty is clearly unauthorised and without jurisdiction and cannot be upheld even if the amount of penalty happens to be less than the minimum prescribed under the law. Where the penalty is imposed under Cl. (g) of Section 297 (2) of Income-tax Act (1961), and Clause (g) is ultra vires, the question as to whether the penalty could be levied under the old Act does not arise and need not be decided. Moreover, it is not possible to speculate as to what would have been the amount of penalty if the assessee had been proceeded against under the old Act. (Para 41)

Cases Referred :	Chronological	Paras
(1969) AIR 1969 SC 701 (V 56) = Criminal Appeals Nos. 130 to 133 of 1968, D/- 12-12-1968, T. S. Baliah v. T. S. Rangachari		32, 65
(1969) Matter No. 213 of 1966, D/- 5-3-1969 = 75 ITR 781 (Cal), Narendra Sharma v. Income Tax Officer		89
(1969) Civil Misc. Writ No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi), M/s. Jain Brothers v. Union of India		40, 76,
(1969) 72 ITR 17 = (1969) 1 ITJ 801 (Guj), D. M. Mansavi v. Commr. of Income Tax		39, 80
(1969) AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72 (V 56) = (1969) 72 ITR 417, Commr. of Income Tax, M. P. v. Champal Sukhlram		80
(1969) AIR 1969 Madh Pra 220 (V 56) = (1969) 73 ITR 263, Gopichand Sarjuprasad v. Union of India		76, 80, 81

- (1968) Civil Appeal No. 1832 of 1968, D/- 12-12-1968 (SC), State of U. P. v. Kishan Chand Dhaun 19, 73
- (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All), Income Tax Officer v. Firm Madan Mohan Damma Mal 3, 40, 54, 75, 78, 80
- (1968) 69 ITR 312 = 9 Cuj LR 659, Commr. of Income Tax v. Hiralal Mohanlal Shah 39, 60
- (1967) AIR 1967 SC 657 (V 54) = (1967) 63 ITR 458, Ramanathan Chettiar v. Commr. of Income Tax 52
- (1967) AIR 1967 SC 691 (V 54) = (1967) 1 SCR 15, Jalan Trading Co. v. Mill Mazdoor Sabha 3, 18, 73, 77
- (1967) 63 ITR 67 (SC), T. D. Kumar Brothers (P) Ltd. v. Commr. of Income Tax 52
- (1967) 64 ITR 637 = ILR (1968) Bom 33, Shakti Offset Works v. Inspecting Asst. Commr. of Income Tax 3, 21, 27, 39, 54, 58, 63, 78
- (1967) 64 ITR 669 = (1966) 1 ITJ 171 (Ker), P. Ummali Umma v. Inspecting Asst. Commr. of Income Tax 54, 56
- (1967) 64 ITR 285 = 1986 MPLJ 1118, Kishanlal v. Commr. of Income Tax 40, 80, 84
- (1966) AIR 1966 SC 1039 (V 53) = 1966-60 ITR 112, K. S. Venkataraman and Co. (P) Ltd. v. State of Madras 2, 46
- (1963) AIR 1963 SC 591 (V 50) = (1963) 3 SCR 809, Khandiga Sham Bhat v. Agricultural Income Tax Officer 73
- (1963) AIR 1963 SC 1561 (V 50) = (1964) 2 SCR 87, Municipal Council Palal v. Joseph 82
- (1963) AIR 1963 All 451 (V 50) = (1963) 49 ITR 680, Ram Kumar Bhargava v. Commr. of Income Tax 22, 78
- (1962) AIR 1962 SC 970 (V 49) = (1962) 44 ITR 739, Commr. of Income tax, Madras v. S. V. Angidi Chettiar 87
- (1962) 46 ITR 452 (All), Mohd. Atiq v. Income Tax Officer, Kanpur 27
- (1961) AIR 1961 SC 1633 (V 48) = (1961) 42 ITR 589, Commr. of Income tax, Bombay v. Scindia Steam Navigation Co., Ltd. 52
- (1960) AIR 1960 SC 266 (V 47) = (1960) 2 SCR 89 = 1960 Cri LJ 410, Satwant Singh v. State of Punjab 54
- (1960) AIR 1960 All 294 (V 47) = 1960 All LJ 20, K. N. Halwai v. Registrar Co-operative Society U. P. 52
- (1958) AIR 1958 SC 538 (V 45) = 1959 SCR 279, R. K. Dalmia v. Justice S. R. Tendolkar 73
- (1958) AIR 1958 Mys 70 (V 45) = ILR (1958) Mys 10, M. Parmanand v. Addl Income Tax Officer 79
- (1957) AIR 1957 SC 397 (V 44) = 1957 SCR 233, Pannalal Binjraj v. Union of India 52
- (1957) AIR 1957 Bom 233 (V 44) = 60 Bom LR 18 (FB), Balabhau Manaji v. Bapuji Satwaji 20
- (1956) AIR 1956 SC 269 (V 43) = (1956) 29 ITR 390, M. Ct. Muttiah v. Commr. of Income Tax 18
- (1955) AIR 1955 SC 13 (V 42) = (1954) 26 ITR 713, Shree Meenakshee Mills Ltd., Madurai v. A. V. Viswanatha Sastri 17, 27
- (1955) AIR 1955 SC 191 (V 42) = 1955 Cri LJ 374, Budhan Choudhry v. State of Bihar 11, 73
- (1954) AIR 1954 SC 752 (V 41) = 1954 Cri LJ 1822, Zaverbhai Amaida v. State of Bombay 82
- (1953) AIR 1953 SC 325 (V 40) = 1953 Cri LJ 1432, Maqbool Hussain v. State of Bombay 9, 55
- (1953) AIR 1953 All 624 (V 40), J. K. Iron and Steel Co., Ltd. v. Labour Appellate Tribunal 52
- (1952) AIR 1952 SC 75 (V 39) = 1952 Cri LJ 510, State of West Bengal v. Anwar Ali 27, 60, 73
- (1952) AIR 1952 SC 235 (V 39) = 1952 SCR 710 = 1952 Cri LJ 1167, Lachmandas v. State of Bombay 27
- (1951) AIR 1951 SC 41 (V 38) = 1050 SCR 869, Charanjit Lal Chowdhury v. Union of India 69, 73
- (1951) AIR 1951 SC 97 (V 38) = 1951 SCR 127, Ramji Lal v. Income-Tax Officer 22, 76
- (1951) AIR 1951 SC 318 (V 38) = 1951 SCR 682 = 52 Cri LJ 1361, State of Bombay v. F. N. Balsara 73
- (1943) 317 U. S. 492 = 87 Law Ed 418, Spies v. United States 56
- (1938) 303 U. S. 391 = 82 Law Ed 917, Helvering v. Mitchell 56
- (1927) AIR 1927 Mad 163 (V 14) = ILR 50 Mad 300, Rangiah v. Appaji Rao 63
- R. R. Agarwal and Bharatji Agarwal, for Petitioner; Gopal Behari and Standing Counsel, for Opposite Parties.
- R. L. GULATI, J.: This is a petition under Article 226 of the Constitution and the facts giving rise to it are briefly these.
2. The petitioner is a partnership firm which runs a flour, oil and rice mill at Bareilly, in the name and style of M/s. Raghunandan Prasad Mohan Lal. On December, 29, 1959, it filed its return for the assessment year 1959-60 showing a net profit of Rs. 22,674. Later, a revised return was filed by it on February 1, 1962, showing a loss of Rs. 3,940, on the ground that in the earlier return the liability for sales tax had not been deducted. The Income-tax Officer did not accept the petitioner's return and by his order dated March 30, 1964 assessed it at a net income of Rs. 82,662. The petitioner appealed. At the time of the hearing of the appeal the Appellate Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax found that there were certain deposits in the petitioner's bank account which had not been properly explained and the partners had not withdrawn any amount from the partnership accounts for their personal expenses. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax after calling for a remand report from the Income-tax Officer came to the conclusion that the petitioner had earned an income of Rs. 1,03,500 from undisclosed sources and finally computed the petitioner's total income at Rs. 1,69,350 by his order dated April 5, 1965. On the same day he issued a notice under Section 274 of the Income-tax Act, 1961, calling upon the petitioner to show cause why penalty under Section 271 (c) should not be imposed upon it for having concealed its income or having furnished inaccurate particulars thereof. By his order dated December 31, 1966 the Appellate Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax imposed a penalty of Rs. 52,500 which was reduced on appeal to Rs. 10,000 by the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal by its order dated December 17, 1967. One of the contentions raised by the petitioner before the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal was that Section 297 (2) (g) of the Act was ultra vires.

The Income-tax Appellate Tribunal relying upon the decision of the Supreme Court in K. S. Venkataraman and Co. (P) Ltd. v. State of Madras, (1966) 60 ITR 112 = (AIR 1966 SC 1089) declined to adjudicate upon that contention of the petitioner, because the Supreme Court in that case had held that an authority constituted under a Statute was not competent to pronounce upon the validity of a provision of that Statute. The petitioner then filed the present writ petition and amongst others, raised a ground about the constitutional validity of Section 297 (2) (g) of the Act.

3. This petition came up for hearing before a Division Bench of this Court of which one of us was a Member. In support of his contention that Section 297 (2) (g) was ultra vires, the learned counsel for the petitioner relied upon a decision of the Bombay High Court in Shakti Offset Works v. Inspecting Asst. Commr. of Income Tax, (1967) 64 ITR 637 (Bom) and also on certain observations of the Supreme Court in Jalan Trading Co. v. Mill Mazdoor Sabha, AIR 1967 SC 691 and contended that an earlier decision of this Court in Income-tax Officer v. Firm Madan Mohan Damma Mal, (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All) required reconsideration. As the Bench considered the question to be of considerable importance and not free from difficulty, it referred this petition to a larger Bench and that is how it has now come up before the Full Bench.

4. In this petition the petitioner has not only challenged the penalty proceedings, but has also challenged the orders of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner and the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal passed in appeal against the assessment order. We cannot allow the petitioner to agitate any question relating to the assessment, because the petitioner has already availed of the statutory remedies and at its instance a reference under Section 66 (1) of the Income-tax Act, 1922 is pending in this Court. Any question arising out of the order of the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal can be decided in that reference and cannot be entertained by this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution. We shall, therefore, confine ourselves to the grounds relating to the imposition of penalty.

5. Mr. Raja Ram Agarwal, appearing for the petitioner has attacked the imposition of penalty upon the following grounds:

(1) The finding that there was concealment of income in the assessment proceedings was without jurisdiction and could not form the basis of penalty proceedings.

(2) Section 297 (2) (g) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, violates Article 20 (1) of the Constitution.

(3) Section 297 (2) (g) offends against Article 14 of the Constitution, and

(4) Section 271 of the Act was inapplicable in terms and the penalty order based upon that provision was, therefore, without jurisdiction.

6. As regards the first contention, in our opinion, the petitioner is not entitled to raise the same before us. The petitioner had taken the matter in appeal before the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal and it was open to it to have raised this question before it, and in case the Tribunal decided that question against the petitioner, to have asked the Tribunal to make a reference to this Court on any question of law arising out of the order of the Tribunal. The petitioner cannot be permitted to by-pass that procedure. If the petitioner has not sought a reference against the order of the Tribunal on such a question, we cannot permit such a question to be raised before us in a petition under Article 226 of the Constitution.

7. Before we proceed to examine the remaining contentions of the learned counsel for the petitioner, we think it appropriate to enumerate briefly the legislative history. Prior to April 1, 1962, the Income-tax Act, 1922 (hereinafter referred to as the old Act) was in force. On April 1, 1962 the Income-tax Act of 1961 (hereinafter referred to as the new Act) came into force and repealed the old Act. The new Act being prospective in operation would govern all assessments from the assessment years 1962-63 onwards. For the assessments for the earlier years some provision had to be made. Sub-section (2) of Section 297 enumerates such provisions.

The material portion of Section 297 for our purpose is its sub-section (1) and Clauses (a), (b), (f) and (g) of sub-section (2) which are reproduced below:

"297. Repeals and savings — (1) The Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, (XI of 1922), is hereby repealed.

(2) Notwithstanding the repeal of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 (XI of 1922) (hereinafter referred to as the repealed Act),—

(a) where a return of income has been filed before the commencement of this Act by any person for any assessment year, proceedings for the assessment of that person for that year may be taken and continued as if this Act had not been passed;

(b) where a return of income is filed after the commencement of this Act otherwise than in pursuance of a notice under Section 34 of the repealed Act by any person for the assessment year ending on the 31st day of March, 1962, or any earlier year, the assessment of that person for that year shall be made in accordance with the procedure specified in this Act;

(f) any proceeding for the imposition of a penalty in respect of any assessment completed before the 1st day of April, 1962 may be initiated and any such penalty may be imposed as if this Act had not been passed;

(g) any proceeding for the imposition of a penalty in respect of any assessment for the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1962, or any earlier year, which is completed on or after the 1st day of April, 1962, may be initiated and any such penalty may be imposed under this Act."

8. A perusal of this section discloses the scheme with regard to the assessment of tax and imposition of penalty relating to assessment years prior to the year 1962-63. The scheme in short is that the pending proceedings were to be dealt with under the old Act or the new Act according as the returns were filed by the assessee before or after April 1, 1962. Where the return had been filed before that date the assessment proceedings as also the subsequent proceedings by way of appeals etc. were to be taken under the old Act and in cases where the returns were filed after that date such proceedings were to be taken under the new Act. Clauses (f) and (g) relate to penalty proceedings. According to Clause (f) the penalty was to be imposed in accordance with the old Act if the assessment giving rise to the penalty came to be made before April 1, 1962, while according to Clause (g) the penalty proceedings were to be taken under the new Act if the relevant assessment came to be made after that date.

9. The petitioner has challenged the constitutional validity of Clause (g) on the ground that it violates Article 20 of the Constitution because by virtue of this clause the penalty provisions of the new Act have been made applicable which are more onerous than the corresponding provisions of the old Act. It is urged that according to the guarantee contained in Article 20 of the Constitution, the petitioner could not be subjected to greater penalty than that which might have been inflicted under the law in force at the time the offence was committed. It is not necessary to examine at this stage as to whether the penalty provisions under the new Act are more harsh and onerous than the corresponding provisions under the old Act, because in our opinion, Article 20 has no application to the facts of the case. Article 20 reads as under:—

"20 (1) No person shall be convicted of any offence except for violation of a law in force at the time of the commission of the act charged as an offence, nor be subjected to a penalty greater than that which might have been inflicted under the law in force at the time of the commission of the offence.

(2) No person shall be prosecuted and punished for the same offence more than once.

(3) No person accused of any offence shall be compelled to be a witness against himself."

This Article affords protection against conviction and punishment for an offence by a court of law. Penalties are imposed by the Income-tax authorities and cannot be regarded as punishment awarded for an offence. In fact, prosecution for an offence under the Income-tax Act is provided separately under the two Acts. Section 52 of the old Act provides for a prosecution and conviction before a Magistrate with regard to offences enumerated therein. Similar provisions are to be found in the new Act in Chapter XXII of the new Act. The Supreme Court in Maghbool Hussain v. State of Bombay, AIR 1953 SC 325 held that the Article 20 contemplates proceedings of the nature of criminal proceedings and the prosecution in this context means an initiation of proceedings of a criminal nature. The first part of Article 20 (1) prohibits a conviction while the second part deals with penalty that may be inflicted on conviction by way of punishment.

10. The first contention based on the alleged violation of Article 20 is accordingly rejected.

11. The next question is as to whether Section 297 (2) (g) offends against Art. 14 of the Constitution. It has been urged that penalty provisions contained in the new Act are more onerous and harsh to the assessee in comparison to the penalty provisions contained in the old Act and Section 297 (2) (g) makes applicable the provisions of the new Act to a certain class of assessee leaving other assessee similarly situated to be dealt with under the old Act. It is pointed out that this discrimination is not based upon any reasonable classification. Article 14 of the Constitution guarantees equal protection of the laws. The Article itself does not speak of any classification, but it is now well settled that while Article 14 prohibits class legislation, it does not prohibit reasonable classification. The classification permissible under Article 14 must, however, satisfy the following two conditions:

(i) It must be founded on an intelligible differentia which distinguishes persons or things that are grouped together from others left out of the group, and

(ii) the differentia must have a rational relation to the objects sought to be achieved by the Statute in question. (See Budhan Choudhry v. State of Bihar, AIR 1955 SC 191 at p. 193).

12. Now looking at Clauses (a) and (b) of Section 297 (2), it becomes immediately apparent that a classification was made amongst the assesseees whose cases for the assessment year prior to the year 1962-63 were pending when the new Act came into force repealing the old Act. The classification is based on the date of filing of the returns. Those assesseees who had filed their returns prior to 1st April, 1962 were to be dealt with for the purposes of assessment under the old Act, while those who had filed their returns after that date were to be dealt with under the new Act. This classification for purposes of assessment appears to be well defined and reasonable even though the better basis for the classification would have been the commencement of the assessment proceedings. The assessment proceedings under the Income Tax Act commence against an assessee when he files a voluntary return or when a notice is issued to him calling for a return. Had that basis been adopted, all pending assessments would have been dealt with under the old Act. However, it was for the Parliament to have chosen the basis of the classification and as, in its wisdom, it chose the date of the filing of the return to be the dividing line, no fault can be found with such a classification.

13. In that class of assesseees whose assessments were pending for the years prior to the year 1962-63, there existed a section of assesseees who had rendered themselves liable to penalty and a separate provision was made with regard to them. Under clause (f) penalty was to be imposed in accordance with the provisions of the old Act, if the assessment giving rise to the penalty was made prior to April 1, 1962, while clause (g) provided that penalty was to be imposed in accordance with the provisions of the new Act if the relevant assessment came to be made after that date. As a result of these two provisions the class of assesseees who were liable to penalties was split in two. The question that falls for consideration, therefore, is as to whether this sub-classification is valid.

14. In order that a classification should be permissible for purposes of Article 14, it must satisfy the dual test already indicated above, viz. that it must be founded on an intelligible differentia and the differentia must have a rational relation to the object sought to be achieved by the Statute. In our opinion, the classification brought about by clauses (f) and (g) does not satisfy the second test based as it is on the date of the completion of the assessment, which has no rational nexus with the object sought to be achieved.

15. It is open to the legislature to form a classification on the basis of time just as much as it can have a basis on geographical or territorial considerations. But if the legislature brings about a classification on the basis of time, the point of time selected must be for some rational and intelligible consideration. A purely arbitrary or capricious selection of time cannot possibly form the basis of a rational classification.

16. Now, the object of penalty provisions in a taxing statute like the Income Tax Act is to punish and prevent evasion of tax. The measure of penalty depends upon the nature and gravity of the default committed by an assessee. Under both the Acts the quantum of penalty varies according to the tax which is quantified by an assessment order. The imposition of penalty has thus some relation to the assessment of tax, but the time of making the assessment has no bearing whatsoever upon the penalty itself. The default for which the assessee is to be penalised is neither aggravated nor mitigated by the time when the assessment comes to be made. The time for making the assessment is neither an attribute or a quality of the assesseees, nor does it have any relation to the nature or gravity of the default for which penalty is to be imposed. In fact the making of an assessment order is a fortuitous circumstance over which the assessee has no control. It is difficult to understand how the class of assesseees otherwise similarly situated can be sub-divided into two classes depending upon the time of the making of the assessment order.

17. In Shree Meenakshi Mills Ltd. Madurai v. A. V. Vishvanatha Sastri, (1954) 26 ITR 713 = (AIR 1955 SC 13) the Supreme Court had to deal with a similar classification based on time. Out of the class of tax evaders those whose cases had been referred by the Central Government to the Investigation Commission by September 1, 1948 under Section 5 (1) of Act XXX of 1947, were to be dealt with under the provisions of that Act while others were to be dealt with under Section 34 of the Income Tax Act. The procedure for assessment of escaped income under the two Acts was materially different. That classification was held by the Supreme Court to be violative of Article 14 of the Constitution. Mahajan, C. J., who delivered the judgment of the Court, at page 719 (of ITR) = (at pp. 17-18 of AIR); observed:

"As regards the first contention canvassed by the learned Attorney General, it seems to us that it cannot stand scrutiny. The class of persons alleged to have been dealt with by Section 5 (1) of the impugned Act was comprised of those unsocial elements in society who during recent years prior to the passing of the Act had made substantial profits and had evaded payment of tax on those profits and whose cases were referred to the Investigation Commission before 1st September, 1948. Assuming that evasion of tax to a substantial amount could form a basis of classification at all for imposing a drastic procedure on that class, the inclusion of only such of them whose cases had been referred before 1st September, 1948, into a class for being dealt with by the drastic procedure, leaving other tax evaders to be dealt with under the ordinary law, will be a clear discrimination for the reference of the case within a particular time has no special or rational nexus with the necessity for drastic procedure" (underlining ours)

18. Dealing with another case of similar nature, in M. Ct. Muthiah v. Commissioner of Income Tax, (1956) 29 ITR 390 = (AIR 1956 SC 269) the Supreme Court reiterated its earlier view in the following observations at page 402 (of ITR) = (at p. 276 of AIR).

"It is, therefore, clear that the period originally fixed for the reference of the cases of substantial evaders of income-tax for investigation by the Commission, viz., 30th June, 1948 or the extended period viz. 1st September, 1948, provided in Section 5 (1) of Act XXX of 1947 or the period fixed by the new Section 34 (1-A) of the Indian Income-tax Act viz. 31st day of March, 1956, was not a necessary attribute of the class of substantial evaders of income-tax but was merely in accident and a measure of administrative convenience and was not an element in the formation of the particular class of substantial evaders of income-tax. (underlining ours)"

In M/s. Jalan Trading Co. (P) Ltd., AIR 1967 SC 691 (supra) the Supreme Court struck down a provision of the Payment of Bonus Act, 1965, as violative of Article 14 of the Constitution because as a result of the classification brought about by it similarly situated industrial concerns were subjected to differential treatment depending on the pendency of an industrial dispute between the industrial undertaking and its employees before a particular date. It held at page 708:

"Assuming that the classification is founded on some intelligible differentia, which distinguishes an establishment, from other establishments, the differentia has no rational relation to the object sought to be achieved by the statutory provision viz. of ensuring peaceful relations between capital and labour by making an equitable distribution of the surplus profits of the year."

19. The latest case of the Supreme Court on this point is the State of U. P. v. Kishan Chand Dhaun, Civil Appeal No. 1832 of 1968, D/- 12-12-1968 (SC). In that case as a result of the operation of Rule 30 (a) of the Higher Judicial Service Rules, 1953, officers recruited prior to July 4, 1931 and confirmed after December 31, 1950, got higher salary than those officers who, even though appointed prior to July 4, 1931, were confirmed before December 31, 1950. The rule was struck down as violative of Article 14 of the Constitution with the following observations:

"The object of Rule 30, admittedly was to preserve to the officers who entered service prior to July 4, 1931, their previous pay scale. We have to examine the validity of the classification made under the said rule having in mind the object intended to be achieved. One can appreciate any difference made in service conditions between those officers who entered service prior to July 4, 1931, and those entered service thereafter. But what is not understandable is why there should be any difference between those who were confirmed as Civil and Sessions Judge before December 31, 1950 and those confirmed thereafter."

20. A Full Bench of the Nagpur High Court in Balabhau Manaji v. Bapuji Satwaji, (1958) 60 Bom LR 18 = (AIR 1957 Bom 233) struck down Section 242 (3) of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Act, 1954 as offending Article 14 of the Constitution because as a result of that provision a classification was made in respect of pending suits for pre-emption. Those suits which were filed before March 25, 1954 were to remain alive, but those filed after that date were to be dismissed. Chief Justice Chagla, speaking for the Full Bench, held that the classification was arbitrary not permissible by Article 14 of the Constitution.

21. The case which directly deals with the point involved in the present case is that of the Bombay High Court in Shakti Offset Works, (1967) 61 ITR 637 (Bom) (supra). While striking down, as ultra vires, Section 297 (2) (g) of the Income Tax Act, 1961, the Bombay High Court observed at p. 657:

"The date of completion of the assessment makes no difference, so far as this aspect is concerned. In fact, it has no impact either on incurring of the liability or for imposition of penalty. We are, therefore, unable to see how the classification made by Clause (g) of sub-section (2) of Section 297 of the Income-tax Act of 1961 can be justified either as relevant or having any relation to the subject with which it is concerned. So far as making a provision for imposing a penalty is concerned, there is no difference between the assessee who have filed returns but in whose cases the assessment was completed prior to April 1, 1962, and assessee who have filed returns but in whose cases assessment was not completed or could not be completed till April 1, 1962."

We are in respectful agreement with the observations of the Bombay High Court as extracted above.

22. On behalf of the opposite side reliance was placed on Ramji Lal v. Income Tax Officer, AIR 1951 SC 97 to support the contention that pending proceedings and fresh proceedings could be the basis of a valid classification. There, however, the basis for the classification was that the pending proceedings should be concluded according to the law applicable at the time when the rights or liabilities accrued and proceedings commenced. Such a classification would indeed be a reasonable classification. In fact, the classification brought about by Cl. (a) of sub-section (2) of Section 297 is founded on that basis and we have already observed that such a classification is permissible and valid. But Clause (g) makes a departure from that principle inasmuch as unlike Cl. (f) it seeks to apply the law other than that which was in force at the time the liability to penalty was incurred. That case is, therefore, clearly distinguishable and on the same ground is distinguishable the case of this Court in Ram Ram Kumar Bhargava v. Commr. of Income Tax, AIR 1963 All 451 which followed the case of Ramji Lal, AIR 1951 SC 97 (supra).

23. After having held that the classification brought about by Clause (g) is arbitrary having no rational nexus with the objects of the Act, the next question that falls for consideration is as to whether the penalty provisions in the new Act are more onerous than the corresponding provisions contained in the old Act. The penalty provisions in the new Act are contained in Chapter XXI comprising Sections 270 to 275. Besides penalty is also provided in Section 221 (1) for non-payment of tax. The corresponding provisions under the old Act are contained respectively in Sections 44-E (6), 44-F (5), 28, 25 (2), 18-A (9) and 46 (1). Sub-section (2) of Section 274 and Section 275 of the new Act are new having no corresponding provisions under the old Act. Section 274 (2) provides that in cases falling under Clause (c) of Section 271, the penalty shall be imposed by the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner of Income Tax, if the minimum penalty imposed exceeds Rs. 1,000, while Section 275 prescribes a limitation for the imposition of penalty, the limitation being two years from the date of the completion of the proceedings giving rise to the penalty.

24. The main penalty provisions under the new Act are contained in Section 271 which corresponds to Section 28 of the old Act. Since we are concerned mainly with these two provisions, it would be better to reproduce them in full.

25. Section 271 of the new Act as amended upto April 1, 1968 reads as under:

"271. Failure to furnish returns, comply with notices, concealment of Income etc.

(1) If the Income-tax Officer or the Appellate Assistant Commissioner in the course of any proceedings under this Act, is satisfied that any person:

(a) has without reasonable cause failed to furnish the return of total income which he was required to furnish under sub-section (1) of Section 139 or by notice given under sub-section (2) of Section 139 or Section 148 or has without reasonable cause failed to furnish it within the time allowed and in the manner required by sub-section (1) of Section 139 or by such notice, as the case may be, or

(b) has without reasonable cause failed to comply with a notice under sub-section (1) of Section 142 or sub-section (2) of Sec. 143, or

(c) has concealed the particulars of his income or furnished inaccurate particulars of such income, he may direct that such person shall pay by way of penalty,—

(i) in the cases referred to in clause (a), in addition to the amount of the tax, if any, payable by him, a sum equal to two per cent of the tax for every month during which the default continued, but not exceeding in the aggregate fifty per cent, of the tax;

(ii) in the cases referred to in Clause (b), in addition to any tax payable by him, a sum which shall not be less than ten per cent, but which shall not exceed fifty per cent, of the amount of the tax, if any, which would have been avoided if the income returned by such person had been accepted as the correct income;

(iii) in the cases referred to in Clause (c), in addition to any tax payable by him, a sum which shall not be less than, but which shall not exceed twice, the amount of the income in respect of which the particulars have been concealed or inaccurate particulars have been furnished.

Explanation — Where the total income returned by any person is less than eighty per cent, of the total income (hereinafter in this Explanation referred to as the correct income) as assessed under Section 143 or Section 144 or Section 147 (reduced by the expenditure incurred bona fide by him for the purpose of making or earning any income included in the total income but which has been disallowed as a deduction) such person shall, unless he proves that the failure to return the correct income did not arise from any fraud or any gross or wilful neglect on his part, be deemed to have concealed the particulars of his income or furnished inaccurate particulars of such income for the purpose of Clause (c) of this sub-section.

(2) When the person liable to penalty is a registered firm or an unregistered firm which has been assessed under Clause (b) of Section 183 then, notwithstanding anything contained in the other provisions of this Act, the penalty imposable under sub-section (1) shall be the same amount as would be imposable on that firm if that firm were an unregistered firm.

(3) Notwithstanding anything contained in this section—

(a) no penalty for failure to furnish the return of his total income under sub-sec. (1) of section 139 shall be imposed under sub-section (1) on an assessee whose total income does not exceed the minimum amount not chargeable to tax in his case by one thousand five hundred rupees,

(b) where a person has failed to comply with a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 139 or Section 148 and proves that he has no income liable to tax, the penalty imposable under sub-section (1) shall not exceed twenty five rupees,

(c) no penalty shall be imposed under sub-section (1) upon any person assessable under Clause (i) of sub-section (1) of Section 160 read with S. 161, as the agent of a non-resident for failure to furnish the return under sub-section (1) of Section 139.

(4) If the Income Tax Officer or the Appellate Assistant Commissioner in the course of any proceedings under this Act, is satisfied that the profits of a registered firm have been distributed otherwise than in accordance with the shares of the partners as shown in the instrument of partnership on the basis of which the firm has been registered under this Act, and that any partner has thereby returned his income below its real amount, he may direct that such partner shall in addition to the tax, if any, payable by him, pay by way of penalty a sum not exceeding one and a half times the amount of tax which has been avoided or would have been avoided if the income returned by such partner had been accepted as his correct income; and no refund or other adjustment shall be claimable by any other partner by reason of such direction.

(4-A) Notwithstanding anything contained in Clause (i) or Clause (iii) of sub-section (1) the Commissioner may, in his discretion—

(i) reduce or waive the amount of minimum penalty imposable on a person under Clause (i) for failure, without reasonable cause, to furnish the return of total income which such person was required to furnish under sub-section (1) of Section 139, or

(ii) reduce or waive the amount of minimum penalty imposable on a person under Clause (ii) of sub-section (1), if he is satisfied that such person—

(a) in the case referred to in clause (i) of this sub-section has, prior to the issue of notice to him under sub-section (2) of Section 139 voluntarily and in good faith, made full disclosure of his income, and in the case referred to in Clause (ii) of this sub-section has, prior to the detection by the Income Tax Officer, of the concealment of particulars of income in respect of which the penalty is imposable, or of the inaccuracy of particulars furnished in respect of such income, voluntarily and in good faith, made full and true disclosure of such particulars;

(b) has co-operated in any enquiry relating to the assessment of such income; and

(c) has either paid or made satisfactory arrangements for payment of any tax or interest payable in consequence of an order passed under this Act in respect of the relevant assessment year;

Provided that if in a case the minimum penalty imposable under Clause (i) or, as the case may be, Clause (ii) of sub-sec. (1) in respect of the relevant assessment year, or where such disclosure relates to more than one assessment year, the aggregate of the minimum penalty imposable in respect of those years, exceeds a sum of rupees fifty thousand, no order reducing or waiving the penalty shall be made by the Commissioner unless the previous approval of the Board has been obtained.

(4-B) An order under sub-section (4-A) shall be final and shall not be called in question before any court of law or any other authority."

26. Section 28, as it stood immediately prior to the commencement of the new Act, was as under:

"28. Penalty for concealment of income or improper distribution of profits—(1) if the Income Tax Officer, the Appellate Assistant Commissioner or the Appellate Tribunal in the course of any proceedings under this Act, is satisfied that any person—

(a) has without reasonable cause failed to furnish the return of his total income which he was required to furnish by notice given under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) of Section 22 or section 34 or has without reasonable cause failed to furnish it within the time allowed and in the manner required by such notice, or

(b) has without reasonable cause failed to comply with a notice under sub-section (4) of Section 22 or sub-section (2) of Section 23, or

(c) has concealed the particulars of his income or deliberately furnished inaccurate particulars of such income, he or it may direct that such person shall pay by way of penalty, in the case referred to in clause (a), in addition to the amount of the income-tax and super-tax, if any, payable by him, a sum not exceeding one and half times that amount, and in the cases referred to in clauses (b) and (c), in addition to any tax payable by him, a sum not exceeding one and a half times the amount of the income-tax and super-tax, if any, which would have been avoided if the income as returned by such person had been accepted as the correct income;

Provided that—

(a) no penalty for failure to furnish the return of his total income shall be imposed on an assessee whose total income is less than three thousand five hundred rupees unless he has been served with a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 22;

(b) where a person has failed to comply with a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 22 or section 34 and proves that he has no income liable to tax, the penalty imposable under this sub-section shall be penalty not exceeding twenty-five rupees;

(c) no penalty shall be imposed under this sub-section upon any person assessable under Section 42 as the agent of a person not resident in the taxable territories for failure to furnish the return required under section 22 unless a notice under sub-section (2) of that section or under Section 34 has been served on him;

(d) when the person liable to penalty is a registered firm or an unregistered firm which has been assessed under clause (b) of sub-section (5) of Section 23, then, notwithstanding anything contained in the other provisions of this Act, the amount of income tax and super-tax payable by the firm, itself shall be taken to be an amount equal to the tax which would have been payable by an unregistered firm on an income equal to the firm's total income, and, in the cases referred to in Clauses (b) and (c), the amount of the income-tax and super-tax which would have been avoided if the income as returned had been accepted as the correct income, shall be taken to be the difference between the amount of the tax which would have been payable by an unregistered firm on an income equal to the firm's total income and the amount of the tax payable by an unregistered firm on an income equal to the income of the firm as actually returned by the firm.

(2) If the Income Tax Officer, the Appellate Assistant Commissioner or the Appellate Tribunal in the course of any proceedings under this Act, is satisfied that the profits of a registered firm have been distributed otherwise than in accordance with the shares of the partners as shown in the instrument of partnership registered under this Act governing such distribution, and that any partner has thereby returned his income below its real amount he or it may direct that such partner shall in addition to the income-tax and super-tax, if any, payable by him pay by way of penalty a sum not exceeding one and a half times the amount of income-tax and super-tax which has been avoided, or would have been avoided if the income returned by such partner had been accepted as his correct income; and no refund or other adjustment shall be claimable by any other partner by reason of such direction.

(3) No order shall be made under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) unless the assessee or partner, as the case may be, has been heard, or has been given a reasonable opportunity of being heard.

(4) No prosecution for an offence against this Act shall be instituted in respect of the same facts on which a penalty has been imposed under this section.

(5) An Appellate Assistant Commissioner or the Appellate Tribunal on making an order under sub-section (1) or sub-section (2) shall forthwith send a copy of the same to the Income Tax Officer.

(6) The Income Tax Officer shall not impose any penalty under this section without the previous approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner."

On a comparison of the two sets of provisions under the new and old Act, it cannot be doubted that they differ materially from each other.

27. Mr. N. A. Palkhivala in the 6th Edition of his book on Income Tax has correctly summarised the changes brought about by the new Act in the law relating to penalty and the same may be reproduced with advantage.

"(a) Unlike Section 28 of the 1922 Act this section does not confer any power on the Appellate Tribunal to impose a penalty. (b) In cases of concealment of income where the minimum penalty imposable exceeds Rs. 1,000 the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner alone is empowered to impose a penalty (S. 274 (2)), whereas under the 1922 Act the Income Tax Officer had the power to impose a penalty even in such cases.

(c) Under the 1922 Act the Income Tax Officer could not impose any penalty without the previous approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner. Under this Act the Income Tax Officer does not have to take the sanction of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner in any case.

(d) This section provides that if any penalty is imposed, it should not be less than the minimum prescribed (subject to the Commissioner's power of reduction or waiver); there was no such minimum prescribed under the 1922 Act.

(e) The maximum penalty imposable has been reduced in cases falling within Cls. (a) and (b) of Section 271 (1); and it has to be computed by reference to the amount of income concealed, and not the tax avoided, in cases falling within Clause (c).

(f) The burden of proof is thrown on the tax payer where the income returned is less than 80 per cent of the income assessed.

(g) There was no time limit for commencement of penalty proceedings under the 1922 Act. This Act requires penalty proceedings to be commenced before the completion of those proceedings in which the Income Tax Officer or the Appellate Assistant Commissioner is satisfied that the default attracting a penalty has been committed (S. 275).

(h) There was no time limit in the 1922 Act for the passing of penalty order, but a time limit is now imposed by Section 275.

(i) No prosecution could be instituted under the 1922 Act in respect of the same facts on which a penalty was imposed. Under this Act a penalty can be imposed and a prosecution launched on the same facts."

There can be no doubt that some changes are advantageous to the assessee but on the whole the penalty provisions in the new Act appear to us to be definitely more harsh and stringent for the following reasons:

(i) Under the old Act, no penalty could be imposed by the Income Tax Officer without the prior approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner of Income Tax. Under the new Act no such previous permission is required, except that in cases of concealment of income, the penalty is imposed by the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner of Income Tax himself, where the minimum imposable penalty exceeds Rupees 1,000/-. It is true that in big cases of concealment, the penalty is to be imposed by a higher officer. But this little advantage is offset by the fact that the assessee loses the right of appeal to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax because against the order of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax only one appeal is provided to the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal: (vide Section 253 (1) (b) of the new Act).

(ii) In cases involving concealment of income, the minimum penalty provided by clause (ia) of Section 271 (1) is equal to the amount of income in respect of which particulars have been concealed or inaccurate particulars have been furnished, the maximum being twice that amount. This measure of penalty is undoubtedly drastic. It can work great hardship in petty cases. For example, in a case where the income shown in the return is Rs. 2,000/- which is below the taxable limits and the assessment comes to be made at Rs. 10,000/-, the minimum penalty imposable would be Rs. 8,000/-, maximum being Rs. 16,000/, even though the tax which the assessee may have tried to evade would be about Rs. 500/-. Under the old Act the maximum penalty of Rs. 750 could have been imposed in such a case even though the assessee could have been let off with a nominal penalty of Rs. 50 or so, there being no minimum limit.

(iii) By the Finance Act of 1964, two significant changes have been made in Section 271:

The word 'deliberately' has been omitted from Clause (c) and an explanation has been added at the end of Clause (ia).

The combined result of these two changes is that an assessee would be liable to penalty for furnishing inaccurate particulars of income even if the inaccurate particulars are furnished accidentally and not deliberately. The newly added Explanation makes a drastic change in the procedure inasmuch as the onus is cast upon the assessee where the income returned by him turns out to be less than 80% of the income assessed. The proceedings for the imposition of penalty are of quasi criminal nature and under the old Act, it was a settled law that in penalty proceedings the onus lay upon the Revenue to prove that income had been concealed or inaccurate particulars thereof had been furnished deliberately. This position no longer holds good. It is now settled law that the guarantee of equal protection applies against substantive laws as well as procedural laws, (See: Lachmandas v. State of Bombay, 1952 SCR 710 at p. 726 = (AIR 1952 SC 235 at p. 242), State of West Bengal v. Anwar Ali, AIR 1952 SC 75 and AIR 1955 SC 13).

(iv) The time limit fixed for the imposition of penalty by Section 275 may seemingly appear to be beneficial to the assessee but in practice it would work to their disadvantage. Under the old Act the imposition of penalty, could be deferred until the assessment order giving rise to the penalty became final after the decision of the assessee's appeals etc. Under the new Act, however, the Income Tax Officer shall be compelled to pass the penalty order, if the proceedings by way of appeals etc. are not concluded within two years. This would result in multiplicity of proceedings and the assessee would be exposed to coercive processes of recovery in case he is unable to pay the penalty within the prescribed time. Moreover, under the old Act even though no limitation was fixed for passing the penalty order, the appellate authorities as also the courts could always intervene to give relief to the assessee, where the penalty was sought to be imposed after inordinate delay not attributable to the assessee. This court in Mohd. Atiq v. Income Tax Officer, Kanpur, (1962) 46 ITR 452 (All) quashed the penalty order which was passed after the lapse of fourteen years.

(v) The fixing of the minimum amount of penalty is another feature which makes the provisions of the new Act more onerous. The Bombay High Court in the case of Shakti Offset Works, (1967) 64 ITR 637 (Bom) (supra), has, at page 651 given an illustration to demonstrate the drastic consequences of this provision showing that in a given case a penalty of not less than Rs. 1,40,000 will have to be imposed as the minimum penalty even though under the corresponding provisions of the old Act the penalty may have been a sum of Rs. 5,000 or even less.

28. It is, of course, true that under sub-section (4A) of Section 271 added by the Income Tax Amendment Act of 1965 the Commissioner has been vested with the power to reduce or waive the amount of minimum penalty imposable in cases falling under Clauses (i) and (ii) of sub-section (1) of Section 271 on conditions enumerated therein. The conditions themselves are of onerous nature inasmuch as the assessee has to make a confession of concealment before the concealment is detected by the Income Tax Officer and he has to pay or make arrangement for the payment of the tax for the relevant assessment year. This provision may seem to soften the rigour of the provision requiring the imposition of a minimum penalty, but the small advantage that it seems to confer upon assessee is more than offset by sub-section (4B) which provides that an order under sub-section (4A) would be final and shall not be called in question before any court of law or any other authority. It is doubtful if an assessee would avail himself of the remedy provided in sub-section (4A) firstly because the conditions imposed are onerous and secondly because once he moves in that direction, he places himself entirely at the mercy of the Commissioner against whose order he will have no remedy whatsoever.

29. At this stage it may be mentioned that clause (iii) of sub-section (1) prescribing the minimum amount of penalty in cases of concealment equal to the amount of income concealed came into force with effect from April 1, 1968 after its amendment by Finance Act of 1968 and would not ordinarily be applicable to the pending assessments for the assessment years prior to 1962-63 covered by Clause (g) of sub-section (2) of Sec. 297 because the assessments for those years would normally be completed before March 31, 1966 and the penalty proceedings would also be completed before March 31, 1968 by reason of the period of limitation prescribed for assessment and imposition of penalty (four years for assessment under the old Act and two years for penalty under the new Act). But this amended provision would catch in its net the assessments which are set aside on appeal or revision and are to be made afresh and also the cases where the penalty is imposed by the Appellate Assistant Commissioner of Income Tax where the reassessment is made or the appellate proceedings are concluded after April 1, 1968. This would bring about yet another sub-classification amongst the assesseees otherwise similarly situated. So long as Clause (g) is on the Statute book, such a situation cannot be prevented and there appears to be no good reason why persons falling in the above sub-classification should be subjected to the drastic treatment envisaged by the amendment of 1968. It is true that the petitioner does not fall in that category and in its case the penalty was imposed under the law as it stood prior to the amendment of 1968. That, however, makes no difference because in testing the constitutionality of a provision on the touchstone of Article 14 we are entitled to take into consideration all the consequences that may flow from the operation of the offending provision.

30. Assuming that the amendment of 1968 is to be left out of consideration, the position would be no better. Clause (iii) before its amendment stood as under:

"(iii) in the cases referred to in clause (c), in addition to any tax payable by him a sum which shall not be less than twenty percent, but which shall not exceed one and a half times the amount of the tax, if any, which would have been avoided if the income as returned by such person had been accepted as the correct income."

The maximum limit is the same as under the old Act, but the condition with regard to the minimum penalty makes this provision more onerous, as we have already shown above.

31. The last major difference between the two sets of provisions is that while under the old Act immunity was given to an assessee from prosecution for a default in respect of which a penalty was imposed upon him (section 28 (4)) there is no such immunity under the new Act, so that for the same default an assessee may be penalised under Chapter XXI and may also be prosecuted and punished under Chapter XXII.

32. It is true that Clause (g) makes only the penal provisions of the new Act applicable and the provisions for prosecution contained in Chapter XXII would not be attracted in pending cases. But in cases governed by Clause (g) the provision for prosecution contained in Section 52 of the old Act would be attracted by virtue of Section 6 of the General Clauses Act as has been held by the Supreme Court in T. S. Baliah v. T. S. Rangachari, Criminal Appeals Nos. 130 to 133 of 1968, D/- 12-12-1968 = (reported in AIR 1969 SC 701). The immunity granted by Section 28 (4) of the old Act would not be available in such case because the immunity under that provision is extended only to cases where penalty is imposed under the old Act. In cases falling under Clause (g) the penalty is impossible under the new Act.

33. Mr. Gopal Behari, learned counsel for the Department drew our attention to the fact that with regard to the penalty for non-payment of tax, the new Act is more liberal inasmuch as an appeal against such a penalty can be filed without depositing the arrears of tax while under the old Act such an appeal was available only after the tax had been paid. This, no doubt, is a minor advantage to the assesseees but it has no impact on the quantum of penalty. It merely makes the remedy of appeal more efficacious. We, therefore, hold that Clause (g) of Section 297 (2) is ultra vires.

34. The fourth and the last contention on behalf of the petitioner is that even if Clause (g) of sub-section (2) of Section 297 of the new Act is intra vires, Section 271 is inapplicable in terms and no penalty could have been imposed under that section. This contention of the learned counsel also appears to be well founded.

35. According to its opening words Section 271 applies only "if the Income-tax Officer or the Appellate Assistant Commissioner, in the course of any proceeding under this Act", is satisfied that any person has committed the defaults enumerated in Cls. (a) to (c) of sub-section (1) of that section. The reference to "this Act" is to the new Act. The condition precedent for an action under this section, therefore, is the satisfaction of the officer concerned in the course of proceedings under the new Act. It has been noticed above that by virtue of Clause (a) of sub-section (2) of Section 297, the pending cases where the return was filed prior to April 1, 1962, were to be disposed of in accordance with the provisions of the old Act. In such cases there would be no proceedings under the new Act. In the instant case also the assessment was made under the old Act and the appeal was also instituted and disposed of under the old Act. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax who initiated the penalty proceedings and levied the penalty came to be satisfied about the concealment of income by the petitioner only in the course of the appeal which admittedly was under the old Act. In fact, no proceedings can be said to have been pending before him under the new Act. In the circumstances the initiation of the proceedings under Section 274 and the levy of penalty under Section 271 of the new Act was without jurisdiction.

36. It was suggested by the learned counsel for the opposite parties that the satisfaction referred to in Section 271 (1) may be reached by the authority concerned during the course of the proceedings for the imposition of penalty itself and that such proceedings can be initiated by a notice under S. 274 of the new Act. This contention is plainly wrong. A bare reading of Section 271 shows very clearly that the proceedings referred to in Section 271 during the course of which the authority concerned is to be satisfied about an assessee having rendered himself liable to penalty are proceedings other than the penalty proceedings. In fact, the penalty proceedings are taken in consequence of those proceedings. This is borne out by Section 275 which says that no order imposing a penalty shall be passed after the expiration of two years from the date of the completion of the proceedings in the course of which the proceedings for the imposition of penalty have been commenced. A similar phraseology is to be found in Section 28 of the old Act. Under that provision also the penalty could be imposed if the officer concerned was satisfied during the course of any proceeding that an assessee had rendered himself liable to penalty. There is ample authority for the proposition that when penalty is to be levied by the Income-tax Officer, the proceedings in the course of which he is to be so satisfied mean the assessment proceedings and similarly the Appellate Assistant Commissioner of Income Tax and the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal have to be satisfied in the course of appellate proceedings pending before them. There was some doubt as to the time when penalty proceedings could be initiated. It was held by some High Courts that the officer imposing the penalty had to initiate the penalty proceedings before the proceedings giving rise to the penalty were completed.

37. The Supreme Court in Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v. S. V. Angidi Chettiar, (1962) 44 ITR 739 = (AIR 1962 SC 970) has set at rest that controversy by holding that the satisfaction has to be acquired during the assessment proceedings where the penalty is to be imposed by the Income Tax Officer. Reference may be made to the following observations at page 745 (of ITR) = (at p. 974 of AIR):

"The power to impose penalty under Section 28 depends upon the satisfaction of the Income Tax Officer in the course of proceedings under the Act; it cannot be exercised if he is not satisfied about the existence of conditions specified in Clause (a), (b) or (c) before the proceedings are concluded. The proceeding to levy penalty has, however, not to be commenced by the Income Tax Officer before the completion of the assessment proceedings by the Income Tax Officer. Satisfaction before conclusion of the proceedings under the Act, and not the issue of notice of initiation of any step for imposing penalty is a condition for the exercise of the jurisdiction. There is no evidence on the record that the Income Tax Officer was not satisfied in the course of the assessment proceeding that the firm had concealed its income. The assessment order is dated the 10th of November, 1961, and there is an endorsement at the foot of the assessment order by the Income Tax Officer that action under section 28 had been taken for concealment of income indicating clearly that the Income Tax Officer was satisfied in the course of the assessment proceeding that the firm had concealed its income."

Moreover, in the instant case the contention that the Appellate Assistant Commissioner was satisfied about the default of the assessee in proceedings other than the appellate proceedings pending before him is factually incorrect inasmuch as in paragraph 24 of his appellate order dated April 5, 1965 he recorded his satisfaction thus:

"Since the assessee has concealed the particulars of his income and has deliberately furnished inaccurate particulars thereof, a notice under Section 274 of the Income Tax Act, 1961 has also been issued to show cause why penalty may not be imposed under Section 271 (1) (c) of the Act."

This shows very clearly that his satisfaction was reached during the hearing of the appeal and he recorded the same in the appellate order itself.

38. We are also unable to agree with the argument that Section 297 (2) (g) is a charging section in the sense that penalty can be imposed by its own force. Notwithstanding, the use in this provision of the expression "any such penalty may be imposed under this Act", it is merely an enabling provision. It provides for neither the measure of penalty nor does it contain the defaults in respect of which penalty may be levied nor indeed does it specify the authorities empowered to levy the penalty. All these provisions are to be found in Chapter XXI which becomes applicable by virtue of this provision.

39. The view that we are taking is supported by the Bombay High Court in (1967) 64 ITR 637 (Bom); by the Gujarat High Court in Commr. of Income Tax v. Hira Lal Mohan Lal Shah, (1968) 69 ITR 312 (Guj) and D. M. Mansavi v. Commr. of Income Tax, (1969) 72 ITR 17 (Guj) and by the Calcutta High Court in its unreported decision in Narendra Sharma v. Income Tax Officer, Matter No. 213 of 1966, D/- 5-3-1969 (Cal).

40. With respect we cannot subscribe to the contrary view taken by this Court in Madan Mohan Damma Mal, (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All) (supra); by the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Kishan Lal v. Commr. of Income Tax, M. P., (1967) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) and in Commr. of Income Tax v. Champalal Sukhram, (1969) 72 ITR 417 = (AIR 1969 Madh Pra 72) and the Delhi High Court in its unreported decision in M/s. Jain Brothers v. Union of India, Civil Misc. Writ No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi).

41. Lastly it was contended that no injustice had been caused to the petitioner inasmuch as the penalty of Rs. 10,000 ultimately levied by the Tribunal was less than the minimum of 20% prescribed by Sec. 271 and, therefore, this Court should not interfere. We are not impressed by this argument. Justice has to be done in accordance with law. If the penalty has been imposed with the aid of a provision which is unconstitutional and under a law which is inapplicable, the penalty is clearly unauthorised and without jurisdiction and cannot be upheld even if the amount of penalty happens to be less than the minimum prescribed under the law. Whether the penalty could be levied under the old Act is a question which does not arise in this case and need not be decided. Moreover, it is not possible to speculate as to what would have been the amount of penalty if the petitioner had been proceeded against under the old Act. In the circumstances, we are not prepared to accept the suggestion that the petitioner has not been prejudiced or that no injustice has been caused to him.

42. For the reasons stated above, we allow this petition and quash the order of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner dated December 31, 1966 (Annexure 6) and the order of the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal dated December 17, 1967 (Annexure 7) and direct that the amount of penalty, if realised be refunded to the petitioner. The other reliefs claimed by the petitioner are refused.

43. In the circumstances of the case, we make no order as to costs.

SATISH CHANDRA, J.: 44. A Bench of this Court referred this writ petition to a Full Bench principally because it involved the constitutional vires of Section 297 (2) (g) of the Income-tax Act, 1961.

45. The petitioner is a partnership firm. It runs a flour, oil and rice mill at Bareilly. For the assessment year 1959-60 the firm filed a return on 29th December, 1959, showing a net profit of Rs. 22,674. On 1st February, 1962, the firm filed a revised return showing an overall loss of Rs. 3,940. The Income-tax Officer on 30th March, 1964, assessed the petitioner on a total income of Rs. 82,662. The petitioner preferred an appeal. At the hearing of the appeal the Income-tax Officer brought to the notice of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner that there were several discrepancies between the assessee's bank pass-books and the bank account in the Khata Bahi. The Commissioner asked the Income-tax Officer inter alia to check the bank accounts in the assessee's ledger for the financial year 1958-59 with their pass-books and submit a detailed report in regard to the discrepancies if any. The Income-tax Officer submitted a report on 30th December, 1964. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner felt that there were large amounts of undisclosed income. He consequently issued a notice of enhancement to the assessee on 14th January, 1965. The petitioner firm in its reply to the notice admitted concealment to the extent of Rs. 56,000. The Commissioner examined the matter in detail and came to the conclusion that the unexplained amounts of deposits, remittances and expenses came to Rs. 1,03,500. This represented the petitioner's concealed income from undisclosed sources. Ultimately he assessed the petitioner's total income at Rs. 1,69,350. At the end of his order dated 5th April, 1965, the Commissioner held that since the assessee had concealed the particulars of its income and deliberately furnished inaccurate particulars thereof, a notice under Section 274 of the Income-tax Act, 1961, was also being issued requiring the assessee to show cause why penalty may not be imposed under Section 271 (1) (c) of the Act. The same day the requisite notice was issued to the assessee.

46. The petitioner went up in appeal to the Tribunal. The Tribunal by its order dated 18th June, 1966, reduced the amount of income from undisclosed sources, which was fixed by the Commissioner at Rs. 1,03,500 to Rs. 80,000. It also made certain alterations in other items and the total assessable income of the petitioner was fixed at Rs. 1,07,902.

47. On 29th December, 1966, the petitioner filed a reply to the penalty notice. He took the plea that in view of the assessable income as finally determined by the Tribunal and in view of the fact that certain items were still disputed by way of reference, if the disputed amounts are excluded, then the income as finally determined by the Tribunal remains the same as assessed by the Income-tax Officer. As the firm had already been heavily assessed, it requested that a lenient view of the case be taken and it may be exempted from the imposition of penalty.

48. In his order dated 31st December, 1966, the Appellate Assistant Commissioner held that this is a case where concealment of income of at least Rs. 80,000 had not only been established but also admitted by the assessee. It was a case of deliberate concealment of income to which clause (c) of Section 271 (1) of the Act was attracted. He imposed a penalty in the sum of Rs. 52,500. The Commissioner observed that this sum was equal to nearly half of the maximum amount of penalty leviable in this case. The petitioner felt aggrieved and went up in appeal to the Tribunal. Before the Tribunal it was argued for the assessee that Section 297 (2) (g) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, violated Article 14 of the Constitution. This plea was repelled by the Tribunal on the strength of the Supreme Court decision in (1960) 60 ITR 112 = (AIR 1966 SC 1089) in which it was held that the authorities created under a statute could not consider questions relating to the constitutional vices of that Act. The Tribunal, therefore, declined to go into this question. On the basis of several decided cases of various High Courts, the Tribunal held that the findings reached in assessment proceedings as to the undisclosed income, were prima facie sufficient to support a finding on that question in penalty proceedings, though such findings are not conclusive. It then observed that "the assessee has not brought on record any material to show that the finding arrived at in the assessment proceedings was erroneous". It held that those findings were rightly acted upon in these proceedings. The Tribunal observed that after giving anxious thought to the question of the amount of penalty the ends of justice would be met by imposing a penalty of Rs. 10,000 only. This order of the Tribunal dated 17th December, 1967, is sought to be quashed in the present writ petition.

49. It appears that the petitioner applied for reference to the High Court of several questions of law arising out of the Tribunal's order passed in the assessment proceedings. The Tribunal on 15th September, 1967, referred one question of law relating to the credit balance in the petitioner's sales tax account, which had been treated as an income. The petitioner filed an application in this Court under Section 66 (2) of the Income-tax Act, 1922, for reference of two other questions of law relating to items of income which had been added to the trading account and on account of the personal expenses of the partners. No other finding appears to have been challenged in this application. This application was rejected by this Court on 13th February, 1968.

50. In the writ petition the petitioner has prayed that the order of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner as well as of the Tribunal passed in assessment proceedings be quashed in so far as they relate to the addition of income on the finding that it was concealed income from undisclosed sources. The order of the Commissioner merged in that of the Tribunal. The order of the Tribunal dated 18th June, 1968, was specifically questioned by the petitioner by way of an application under Section 66 (2). This Court dismissed that application on 13th February, 1968. Thus, the orders on the regular assessment side have become final so far as this Court is concerned. They cannot be questioned in this Court even under Article 226 of the Constitution.

51. Mr. Raja Ram Agarwal, appearing for the petitioner attacked the orders passed in penalty proceedings on the following grounds:—

1. The finding that there was concealment of income in the assessment proceedings was without jurisdiction and could not form the basis of penalty proceedings.

2. Section 297 (2) (g) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, violates Article 20 (1) of the Constitution.

3. Section 297 (2) (g) infringes the guarantee of equality enshrined in Art. 14 of the Constitution.

4. Section 271 of the Act was inapplicable.

52. In my opinion the petitioner is not entitled to raise the first ground. The Income-tax Act provides for a reference for the opinion of the High Court of a question of law arising out of the order of the Tribunal. The Supreme Court in Commr. of Income Tax v. Scindia Steam Navigation Co. Ltd., (1961) 42 ITR 589 = (AIR 1961 SC 1633) held that a question of law not raised before the Tribunal and not dealt with by it in its order cannot be said to arise out of its order, even if on the facts of the case stated in the order, the question fairly arises. The same view was taken by the Supreme Court in Ramanathan Chettiar v. Commr. of Income Tax, (1967) 63 ITR 458 = (AIR 1967 SC 857 and T. D. Kumar and Brothers (P.) Ltd. v. Commr. of Income Tax, (1967) 63 ITR 67 (SC). When Parliament has enacted that a question of law ought to be raised before the Tribunal before the High Court can give an opinion on it, it will not be right for this Court to circumvent the legislative mandate, by exercising the discretionary jurisdiction in favour of an assessee who did not raise the question before the Tribunal, either in the assessment or the penalty proceedings, and who has not in the present petition given any explanation for the omission. This Court has held that a litigant is not entitled to raise a question of jurisdiction for the first time in a writ petition unless he satisfactorily explains why he did not raise the plea before the appropriate authority. (See J. K. Iron & Steel Co. Ltd. v. Labour Appellate Tribunal, AIR 1953 All 624, Supdt. of Police v. R. M. Singh, AIR 1959 All 710 and K. N. Halwai v. Registrar Co-operative Society U. P. (Relying on Pannalal Binraj v. Union of India, AIR 1957 SC 397 at p. 412)).

53. Clause (g), Section 297 (2) of the Income-tax Act, 1961, makes the new Act applicable to penalty proceedings in respect of an assessment for the year ending on 31st March, 1962, or any earlier year, provided the assessment is completed on or after 1st April, 1962. It was urged that this provision violates Article 20 (1) of the Constitution because the new Act provides for a greater penalty than that which might have been inflicted under the law in force at the time of a commission of the offence. Section 28 of the 1922 Act did not prescribe any minimum, whereas clause (iii) of Section 271 (1) (c) of the 1961 Act prescribes that a minimum of 20 per cent of the penalty must be imposed. The maximum penalty is the same under the old as well as the new Act for some classes of defaults, while it is lower now for other classes. Even this minimum can be waived or reduced by the Commissioner under Section 271 (4-A). Previously it was left to the Income-tax Officer to determine the reasonable amount of penalty to be awarded in each case, but under the new Act, Parliament by fixing a minimum seems to say that anything below it will not be reasonable. This is only guiding the discretion of the officer, and not imposing a greater penalty.

54. The Supreme Court in K. Satwant v. State of Punjab, (1960) 2 SCR 89 at pp. 111, 113 = (AIR 1960 SC 266 at pp. 276, 277) held that a law which provides for a minimum sentence of fine on conviction cannot be read as one which imposes a greater penalty than that which might have been inflicted under the law under which there was no limit as to the extent of the fine. This Court in (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All) and the High Courts of Kerala in P. Ummali Umma v. Inspecting Assistant Commr. of Income-tax, (1967) 64 ITR 669 (Ker) and Bombay in (1967) 64 ITR 637 (Bom) and Rajasthan in Indra & Co. v. Union of India, (1967) 64 ITR 664, have held that the Act of 1961 does not provide for a greater penalty. So, Article 20 of the Constitution is not violated.

55. But assuming that the new Act tends to impose a greater penalty, yet Article 20 would not be attracted to penalty proceedings. Article 20 (1) states:—

“20 (1) No person shall be convicted of any offence except for violation of a law in force at the time of the commission of the act charged as an offence, nor be subjected to a penalty greater than that which might have been inflicted under the law in force at the time of the commission of the offence.

(2) No person shall be prosecuted and punished for the same offence more than once.....”

The Supreme Court in AIR 1953 SC 325 observed that:—

“Article 20 (2) incorporates within its scope the plea of ‘autrefois convict’ as known to the British jurisprudence or the plea of double jeopardy as known to the American Constitution but circumscribes it by providing that there should be not only a prosecution but also a punishment in the first instance in order to operate as a bar to a second prosecution and punishment for the same offence.”

It held that the article contemplates proceedings of the nature of criminal proceedings and the prosecution in this context means an initiation of proceedings of a criminal nature. The first part of Article 20 (1) prohibits a conviction while the second part deals with penalty that may be inflicted on conviction. The word “penalty” has been used to denote the sentence of punishment. Like sub-article (2), sub-article (1) also contemplates proceedings of a criminal nature.

56. It is well known that the Legislature can impose both a criminal as well as civil sanction for the same act or omission. In Halvering v. Mitchell, (1938) 303 US 391 it was held that civil sanctions are provided primarily as a safeguard for the protection of the revenue and to reimburse the Government for the heavy expense of investigation and the loss resulting from the tax-payer's fraud. Similarly Jackson J. said in Spies v. United States, (1943) 317 US 492 that the civil sanction consists of additions to the tax upon determinations of fact made by an administrative agency and with no burden on the Government to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt, whereas criminal sanction consists of penal offences enforced by the criminal process in the familiar manner. Invocation of one does not exclude resort to the other. Relying upon these decisions the Kerala High Court in P. Ummali Umma's case, (1967) 64 ITR 669 (Ker) held that the object of the penalty proceedings was to render evasion unprofitable and to secure to the State compensation for damages caused by attempted evasion.

57. Chapter XXI of the 1961 Act deals with penalty. A separate chapter No. XXII provides for offences and prosecutions. Penalty is imposed by the revenue authorities. Prosecution for the offences has to be launched, in view of Section 292, in the regular criminal court, which alone can convict and sentence. The authorities impose penalty if they are satisfied that a default has been committed. The revenue does not have to prove its case beyond all reasonable doubt. In prosecution under Chapter XXII the Revenue will have to prove its case beyond all reasonable doubt, because that is a fundamental principle prevailing in the criminal courts. All these features indicate that prosecutions under Chapter XXII are criminal proceedings, but penalty proceedings constitute a civil sanction. They are Revenue in nature, to which Art. 20 of the Constitution does not apply.

58. The next submission of Mr. Agarwal, learned counsel for the petitioner, was that section 297 (2) (n) of the Act violated Article 14 of the Constitution. It was urged that the penalty provisions of the 1961 Act are more onerous and adverse to the assessee in comparison to the penalty provisions of the 1922 Act. Section 297 (2) (g) classifies assessee for application of the 1961 Act without any reasonable basis. The vice of discrimination is hence imported into this provision. The learned counsel relied upon the decision of the Bombay High Court in (1967) 64 ITR 637 (Bom) where this submission was accepted.

59. Section 297 of the Income-tax Act of 1961 provides for repeals and savings. Sub-section (1) repeals the Income-tax Act of 1922. Sub-section (2) mentions the saving clauses. Clauses (a), (f) and (g) are relevant. They state:—

"2. Notwithstanding the repeal of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 (XI of 1922) (hereinafter referred to as the repealed Act):—

(a) where a return of income has been filed before the commencement of this Act by any person for any assessment year, proceedings for the assessment of that person for that year may be taken and continued as if this Act had not been passed;

(f) any proceeding for the imposition of a penalty in respect of any assessment completed before the 1st day of April, 1962, may be initiated and any such penalty may be imposed as if this Act had not been passed;

(g) any proceeding for the imposition of a penalty in respect of any assessment for the year ending on the 31st day of March, 1962, or any earlier year, which is completed on or after the 1st day of April, 1962, may be initiated and any such penalty may be imposed under this Act;

These provisions classify the application of the new Act on the basis of the date of filing the return for purposes of assessment proceedings, and the date of the completion of the assessment, for purposes of initiating and imposing penalty.

60. In AIR 1952 SC 75 S. R. Das, J. (paze 93) observed that Article 14 forbids class legislation in the sense of making improper discrimination by conferring privileges or imposing liabilities upon persons arbitrarily selected out of a large number of other persons similarly situated in relation to the privileges sought to be conferred or the liability proposed to be imposed. The question hence would be whether the new Act confers greater privileges on the Revenue or imposes more onerous liabilities on the assessee than the 1922 Act? If no, Article 14 will not be attracted.

61. In the present case we are concerned with the provisions of the 1961 Act as it stood prior to the 1968 amendments. The acts and omissions for which penalty can be levied are the same under both the 1922 and the 1961 enactments. In matters of procedure and consequence the two Acts differ.

62. Kanga and Palkhivala's Commentary on the 1961 Act (5th Edition, p. 938) states:—

"The main changes effected by this section namely Section 271 and Sections 274 and 275 are as follows:—

(a) Unlike Section 28 of the 1922 Act, this section does not confer any power on the Appellate Tribunal to impose a penalty.

(b) In cases of concealment of income where the minimum penalty imposable exceeds Rs. 1,000 the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner alone is empowered to impose a penalty (S. 274 (2)), whereas under the 1922 Act the Income-tax Officer had the power to impose a penalty even in such cases.

(c) Under the 1922 Act the Income-tax Officer could not impose any penalty without the previous approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner. Under this Act the Income-tax Officer does not have to take the sanction of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner in any case.

(d) This section provides that in certain cases if any penalty is imposed, it should not be less than the minimum prescribed; there was no such minimum prescribed under the 1922 Act.

(e) The maximum penalty imposable has been reduced in cases falling within Cls. (a) and (b) of Section 271 (1).

(f) There was no time limit for commencement of penalty proceedings under the 1922 Act. This Act requires penalty proceedings to be commenced before the completion of those proceedings in which the Income-tax Officer or the Appellate Assistant Commissioner is satisfied that the default attracting a penalty has been committed (S. 275).

(g) There was no time limit in the 1922 Act for the passing of a penalty order, but a time limit is now imposed by Section 275.

(h) No prosecution could be instituted under the 1922 Act in respect of the same facts on which a penalty was imposed. Under this Act a penalty can be imposed and a prosecution launched on the same facts."

Mr. Gopal Behari, appearing for the Department, pointed out that in addition, it may be stated that the minimum prescribed penalty can be waived or reduced by the Commissioner under the new Act (vide section 271 (4-A)). Another significant departure relates to appeals. Under the proviso to Section 30 of the 1922 Act, no appeal lay against an order imposing a penalty under Section 46 (1), unless the tax had been paid. There is no such fetter to the right of appeal against similar orders under the 1961 Act.

63. The Bombay High Court in Shakti Offset case, (1967) 64 ITR 637 (Bom) held (page 650):—

"In our opinion, the protection that is given to an assessee governed in the matter of penal proceedings under the Act of 1922 in the Income-tax Officer not being able to initiate proceedings or inflict penalties except after concurrence of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner is a valuable guarantee given to the assessee. Similarly, the immunity from prosecution on the basis of facts which have led to a penalty being imposed under S. 28 of the Act of 1922, which is absent from the provisions of the Income-tax Act of 1961, is a material departure from the scheme of liability for the penalty under the two Acts. These features along with the provisions of punishment cannot therefore be lost sight of in a case where there is any ground for complaint of discrimination between two assessee similarly situated."

Thus, the immunity from prosecution and sentence, and the inter-position of a superior officer like the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner for initiating penalty proceedings, were considered to be the main privileges available to the assessee under the old Act, which have been taken away by the new Act and, therefore, the new Act was held to be more onerous.

64. The Act of 1961 is prospective. Section 297 (2) states the exceptions. Clause (g) makes the penalty provisions of this Act operate retrospectively. Section 297 (2) does not touch Chapter XXII which deals with offences and prosecutions. This chapter also operates prospectively, and will not apply to past acts or omissions. The provisions in Chapter XXII expressly make acts and omissions mentioned in the various stated sections of the 1961 Act as offences. There is no provision anywhere in the 1961 Act which makes punishable, defaults or omissions in relation to the provisions of the 1922 Act. An assessee covered by Section 297 (2) (g) does not become liable to prosecution under the new Act.

65. In the case of T. S. Baliah, C. A. Nos. 130 and 133 of 1968, D/- 12-12-1968 = (reported in AIR 1969 SC 701) the Supreme Court has held that Section 297 (2) was not exhaustive. There was nothing in that provision or in any other provision of the 1961 Act which expressed an intention to exclude the application of Section 6, General Clauses Act. Hence that section will apply to the repeal of the 1922 Act. The provisions of the 1922 Act, which provided for prosecution (like section 52) would survive the repeal and would be available for dealing with the liability to prosecution incurred prior to the repeal. It may be said that since, in view of Clause (g) of Section 297 (2) penalty would be impossible on him under the 1961 Act, his case would not be governed by Section 28 (4) which provides that an assessee will not be liable to prosecution for the same acts or omissions for which a penalty has been imposed "under this section". In such a case penalty is not imposed under Section 28 and, therefore, he will be liable to prosecution, though if his assessment had been completed before 1st April, 1962, he would have been immune from prosecution in view of Section 28 (4).

66. According to this Supreme Court decision the prosecution provisions of the old Act survive the repeal. Section 28 (4) provides a condition precedent to the launching of prosecutions. That section would necessarily survive the repeal.

67. The liability to penalty is incurred under Section 28 when the default is committed. But, though the liability was incurred under Section 28 of the old Act, Clause (g) of Section 297 (2) enables the proceedings to be taken therefor under Section 271 of the new Act. Thus, the award of penalty is the result of the combined action of Section 28 of the old Act and Section 271 of the new Act. In the eye of law the penalty is imposed under Section 28 read with Section 271. Thus, such a case would also be within the ambit of S. 28 (4) and where penalty has been so imposed, the assessee cannot be prosecuted on the same facts. The assessee remains immune from prosecution as before.

68. As regards the inter-position of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner under the 1922 Act, the position is, in my opinion, no worse under the new Act. Previously the Income-tax Officer had to refer every case to the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner for sanction to initiate penalty proceedings. After sanction he decided every case himself. In view of Section 274 (2), in cases of concealment of income, which is really the substantial head for imposition of penalty, the Income-tax Officer has to refer to the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner every case entirely if the minimum penalty impossible exceeds Rs. 1,000. So except in petty cases, the Income-tax Officer cannot take action himself. A superior officer like the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner has to initiate and complete the proceedings. So, in a majority of cases, the inter-position is more effective. The safeguard to the assessee is beneficial rather than onerous and he cannot complain of discrimination.

69. In Charanjit Lal Chowdhury v. Union of India, AIR 1951 SC 41, S. R. Das, J. (page 66) observed:

"It is plain that every classification is in some degree likely to produce some inequality, but mere production of inequality is not by itself enough. The inequality produced, in order to encounter the challenge of the Constitution, must be 'actually and palpably unreasonable and arbitrary'."

That being the test, could it be said that leaving to the Income-tax Officer the discretion to initiate proceedings himself in petty cases, is palpably unreasonable and arbitrary? Before answering this query, the impact of the other changes, on the assessee, may also be noted

70. Previously penalty proceedings could not only be initiated, but also completed, without any limit of time. The assessee was perpetually under this threat; but under the new Act they cannot be commenced after the completion of the proceedings, in the course of which the satisfaction was reached. Further, the new Act has imposed a limit of two years from the date of the completion of the assessment, for completing penalty proceedings. In this respect Parliament has provided to the assessee, a safeguard of great magnitude. Then, if an assessee has crossed through the stages of the Income-tax Officer and the Appellate Assistant Commissioner, he is immune, because he is in no danger of facing penalty proceedings at the instance of the Appellate Tribunal under the new Act, though he was liable to an action by the Tribunal also under the 1922 Act. This is another concession to the assessee. Again, under the old Act an assessee could not appeal against an order imposing penalty under Section 46 (1) without paying the tax, while under the new Act he has an unfettered right of appeal against a similar order. Here also the Legislature has relaxed the provisions in favour of an assessee. These substantial safeguards given to an assessee, in my opinion, more than offset the sting of the loss of immunity from an action of penalty being taken by the Income-tax Officer himself in some cases. As seen above, the prescribing of a minimum does not impose a greater burden on the assessee.

71. It may be said that previously the penalty was imposed by the Income-tax Officer; the assessee hence had two rights of appeal. Now the penalty is imposed by the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. He stands to lose a right of appeal. The new Act, therefore, adversely affects the assessee. This is true; but, on the other hand, the assessee gains the advantage that the proceedings for penalty are not taken by the same officer who had already recorded a finding against the assessee on the question of concealment of income which is the basis for the penalty. Under the new Act the penalty proceedings are initiated not only by a superior officer but by an officer who cannot be deemed to have pre-judged the issue and who would apply a fresh mind to the case. This, in my opinion, balances the loss of one right of appeal

72. Looking broadly, Parliament did not change the substantive provisions. Penalty was even now impossible for the same acts or omissions; but the machinery has been tightened to make the scheme more fair and efficient. I am unable to hold that the new Act confers better privileges upon the revenue or imposed greater liabilities on the assessee on the topic of penalty. The inequality produced by the new Act, if any, is not palpably unreasonable or arbitrary. Section 297 (2) (g) has not been enacted with an evil eye and an unequal hand. It does not import the vice of discrimination.

73. Even if it is assumed for the sake of argument that the new Act is more prejudicial to the assessee, the further question would be whether the classification is invalid. The Supreme Court has formulated several principles to determine the validity of classifications for the purposes of Article 14 of the Constitution. It has been laid down that:

1. In permissible classification mathematical nicety and perfect equality are not required. Similarly, not identity of treatment, is enough. State of Bombay v. F. N. Balsara, 1951 SCR 682 at pp. 709-10 = (AIR 1951 SC 318 at pp. 326-327) and 1952 SCR 284 at pp. 349-50 = (AIR 1952 SC 75 at pp. 98-99).

2. The legislature is free to recognize degrees of harm and may confine its restrictions to those cases where the need is deemed to be the clearest. (R. K. Dalmia v. Justice S. R. Tendolkar, AIR 1958 SC 538, proposition (d)).

3. It must be presumed that the legislature understands and correctly appreciates the need of its own people, that its laws are directed to problems made manifest by experience and that its discriminations are based on adequate grounds. (Dalmia's case, AIR 1958 SC 538 proposition (c)).

4. In order to sustain the presumption of constitutionality the Court may take into consideration matters of common knowledge, matters of common report, the history of the times and may assume every state of facts which can be conceived (Dalmia's case, AIR 1958 SC 538 proposition (e)).

5. The classification may be founded on different bases, namely, geographical or according to objects or occupations or the like (Dalmia's case, AIR 1958 SC 538).

6. Permissible classification must satisfy two conditions, namely,

(i) it must be founded on an intelligible differentia which distinguishes persons or things that are grouped together from others left out of the group, and

(ii) the differentia must have a rational relation or nexus to the object sought to be achieved by the statute, (AIR 1951 SC 41, AIR 1955 SC 191).

7. If the two tests are satisfied it is not for the courts to see to the wisdom of the basis for the classification. It may be demonstrated that the scheme is not the best in the circumstances, and the choice of the legislature may be shown to be erroneous, but the classification will not be subject to judicial interference on these grounds (vide Shah, J., speaking for the majority in AIR 1967 SC 691 paragraph 27).

8. A general classification cannot be justified on the basis of exceptional cases: Civil Appeal No. 1832 of 1968, decided by the Supreme Court on 12-12-1968 (SC).

(In other words, general classification cannot fail because of exceptional cases.)

9. Tax Laws are not immune from Article 14, but in the application of the principles of classification the Courts, in view of the inherent complexity of fiscal adjustment to diverse elements, permit a larger discretion to the Legislature in the matter of classification. The power of the Legislature to classify is of wide range and flexibility so that it can adjust its system of taxation in all proper and reasonable ways. (Khandige Sham Bhat v. Agricultural Income-tax Officer, AIR 1963 SC 591).

Thus, it is for the legislature to choose the basis for classification. It is not for the Courts to judge whether the chosen basis was the best or the wisest or a different basis may have served the purpose better.

74. The Courts are confined to seeing that the twin tests of differentia and nexus are satisfied. The classification would, therefore, not be bad simply because the legislature chose the event of completion of the assessment to be the basis of the classification of assessee, for penalty proceedings, though the date of the filing of the return may have been better, and though the latter was fixed for classifying assessment proceedings.

75. In (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All) this Court upheld the classification underlying Cl. (g) of Section 297 (2) of the Act. Bishambhar, Dayal, J. observed that:—

“Since penalty has to be calculated and then imposed according to the tax assessed, the penalty being proportionate to the tax, the imposing of penalty must necessarily follow the assessment. The question of imposition of penalty thus arises after the assessment has been completed and, therefore, the provision that in cases where assessment has been completed after the new Act had come into force, the penalty would be imposed according to the new Act, appears to be a reasonable classification.”

So, the event which enabled the impossible penalty to be found out was considered an intelligible differentia. It had, nexus, because it enabled the application of the new Act.

76. It is well known that generally the finding regarding satisfaction that the default attracting penalty has been committed, is recorded in the assessment order. The event of the completion of the assessment hence crystallises or fixes the liability for drawing up proceedings for penalty. It furnishes a material part of the cause of action for it. The fact that a material part of the cause of action has accrued before or after the commencement of the new Act is a quality or characteristic or differentia which is intelligible, for founding the classification of assessee for initiating penalty proceedings under the old or the new Act. This differentia is rationally related to the object of Clauses (f) and (g), namely to apply the Act which was in force when penalty proceedings are normally to commence. In those cases where the proceedings are to be drawn up after the commencement of the new Act, the provisions of the new Act were made applicable. This classification satisfies the twin tests and is valid. The view of this Court in (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All) that Cls. (f) and (g) does not violate Article 14 of the Constitution has been accepted by the Delhi High Court in Writ Petn. No. 1247 of 1967, D/- 24-2-1969 (Delhi) and the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Gopichand Sarjuprasad v. Union of India, (1969) 73 ITR 263 = (AIR 1969 Madh Pra 220). These Courts have dissented from the Bombay view expressed in Shakti Offset case, (1967) 64 ITR 637 (Bom). I think the consensus of opinion is better.

77. Mr. Agarwal appearing for the petitioner relied upon the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1967 SC 691. There the majority struck down Section 33 of the Payment of Bonus Act, 1965, as infringing Article 14 of the Constitution. Under it the classification was based on the pendency of disputes. It was held that this basis was under the peculiar circumstances neither logical nor reasonable. That case is, in my opinion, not applicable because the classification in the present case is not dependent upon the pendency of a dispute, but upon the occurrence of a material part of the cause of action for penalty proceedings.

78. However, a classification which is not valid for one purpose may nonetheless be valid for another. The classification of assessee on the basis of pending proceedings and fresh proceedings was upheld by the Supreme Court in AIR 1951 SC 97. Similarly a classification based on pending proceedings was held valid by this Court in AIR 1963 All 451. This case related to Sec. 3 of the Income-tax (Amendment) Act of 1950.

79. In M. Parmanand v. Addl. Income-tax Officer, AIR 1958 Mys 70, the Income-tax (Amendment) Act (XXV of 1953) was challenged as discriminatory. The basis of classification for applying the amended Act was the event of the completion of the assessment. The classification was upheld by the Mysore High Court.

80. The last submission raised on behalf of the petitioner was that Section 271 while, on its terms, does not apply to the present case. Under S. 271 (1) (c) penalty can be levied if the officer is satisfied (that the assessee has concealed income) in the course of proceedings under this Act. Hence, this section will not apply where the satisfaction is reached in the course of the proceedings under the 1922 Act, as in the present case. The second ground emphasised was that under Clauses (a) and (b) of Section 271 (1) penalty can be imposed for omissions or defaults in relation to the mentioned sections of the Act of 1961 alone and not for non-compliance with the provisions of the old Act. This submission was accepted by the Gujarat High Court in (1968) 69 ITR 312 (Guj) and (1969) 72 ITR 17 (Guj), but was rejected by this Court in (1968) 70 ITR 293 (All) and by the Madhya Pradesh High Court in (1967) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) as well as in (1969) 73 ITR 263 = (AIR 1969 Madh Pra 220).

81. In Gopichand's case, (1969) 73 ITR 263 = (AIR 1969 Madh Pra 220) (supra) the Madhya Pradesh High Court held that after the commencement of the Act of 1961 assessment proceedings initiated under the 1922 Act were allowed to continue under it only by force of Section 297 (2) (a) of the Act of 1961, and hence they were proceedings under the 1961 Act itself; consequently, the satisfaction reached by the Income-tax Officer about the concealment of the income on the part of the assessee attracting penalty was in the course of proceedings under the 1961 Act. With respect, this reasoning appeals to me. But the matter may be considered from the alternative view point that such proceedings are not "under this Act."

82. Section 297 (2) (g) not only authorises the initiation of proceedings but also expressly empowers the imposition of the penalty. It is hence in the nature of a charging provision as well. It makes the penalty provisions operate retrospectively, because it empowers the imposition of penalty under the Act of 1961 for defaults committed before its commencement. Section 271 on its terms authorises the levy of penalty if the satisfaction is reached in the course of assessment proceedings held under the Act of 1961. Clause (g) however applies Sec. 271 to cases where the satisfaction is reached in proceedings held under the old Act. These are mutually conflicting provisions on the same subject. They cannot co-exist or stand together. In this situation the doctrine of implied repeal will apply. The doctrine says that when two provisions on the same subject-matter directly collide, that is obedience to one is not possible without disobedience to the other, and the co-existence of the two is destructive of the object sought to be achieved by the later enactment, then the earlier provision is repealed. The basis of this doctrine is that the legislature is presumed to know the existing law, and it is not deemed to intend to create confusion in the law by retaining conflicting provisions in the statute. In applying the doctrine, the Courts do no more than give effect to the intention of the legislature (see Municipal Council Palai v. Joseph, AIR 1963 SC 1561 1565 (Para 10)). When repeal operates by implication, the earlier provision goes, to the extent of repugnancy (see Zaverbhai Amaldas v. State of Bombay, AIR 1954 SC 752 (Para 11)). Section 297 (2) (g) comes later in the Act. It will repeal the offending part of section 271. The troublesome words in Section 271 are "under this Act" occurring in the phrase "in the course of proceedings under this Act." They will be deemed non-existent in the application of Section 271 to cases governed by Section 297 (2) (g).

83. It is often said that Courts do not favour implied repeal. The doctrine is not applied unless the two provisions cannot be reconciled. One rule of construction relating to conciliation was laid down by the Madras High Court in Rangiah v. Appaji Rao, AIR 1927 Mad 163. At page 164 the Bench held:—

"It is a well known canon of construction that the Courts should construe the provisions of legislative enactments in such a way as not to impute inconsistency to the Legislature. Where the provisions are reconcilable the Courts should try to reconcile. They should not attach importance to a single phrase or clause in one section and overlook the clear provision in other sections which are of a general character." This principle may well apply here. For cases covered by Cl. (g), the words "under this Act" in section 271 will have to be disregarded.

84. The same kind of thing was said by the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Kishanlal's case, (1967) 64 ITR 285 (Madh Pra) while dealing with the argument that Cls. (a) and (b) of Section 271 (1) entitle the imposition of penalty only if there has been a default in relation to sections like 139, 142, 143 and 148 of the 1961 Act, which are expressly mentioned in them. The Court observed that the defaults for which penalty can be imposed under the various clauses of Section 28 of the 1922 Act are precisely the same for which penalty can be levied under Section 271 (1) of the 1961 Act. It was held that:—

"The substance of the matter is the nature of the acts and omissions of the assessee for which he is liable to penalty and not the particular provisions, whether of the 1922 Act or the 1961 Act, under which the assessee is required to do those acts or is restrained from doing them." It was then observed that Section 271 (1) has to be construed in harmony with Section 297 (2) (g), and not in a manner so as to render Clause (g) meaningless or redundant.

85. Be that as it may, this argument cannot be used by the petitioner. Here Cl. (c) of Section 271 (1) is applicable. This clause states:—

"(c) has concealed the particulars of his income or deliberately furnished inaccurate particulars of such income." This clause does not refer to any section of any Act. Its application cannot be ousted on this ground.

86. Even if it is held that technically Section 271 was not attracted and only Section 28 of the old Act could be used, yet the petition cannot succeed. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner said that a penalty of Rs. 52500 was nearly half of the maximum leviable. The Tribunal reduced it to Rs. 10,000 which was much below the minimum of 20% prescribed by Section 271. If the petitioner had raised the technical objection that Section 271 was not applicable in reply to the show cause notice, the Revenue may have satisfied this objection by taking proceedings under Section 28 of the old Act. As seen above, there is no limitation for penalty proceedings under the old Act. Penalty can even now be levied under the old Act. The petitioner cannot escape altogether. He cannot be heard to say that Rs. 10,000 (merely 10% of the maximum) was not reasonable for deliberate concealment. Article 226 of the Constitution confers a discretionary jurisdiction. It is to be exercised primarily to advance the interests of justice, and not merely to feed a technicality. The findings as to concealment are clear. No material whatsoever was adduced by the petitioner to prove his innocence. The petitioner has already paid the amount of penalty. Even if it be held that Section 28 of the old Act and not Section 271 of the new Act was applicable, this will, in my opinion, not be a fit case for interference.

87. In the result, the petition fails and is dismissed with costs.

BY THE COURT

In view of the majority opinion the petition is allowed. The order of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner dated 31st December, 1966, and of the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal dated 17th December, 1967, are quashed. The amount of penalty, if realised, will be refunded to the petitioner. The other reliefs claimed by the petitioner are refused. There will be no order as to costs.

Petition allowed.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 641 (V 57 C 90)

FULL BENCH

S. K. VERMA, R. S. PATHAK AND
T. P. MUKHERJEE, JJ.

Commissioner Sales Tax, U. P., Applicant
v. Sukan Chand Shyam Lal, Agra, Opposite Party.

Sales Tax Ref. No. 551 of 1967, D/- 21-5-1970.

Sales Tax — U. P. Sales Tax Act (15 of 1948), Sections 7 (3) and 21 — Failure to

HN/HN/D603/70/CWM/P

1970 All. 41 XII G—15

furnish return — Proceeding under Sec. 7 (3) not without jurisdiction — Assessment under Section 7 (3) cannot be considered as one under Section 21.

On failure of assessee to furnish his return, the turnover "escapes" assessment and it is open to the Sales Tax Officer to proceed either under Section 7 (3) or under Sec. 21. When he proceeds under Section 7 (3) and makes an assessment he acts within his jurisdiction and the assessment made under Section 7 (3) cannot be considered as made under Section 21. Sales Tax Ref. No. 397 of 1961, D/- 30-7-1963 (All) Observation of Desai, J., held overruled by AIR 1968 SC 565.

(Para 9)

It cannot be said that Section 7 (3) can be invoked only when a return has been filed though not in time while a case where a return has not been filed at all falls under Section 21. There is no provision entitling an assessee to furnish a return beyond the time allowed by the statute. Unless the date for submission of the return is extended under Section 7 (1), there is no obligation upon the Sales Tax Officer to consider the return filed out of time. (Para 11)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1970) 25 STC 74 = 1970 MPLJ 573,

Addl. Asst. Commr. Sales Tax v.

Firm Jagmohandas Vijay Kumar

8

(1968) AIR 1968 SC 565 (V 55) =

(1968) 21 STC 326, Anandji Haridas and Co. (P.) Ltd. v. S. P. Kasture 6, 7, 9, 10

(1964) AIR 1964 SC 766 (V 51) =

(1963) 14 STC 976, Ghanshyam

Das v. Regional Asst. Commr. of

Sales Tax 3, 7, 9

(1963) Sales Tax Ref. No. 397 of

1961, D/- 30-7-1963 (All), Kishan

Lal Gopi Krishna v. Commr. of Sales

Tax 3, 10

Standing Counsel, for Applicant; K. N. Seth, for Opposite Party.

PATHAK, J.:— This is a reference under Section 11 (1) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act on the following question:

"Whether under the facts and circumstances of the case the proceedings for assessment in this case should not have been taken to be the proceedings for "escaped assessment" under Section 21 of the U. P. Sales Tax Act and should have been held to be only the first assessment under rule 41(5) of the U. P. Sales Tax Rules as mentioned in the notice for assessment issue to the assessee?"

2. The assessee is a partnership firm which appears to have enjoyed a brief period of existence only. Business was commenced on February 13, 1957 and was closed on July 8, 1957. The dissolution of the firm followed on October 5, 1957. Admittedly, notice of the dissolution was not conveyed to the sales tax authorities.

3. The assessee did not file any return of its turnover under the U. P. Sales Tax Act for the period during which it had carried on business during the assessment year 1957-58. On March 11, 1959, and again on May 20, 1959 two notices were issued by the Sales Tax Officer purporting to be under Rule 41 (5) of the U. P. Sales Tax Rules. They were followed by a third notice dated November 2, 1960. The firm having been dissolved all the notices were served, it is said, by affixation to the last known place of the business. On December 1, 1960, the Sales Tax Officer made an ex parte assessment order, purporting to be under Rule 41 (5). The assessment order was set aside in appeal and the case was remanded for fresh assessment. The assessee applied in revision and contended that the entire assessment proceedings should have been annulled and the remand order was contrary to law. The revision application was allowed by the Additional Judge (Revisions) Sales Tax. The Additional Judge (Revisions) held, relying upon Chanshyam Das v. Regional Asstt. Commr. of Sales Tax, (1963) 14 STC 976 = (AIR 1964 SC 766) that as no return had been filed by the assessee it was a case where the turnover had escaped assessment and, therefore, the proceeding lay under Section 21 of the Act. In adopting this view, the additional Judge (Revisions) declined to follow the decision of this Court in Kishan Lal Copi Krishna v. Commr. of Sales Tax, Sales Tax Ref. No. 397 of 1961, D/- 30-7-1963 (All). Accordingly, he allowed the revision application and quashed the entire proceeding for the assessment year 1957-58. At the instance of the Commissioner of Sales Tax the present reference has been made. It came on for hearing before a Division Bench of this Court, which being of opinion that the decision of this Court in Gopikrishna Kishan Lal (supra) required reconsideration in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in Chanshyamdas, (1963) 14 STC 976 = (AIR 1964 SC 766) (supra) referred the case to a larger Bench.

4. Section 7 (1) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act requires every dealer, who is liable to pay tax under the Act, to submit a return or returns of his turnover at such intervals and within such period as is prescribed. Section 7 (2) provides that if the assessing authority is satisfied that the returns submitted are correct and complete he shall assess the tax on the basis thereof. Section 7 (3) reads:—

"If no return is submitted by the dealer under sub-section (1) within the period prescribed in that behalf or, if the return submitted by him appears to the assessing authority to be incorrect or incomplete the assessing authority shall, after making such enquiry as he considers necessary, determine the turnover of the dealer to the best of his judgment and assess the tax on the basis thereof:

Provided that before taking action under this sub-section the dealer shall be given a reasonable opportunity for proving the correctness or completeness of the return submitted by him."

Section 21 provides:—

"21. Assessment of tax on the turnover not assessed during the year. (1) If the assessing authority has reason to believe that the whole or any part of the turnover of the dealer has, for any reason, escaped assessment to tax for any year, the assessing authority may, after issuing notice to the dealer, and making such enquiry as may be necessary, assess or re-assess him to tax:

Provided that the tax shall be charged at the rate at which it would have been charged had the turnover not escaped assessment or full assessment, as the case may be.

Explanation. — Nothing in this sub-section shall be deemed to prevent the assessing authority from making an assessment to the best of its judgment.

(2) No order of assessment under sub-section (1) or under any other provision of this Act shall be made for any assessment year after the expiry of four years from the end of such year:—

Provided that where the notice under sub-section (1) has been served within such four years the assessment or re-assessment to be made in pursuance of such notice may be made within one year of date of the service of the notice even if the period of four years is thereby exceeded;

Provided further that nothing contained in this section limiting the time within which any assessment or re-assessment may be made shall apply to an assessment or re-assessment made in consequence of, or to give effect to, any finding or direction contained in an order under Section 8, 10 or 11

Explanation.— Where the assessment proceedings relating to any dealer remained stayed under the orders of any Civil or other competent Court, the period during which the proceedings remained so stayed shall be excluded in computing the period of limitation for assessment provided under this sub-section."

5. The contention on behalf of the Commissioner of Sales Tax is that as the assessee had failed to submit its return of turnover for the assessment year 1957-58, the turnover had escaped assessment and could be taxed under section 7 (3). The case for the assessee is that Section 7 (3) can be invoked only where a return has been filed but not within time, and where a return has not been filed at all as in the present case, recourse can be had to Section 21 only.

6. Learned Counsel for the Commissioner has relied on two decisions of the Supreme Court. One is Chanshyamdas (supra) and other Anandji Haridas and Co. (P.) Ltd. v. S. P. Kastura, (1963) 21 STC 326 = (AIR 1963 SC 535). In both cases the Supreme Court was concerned with Section 11 (4) (a) and Section 11-A of the C. P. and Berar Sales Tax Act, 1947. The material portion of those provisions is set out hereunder:—

"11. If a registered dealer (a) does not furnish returns in respect of any period by the prescribed date . . . . ., the Commissioner shall in the prescribed manner assess the dealer to the best of his judgment:

Provided that he shall not so assess him in respect of the default specified in clause (a) unless the dealer has been first given a reasonable opportunity of being heard."

"11-A (1) If in consequence of any information which has come into his possession, the Commissioner is satisfied that any turnover of a dealer during any period has been under-assessed or has escaped assessment or assessed at a lower rate or any deduction has been wrongly made therefrom, the Commissioner may, at any time within three calendar years from the expiry of such period, after giving the dealer a reasonable opportunity of being heard and after making such enquiry as he considers necessary, proceed in such manner as may be prescribed to reassess or assess, as the case may be, the tax payable on any such turnover; and the Commissioner may direct that the dealer shall pay, by way of penalty in addition to the amount of tax so assessed, a sum not exceeding that amount.

(2) The assessment or reassessment made under sub-section (1) shall be at the rate at which it would have been made, had there been no under-assessment or escapement.

(3) (a). Nothing in sub-sections (1) and (2) (i) shall apply to any proceeding (including any notice issued) under Section 11. . . . ."

7. In Ghanshyamdas, (1963) 14 STC 976 = (AIR 1964 SC 766) (supra) the Supreme Court examined the scope of the expression 'escaped assessment' under the aforesaid Act and held that the turnover cannot be said to escape assessment if assessment proceedings are already pending but where the dealer has failed to file his return and no proceeding for assessment has been initiated by the assessing authority, it may be said that turnover has escaped assessment. In that event, the Supreme Court observed, recourse to Section 11-A was permissible provided the proceeding was taken within limitation. This case was followed by Anandji Haridas and Co. (P) Ltd., (1968) 21 STC 326 = (AIR 1968 SC 565) (supra). The question there was whether Section 11 (4) (a) of the C. P. and Berar Sales Tax Act, 1947, contravened Article 14 of the Constitution. The Supreme Court pointed out that as the dealer had not filed his return, turnover had escaped assessment and it was open to the assessing authority to treat the case either under Section 11 (4) (a), which prescribes no period of limitation for completing the assessment, or under Section 11-A which provides a period of limitation in that behalf. A case of escaped turnover, the Court observed, fell under both Section 11 (4) (a) and Sec. 11-A and, therefore, could be considered under either provision, but as a proceeding taken under Section 11 (4) (a) was not circumscribed by any bar of limitation while a proceeding taken under Section 11-A (1) was limited by such a provision to the benefit of the dealer, Section 11 (4) (a) was a discriminatory provision liable to be struck down as violating Article 14.

8. We have also been referred to Addl. Asst. Commr. of Sales Tax v. Firm Jagmohan-das Vijay Kumar, (1970) 25 STC 74 (SC). The Supreme Court, in that case, considered the provisions of Section 8 (1) (b) and Section 10 of the Madhya Bharat Sales Tax Act, 1950, which substantially correspond to Section 11 (4) (a) and Section 11-A of the C. P. and Berar Sales Tax Act, 1947. The Sales Tax Officer had commenced proceedings for the assessment year 1955-56 under Section 8 (1) (b). The proceedings were set aside in revision by the commissioner who remanded the case for fresh assessment. The Sales Tax Officer then served a fresh notice and resumed the assessment proceeding. The dealer raised an objection that the Sales Tax Officer had no jurisdiction to proceed to tax the sales made in the year 1955-56 because the period of three years contemplated by Section 10 of the Act for making the assessment had expired. The objection found favour with the High Court in a writ petition. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that once the proceedings for assessment had been initiated under Section 8 (1) (b) it could not be said that the turnover had escaped assessment so as to attract the provisions of Section 10 unless those proceedings had come to a close.

9. The question before us is whether the proceedings already taken under Rule 41 (5) of the U. P. Sales Tax Rules must be attributed to the jurisdiction of the Sales Tax Officer under Section 21 of the U. P. Sales Tax Act. When taking the assessment proceeding, what the Sales Tax Officer did in effect was to exercise the jurisdiction under Section 7 (3) of the Act. Section 7 (3) provides that if no return is submitted by the dealer within the period prescribed in that behalf the Sales Tax Officer shall determine the turnover of the dealer to the best of his judgment and assess the tax on the basis thereof. Now, it does appear that for the purposes of the controversy before us, Section 7 (3) and Section 21 of the U. P. Sales Tax Act may be considered as in pari materia with Section 11 (4) (a) and Section 11-A of the C. P. and Berar Sales Tax Act, 1947. If that be so, then upon the reasoning adopted by the Supreme Court in Ghanshyamdas, (1963) 14 STC 976 = (AIR 1964 SC 766) (supra) and Anandji Haridas and Co. (P) Ltd., (1968) 21 STC 326 = (AIR 1968 SC 565) (supra) we must hold that on the failure of the assessee to furnish his return, the turnover "escaped" assessment and it was open to the Sales Tax Officer to proceed either under Section 7 (3) or under Section 21, and that when he proceeded under Section 7 (3) and made an assessment he acted within his jurisdiction. The assessment made under Section 7 (3) cannot be considered as made under Section 21. Upon this, it would seem that the question referred in this case stands disposed of.

10. In Sales Tax Ref. No. 397 of 1961, D/- 30-7-1963 (All) (supra) this Court proceeded on the assumption that 'escaped' turnover can be assessed only under Section 21 and that Section 7 (3) does not contemplate an assessment proceeding in respect of 'escaped' turnover. It was said, therefore, by Desai, C. J., that the two provisions were quite distinct from each other and were enacted to apply in mutually exclusive circumstances. That decision was rendered before either Ghanshyamdas (supra) or Anandji Haridas and Co (P) Ltd., (1968) 21 STC 326 = (AIR 1968 SC 565) (supra) was decided by the Supreme Court and some of the reasons of Desai, C. J., in that case are opposed to the observations of the Supreme Court. In an appropriate case, the view taken in Kishan Lal Gopi Krishna, Sales Tax Ref No 397 of 1961, D/- 30-7-1963 (All) (supra) may be considered further. In the present case, having found that the assessment has been made in the exercise of the jurisdiction under Section 7 (3) and was rightly so made, the need for examining the scope of Section 21 does not arise.

11. The contention of learned Counsel for the assessee that Section 7 (3) can be invoked when a return has been filed though not in time, while a case where a return has not been filed at all falls under Section 21 only cannot be accepted. The distinction attempted by learned Counsel is not founded in good reason. According to Section 7 (3) if a return is not filed within time it is open to the Sales Tax Officer to proceed to make an assessment to the best of his judgment. The rights which the Act confers upon a dealer who files a return cannot be claimed by him if the return is not filed within time. It is only when the return is filed within time that the Sales Tax Officer is obliged to take it up for consideration and if it appears to be an incorrect or incomplete return then by reason of the proviso to Section 7 (3) he must afford an opportunity to the dealer to establish that it is a correct and complete return. If after the enquiry held by him he still finds that the return is incorrect or incomplete he is empowered by Section 7 (3) to make a best judgment assessment. There is no provision such as Section 139(4) of the Income Tax Act, 1961 entitling an assessee to furnish a return even beyond the time allowed by the statute. Section 7 (1) empowers the Sales Tax Officer to extend the date for submission of the return but unless the date is extended there is no obligation upon the Sales Tax Officer to consider the return filed out of time.

12. In the result, the assessment order under consideration must be considered as an order under Section 7 (3) of the Act read with Rule 41 (5) of the Rules and not as an order under Section 21 of the Act. The question referred is answered accordingly.

13. The Commissioner of Sales Tax is entitled to his costs which are assessed at Rs. 150/-. Counsel's fee is assessed in the same figure.

Reference answered accordingly.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 644 (V 57 C 91)

SPECIAL BENCH

T. RAMABHADRAN, R. S. PATHAK AND
T. P. MUKHERJEE, JJ.

Padam Chand Jain, Applicant v. The Chief Controlling Revenue Authority, Opposite Party.

Misc. Reference No. 76 of 1969, D/- 8-7-1970.

(A) Interpretation of Statutes — Statute creating special liability — Special definition will supersede ordinary connotation.

When a statute creates a special liability, the special definition of any term given in such statute must supersede and prevail over the ordinary connotation of that term in which it is understood at common law.

(Para 4)

(B) Stamp Duty — Stamp Act (1899), Section 2 (17) — Definition of mortgage-deed in — Is wider than in Section 58 (a), T. P. Act.

The connotation of mortgage involved in the definition given in Section 2 (17) is much wider; it is not restricted to immovable property and, therefore, it includes pawn or pledge of movables, and secondly, it is not restricted to transfer of an interest or right to property; it also includes a charge which creates a right to property.

(Para 3)

(C) Stamp Duty — Stamp Act (1899), Sch. IB, Articles 6 (1) and 40 (b) (as amended by U. P. Stamp (Amendment) Act, 1962) — Mortgage deed or agreement relating to deposit of title deeds — Deed held evidenced agreement pledging goods and also agreement purporting to create mortgage by deposit of title deeds.

Where a person executed in favour of a bank, document by which the bank agreed to grant cash credit facilities upto a maximum limit of Rs. 1,75,000/- at any one time against the pledge of goods in the account of such person's firm with the bank upon having the repayment secured by a first mortgage by deposit of title deeds of certain land as collateral security.

Held that the deed evidenced an agreement pledging goods and also an agreement

HN/HN/D613/70/DHIZ/M

purporting to create a first mortgage by deposit of title deeds. It was not, therefore, chargeable under Article 40 in view of the clear terms of that Article which excluded an agreement relating to deposit of title deeds and a pledge; but was chargeable under Article 6. (Para 10)

(D) T. P. Act (1882), Sections 58, 100 — Mortgage by deposit of title deeds — Effect — Effectuates transfer of right to properties — Hence creation of charge separately on properties becomes unnecessary — AIR 1965 SC 430, Rel. on. (Para 9)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1965) AIR 1965 SC 430 (V 52) =

(1964) 6 SCR 727, K. J. Nathan v.

S. V. Maruthi Rao

9

K. C. Agarwal, for Applicant; Standing Counsel, for Opposite Party.

MUKHERJEE, J.: This is a reference by the Board of Revenue, U. P., as the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority, under Section 57 of the Indian Stamp Act as amended by the U. P. Stamp (Amendment) Act, 1962 (hereafter referred to as the Act). The question for decision relates to the chargeability of stamp duty on a document dated November 18, 1964 executed by one Sri Padam Chand Jain of Agra, and it has arisen in the following circumstances.

2. Sri Padam Chand Jain, who is the sole proprietor of Prem Electric Press, Agra, executed the document in question on November 18, 1964 in favour of the State Bank of India, Agra (hereafter referred to as the Bank), with a view to obtain overdraft facility up to a maximum limit of Rs. 1,75,000 at any one time. The executant treated the document as a memorandum of agreement relating to deposit of title deeds and he, therefore, stamped the same with a duty of Rs. 504 under Article 6 (1) of Schedule I-B to the Act. When the document was presented for registration, the Sub-Registrar, Agra, held that it was a deed of simple mortgage on which a stamp duty of Rs. 3,937.50 P. was payable under Article 40 (b) of the same Schedule to the Act. He, therefore, impounded the document and forwarded it to the Collector for necessary action under Section 38 (2) of the Act. The Collector who was doubtful as to the true nature of the document referred the case to the Board of Revenue under Section 56 (2) of the Act. The Board, in its turn, referred the case to this Court, as already noted for decision under Section 57 of the Act. The question referred to this Court is as follows:

“Whether the document under reference is a memorandum of agreement relating to deposit of title deeds within the meaning of Article 6 (1), Schedule I-B of the U. P. Stamp (Amendment) Act, 1962 or a mortgage deed within the definition of that term in Section 2 (17) of the Stamp Act and chargeable accordingly with a duty of Rs. 3,937.50 under Article 40. (b), Sch. I-B ibid.”

Section 2 (17) of the Act defines “mortgage-deed” as follows:

“Mortgage-deed” includes every instrument whereby, for the purpose of securing money advanced, or to be advanced, by way of loan, or an existing or future debt, or the performance of an engagement, one person transfers, or creates to, or in favour of, another, a right over or in respect of specified property;”

The essentials of a “mortgage deed” as defined in Section 2 (17) of the Act are: (1) that the instrument must be executed for the purpose of securing a loan or debt or to ensure the performance of an engagement, (2) the mortgagor must transfer or create a right to specified property in favour of the mortgagee, and (3) the transfer or creation of such right must be in accordance with law. The definition of mortgage in S. 58 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act is as follows:

“A mortgage is the transfer of an interest in specific immovable property for the purpose of securing the payment of money advanced or to be advanced by way of loan and existing or future debt, or the performance of an engagement which may give rise to a pecuniary liability.”

According to this definition, a mortgage is the transfer of an interest in immovable property by way of security for a loan or a debt or the performance of an engagement which may give rise to a pecuniary liability.

3. It would be noticed that the connotation of mortgage involved in the definition given in Section 2 (17) of the Act is much wider; in the first place, it is not restricted to immovable property and, therefore, it includes pawn or pledge of movables, and secondly, it is not restricted to transfer of an interest or right to property; it also includes a charge which creates a right to property, that is, a jus ad rem, as distinguished for a jus in rem created by a mortgage under the Transfer of Property Act.

4. The levy of stamp duty on any instrument which answers the definition of a “mortgage-deed” will be governed by the provisions of the Indian Stamp Act and not by the Transfer of Property Act. When a statute creates a special liability, the special definition of any term given in such a statute must supersede and prevail over the ordinary connotation of that term in which it is understood at common law.

5. A “mortgage-deed” within the definition given in Section 2 (17) of the Act is dutiable under Article 40 of Schedule I-B to the Act. The class of instruments dutiable as “mortgage-deed” under Article 40 have been divided into two categories depending upon whether or not possession of the property comprised in such deed has been given to the mortgagee or agreed to be given. The material part of Article 40 of the Act is reproduced below:

"40. Mortgage-Deed, not being an agreement relating to deposit of title deeds, Pawn or Pledge (No. 6), Bottomry Bond (No. 16), Mortgage of a Crop (No. 41), Respondentia Bond (No. 56) or Security Bond (No. 57)—

(a) When possession of the property or any part of the property comprised in such deed is given by the mortgagor or agreed to be given;

(b) when possession is not given or agreed to be given as aforesaid.

6. The contention put forward on behalf of the Revenue is that the instrument in question is a mortgage deed, as defined in Section 2 (17) of the Act, and dutiable under Article 40 (b) of Schedule I-B. On the other hand, the contention of Sri K. C. Agarwal appearing for applicant Padam Chand Jain is that the instrument is an agreement relating to deposit of title deeds and the stamp duty specified in Article 6 (i) is payable thereon. Article 6 of Schedule I-B covers following instruments:

"6. Agreement relating to deposit of title deeds, pawn or pledge, that is to say, any instrument evidencing an agreement relating to—

(1) the deposit of title deeds of instruments constituting or being evidence of the title to any property whatever (other than a marketable security); or

(2) the pawn or pledge of movable property, where such deposit, pawn or pledge has been made by way of security for the repayment of money advanced or to be advanced by way of loan or an existing or future debt—"

7. As regards the construction of the deed dated November 18, 1964, it was, as already stated, executed by the applicant with a view to obtain overdraft facility up to a maximum limit of Rs. 1,75,000, at any one time, on the basis of a cash credit agreement. The preamble to the deed reads as follows:

"Whereas (1) .....

(2) The Bank, at the request of the Borrower agreed to grant cash credit facilities up to a maximum limit of Rs. 1,75,000 (Rupees one Lac and seventy five thousand only) at any one time against the pledge of goods in the account of his said firm "the Prem Electric Press (hereinafter referred to as said firm accounts) with the Bank upon having the repayment thereof as aforesaid and such other sums as are hereinafter mentioned and with interest payable thereon secured by a first mortgage by deposit of title-deeds of the said land and premises described in the said First Schedule hereto as collateral security.

(3) Pursuant to the hereinbefore recited agreement and as a collateral security for the said sum of Rs. 1,75,000 and such other sums with interest thereon as hereinafter

The same duty as conveyance (No. 23) for a consideration equal to the amount secured by such deed.

The same duty as a Bond (No. 15) for the amount secured by such deed."

mentioned the Borrower on the 18th November, 1964 deposited with the Branch of the State Bank of India at Chipitola, Agra the title deeds mentioned in the Second Schedule hereunder written relating to the said land and premises with intent to create a security thereon as hereinafter mentioned." Then follow the covenants by the borrower the material portion of which is reproduced below:

Now this indenture witnesseth as follows:

1. In pursuance of the said agreement and in consideration of the premises aforesaid the Borrowers hereby covenant with the Bank as follows:

(i) To repay to the Bank on demand the amount or amounts as may be due by the Borrower to the Bank under the said firm account up to a maximum of Rs. 1,75,000 at any one time and shall in the meantime pay interest on the amount or amounts for the time being due to the Bank at the rate of State Bank of India advance rate minimum 6 per cent p. a. on the cash credit account with monthly rates, which interest is to be debited to the said firm account.

(ii) To pay to the Bank on demand all law costs (including as between attorney and clients), charges and expenses which may be paid or incurred by the Bank in connection with these presents or in enforcing or fulfilment of the covenants and conditions of these presents with interest thereon at the rate of 6% p. a. from the time the said charges and expenses are paid by the Bank and until repayment the same shall be a charge upon the properties herein comprised."

"And this indenture also witnesseth as follows:

That the Borrowers doth hereby admit and acknowledge that in further pursuance of the said agreement and in consideration of the premises and Borrowers did on the 18-11-1964 deliver to and deposit with the Branch of State Bank of India, Chipitola, Agra the title deeds mentioned in the Second Schedule hereunder written relating to All That the land and premises more particularly described in the First Schedule hereto (hereinafter referred to as "the said premises") with intent to create a First Mortgage by Deposit of Title Deeds on the said premises to secure the repayment by the Borrower to the Bank of the amount or amounts for the time being due on the said firm account upto a maximum of Rs. 1,75,000 at any one time as aforesaid with all interests and costs in manner hereinbefore mentioned and all other moneys if any which at any time hereafter shall on any account be due and payable by the Borrower to the Bank and such law costs, charges and expenses as are hereinbefore mentioned in accordance with the covenants herein contained."

8. The deed provides that if the borrower defaults in payment of the principal amount with interest thereon, owing to the Bank within seven days after demand, the moneys due to the Bank shall, at the option of the Bank immediately become payable by the borrower and in such event the Bank shall be at liberty to take steps for the realisation of the security.

9. On reading these terms it is obvious that the document in question evidences an agreement between the applicant and the Bank relating to over-draft facility in respect of a maximum sum of Rs. 1,75,000/- against the pledge of goods in the account of the firm "Prem Electric Press" which is referred to in the deed as "the said firm account". The pledge of goods in the said firm account was, apparently, intended to be the primary security for the over-drawal, if any. The deed also records an agreement relating to "a first mortgage by deposit of title deeds in respect of the land and premises specified in the first schedule as collateral security for the said amount. As stated in the deed, the title deeds had already been deposited with the Branch of the State Bank of India at Chipitola, Agra. The deed, however, does not purport to create any charge on the specified properties to secure the sum of Rs. 1,75,000/-. The reason is obvious: a mortgage by deposit of title deeds effectuates transfer of a right to the properties and creation, separately, of a charge thereon becomes unnecessary. (See K. J. Nathan v. S. V. Maruthi Rao, AIR 1965 SC 430). The averment in the statement of the case submitted by the Board of Revenue to the effect that "the document does not restrict itself merely to the deposit of title deeds as security but burdens the immovable property with a charge to secure cash credit facility to the extent of Rs. 1,75,000/-" is misconceived. It is true, no doubt, that under the terms of the deed, if any legal expenses are paid or incurred by the Bank in enforcing the terms of the agreement, then, until repayment, the same shall be a charge upon the properties specified in the schedule to the deed, but this charge would arise in future, if at all, when any such legal expenses are incurred by the Bank. As laid down in Section 17 of the Act, all instruments chargeable with duty must be stamped either before or at the time of execution. In the present case, when the deed was executed, no charge was created on the properties in respect of an ascertained or an ascertainable sum of money and, hence, the stipulation in point may be regarded as a surplusage in determining the chargeability of the deed to stamp duty.

10. To sum up, the deed evidences an agreement pledging goods and also an agreement purporting to create a first mortgage, by deposit of title deeds. It is not therefore, chargeable under Article 40 in view of the clear terms of that Article which excludes an agreement relating to deposit of title deeds and a pledge. The instrument is, clearly, chargeable under Article 6 of the Act.

11. In the view I have taken of the chargeability of the document under reference it is not necessary to decide the contentions of Sri K. C. Agarwal, as regards the invalidity of the document for want of attestation and otherwise.

12. In my opinion, therefore the answer to the question under reference should be that the deed dated November 18, 1964 is chargeable under Article 6 (1) and not under Article 40 (b) of Schedule I-B of the Act.

13. Applicant Padam Chand Jain shall get Rs. 200 as costs of this reference from the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority. Counsel's fee is assessed at the same amount.

PATHAK, J. 14. I agree with my brother Mukherjee that the deed executed by Padmchand Jain on November 18, 1964, in favour of the State Bank of India is chargeable to duty under Article 6 (1) of Schedule I-B of the Indian Stamp Act as amended by the U. P. Stamp (Amendment) Act, 1962 and not under Article 40 (b) of the Schedule.

15. Upon a perusal of the terms of the deed it appears that it is not a mortgage deed falling under Article 40. The deed specifically recites that as a collateral security for the sum of Rs. 1,75,000 the borrower, on November 18, 1964, deposited with the State Bank of India the title deeds relating to the immovable property "with intent to create a security thereon". There is no provision thereafter in the deed expressly charging or mortgaging the property for payment of the sum of Rs. 1,75,000. Cl. (I) (1) (i) following paragraph 3, recites that the borrowers covenant with the Bank to repay to the Bank on demand the amount falling due by the borrower to the Bank up to the maximum of Rs. 1,75,000 but there is no provision here which can be said "in proprio vigore" to burden the property for payment of that amount. Clause (I) (1) (ii) refers to law costs, charges and expenses which may be paid or incurred by the Bank in connection with the transaction, and it is in respect of these that a charge is contemplated thereunder upon the property. Upon a fair reading of the entire deed, it seems to me impossible to hold that any such charge has been created under the deed in respect of the amount of Rs. 1,75,000. As the case before the Board, and also before us, proceeded on the basis that the question referred is confirmed to the amount of Rs. 1,75,000, it does not appear necessary to me to consider the effect of Cl. (I) (i) (ii).

16. I agree that the applicant is entitled to his costs which should be assessed at Rs. 200 and that counsel's fee should be assessed in the same figure.

RAMABHADHAN, J. 17. I have had the advantage of perusing the opinions prepared by my learned brothers Pathak and Mukherjee, JJ. I agree with them that the deed executed by the applicant Padam Chand Jain in favour of the State Bank of India, Agra on 18-11-64 is chargeable to duty under Article 6 (I) of Schedule I-B of the Indian Stamp Act as amended by the U. P. (Amendment) Act, 1962 and not under Art. 40 (b) of the said Schedule. I further agree to the proposed order as to costs.

BY THE COURT

18. Our answer to the question under reference is that the deed executed by the applicant Padam Chand Jain on 18-11-64 in favour of the State Bank of India, Agra is chargeable to duty under Article 6 (I) of Schedule I-B of the Indian Stamp Act as amended by the U. P. Stamp (Amendment) Act, 1962 and not under Article 40 (b) of that Schedule.

19. The applicant Padam Chand Jain will get his costs of this reference, assessed at Rs. 200, from the Chief Controlling Revenue Authority. U. P. Counsel's fee is also assessed at the same amount.

Answer accordingly.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 648 (V 57 C 02)

D. S. MATHUR, J.

Mohd. Ismail, Appellant v. Ashiq Husain, Respondent.

Ex. Second Appeal No. 784 of 1963, D/- 4-8-1969, from Judgment and decree of Civil J. Roorkee at Saharanpur, D/- 30-11-1962.

(A) Transfer of Property Act (1882), Section 52 — "Otherwise dealt with" — Includes raising of constructions wrongfully — Suit for possession of vacant land — Defendant putting up superstructure after filing of suit — Cannot claim advantage out of the buildings wrongfully put up. (Para 5)

(B) C. P. Code (1908), Order 21, Rule 33 — Suit for possession of vacant land — Buildings put up pendente lite — Removal in execution — Building put up prior to institution of suit — Remedy suggested.

In execution of a decree for possession, the executing Court can order the removal or demolition of the constructions made during the pendency of the suit. AIR 1934 Lah 978, Followed.

Where the constructions were made before the institution of the suit, the rule laid down in AIR 1927 Rang 82 where the judgment-debtor was allowed time to vacate the land and if he so desired, carry away the materials of the building, can be adopted.

Where it appears to the executing Court that the cost of removal or demolition would exceed the costs of the material to be fetched after demolition and the decree-holder is willing to let the construction stand on the land, the rule laid down in (1872) 18 WR 527 (Cal) can be adopted, namely, it can be left open to the decree-holder to decide what he shall do with the constructions after he is given actual possession of the land along with the constructions standing thereon. But if the cost of demolition shall not exceed the costs of the materials and the judgment-debtor is willing to release the materials in favour of the decree-holder free of charges and the decree-holder is willing to accept the constructions, the executing Court need not direct demolition of the constructions, the ownership of which would automatically pass to the decree-holder. (Para 7)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1934) AIR 1934 Lah 978 (V 21) =
154 Ind Cas 724, Narain Singh v. Imam Din 6
(1927) AIR 1927 Rang 82 (V 14) =
5 Bur LJ 201, Kauk Sike v. Ong Hock Sein 2, 6
(1872) 18 WR 527 (Cal), Radha Gobind Shaha v. Brijendro Coomar Roy Chowdhri 6, 7.

Sri Nath Agarwal, for Appellant.

MATHUR, J.: This is an Execution Second Appeal by Mohammad Ismail, decree-holder, against the order of the Civil Judge of Roorkee at Saharanpur, allowing the appeal of Ashiq Husain (since dead), judgment-debtor, and holding that in the execution of a decree for possession, possession could not be delivered after removal of the constructions.

2. The learned Civil Judge placed reliance upon the case of Kauk Sike v. Ong Hock Sein, AIR 1927 Rang 82 but failed to realise the importance of this decision and also what order was eventually passed, otherwise he would have known that this decision was more damaging to the judgment-debtor as thereby the building would go under the control and possession of the decree-holder if not removed before the delivery of possession and thereby the judgment-debtor would be put to a great loss. If the materials of the constructions are removed by the judgment-debtor, he would be in a position to use them in constructing another house or he would be in a position to make some money by their sale. But if it is for the decree-holder to consider after he has obtained possession whether the constructions be removed or not, the judgment-debtor cannot take advantage of the materials of the constructions.

3. The facts of the instant case, in brief, are that at the time of the institution of the suit no constructions stood on the land in dispute. The judgment-debtor had merely dug the foundations. This is why only reliefs for possession and permanent injunction were sought for and there was no prayer for the removal or demolition of the constructions. The judgment-debtor had however, completed the ground floor before the matter of temporary injunction could be finally decided.

4. After the constructions were made by the judgment-debtor, the plaintiff did not apply for amendment of the plaint and hence he was simply granted a decree for possession and injunction. When this decree was put into execution, the judgment-debtor raised an objection that the removal or demolition of the constructions could not be ordered by the executing court. The objection was repelled by the executing court but in appeal the learned Civil Judge allowed the objection holding that in execution of the decree for possession, there could be no removal of the constructions.

5. On the application of the rule of equity no party can be permitted to take advantage of the wrongful acts committed during the pendency of a suit. The same principle can be inferred from the provisions of Sec. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act which clearly provides that during the pendency in any Court having authority of a suit or proceeding in which any right to immoveable property is directly and specifically in question, the property cannot be transferred or otherwise dealt with by any party to the suit or proceeding so as to affect the rights of any other party thereto under any decree or order which may be made therein, except under the authority of the Court and on such terms as it may impose. The words "otherwise dealt with" are general and can also include the raising of constructions wrongfully. When the defendant could not, in any manner deal with the immovable property in dispute in the suit, he cannot to the disadvantage of the plaintiff decree-holder, claim any advantage out of the constructions wrongfully made.

6. If it were necessary for the plaintiff to always institute a new suit with regard to any wrongful act done during the pendency of the suit, the litigation would never come to an end and it shall be open to the defendant to cause an irreparable injury to the plaintiff. In the circumstances, I see no difficulty in the executing court ordering the removal or demolition of the constructions made during the pendency of the suit, during the execution of a decree for possession. A similar view was expressed in Narain Singh v. Imam Din, AIR 1934 Lah 978. The decision in Radha Gobind Shaha v. Brijendra Coomar Roy Chowdhri, (1872) 18 WR 527

(Cal) was followed by Duckworth, J., in AIR 1927 Rang 82 (supra) and the order passed in the Second Appeal was as below:—

"I modify the order of the lower court by directing that the appellant do vacate the building on the land as soon as this order is communicated to him and that he be granted two months from this date within which, if he so pleases, he may dismantle the building and remove its material."

In (1872) 18 WR 527 (Cal) (supra) demolition of the constructions made before the institution of the suit, was not ordered but it was said that was a matter for the decree-holder to consider after he had obtained possession. At the same time the judgment-debtor was allowed two months' time within which he could, if he so desired, vacate the land and carry away the materials of the building.

7. Where the constructions were made before the institution of the suit, the rule laid down in the Rangoon case could be adopted; but where the constructions were made during the pendency of the suit, constructions made are against the law and hence shall be deemed to have been made by the judgment-debtor at his own risk and responsibility namely, that he shall not be able to claim any benefit of such constructions during the execution proceeding. When the judgment-debtor had no right to the constructions, he can raise no objection to the removal of the constructions during the execution. Where it appears to the executing court that the costs of removal or demolition of the constructions would exceed the costs of material to be fetched after the demolition and the decree-holder is willing to let the construction stand on the land, the rule laid down in (1872) 18 WR 527 (Cal) (supra) can be adopted namely, that it can be left open to the decree-holder to decide what he shall do with the constructions after he is given actual possession of the land along with the constructions standing thereon. Thereby the judgment-debtor would not be put to any additional expenses. But if costs of demolition shall not exceed the costs of the materials and the judgment-debtor is willing to release the materials in favour of the decree-holder free of charges, and the decree-holder is willing to accept the constructions, the executing court need not direct the demolition of the constructions, the ownership which would automatically pass to the decree-holder.

8. The Second Appeal is hereby allowed with costs of all the courts and the decree and order of the learned Civil Judge in appeal are set aside. It is further ordered that the objection of the judgment-debtor to demolition of the constructions shall stand dismissed. The judgment-debtor is given three months from today to vacate the land after removal of the materials of the constructions.

No further time shall be granted to him for the purpose. In case of default, possession of the land shall be delivered to the decree-holder after dispossession of the judgment-debtor from both the land and the constructions standing thereon and thereafter it shall be for the decree-holder to decide how to deal with the constructions.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 650 (V 57 C 93)

FULL BENCH

SATISH CHANDRA, J. S. TRIVEDI AND R. L. CULATI, JJ.

M/s. Ram Kumar & Co., Appellant v. The Commissioner of S. T., U. P., Opposite Party.

S. T. R. No. 259 of 1966, D/- 2-3-1970.

Sales Tax — U. P. Sales Tax Act (5 of 1948), Section 2 (c) — Dealer — Assessee carrying on business in Calcutta dispatching goods on orders from U. P. on railway receipts in name of self which were endorsed by assessee's bankers at Calcutta — Price realised from purchasers on endorsement and delivery of receipts from Banker's branches in U. P. — Assessee not a 'dealer' — AIR 1968 SC 739, Foll., (1963) 14 STC 606 (All) and (1970) 25 STC 12 (SC), Distinguished.

(Para 11)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1970) 25 STC 12 (SC), Commr. of

Sales Tax, U. P. v. D. C. Dhimani & Brothers Ltd. 10

(1968) AIR 1968 SC 739 (V 55) =
(1970) 25 STC 82 = 1968 Lab IC

814, State of Punjab v. Bajaj Electricals Ltd. 1, 6, 16

(1963) 14 STC 606 (All), Nestles' Products (India) Ltd. v. Commr. of

Sales Tax 1, 5, 16

S. N. Agarwal, for Appellant; Standing Counsel, for Opposite Party.

SATISH CHANDRA, J.: A Bench of this Court heing of the opinion that in view of the observations of the Supreme Court in State of Punjab v. Bajaj Electricals Ltd., (1970) 25 STC 82 = (AIR 1968 SC 739) the decision of this Court in Nestles' Products (India) Ltd. v. Commr. of Sales Tax, (1963) 14 STC 606 (All) requires reconsideration, referred this Reference to a larger Bench. That is how the matter has come before us.

2. The Judge (Revisions) Sales Tax, U. P. Lucknow, referred the following three questions of law for the opinion of this Court under Section 11 (1), U. P. Sales Tax Act:—

"1. Whether under the circumstances of this case the applicant can be treated to be carrying on business activity within U. P. so as to be classified as the dealer for the purposes of assessment?

"2. Whether under the circumstances of this case the applicant can be treated to be an importer against whom an assessment can be passed?

3. Whether under the circumstances of this case the Sales Tax Officer at Barabanki who had been so directed as having jurisdiction was vested with the jurisdiction to pass the assessment?"

3. For deciding the first question, the relevant facts are: the assessee carries on the business of buying and selling cotton yarn at Calcutta. It received orders from certain U. P. dealers, and, in execution thereof it despatched cotton yarn to them. The railway receipts were prepared in the name of self. They were endorsed to the assessee's Bankers at Calcutta. The Bankers at Calcutta then realised the sale price from the purchasers within U. P. on endorsement and delivery of the receipt, through its branches in U. P. This modus operandi was accepted by the assessing authorities. But, they, including the Judge (Revisions), held that the assessee was carrying on the business of selling goods within U. P. and was a 'dealer' as defined by the U. P. Sales Tax Act, and as such liable to tax.

4. Section 2 (c), U. P. Sales Tax Act, defines the word 'dealer' to mean any person who carries on the business of buying or selling goods within Uttar Pradesh.

5. The learned Standing Counsel supported the view taken by the Judge (Revisions) by the decision of this Court in (1963) 14 STC 606 (All) (supra). In my opinion, that case is, on facts, distinguishable. In that case, the assessee had its office at Calcutta. It had no office in Uttar Pradesh. It entered into contracts of sale of condensed milk and powdered milk with customers residing in Uttar Pradesh. It sent goods by train. The railway receipts were prepared in the name of the assessee as consignor and consignee both. At the destinations, the goods were taken delivery of either by the assessee's representatives in Uttar Pradesh, who then sold them by going from door to door, or by the customers through a Bank against payment. The assessee sent the railway receipts to its Bankers in U. P., after endorsing them in their favour and they delivered them to the customers, after receiving payments from them and endorsing them in their favour. On these facts, it was found that in so far as the goods were delivered to the assessee's representatives in Uttar Pradesh, the sale by the representatives of the assessee by going from door to door, would be sale of goods by the assessee itself. In relation to the delivery made to customers through a Bank against payment, it was held that the bankers acted as an agent of the assessee. Hence, this activity of the bankers was a part of the business activity of the assessee. This would mean that he was carrying on the business of selling in Uttar Pradesh so as to be a 'dealer'. In the present case, the distinguishing feature is that the assessee or his representative did not take delivery of the goods from the railway. The customers directly took delivery from the railway. The assessee or its representatives did not sell the goods within Uttar Pradesh, after they had arrived in Uttar Pradesh.

6. The observation that the Bank in so far as it collected the price of the goods for the assessee would be its agent and as such the assessee would be carrying on the business of selling in U. P. seems contrary to the decision of the Supreme Court in (1970) 25 STC 82 = (AIR 1968 SC 739). In that case, the assessee carried on business at Bombay and had a branch office at New Delhi. It received certain orders from the Government of Punjab and other semi-Government bodies in the State of Punjab. It despatched goods from Delhi by rail or by public motor transport. The railway or other receipts were prepared in the name of the assessee and presented to the purchasers duly endorsed in their favour, to secure realization of the price of the goods. On these facts, the Supreme Court held that the assessee did not carry on a trade in Punjab. It held that the assessee had no shop or office within the State of Punjab. The facts that the assessee supplied goods within the State of Punjab and received price of the goods within the State of Punjab, were ancillary activities of the assessee, which did not amount to carrying on trade within the State of Punjab. This principle is applicable to the facts of our case. Here also, the assessee had supplied goods to customers, and, collected the price in U. P. The orders were received directly at Calcutta. They were executed at Calcutta. The assessee had no shop or office or representative in Uttar Pradesh. In the circumstances, the facts that the goods were supplied and price collected in U. P. would be an ancillary activity of the assessee and would not amount to carrying on the business of selling within Uttar Pradesh.

7. The fact that the assessee entrusted the documents to the Bank for encashment would not necessarily make the Bank an agent of the assessee. The bank would be the assessee's agent only if the assessee paid the bank its charges or commission. But if the U. P. customers paid the bank charges (which is not unusual), the bank would in law be the customers' agent. There is no finding here that the assessee paid the bank's charges.

8. Further even if the Bank is held to be the assessee's agent, it would not automatically make the bank an agent for carrying on the business of the assessee. It has been found that the assessee firm was granted an overdraft by the bank at Calcutta on the assessee's risk and on the condition that if the money was not collected from the U. P. dealers the bank will debit the money in their account. This would suggest that if the customer did not honour the railway receipt by retiring it on payment, the bank would debit the assessee's account. The bank does not undertake to take delivery of the goods from the railway, if the customers do not retire the documents, and sell them on behalf of the assessee, in order to realise and pay the assessee the price.

9. The bank could not be treated as a business agent of the assessee. The Bank, if at all, would be an agent for the ancillary activity of transmitting the documents to the customers and crediting the assessee with the proceeds, if the customers willingly paid. The assessee could not be held to be carrying on business in U. P. on the basis of this activity of the bank.

10. Learned counsel for the assessee relied on the decision of the Supreme Court in Commr. of Sales Tax, U. P. v. D. C. Dhimani and Brothers Ltd., (1970) 25 STC 12 (SC). That case, in our opinion, is not helpful. There, the assessee carried on the work of fabricating wagons and coaches at Izatnagar in Uttar Pradesh. They were then supplied to the railway administration within the State of Uttar Pradesh. The Supreme Court held that the assessee was carrying on the work of manufacturing wagons and coaches in Uttar Pradesh and this manufacturing would not make him a 'dealer' because he did not carry on the business of selling goods in Uttar Pradesh. It was also held that a single or stray instance of selling will not be carrying on the business of selling. Here, it is not disputed that the assessee carries on the business of buying and selling cotton yarn. He is not a manufacturer. This case is, therefore, not applicable.

11. I would answer the first question in the negative, in favour of the assessee and against the Department. In view of the answer to the first question, the other questions are merely of academic importance, and would leave them unanswered. The assessee would be entitled to his costs, which are assessed at Rs. 200. The fee of the learned counsel for the Department is assessed at the same figure.

TRIVEDI, J.: 12. I agree that the first question should be answered in favour of the assessee and against the Department. I also agree that the remaining two questions need not be answered.

13. I would like to add that carrying on business of selling goods in the State of Uttar Pradesh implies active promotion of trade by the dealer or his agent. The bank will not be the agent of the dealer for the purpose of business even though it may be an agent for the purpose of realising the purchase money. Mere transport of goods through the railway or some other transport agency will not amount to carrying on business in the State a dealer who attracts business by advertisement in a newspaper of the State also cannot be said to be carrying on the business of selling in the State. There should be an element of personal activity by the dealer or his agent for the sales in the State before the dealer can be said to be carrying on the business of selling in the State.

R. L. GULATI, J.: 14. I agree with brother Satish Chandra, J. that question No. 1 should be answered in favour of the assessee and the remaining two questions need not be answered but I wish to add a few words by way of elucidation.

15. The statement of the case as originally submitted by the Revising Authority, opens thus:

"The applicant is a concern having its head office at Calcutta dealing in yarn. The applicant used to import yarn in his own name and received delivery thereof at Barabanki whereafter this yarn so received was effected sale...."

Similar observations were found at two places in the revisional order. When the matter came up for hearing before a Bench consisting of myself and Hon. Pathak, J. we called for a supplementary statement of the case as, in our opinion, the Judge (Revisions) had merely expressed its conclusion without setting out the primary facts. The supplementary statement of the case has since been received and it discloses the modus operandi of the assessee's business. According to that modus operandi the assessee whose principal place of business is Calcutta merely despatches goods to dealers in Uttar Pradesh in execution of the orders received from them. The railway receipts are made out in the assessee's name. The railway receipts are endorsed in favour of the assessee's bankers at Calcutta which deliver them through their branches to the assessee's constituents in U. P. on payment of the price of the goods. It has not been found that the delivery of the goods at any of the destinations in U. P. is taken either by the assessee directly or through its agents or by the banks. On these facts the question arises as to whether the assessee can be said to be carrying on business of selling goods in U. P. so as to be a dealer within the meaning of Section 2 (c) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act. I agree that on these facts the assessee cannot be held to be a dealer in U. P.

16. The case of (1963) 14 STC 606 (All) can be distinguished only on the ground that sometimes the representatives of the assessee in that case took delivery of the goods in Uttar Pradesh and they sold the goods by going from door to door. That modus operandi would certainly make the assessee a dealer in Uttar Pradesh but the fact that in the present case the assessee delivered the railway receipts to its bankers at Calcutta while in the case of Nestlé's Products, the documents were sent to banks in U. P., would afford no ground of distinction because in either case the banks agency would be limited to the collection of the price of the goods from the customers. There is nothing to show that on the failure of the customers to retire the documents, the banks would take the delivery of the goods on behalf of the assessee and would proceed to sell them. Such a course of conduct is against the established practice of the banking system as it prevails in our country. If the documents are not retired by the customers, the banks merely return them to the owner. Indeed, in the instant case it has been found that the assessee's banks had allowed to the assessee an overdraft facility against the railway receipts negotiated through it on the condition that if the documents were not honoured by the assessee's constituents in U. P., the amount advanced to the assessee shall be debited to its accounts. That is the only function which the assessee's banks performed in the conduct of the assessee's business. I am further of the opinion that the payment of the bank commission by the assessee or its customers is of no consequence. That is a matter of contract between the parties. Even if the bank commission is paid by the assessee, the bank cannot be said to be the agent of the assessee through whom it carries on the business of selling goods in U. P. As has been pointed out by the Supreme Court in (1970) 23 STC 82 = (AIR 1968 SC 739), the negotiation of documents through a bank is an ancillary activity to secure the realisation of the price of the goods from the purchasers. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the decision in the case of Nestlé's Products is erroneous in so far as it seeks to hold the assessee in that case to be dealer in U. P. on the ground that the railway receipts in respect of the goods despatched to U. P. dealers were negotiated through bankers in U. P.

BY THE COURT

17. The first question is answered in the negative, in favour of the assessee and against the Department. In view of the answer to the first question, the other questions are merely of academic importance, and they are returned unanswered. The assessee would be entitled to his costs, which are assessed at Rs. 200. The fee of the learned Counsel for the Department is also assessed at the same figure.

Answer accordingly.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 652 (V 57 C 94)

FULL BENCH

S. K. VERMA, S. N. DWIVEDI AND HARI SWARUP, JJ.

Bhagwan Swarup, Applicant v. Municipal Board, Ujhani and others, Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. No. 448 of 1969, D/- 22-5-1970 against Order of Civil J., Budaun, D/- 28-1-1969.

(A) Limitation Act (1963), Secs. 12, 14, 4 — Mode of computing period — Sections 12 and 14 provide for extension of limitation — Periods provided under Sections 12 and 14 are to be added to the period prescribed — If such periods taken together expire during vacation appeal may be filed on day on which Court reopens — Section 4 does not extend time — Period for filing appeal expiring during vacation — Copy of judgment not obtained before closing of court — Application for copy on date of re-opening of Court — Appellant is not entitled to exclusion of time taken in obtaining copy. 1962 All LJ 1149 and S. A. No. 420 of 1967, D/- 19-4-1968 (All) and 1956 All WR (HC) 737, Overruled; (1901) ILR 25 Bom 584 and (1901) ILR 25 Bom 586 and (1897) ILR 19 All 342 and AIR 1914 All 303 and AIR 1929 Rang 96 (1) and AIR 1931 Pat 60, held no longer good law in view of AIR 1935 P. C. 85. AIR 1954 Cal 569 and (1904) ILR 27 Mad 21 and AIR 1922 Oudh 39 and AIR 1937 Oudh 26, Dis-sented from; AIR 1968 SC 960, Distinguished. Case law discussed.

FN/FN/CS61/70/XPB/D

(Paras 2, 5, 9, 11)

(B) Limitation Act (1963), Section 5 — Condonation of delay — Delay due to conflicting decisions misleading the party in filing appeal is good ground for condoning delay. (Para 11)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1968) AIR 1968 SC 960 (V 55) = 1968 Cri LJ 1132, State of U. P. v. Maharaja Narain 8
(1968) Second Appeal No. 420 of 1967, D/- 19-4-1968 (All), Dudhnath Dubey v. Prakhru Dube 9
(1966) AIR 1966 Madh Pra 340 (V 53) = 1966 Jab LJ 466, Kanhaiyalal v. Ram Kishan 6
(1965) AIR 1965 Mad 459 (V 52) = ILR (1964) 2 Mad 907, S. N. Jayarama Aiyar v. Rajagopalan 6
(1962) 1962 All LJ 1149 = 1962 All WR (HC) 902, Ganga Prasad v. Raghubir Prasad 7
(1961) AIR 1961 Orissa 133 (V 48) = ILR (1961) Cut 169, Municipal Councillors of Puri Municipality v. Madhusudan Das Mohapatra 6
(1960) AIR 1960 Mys 216 (V 47), C. Raghavendra Rao v. Vasavamba 6
(1959) AIR 1959 All 699 (V 46) = 1959 All LJ 456, Mukat Beharilal Agarwal v. Addl. Dist. Magistrate 1, 5, 7, 8
(1956) 1956 All WR (HC) 737, Udairaj Singh v. Jugal Kishore Mehra 3, 7
(1954) AIR 1954 Cal 569 (V 41) = ILR (1953) 2 Cal 144, Smt. Kamala Sundari Dasi v. Sridham Chandra 7
(1954) AIR 1954 Madh Bha 18 (V 41) = Madh BLJ 1954 HCR 404, Sadashiv Rao Gangadhar v. Ramchandra Bhawan Bhagwat 6
(1953) AIR 1953 Bom 353 (V 40) = ILR (1953) Bom 565, Karim Ismail v. Abdul Rahiman 6

(1948) AIR 1948 Nag 15 (V 35) = ILR (1947) Nag 375, Chudamansao Nishramsao v. Ram Kuwar Birajlal 6
(1947) AIR 1947 Oudh 3 (V 34) = ILR 21 Luck 447, Ram Manorath v. Ram Bhulawan 6
(1947) AIR 1947 Lah 168 (V 34) = ILR (1946) Lah 107, Bhawani Cloth Mills Ltd. v. Parmeshwari Doss 6
(1942) AIR 1942 All 429 (V 29) = ILR (1943) All 84 (FB), Raja Pande v. Sheopuran Pande 6
(1942) AIR 1942 Mad 604 (V 29) = ILR (1942) Mad 868, Avasaraala Kamaraju Pantulu v. Balla Saramma 6
(1941) AIR 1941 Nag 100 (V 28) = ILR (1941) Nag 144, Shivajiram Dhannalal Marwadi v. Gulabchand Marwadi 6
(1939) AIR 1939 All 252 (V 26) = 1939 All WR 153, Mst. Shayam Peare v. Ram Autar Singh 6
(1938) AIR 1938 All 606 (V 25) = ILR (1938) All 861, Puranchand v. Abdullah 6
(1938) AIR 1938 Lah 317 (V 25) = 40 Pun LR 74, Asa Singh v. Hira Singh 7
(1938) AIR 1938 Lah 234 (V 25) = ILR (1938) Lah 193 (FB), Shanti Prakash v. Harnam Das 6
(1937) AIR 1937 Oudh 26 (V 24) = ILR 12 Luck 531, Sukhnandan Prasad Shukla v. Raja Ahmad Ali Khan 7
(1935) AIR 1935 PC 85 (V 22) = 62 Ind App 80, Maqbool Ahmad v. Onkar Pratap Narain Singh 5, 7
(1934) AIR 1934 Pat 367 (V 21) = ILR 13 Pat 632, Dhanna Mistry v. Bengal Nagpur Rly. Co. Ltd. 6
(1931) AIR 1931 Pat 60 (V 18) = 14 Pat LT 91, Ramchandra Shukul v. Sri Thakurjee Mandil Darkadhis 7
(1929) AIR 1929 Pat 615 (V 16) = 10 Pat LT 545, Munshi Mohton v. Lachmanlal 8
(1929) AIR 1929 Rang 96 (1) (V 16) = ILR 6 Rang 743, Ma Dan v. Tan Chong San 7
(1922) AIR 1922 Oudh 39 (V 9) = 25 Oudh Cas 71, Abdul Ghaffor v. Mt. Rasulunnis 7
(1916) AIR 1916 Pat 317 (V 3) = 1 Pat LJ 485, Debi Charan Lal v. Mehdi Husain 8
(1914) AIR 1914 All 303 (V 1) = 23 Ind Cas 874, Budhu v. Sultan 7
(1904) ILR 27 Mad 21 = 13 Mad LJ 300, Saminath Ayyar v. Venkatasubba Ayyar 7
(1901) ILR 25 Bom 554 = 3 Bom LR 143, Tukaram Gopal v. Pandurang Sadaram 5, 7
(1901) ILR 25 Bom 536 = 3 Bom LR 244, Pandharinath Sakham v. Shankar Narayan 5, 7

(1897) ILR 19 All 342 = 1897 All WN 76, Siyadat-Un-Nissa v. Muhammad Mahmud 1, 5, 7
Sirish Prasad, for Applicant; N. Lal, for Opposite Party.

VERMA, J.— This application in revision came up for hearing before Oak, C. J. and S. N. Singh, J. They have referred it to a Full Bench because of a conflict between two Division Benches of this Court— Siyadat-un-nissa v. Muhammad Mahmud, (1897) ILR 19 All 342 and Mukat Bebanlal Agarwal v. Addl. District Magistrate Bareilly, AIR 1959 All 699.

2. The question involved in the case is one of limitation and it arises in this way. The applicant Bhagwan Swarup filed a suit against the opposite parties for the recovery of Rs 600 by way of damages on the allegation that he had been maliciously retrenched from his position as Commanding Officer of No. 229, U. P. N. C. C. R. Company of Municipal Intermediate College, Ujhani. The learned Munsif decreed the suit of the applicant against defendants nos. 1 and 2 on May 25, 1967. The Civil Courts closed for the summer vacation on June 2, 1967 and reopened after the vacation on July 3, 1967. The application for copies of the judgment and decree was made on the same date, that is to say on, July 3, 1967. Copies were ready and delivered on July 5, 1967 and the appeal was filed on July 6, 1967.

3. A preliminary point was raised before the learned Civil Judge of Budaun to the effect that the appeal was barred by time. The learned Civil Judge, relying upon the cases of Udairaj Singh v. Jugal Kisbore Mehra, 1950 All WR 737, Munshi Mobton v. Lachmanlal, AIR 1929 Pat 615 and Debi Charan Lal v. Mehdi Husain AIR 1916 Pat 317, held that the appeal was within limitation. Hence this application in revision.

4. The relevant sections of the Indian Limitation Act, 1963 (hereinafter referred to as the 'Act') are Sections 4 and 12. They are reproduced below:—

4. "Where the prescribed period for any suit, appeal or application expires on a day when the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, preferred or made on the day when the Court re-opens.

Explanation— A Court shall be deemed to be closed on any day within the meaning of this section if during any part of its normal working hours it remains closed on that day."

12. "(1) In computing the period of limitation for any suit, appeal or application, the day from which such period is to be reckoned, shall be excluded.

(2) In computing the period of limitation for an appeal or an application for leave to appeal or for revision or for review of a judgment, the day on which the judgment complained of was pronounced and the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree, sentence or order appealed from or sought to be revised or reviewed shall be excluded.

(3) Where a decree or order is appealed from or sought to be revised or reviewed, or where an application is made for leave to appeal from a decree or order, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment on which the decree or order is founded shall also be excluded.

(4) In computing the period of limitation for an application to set aside an award, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the award shall be excluded.

Explanation — In computing under this section the time requisite for obtaining a copy of a decree or an order, any time taken by the court to prepare the decree or order before an application for a copy thereof is made shall not be excluded."

5. In (1897) ILR 19 All 342, a Division Bench of this Court, on facts similar to the facts of the present case, came to the conclusion that the appeal was within time. In AIR 1959 All 699 another Division Bench came to the conclusion that the cases decided prior to the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Maqbul Ahmad v. Onkar Pratap Narain Singh, AIR 1935 PC 85 were no longer good law. Some of these cases were cited before the Division Bench and they are— (1897) ILR 19 All 342; Tukaram Gopal v. Pandurang Sadaram, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 584, and Pandharinath Sakharam v. Shankar Narain, (1901) ILR 25 Bom 586. Before advertng to the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council mentioned above, we should like to point out the difference between Section 4 and Sections 12 and 14 of the Act. The language of Section 4 pre-supposes that the period of limitation has already expired but it has expired on a day when the court was closed, and it provides that, despite the fact that limitation has expired, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, preferred or made on the day on which the court reopens. There is nothing in Section 4 of the Act on the basis of which it could be said that it has the effect of extending or enlarging the period of limitation. The language of Sections 12 and 14, however, clearly provides for the extension of the period of limitation and, therefore, the period contemplated by Sections 12 and 14 must be added to the period of limitation prescribed by the Act and if, after this addition, limitation expires on a day when the court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be filed on the reopening day. In Maqbul Ahmad's case, AIR 1935 PC 85 their Lordships of the Privy Council said this:—

"The second period is the period of the long vacation. In regard to that matter, the appellants seem to their Lordships to be in a position which is in the nature of a dilemma. It is to be noted that there is a marked distinction in form between Section 4 and Section 14. The language, employed in Section 4 indicates that it has nothing to do with computing the prescribed period. What the section provides is that, where the period prescribed expires on a day when the Court is closed, notwithstanding that fact, the application may be made on the day that the Court reopens; so that there is nothing in the section which alters the length of the prescribed period; whereas in Section 14 and other sections of a similar nature in the Act, the direction being with the words: "In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any application," certain periods shall be excluded. It, therefore seems to their Lordships that, where there is ground for excluding certain periods under Section 14, in order to ascertain what is the date of the expiration of the prescribed period, the days excluded from operating by way of limitation have to be added to what is primarily the prescribed period; that is to say, if the prescribed period is three years, and twenty days ought to be excluded in order to determine when the prescribed period expires, twenty days have to be added to the three years, and the date of the expiration of the prescribed period is thus ascertained."

6. The decision of the Judicial Committee mentioned above has been followed by large number of High Courts in this country. See Puran Chand v. Abdullah, AIR 1938 All 606; Mst. Shayam Peare v. Ram Autar Singh, AIR 1939 All 252; Raja Pande v. Sheopuran Pande, AIR 1942 All 429 (FB); Shanti Prakash v. Harnam Das, AIR 1938 Lah 234 (FB); Bhawani Cloth Mills Ltd. v. Parmeshwari Doss, AIR 1947 Lah 168; Avasarala Kamaraju Pantulu v. Balla Saramma, AIR 1942 Mad 604; S. N. Jayarama Aiyar v. S. Rajagopalan, AIR 1965 Mad 459; Shivjiram Dhannalal Marwadi v. Gulabchand Kalooram Marwadi, AIR 1941 Nag 100; Chudaman v. Nishramsao v. Ram Kuwar Birajlal, AIR 1948 Nag 15; Sadashivrao Gangadhar v. Ramchandra Bhawan Bhagwat, AIR 1954 Madh Bha 18; Kanhaiyalal v. Ram Kishan, AIR 1966 Madh Pra 340; Ram Manorath v. Ram Bhulawan, AIR 1947 Oudh 3; Karim Ismail v. Abdul Rahiman, AIR 1953 Bom 353; Municipal Councillors of Puri Municipality v. Madhusudhan Das Mohapatra, AIR 1961 Orissa 183; C. Raghavendra Rao v. Vasavamba, AIR 1960 Mys 216. In Dhanna Mistry v. Bengal Nagpur Rly. Co. Ltd., AIR 1934 Pat 367, it was laid down and, in our view, correctly, that the period of limitation should be computed first and, if Section 12 or other similar sections permit the exclusion of any period, that period should be added to the prescribed period of limitation and if the total period thus arrived at, expires on a day when the court is closed, Section 4 of the Act would come into play. To us, it appears that the law has been correctly laid down in the impressive array of authorities enumerated above.

A plain reading of Section 4 on the one hand and Sections 12, 14 and other similar sections on the other, makes the conclusion at which the above mentioned authorities have arrived, inevitable.

7. Mr. N. Lal, learned counsel for the opposite parties, has relied upon the following cases: (1901) ILR 25 Bom 584; (1901) ILR 25 Bom 586; and of course, (1897) ILR 19 All 342; Smt. Kamala Sundari Dassi v. Sridam Chandra, AIR 1954 Cal 569; 1956 All WR 737; Saminatha Ayyar v. Venkatasubba Ayyar, (1904) ILR 27 Mad 21; Ganga Prasad v. Raghubir Prasad, 1962 All LJ 1149; Abdul Ghaffor v. Mt. Rasulunnis, AIR 1922 Oudh 39; Sukhanandan Prasad Shukla v. Raja Ahmad Ali Khan, AIR 1937 Oudh 26; Budhu v. Sultan, AIR 1914 All 303; Asa Singh v. Hira Singh, AIR 1938 Lah 317; Ma Dan v. Tan Chong San, AIR 1929 Rang 96 (1) and Ramcharan Shukul v. Sri Thakurjee Mandil Dar Kadhis, AIR 1931 Pat 60. The cases prior to Maqbul Ahmad's case AIR 1935 PC 85 must be deemed to be no longer good law. As regards the cases after that, Maqbul Ahmad's case, AIR 1935 PC 85 was never considered in them. In 1962 All LJ 1149; AIR 1959 All 699 was cited but was not really considered and the Privy Council decision in Maqbul Ahmad's case, AIR 1935 PC 85 upon which Mukat Behari Lal's case, AIR 1959 All 699 was based, was not noticed. As regards Mukat Behari Lal's case, AIR 1959 All 699 the learned Judge (Mithan Lal J.) just disposed it of in one sentence:

"The case of Mukat Behari Lal is also based on the same footing and so that too does not lend any support to the views of the learned counsel for the opposite party."

AIR 1938 Lah 317 is a single Judge decision and in the same volume is a Full Bench decision to the contrary already mentioned by us above. The Calcutta decision in AIR 1954 Cal 569 proceeds on the footing that Section 4 of the Act extends the period of limitation which is directly in the teeth of the decision of the Judicial Committee in Maqbul Ahmad's case, AIR 1935 PC 85 which was never noticed by the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court.

8. Strong reliance was placed by Mr. N. Lal on a decision of their Lordships of the Supreme Court in State of Uttar Pradesh v. Maharaja Narain, AIR 1968 SC 960. This was a case under Section 12 (2) of the Act and the effect of Section 4 was never considered. Their Lordships have held that Section 12 (2) of the Act enlarges the period of limitation prescribed under Entry 157 of Schedule I. That section simply permits the appellant to deduct from the time taken in filing the appeal the time requisite for obtaining the copy of the order appealed from. This decision, therefore, is clearly distinguishable and has no application to the facts and to the question of law that arises in the present case.

9. Mr. N. Lal also relied upon an unreported decision of a Division Bench of this Court in Second Appeal No. 420 of 1967 (All) Dudhnath Dube v. Prakhu Dube decided by Rajeshwari Prasad and A. K. Kirty, JJ. on April 19, 1968. In this case, the learned Judges took the view that Mukat Behari Lal's case, AIR 1959 All 699, was a decision under the Limitation Act of 1908 and it was no longer good law in view of the definition of 'period of limitation' and 'prescribed period' given in the Act of 1963. They also thought that the difference in the phraseology of Sections 3 and 4 of the old Act and Sections 3 and 4 of the new Act led to the same conclusion. They pointed out that, under the new Act, dismissal on the ground of limitation would be entailed as a result of the filing of the suit, appeal or application after the prescribed period and not after the period of limitation prescribed by the first Schedule. We fail to see any difference justifying this conclusion, 'period of limitation' has been defined as period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by the Schedule and 'prescribed period' has been defined as the period of limitation computed in accordance with the provisions of the new Act. The language employed in Section 4 of the new Act indicates just as the language of Section 4 of the old Act indicated, that it has nothing to do with computing the prescribed period. The language of Section 4 of the new Act does not extend or enlarge the period of limitation any more than the language of Section 4 of the old Act did. Consequently, AIR 1959 All 699 and the other cases in which the same view has been taken, are, in our opinion, still good law, despite the change in the phraseology of Sections 3 and 4 of the new Act and the cases relied upon by Mr. N. Lal in which a contrary view has been taken, do not lay down the correct law,

Under the new Act too, the prescribed period will be computed not in accordance with Section 4 of the Act, but in accordance with Sections 12 and 14 and other similar sections. We, therefore, respectfully disagree with the conclusions arrived at by the Division Bench in the unreported decision mentioned above.

10. Mr. N. Lal has argued that the view that we have taken is bound to result in hardship and injustice in individual cases. His contention is that a person, who wants to file an appeal, is entitled to have full 30 days for filing the appeal and, if for want of funds or other reasons, he has to wait up to the 30th day, and if that day happens to be a day on which the court is closed, his appeal would be barred by time for no fault of his. Our short answer to this argument is that in appropriate cases the appellate Court will extend the benefit of S. 5 of the Indian Limitation Act and condone the delay in filing the appeal.

11. Our conclusion, therefore, is that, technically, the appeal filed in the court below was barred by limitation. The question, however, is whether this is a fit case for interference in revision. In view of the conflicting decisions mentioned above, the defendant no. 1, Municipal Board of Ujhani, could very well have been misled into thinking that copies could be applied for on the reopening of the civil courts after the vacation and the time requisite for obtaining the copies would be excluded and its appeal would be within limitation. This would, therefore, have been a perfectly good ground for condoning the delay in filing the appeal under Section 5 of the Act. We, therefore, decline to interfere in revision.

12. This application in revision is dismissed, but we make no order as to costs.
Revision dismissed.

END

income-tax free shall be payable by the State Government."

It should be noted that both the Trusts which were before the Supreme Court are comprised of income-tax free securities. Since they were issued free of income-tax the interest accrued and received on the said securities, cannot be charged with income-tax in the hands of the receiver of that interest. The Supreme Court, therefore, held that the assessee was exempt from paying income-tax by virtue of the provisions of Section 8. The same two trusts which were before the Supreme Court, viz., the Family and the Miscellaneous Trusts are under consideration in the present assessments also. It follows that the interest realised from the securities that are the subject-matter of the two trusts are exempt from income-tax in the hands of the assessee by virtue of the third proviso to Section 8 and that they are not exempt from taxation on account of Item 8 of the notification dated 21-3-1922.

11. The learned counsel for the assessee, however, admitted before us that the securities comprised in the other three trusts, viz. The Housing Accommodation Trust, Pilgrimage Money Trust and Jewellery for Family Trust are not Income-tax free and interest therefrom is not exempt from income-tax. He, therefore, fairly conceded that the question must be answered against the assessee in so far as the securities in these three trusts are concerned.

12. Consequently, the answer to the second question referred at the instance of the assessee is in favour of the assessee in respect of the securities comprised in the family and the Miscellaneous Trusts, in so far as exemption from income-tax is concerned and against him in so far as super-tax is concerned. In regard to the securities in the other three trusts, the question is answered against him.

13. Now remains the last question. It relates to the inclusion of a sum of Rs. 1 lakh in the income of the assessee. The facts relevant to this item are:— By an indenture made at Hyderabad on 8-10-1949 between the assessee as the settlor of the one part and three named trustees, including the settlor-assessee of the second part, the settlor made a settlement of a sum of Rs. 30 lakhs on his daughter-in-law Princess Niloufer, wife of one of his sons. That amount was deposited with the Government of India, on its agreeing to pay interest thereon at the rate of 1% per annum free of Income-tax, Super-tax and all other taxes whatsoever, to the trustees and also agreeing to pay out of the corpus of the said sum of Rs. 30,00,000/-, various sums from time to time pursuant to an agreement dated 8-10-1949. This arrangement was incorporated in an agreement dated 8-10-1949 between the Government of India of the first part, the assessee as the settlor of the second part, and the three trustees appointed under the trust deed of the third part. Under this arrangement, the Government of India agreed to pay interest at the rate of 1% per annum and to pay to the trustees out of the corpus of the said sum of Rs. 30 lakhs, until the said corpus is exhausted, such sum every year as together with the interest accrued due on the said sum of Rs. 30 lakhs or on the balance thereof remaining with the Government of India, as would in all make up the sum of Rs. 1 lakh per year. The Government of India further agreed that the interest payable on the aforesaid sum of Rs. 30 lakhs shall be free from Income-tax, Super-tax and all other taxes, dues, duties and assessments and that accordingly the Government of India shall not at any time assess or levy on the settlor or the trustees or any of the beneficiaries under the said deed of Trust, any Income-tax, Super-tax or other taxes etc., in respect of any income or corpus of the said sum of Rs. 30 lakhs deposited with them or any part thereof. Under the trust deed, the trustees should pay the amount of Rs. 1 lakh every year to Princess Niloufer free of Income-tax etc., until her death or re-marriage, whichever event should happen first. In the first eventuality, her beneficial interest was to pass on to such of her issue then living, in accordance with the provisions of the law of succession governing Sunni Muslims, as if the said Princess had died intestate. In case there was no issue on and after the death of the said Princess, the corpus of the said Trust Fund or the balance thereof then remaining in the hands of the Trustees was to be transferred to the settlor, if he be then living, and in the event of the settlor predeceasing the said Princess, it was to be handed over to the Nizam of Hyderabad living at that time. In case of divorce by her husband, if the Trustees were of the opinion that the divorce was not due to any act or default on the part of the said princess, it was open to the trustees to pay the net interest of the Trust Fund or of the balance thereof for the time being to the said Princess, until death or remarriage whichever event should take place first.

14. This arrangement went on till the year 1952 when the marriage of the Princess with the son of the settlor assessee was dissolved on 18-9-1952. Evidently the Trustees were of the opinion that the dissolution of the marriage was not occasioned by any act or default on the part of the Princess. They were, therefore, prepared to continue the payments to her as per the terms of the settlement of 8-10-1949. However, on 18-9-1952 itself, the Princess under a deed of release, transferred her right to receive a sum of Rs. 1 lakh per annum in favour of the assessee for a lump sum payment of Rs. 10 lakhs. It was thus, the assessee received during the relevant assessment years the sums of Rs. 1 lakh per year from the trustees. These are the amounts which are sought to be included by the revenue in the income of the assessee.

15. The assessee resisted this inclusion on two grounds: The first contention was that what was being paid back to him was only his capital and there was no element of income in the annual payment. Secondly he contended that by virtue of the terms of the tripartite agreement of 8-10-1949, these payments were totally exempt from tax and assessment. These contentions were not accepted either by the Income-tax Officer or by the Appellate Assistant Commissioner in appeal. Nor did they find acceptance with the Appellate Tribunal either. The third question referred to us at the instance of the assessee raises the same points for decision by us also.

16. We have no hesitation in upholding the view of the Tribunal that the annual payments of Rs. 1 lakh in the hands of the assessee are income within the meaning of the Act. He paid a lump sum of Rs. 10 lakhs and obtained in his favour, the benefit under the Trust Deed. These annual payments, no doubt, included not only interest but also instalments of capital. It should be noted that the benefit was purchased by the assessee not in his capacity as settlor but only as an ordinary purchaser. It cannot be postulated that such payments in the hands of an ordinary purchaser would not become income. The contention put forward by the learned counsel for the assessee is that these payments were made up of not only interest but also portions of the capital itself. But that feature of the payment does not prevent the amount from being an annuity. The principle stated in Maharajkumar Gopal Saran Narain Singh v. Commissioner of Income-tax Bihar and Orissa, 1935-3 ITR 237 = (AIR 1935 PC 143) applies to the present case also. There a person transferred an estate worth nearly Rs. 2 crores in consideration of certain acts to be done and obligations to be discharged by the transferee. One of such obligations is an annual payment of Rs. 2,40,000/- to the transferor for his life. The court held that the owner of the estate had exchanged a capital for a life annuity along with other benefits, which was taxable as income in his hands. It was further found that the annual payments were not instalments of a capital sum and that they were part of the price of the sale. Applying the same principle, it follows that the amounts of Rupees 1 lakh received by the assessee in pursuance of the release deed executed by the princess in his favour on 18-9-1952 constitute his income.

17. The next part of the question is whether the assessee was entitled to exemption from tax on the income under the terms of the agreement entered into with the Government of India on 8-10-1949? We have briefly referred to the gist of that agreement. It was a tripartite agreement to which the Government of India, the assessee as the settlor and the three trustees of the trust were parties. A copy of the trust deed was also annexed to the agreement. It is common case between the parties that the rate of interest prevailing at the time of the agreement on Government and gilt-edged securities was 3½% to 4% per annum. Nevertheless, the interest stipulated on the sum of Rs. 30 lakhs deposited with the Government of India was only 1% per annum. In order to understand the background of the agreement, it becomes necessary to read the following portion of the preamble:

"And whereas for the purpose of completing the said transaction an arrangement has been arrived at with the Government of India under which the trustees are to deposit the sum of Rupees 30 lakhs (Rupees thirty lakhs) with the Government of India on the Government of India agreeing to pay to him interest at the rate of one per cent per annum free of Income-tax, Super Tax and all other taxes whatsoever and also upon the Government of India agreeing to pay to the Trustees out of the corpus of the said sum of Rs. 30 Lakhs (Rupees thirty lakhs) various sums from time to time in manner hereinafter stated."

Clause (2) of the agreement is very material in this context. The relevant portions thereof are in the following terms:—

"The Government of India shall out of its revenue pay to the Trustees interest on the said sum of Rs. 30 lakhs (Rupees thirty lakhs) at the rate of one per cent per annum free of Income-tax, Super-tax and all other taxes, dues, duties and other assessments whatsoever from the date on which the said sum of Rs. 30 lakhs (Rupees thirty lakhs) shall be deposited by the Trustees with the Government of India until the said sum of Rs. 30 lakhs (Rupees thirty lakhs) shall be wholly paid out by the Government of India in accordance with the provisions."

It is thus made a part of the agreement that till the sum of Rs. 30 lakhs was wholly paid out by the Government, the interest was made completely free of taxes, dues, duties and the assessments.

18. Clause (4) makes the position clearer. It states:—

"The Government of India hereby declares and agrees that the interest payable on the security of these presents shall be free from Income-tax, Super-tax and all other taxes, dues, duties and assessments" and that accordingly the Government of India shall not at any time assess or levy on the Settlor or the Trustees or any of them or on any of the beneficiaries under the said Deed of Trust any Income-tax, Super-tax or other taxes, dues, duties or assessments in respect of any income or corpus of the said sum of Rs. 30 Lakhs (Rupees thirty lakhs) so deposited or any part or parts thereof and any such income or corpus or any part thereof shall not at any time be included in the income of the Settlor or of Trustees or any of them or of any of the beneficiaries under the provisions of the Indian Income-tax Act or any other Act relating to taxation on the income, gains and profits of any persons in India provided however that if notwithstanding the provisions herein above contained any such tax, dues, duties or assessments shall be charged or levied on either the Settlor or the Trustees or the beneficiaries under the said Deed of Trust or any of them in respect of any income or corpus of the said sum of Rs. 30 lakhs (Rupees thirty lakhs) so deposited or any part thereof or in any part of such income or corpus be included in the total income of any of them for computing his or her total income for the purpose of assessment of his or her income, gains or profits by virtue of the provisions of the Indian Income-tax Act or of any other enactment or law for the time being in force in that behalf in India then the Government of India shall forthwith refund, reimburse and pay to such person the amount of tax, dues, duties or assessments charged or levied on him, or her and/or the amount of additional tax, dues, duties or assessments which shall have been charged or levied on him or her by reason of any part of the said income or corpus being included in the total income of such person for the purpose of assessing his or her total income, gains or profits under the provisions of the Indian Income-tax Act or any other law or enactment for the time being in force in that behalf in India."

19. Reading Cls. 2 and 4 together, it is clear that the payments made in accordance therewith were made free from taxation and assessment. In fact, in Cl. (4), the Government of India undertook not to assess or levy at any time on the settlor or the trustees or any of the beneficiaries, any tax or assessment in respect of any income or corpus of the sum of Rs. 30 lakhs. It has been contended for the Revenue that the exemption was available only to the settlor or the trustees or any of the beneficiaries and is not available to a purchaser of the benefit under the deed. It has been urged that the privilege of exemption from tax was conferred on these three categories of persons purely as a personal benefit and it could not be extended to others. We are not inclined to accept this contention. If there is any doubt as to whether the benefit of exemption from tax was limited to the three categories of persons alone, the preamble helps in resolving the difficulty. We have already extracted the relevant portion of the preamble. It makes clear that the settlor and the trustees had agreed to deposit a sum of Rs. 30 lakhs with the Government of India at the very low rate of 1% per annum, because that deposit and the payments therefrom were agreed to be made free from tax. It must, therefore, follow that payments made in pursuance of the agreement should be free from tax. It is also very pertinent to note that the word used in clause (4) is "the beneficiaries" and not the "Princess." Had the intention of the agreement been to limit the exemption from tax to the person of the Princess alone, the word 'Princess' would have been used in the place of 'the beneficiaries'. In any case, we are not inclined to agree with the contention advanced for the revenue that the transferee of the benefit could not stand in the shoes of the original beneficiary. The benefit is certainly "an actionable claim" within the meaning of Section 3 of the Transfer of Property Act. When there is a transfer of that actionable claim within the meaning of Section 130 of the Transfer of Property Act, the transferee becomes the beneficiary in the place of the transferor who was the original beneficiary and thus becomes entitled to all the benefits which the transferor enjoyed. We have no hesitation, therefore, in holding that the assessee, by virtue of the transfer made in his favour, became a beneficiary within the meaning of clause (4) of the agreement dated 8-10-1949 and thus was entitled to the exemption from tax by virtue of its provisions.

20. We must also notice another contention urged before us for the revenue. It has been pointed out that there is no provision in the Act or the Rules made thereunder, empowering the Government of India to enter into an agreement of the nature of the arrangement of 8-10-1949, and, therefore, the agreement was entered into without jurisdiction and was void. We cannot go into this question for the simple reason that it has not been referred to us. It should be noted that this argument was never taken by the Revenue at any stage, in any form, before the lower authorities and has been for the first time urged before us. We are not, therefore, called upon to answer this question.

21. From what is stated above, it follows that the answer to the last question is that though the payments of Rs. 1 lakh per year were "income" in the hands of the assessee, he was entitled to exemption from tax thereon, under the terms of agreement of 8-10-1949.

22. The questions are answered as stated above. In view of the fact that the assessee has succeeded in some questions and failed in others, we make no order as to costs.

Answered accordingly.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 404 (V 57 C 65)

P. JAGANMOHAN REDDY, C. J., AND SAMBASIVA RAO, J.

Kaja Sudhir, Petitioner v. The Principal, Guntur Medical College, Guntur and others, Respondents.

Writ Petns. Nos. 4217, 4249, 4268, 4360, 4956 of 1968 and No. 17 of 1969, D/- 30-1-1969.

(A) Constitution of India. Art. 14 — Equality before law — Rule 3 (a) and Appendix 1 of Rules for selection of candidates for admission to the integrated M.B.B.S. Course, in Medical Colleges in Andhra Area of Andhra Pradesh for year 1968-69 are not unconstitutional — Categorisation of several N.C.C. Certificates in order of preference is based on rational differentia and is not discriminatory. Observations in (1968) 1 Andh WR 56, held obiter. (Paras 9 to 13)

(B) Education — Rules for selection of candidates for admission to the integrated M.B.B.S. Course, in Medical Colleges in Andhra Area of Andhra Pradesh for year 1968-69, Rule 3 (a) and Appendix 1 — Not unconstitutional — Categorisation of several N.C.C. Certificates in order of preference is based on rational classification and is neither discriminatory nor unintelligible — Object being to compensate the candidates having taken part either in Sports or in extra-curricular activities, authority concerned is justified in giving preference to persons having taken part in those activities for a longer period than those who have taken part for a comparatively shorter period. Observations in (1968) 1 Andh WR 56, held obiter. (Paras 9 to 13)

Cases Referred. Chronological Paras (1968) 1968-1 Andh WR 56, A. S. Rami Reddy v. Principal, Guntur Medical College 8, 12, 13

K. Suryanarayana and Y. B. Tata Rao, for Petitioner in W. P. No. 4217 of 1968; G. Vedanta Rao and N. Narasimha Rao, for Petitioner in W. P. No. 4249 of 1968; M. Adinarayana Raju (for No. 6), R. V. Subba Rao (for No. 3), T. Bali Reddy (for Nos. 7 and 10) and D. Sudhakar Rao (for No. 5), for Respondents in W. P. No. 4249 of 1968; K. Srinivasa Murthy, K. Haranadha Rao, for Petitioner in W. P. No.

4268 of 1968; D. Satyanarayana, for Petitioners in W. P. Nos. 4360 and 4956 of 1968; I. Balaiah and N. Narasimha Rao, for Petitioner in W. P. No. 17 of 1969, 2nd Govt. Pleader, for Respondents Nos. 1 and 2 in W.P. Nos. 4217 and 4249 of 1968 and for all the Respondents in other Petitions.

P. JAGANMOHAN REDDY, C. J.:—These six Writ Petitions relate to admissions to the medical colleges in Andhra Area. In Writ Petitions Nos. 4217, 4249, 4268, 4360 and 4956 of 1968, the question is as to the interpretation of Appendix I to Rule 3 (a) of the Rules for admission as amended by G. O. Ms. No. 1499 Health dated 28th June, 1968.

2. Before we deal with the several contentions raised before us, it is necessary to set out the qualifications of each of the petitioners.

3. K. Sudhir, Petitioner in Writ Petition No. 4217 of 1968, has obtained in the P. U. C. examination 230.25 marks in optionals and also obtained a 'B' Certificate in N.C.C.

4. C. Vijayasekhar, petitioner in Writ Petition No. 4249 of 1968, has obtained 182.25 marks in optionals and he is also a 'B' certificate holder. Apart from this, he has been for three years in A.C.C. and has also obtained a certificate for attending Advanced Leadership Course and Annual Training Camp.

5. Pardhasarathi is the petitioner in Writ Petition No. 4268 of 1968 with 228 marks in optionals and is a 'B' certificate holder.

6. Santhi Swarup Nayar is the petitioner in Writ Petition No. 4360 of 1968. He has obtained 228.75 marks in optionals and is also the holder of a 'B' certificate.

7. S. V. Umamaheswara Rao is the petitioner in Writ Petition No. 4956 of 1968. He has passed the H. S. C. Multi-purpose examination obtaining 196.50 marks in optional subjects and is a holder of 'A-1' and 'A-2' certificates.

8. These candidates are competing against eleven candidates who have either obtained 'A-1', A-II, J-II or C certificates — all of which are said to be higher than the 'B' certificates obtained by the petitioners. It is the contention of the learned advocates for the petitioners that this Court had, on a prior occasion, in A. S. Rami Reddy v. Principal, Guntur Medical College, 1968-1 Andh WR 56 considered the constitutionality of Rule 3 and the Appendix thereof which are in similar terms to those with which we are now concerned. The Division Bench consisting of one of us and Kumarayya, J., had held the Rule to be discriminatory. Before we deal with this contention, it is necessary to set out Rule 3(a) and Appendix I to the Rules.

3(a). "2% of the seats shall be reserved exclusively for students possessing the prescribed certificates in N.C.C., and A.C.C. Selection of candidates under this category will be made according to the procedure detailed in Appendix I to these Rules;

x                      x                      x                      x x                      x                      x                      x

APPENDIX I

The selection of candidates possessing the N.C.C. and A.C.C. certificates will be made in the order of preference indicated below:—

(i) Holders of 'C' certificates for Boys from Colleges, holders of 'A-II' Certificates for boys from High Schools, holders of 'G-II' Certificates for girls from Colleges, holders of 'J-II' Certificates for girls from High Schools.

(ii) Holders of 'B' Certificates for boys from Colleges, holders of 'A-I' Certificates for boys from High Schools, holders of 'G-I' Certificates for girls from Colleges, and holders of 'J-I' Certificates for girls from High Schools.

(iii) Holders of A.C.C. Certificates for boys and girls from Schools.

NOTE:— The candidates with one year training in the Air Wing of N.C.C. shall, for purposes of admission, be treated on par with a candidate possessing 'B' and 'A-I' Certificates of the Army and the Naval Wings subject to the condition that the candidate should produce a certificate from the Director, N.C.C. to the effect that he is proficient in his course, and also gives an undertaking that he would continue and obtain his 'B' certificate in the Air Wing."

9. It is the contention of the petitioners' advocates that this categorisation of the several certificates in order of preference is not based on any rational classification and is discriminatory, in that the Junior and the Senior Divisions of N.C.C. irrespective of proficiency have been grouped together. In the first category of the order of preference, 'C' certificates for boys from colleges which can only be awarded two years after they obtain 'B' certificates in the colleges while studying P.U.C. are grouped together with 'A-II' certificates which are awarded two years after obtaining 'A-I' Certificates from high schools. 'G-II' certificates and 'J-II' certificates are respectively equivalent to 'C' certificates and 'A-II' certificates for girls from colleges and high schools and the same argument applies to them as well. Similarly, in the second category of preference, it is contended that 'B' certificates which are obtained after one year's training in Colleges and a Senior Division in N.C.C. are compared and treated as equivalent to 'A-I' certificates obtained by boys from high schools who have put in one year. In so far as the girls are concerned, the equivalent of these are 'G-I' and 'J-I' certificates respectively. In the third and last category of preference, it is contended that A.C.C. certificates for boys and girls who have put in even three years of training are relegated to this category.

The learned Government Pleader, on the other hand, submits that this classification is based on a rational differentia which has the nexus with the object sought to be achieved, namely, that candidates who have been in the N.C.C. for longer periods and have taken interest are preferred to those who have had lesser number of years of training. With this object the grouping has been done into the several categories of preference. We are also told that it has not been denied that candidates who have obtained 'A-II' certificates in H.S.C. notwithstanding the fact that they cannot obtain the 'B' certificates in P.U.C., nonetheless are in a position to obtain 'B' certificates subsequently in the first year degree course and proceed to get 'C' certificates before they do their B.Sc., degree course just as in the same way as a P.U.C. candidate, who is going in for a degree, can obtain the 'C' Certificate. One of the conditions for obtaining 'C' certificates is that a person must obtain the 'B' certificate which can only be done in the Senior Division of N.C.C. in the college during the first year. If this position is correct we have no doubt it is and because there has been no serious dispute then there is certainly no discrimination between the H.S.C. and P.U.C. boys. Even in the case of candidates completing H.S.C. in schools and who come to the colleges to take P.U.C., they can be awarded "A-I" and "A-II" certificates as these are certificates given for training in schools.

Once it is admitted that there is no disadvantage between the candidates who come from H.S.C. and those candidates who compete on the basis of P.U.C. certificates, it will not be open for this Court to go into the question of categorisation of the preferences since it is found that those preferences are based upon some rational differentia which is not discriminatory. Whether the standard of the total length of training in the N.C.C. both in schools and colleges is taken as the criterion for efficiency or as a qualification for selection, or whether preference is to be given only to the training and certificates obtained in the Senior Division of N.C.C. is a matter which is not within the jurisdiction of this Court. It is a matter entirely for the authority empowered to frame the rules for selection. There is not a rule, the basis of which cannot be disagreed with. But what the Courts have to see is whether in making or framing the rule, the authority concerned has adopted a reasonable classification and has based it on an inintelligible differentia which has a reasonable connection with the object sought to be achieved.

10. In the present petitions, we find that while making admissions to medical colleges, certain percentage of seats is given to candidates who have obtained proficiency either in sports or in extra-curricular activities because it is felt that those who have taken part in these activities have done so at the expense of their studies; and therefore do not have the same advantage as those who have exclusively concentrated on getting marks. If this is the avowed object, namely, to compensate those candidates who have taken part in some of the activities referred to above, then the authority concerned is perfectly justified in giving preference to persons who have taken part in those activities for a longer period than those who have taken part for a comparatively shorter period. There is nothing discriminatory or unintelligible in this classification.

11. Sri G. Vedanta Rao, learned Advocate for the petitioner in W. P. No. 4249 of 1968, has produced the opinion of one of the Military Officers to the effect that Senior N.C.C. is a superior training than Junior N.C.C. training. No doubt it may be so. But that is not the only criterion because if that were to be so, there must be no reason why persons who have obtained B.Sc. degrees should not compete or be given preference over those who have passed only P.U.C. This would cut at the very object of the selection which is intended to see that they should be selected at the lowest level or at the threshold of their entrance to the professional colleges. In this view we find no discrimination whatever either in the Rule or in the Appendix which prescribes preferences of various categories.

12. Certain observations made in (1968) 1 Andh WR 56 by a Bench consisting of one of us and Kumarayya, J., have been relied on for holding that Rule 3 is unconstitutional. It may be stated that in that case after the last date for the receipt of applications, the Government changed the Rule pertaining to selection which caused prejudice to the petitioners. The basis of that decision was that the Government was estopped from applying a different rule to that which was prevailing at the time when the applications were called for and not subsequent to the date when the receipt of applications for admission is closed. Kumarayya, J., who spoke for the Bench observed at p. 63:

"At any rate, as we have already noticed 'the Government, possessing as they do, powers to amend, alter and cancel any rule, could not exercise these powers in an unreasonable manner to unjustly defeat the rights already accrued. They are bound by the doctrine of equitable estoppel. It follows therefore that if the petitioners, according to the rules in force on the last date of applications, are entitled to a seat in the medical college as against the respondents, who are actually awarded such seats, their right cannot be defeated by subsequent amendment to the rules. Apart from any other ground the very idea that the rule should be thus changed to the detriment of some, after all the applications have been received, is obnoxious enough, for if so permitted it will lead not only to arbitrariness but also to unjust results of far-reaching consequences. We therefore hold when the rule in force was valid and was not struck down, the change in the rule to the detriment of some including the petitioners is unjustified and the Government on the principle of equitable estoppel is precluded from retracting from the original position and giving effect to the amended rule to the detriment of the petitioners."

No doubt this was the ratio of that decision. But there are certain observations made in that decision which certainly assist the petitioners, viz.,

"... P.U.C. students who could hope to get only 'B' certificates and not 'C' certificate unless they continue to study for 3 years in college should have been made to suffer by this rule. The highest certificate that they can hope to get is only 'B' certificate and that certificate for purposes of selection has not been placed at least at a par with 'A-II' which is the highest that H.S.C. students can get."

These observations were based upon the material placed before the Bench then.

13. As we have already said earlier, it is not denied that a person applying under the P.U.C. category for admission can nonetheless ask to be considered for admission under the N.C.C. category on a 'C' certificate because it is not necessary that such a candidate should apply immediately after passing the P.U.C.; but he can do so when he gets into the final year of B.Sc. by which time he could not only get 'B' certificate but also 'C' certificate. In fact one of such candidates who has been given a seat, namely, Roop Kumar, has been awarded a 'C' certificate and he got 229.50 marks in P.U.C. Similarly, as we said earlier a person in H.S.C. who has got "A-II" certificate can easily compete with a person who has applied in the category of P.U.C. with a "C" certificate. Nor can it be said that a person who has passed P.U.C. can only get "B" certificate and not "A-II" certificate. We think that the observations made in (1968) 1 Andh WR 56 are no doubt obiter, as such could not be pressed in aid of the contentions urged on behalf of the petitioners that the Appendix has already been struck down; or, at any rate, must be struck down. In this view, we reject the contention that the Rule and the Appendix are unconstitutional. For this reason, the 'B' certificate holders come under the second category of preference and must be compared only with those that are specified in Appendix I.

14. It is stated on behalf of one of the petitioners (W. P. No. 4249 of 1968) that he has put in three years in A.C.C. and is a holder of a "B" certificate which gives him longer training than the others. But we have no material which can afford a basis for holding that A.C.C. certificate is of a higher category or involves a longer period of training or is more efficacious. One of the considerations for grouping certain certificates in the first category of preference is that they are given to boys who have attended the Annual Training Camps. We do not know whether persons who are trained in A.C.C. have to attend such Training Camps. Consequently it is not possible for us to say that they are in the same category of those who have been grouped in the first category; and therefore must be given preference. Therefore none of the petitioners can claim preference to those who have already been given seats.

15. No doubt, the petitioner in W. P. No. 4217 of 1968, K. Sudhir, has a claim to be considered on merits because he has obtained 230.25 marks. Mr. G. Venkata-rama Sastry, II Government Pleader, who has given us the details of marks obtained by others, has frankly conceded on instructions that the petitioner would be in the third rank in the reserved list of candidates and that there are 13 seats available out of which 9 are reserved including the seat reserved for the petitioner himself. In this view, he is entitled to one of the seats. Accordingly we direct that this petitioner should be given a seat.

16. Similarly, Santi Swarup Nayar, Petitioner in W. P. No. 4360 of 1968, has obtained 228.75 marks and if so, he is entitled to a seat on merits and his case for admission can be considered. We cannot direct that a seat should be given to him because we have not got all the details of marks obtained by other candidates, or their marks in English which have to be considered for giving preference in the event of there being a tie. We accordingly direct the 1st respondent Principal of the Guntur Medical College, to consider his case on merits.

17. The contention that because these petitioners had applied for admission as coming under the N.C.C. group, they were not considered for the general seats is not a valid one. The proper course to be followed by the selection authority, according to the Rule, is to consider the applications of the five petitioners on their respective merits; and if they are not likely to get seats on that footing, then alone their applications can be considered as falling under any one of the special categories.

Writ Petition No. 17 of 1969.

18. The question arising in this writ petition is already concluded by the directions given by us in the judgment in Writ Petition No. 4070 of 1968 delivered on 9th December 1968 in that they may be considered as a class of merit without further categorisation into Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes, Women candidates, sports etc.

19. In the result, W. P. Nos. 4217/68, 4360/68 and 17 of 1969 are allowed with costs. Advocate's fee Rs. 100/- (Rupees one hundred only) in each. W. P. Nos. 4249/68, 4268/68 and 4956/68 are dismissed without costs. We however, fix the Government Pleader's fee at Rs. 100/- (Rupees one hundred only) in each of these petitions.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 407
(V 57 C 66)

OBUL REDDI, J.

Nannepuneni Seetharamaiah and others, Appellants v. Nannepuneni Ramakrishnaiah, Respondents.

Appeal No. 108 of 1964 and Cross Objections, D/-24-2-1969, from decree of Sub. J. Khammam in O. S. No. 6 of 1962.

(A) Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (b) — Documents of which registration is compulsory — Partition deed — Effect of non-registration — Though inadmissible in evidence for ascertaining terms of partition and tracing source of title, the factum of partition can be proved by other evidence. AIR 1960 SC 335 & AIR 1965 Andh Pra 274 (FB), Rel. on. (Para 7)

(B) Hindu Succession Act (1956), S. 25 — His conviction for the offence of murder or abetment of murder under S. 302 I. P. C. not necessary for disqualification — Conviction under S. 324, I. P. C. is enough to disqualify.

Where a person, who had participated in murderous attack on his father along with others who were convicted of murder in that case, was given benefit of doubt and was convicted under Section 324, I. P. C. instead of Section 302 even then the disqualifications prescribed by Sections 25 and 27 will come into play and operate against that person inheriting or deriving any beneficial interest in the property possessed or held by his father.

DN/EN/C71/70/MLD/C

(1904) 14 Mad LJ 297 & AIR 1924 PC 209, Rel. on. (Paras 11, 12)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1965) AIR 1965 Andh Pra 274

(V 52) = (1965) 1 Andh WR 384

(FB), Kanna Reddy v. Venkata Reddy

(1960) AIR 1960 SC 335 (V 47) =

(1960) 2 SCR 253, Rukmabai v. Laxminarayan

(1924) AIR 1924 PC 209 (V 11) =

51 Ind. App. 368, Kenchava v. Girmallappa Channappa

(1904) 14 Mad LJ 297 = ILR 27

Mad 591, Vedanayaga Mudaliar v. Vedammal

Y. Suryanarayana, for Appellants; V. Madhava Rao, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: This appeal preferred by defendants is directed against the judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge, Khamman in Original Suit No. 6 of 1962 decreeing the suit of the plaintiff for partition and possession of his 1/5 share in Items 1 to 4, 6 and 7 of plaintiff 'A' schedule and Item 18 of plaintiff 'B' schedule.

2. The defendants 1 to 3 and the plaintiff are the sons of one Narayana, the 4th defendant is their mother and the 5th defendant is their sister. According to the plaintiff, he and the defendants 1 to 3 were members of a Hindu undivided joint family and therefore he is entitled to partition and separate possession of his share in the joint family properties. The suit was resisted by the defendants contending inter alia that there was a prior partition whereunder there was allotment of shares to each of the sharers and therefore the plaintiff is precluded from seeking the relief of partition and separate possession of his share. The Subordinate Judge held that there was no prior partition as set up by the defendants, and that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief claimed only in respect of Items 1 to 4, 6 and 7 of plaintiff 'A' schedule and Item 18 of plaintiff 'B' schedule and passed a preliminary decree accordingly.

3. Mr. Y. Suryanarayana, appearing for the appellants, contended that the evidence on record amply bears out the case of the appellants that there was a prior partition in the year 1955 and that the plaintiff walked out of the family taking his share and as such this partition action is not maintainable. As the plaintiff has also claimed his right to inherit along with his brothers, his father's estate and as it was negated by the Court below he has preferred the cross-objections. Mr. Suryanarayana contended that the plaintiff, being the murderer of his father, cannot inherit the estate of his father and as such he is not entitled to a share in his father's property under Sections 25 and 27 of the Hindu Succession Act.

4. Mr. Madhava Rao, appearing for the respondent-plaintiff, contended that the plaintiff was not convicted of the offence of murder and therefore, he is not disqualified from inheriting his father's property. It is next urged by Mr. Madhava Rao, that the Court below has rightly negated the case of the appellants (defendants) as the partition documents Exts. B-1 and B-5 set up by them were found to be inadmissible in evidence. Therefore, the main question for consideration is whether there was a prior partition in the year 1955, whereby the plaintiff was allotted a share, which disentitles him from maintaining the present action.

5. The case of the plaintiff as unfolded in the plaint is that his father purchased the plaint schedule properties with the monies realised by sale of the ancestral properties situate in another village that the 1st defendant and others, who were inimically disposed towards him, falsely implicated him in the case relating to the murder of his father in order to deprive him of his share in his father's property, that after he was released from jail, he made several demands asking his brothers to effect a partition and render account for the income realised from the joint family properties and that as they failed to accede to his request, he was forced to lay action for partition and separate possession of his share.

6. It is the specific case of the defendants that the joint family status was disrupted by partition as far back as in the year 1955 and a memorandum was drawn up evidencing physical partition. According to them, the plaintiff, after obtaining his share, sold away an item of that property under an agreement of sale and that he had admitted the partition and sale of an item out of what fell to his share when examined by the Court of Session, Khammam, under Section 342 of the Criminal P. C. and therefore, the action is misconceived and not maintainable.

7. Mr. Suryanarayana relied upon Exs. B-1 and B-5 and contended that they are only memoranda of the partition which was earlier effected by metes and bounds and as such, the court below erred in holding that they are inadmissible in evidence for want of registration. Ex B-1 is styled as deed of partition of immovable property entered into on 7th June 1955 by five individuals, viz. the four sons and their father Narayana. The particulars of partition were all detailed in this and the items that were allotted to each one of the sharers were also given out describing the boundaries. There is also a recital to the effect that from thenceforth each individual shall pay the land revenue and other taxes on the share allotted to him. It was signed by all the parties to the partition and there are four witnesses who attested the deed and two of them, D. Ws. 4 and 5, have been examined. Ex. B-5 is an instrument of the same date i.e. 7-6-1955, executed by the plaintiff, defendants and their father whereby they settled Ac. 4-50 cents of land in favour of one Anasuyamma, sister of the plaintiff and defendants. Ex. B-2 is an agreement of sale dated 28-7-1955 entered into by the plaintiff with his brothers agreeing to sell an item of the property which fell to his share on 7-6-1955. Therefore, it is not as if there was any earlier partition and a memorandum was drawn up on 7-6-1955 as now contended by the learned counsel for the appellants. The recitals in the deed Ex. B-2 make it abundantly clear that Exs. B-1 and B-5 were drawn up on 7-6-1955 allotting shares to each of the sharers on the very date of partition. Exs. B-1 and B-5 are documents which require to be compulsorily registered under Section 17 (1) (b) of the Registration Act. The effect of non-registration of these documents is that they will not create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish any right, title or interest in or to the immovable property comprised in the documents. In short, these documents are ineffectual to achieve the object or purpose for which they were drawn up. But the fact that these documents are inadmissible in evidence will not affect the case of the defendants for the reason that they are not precluded from proving the factum of partition by other evidence. They cannot be looked into only for ascertaining the terms of the partition and tracing the source of the title in the property held by each of the sharers. As pointed out by Subba Rao, J. (as he then was) in Rukma-bai v. Laxminarayan, AIR 1960 SC 335, doubtless, an unregistered document can effect separation in status.

8. According to Mr. Suryanarayana appearing for the appellants, this is not only a case of separation in status but a case where there was physical partition in June, 1955; and to establish that there was physical partition, he relied upon the evidence of the plaintiff himself and the answers given by him when questioned by the Sessions Judge under Section 342 of the Criminal P. C. The plaintiff, however, tried to wriggle out from the answers given by him in the Court of Session by explaining that he was constrained to make such admission on the advice tendered by his Advocate that, unless he admitted the execution of Exs. B-1, B-2 and B-5, it would be difficult for him to escape capital punishment in that case. It may be pointed out that the defendants do not depend upon the evidence of the plaintiff alone to show that there was physical partition of the lands by metes and bounds. There is the evidence of D. W. 4, one of the attestors, who says that with the help of elders there was physical partition of the properties belonging to the plaintiff and his brothers and father and that he was present on that occasion and had also attested the document in question. The lands were also measured by D. W. 6, another witness, as the father and sons had mutually agreed for division by metes and bounds as per the understanding arrived at by them. D. W. 5's evidence further establishes that there was division of the properties by metes and bounds. D. W. 6, who measured the lands, has stated that those divisions were made after the Telugu New Year's Day in that year and that the plaintiff took possession of the lands allotted to him and so also the plaintiff's sister D. W. 8 is a lessee of the plaintiff and he stated that the land that fell to the plaintiff's share was leased out to him. It is not even suggested to any of these witnesses that there was no partition and that the plaintiff did not walk out with his share, accepting the allotment made by the elders. In this connection, it may be noticed that Ex. B-2, the agreement of sale was executed by the plaintiff one month and twenty days after Exs. B-1 and B-5 were drawn up. The significance of Ex. B-2 is that it establishes not only that there was physical partition as pleaded by the appellants but it was also acted upon by the parties, the plaintiff himself having agreed to sell his property by entering into an agreement as evidenced by Ex. B-2.

9. As pointed out by the Full Bench of this Court in Kanna Reddy v. Venkata Reddy, AIR 1965 Andh Pra 274 (FB) an unregistered document cannot be relied upon to prove the terms of disposition of property embodied in that document and the bar is only to that extent and it will not preclude the party to prove physical partition by other evidence. In this case, Mr. Suryanarayana is not relying upon the terms of deed Ex. B-1 for proof of any allotment of the shares. Reliance is placed only on the oral evidence which bears out in no uncertain terms that there was physical partition of the joint family properties. I, therefore, set aside the findings and the consequent decree made by the Subordinate Judge in this regard and hold that the partition action laid by the plaintiff is not maintainable in view of the prior partition.

10. Mr. Madhava Rao next contended that the plaintiff is at least entitled to a share in his father's estate as his father died on 4th July, 1955 subsequent to the date of Ex. B-1, the partition document. Mr. Suryanarayana contended that the plaintiff has forfeited the right to inherit his father's estate as he was responsible for the murder of his father. Therefore, the question that falls to be considered is whether the plaintiff is disqualified from inheriting the property of his father by virtue of the bar imposed by Sections 25 and 27 of the Hindu Succession Act. Section 25 reads:

"A person who commits murder or abets the commission of murder shall be disqualified from inheriting the property of the person murdered, or any other property in furtherance of the succession to which he or she committed or abetted the commission of the murder."

It may be necessary to refer to the case in which the plaintiff stood charged along with three other accused for the murder of his father Narayana and his paternal uncle under Section 302 read with Section 34, I. P. C. The Sessions Judge, Khammam convicted the plaintiff and the other accused in S. C. No. 13 of 1959 under S. 326 read with S. 34, I. P. C. while acquitting them of the charge under Sec. 302 read with S. 34, I. P. C. framed against them. They were also convicted under S. 324 read with S. 34 I.P.C. for causing hurt to some of the witnesses. The plaintiff and another accused were further convicted by the Sessions Judge under S. 392 read with S. 397, I. P. C. for robbery of a cart load of paddy from Narayana's possession. The State preferred an appeal against the acquittal of the plaintiff and the other accused of the offence of murder and the plaintiff and the other accused preferred appeals against their convictions. Krishna Rao and Kumarayya, JJ. before whom the connected appeals (Crl. Appeals Nos. 654, 689 and 694 of 1959 and 12 of 1960) came up for hearing found having regard to the nature of the injuries inflicted on the two deceased persons, that the only possible conclusion from the evidence on record was that the injuries of both the deceased were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, "although unfortunately the prosecution neglected to directly elicit this fact from P. W. 9, as they ought to have done. An offence of murder was clearly committed in respect of each of the deceased within the meaning of Cl. 3 of Section 300, I. P. C."

Having found thus, the learned Judges then proceeded to observe:

"Having regard to Cl. 3 of Section 300, Indian Penal Code, the learned Sessions Judge was in error in the view he took that for a conviction under Section 302 read with Section 34, I.P.C. the existence of a common intention to beat is insufficient and that a common intention to kill is always necessary. Even if the common intention is merely to beat, if the bodily injury intended to be inflicted by the beating is found to be sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature the mens rea required for liability under Section 302 read with Sec. 34, I. P. C. would be satisfied."

The learned Judges on appraisal of the evidence found:

"All the accused would therefore, be liable under Section 302 read with Section 34, I. P. C. The benefit of doubt arising from the difference between the evidence of P. Ws. 1 and 2 and that of P. Ws. 3 and 4 must go to the accused, especially as the trial Judge's finding with regard to the events in Lakshminarayana's pasture land implies that P. Ws. 1 and 2 were prone to exaggeration."

xx

xx

xi

"As they formed the plan with the object of overpowering the deceased's party and seizing the paddy, the common intention that may be initially attributed to them would be merely at causing hurt to the deceased and their men. If we found ourselves on the evidence of P. Ws. 3 and 4, it would follow that the acts of accused 2 and 4 were in excess of that common intention and accused 2 and 4 alone would be liable under Section 302, I. P. C. for the murder of the 2nd deceased and the 1st deceased (plaintiff's father) respectively, and accused 1 and 2 would be liable only under Section 324 read with Section 34, I. P. C. on the charge against them relating to these murders."

It is in that view that the plaintiff, who was the 1st accused in that case, was convicted along with another (A-3) under Section 324 read with Section 34, I. P. C. Basing on these findings, it is contended by Mr. Madhavarao for the plaintiff that as the plaintiff was not convicted for the murder of his father, the disqualification prescribed by Sections 25 and 27 of the Hindu Succession Act cannot be made applicable to him. In this connection, it may be pertinent to notice that Section 25 only says that a person who commits murder or abets the commission of murder shall be disqualified from inheriting the property of the person murdered, but not that a person must be convicted of murder or of abetment of murder, to be disqualified from inheriting the property of the person murdered. The principal charge, against the plaintiff and three of his associates, was that all of them, in furtherance of the common intention of all, attacked the two deceased and inflicted injuries which proved fatal. The learned Judges held that murder was clearly committed within the meaning of Section 300, I. P. C. having regard to the injuries found by the Medical Officer who conducted the autopsies on the two deceased persons. If the learned Judges did not convict the plaintiff and another under Section 302 read with Section 34, I. P. C., it was for the reason that he was given the benefit of doubt arising from the difference between the evidence of P. Ws. 1 and 2 and that of P. Ws. 3 and 4 as to what he intended initially when the attack was launched on his father and another. It is for that reason that this Court held that the plaintiff and another only intended causing hurt to the deceased and their men and that the other two accused, by reason of their overt acts, rendered themselves liable to punishment under Section 302, I. P. C.

11. In order to apply the disqualification under Section 25 of the Hindu Succession, Act, it is not necessary in my opinion that a person who committed the murder or abetted the commission of murder must also have been convicted of the offence of murder or of abetment of murder under Section 302, Indian Penal Code. That the plaintiff had participated in the murderous attack on his father along with A-2 and A-4 in that case, who were convicted of murder, is not in dispute. It is because of the nature of injuries inflicted by him on his father and the variations found in the version of the direct witnesses that this court found it safe to convict him under Section 324, I. P. C. Section 25 of the Hindu Succession Act does not contemplate punishment for murder to disqualify the murderer from inheriting the property of the murdered. The application of this provision ought not to be approached from the point of view of punishment for murder. This court has held that murder was clearly committed within the meaning of Section 300, I. P. C. The fact that he was given the benefit of doubt arising out of the conflicting versions of two witnesses and convicted under Section 324, I. P. C. does not in any way absolve him from the heinous crime to which he had made his own infamy contribution. Section 25 is introduced in the Hindu Succession Act as a matter of high public policy based on principles of justice, equity and good conscience to make it absolutely impossible for a murderer who deserves to be hanged or to be shut behind the prison bars for life, to derive advantage or beneficial interest from the very heinous act committed by him.

12. In Vedanayaga Mudaliar v. Vedammal, (1904) 14 Mad LJ 297, Subrahmaniam Aiyar and Boddam, JJ. dealing with the question of the right of a murderer to inherit the property of the murdered, expressed themselves thus:

"Although there is nothing in any express text of Hindu Law disqualifying a murderer or other person privy to the murder from succeeding to the person who was the victim of murder, the maxim 'Nemo Ex Suo Delicto Meliorem Suam Conditionem facere Potest' according to which the wrongful act (murder) committed by a person standing in the position of heir disentitles him to any beneficial interest in the inheritance is one of universal application and ought to be followed in British India as a rule of justice, equity and good conscience."

The Privy Council, in Kenchaya v. Giri- mallappa Channappa, 51 Ind App 368 = (AIR 1924 PC 209) also held that even if the Hindu Law did not disqualify the murderer from succeeding to the estate he was so disqualified upon the principles of justice, equity and good conscience. Statutory effect has been given to the aforesaid view by introducing the two Ss. 25 and 27 in the Hindu Succession Act on grounds of public policy and principles of justice and morality. Therefore, the disqualifications prescribed by Sections 25 and 27 come into play and operate against the plaintiff inheriting or deriving any beneficial interest in the property possessed or held by his father. I therefore find no merits in the cross-objections and accordingly dismiss them.

13. In the result, the judgment and preliminary decree passed by the Court below are set aside and the appeal allowed and suit dismissed, with costs.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 411

(V 57 C 67)

KRISHNARAO AND PARATHASARATHI, JJ.

Ayipala Venkataraya Chetty, Appellant
v. Ayipala Ramachandriah Chetty and others, Respondents.

A. A. O. No. 204 of 1965, D/-25-4-1969 against order of Sub. J. Chittoor, D/- 9-8-1963.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 33, R. 5 (d-1) (as amended in Madras and adopted in Andhra Pradesh) — Rejection of application on ground of limitation — Enquiry should be confined only to allegations in plaint — (Deletion of R. 5 (d-1) and amendment in R. 5(d) so far as Andhra Pradesh is concerned, suggested). AIR 1948 Mad 433 and AIR 1949 Mad 591 and AIR 1956 Mad 271 and AIR 1956 Mad 677, Dissented from.

The amended sub-clause (d-1) should be read as referring to the allegations in the petition. The enquiry contemplated under the amended Rule 6 is only confined to the prohibitions contained in R. 5 which have reference only to the allegations in the pauper petition and not de hors the said allegations. It is, therefore, not permissible to a court to permit an elaborate enquiry at the instance of the defendants on the basis of pleas raised by them in defence to the suit. Case law discussed. AIR 1948 Mad 433 & AIR 1949 Mad 591 & AIR 1956 Mad 271 & AIR 1956 Mad 677; Dissented from. (Deletion of Rule 5 (d-1) and amendment in R. 5 (d), so far as Andhra Pradesh is concerned, suggested). (Paras 12 to 14)

DN/EN/C67/70/LGC/D

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 33, R. 6 (as amended in Madras and adopted in Andhra Pradesh) — Enquiry into pauperism — Enquiry is confined only to prohibition contained in R. 5 which have reference only to allegations in pauper petition and not to the said allegations — Enquiry on basis of pleas raised by defendant is not permitted — (To avoid confusion and uncertainty it is suggested that R. 6 as amended in Madras should be deleted so far as Andhra Pradesh is concerned). AIR 1956 Mad 271 & AIR 1956 Mad 677, Dissented from.

(Paras 12 to 14)
Cases referred: Chronological Paras

(1966) 1966-1 Andh WR 72 = 1966-1 Andh LT 3. Anjaneya Dasu Ashramam v. Somasundaramma 10

(1963) AIR 1963 Andh Pra 51 (V 50), Md. Salamatulla v. Fazlur Rahman 9

(1962) AIR 1962 SC 941 (V 49) = 1962 Supp (2) SCR 675. Vijay Pratap Singh v. Dukh Haran Nath Singh 11

(1956) AIR 1956 Mad 271 (V 43) = ILR (1956) Mad 1035, Anganna v. Angammuthu 8, 13

(1956) AIR 1956 Mad 677 (V 43) = 69 Mad LW 555, In re, K. Annamalai Chettiar 8, 13

(1955) AIR 1955 Andhra 155 (V 42) = 1955 Andh WR 261, Venkatasubbaiah v. Thirupathalaiah 1, 7, 10, 13, 14

(1949) AIR 1949 Mad 591 (V 36) = 1949-1 Mad LJ 61. Ponuswami v. Alamelammal 6, 7

(1948) AIR 1948 Mad 433 (V 35) = 1948-1 Mad LJ 400, Mythili Ammal v. Mahadeva Ayyar 6, 7

W. V. V. Sundara Rao, for Appellant; G. Venkatarama Sastry, for Soundararajan for Nos. 2 and 3; K. B. Krishna Murty, A. Venkatarama Reddy, for No. 10; B. Monohar, for No. 15; M. Ramachandra Reddy, for Nos. 13, 14, 29 and A. Rangacharyulu, for Nos. 33 to 36, for Respondents.

KRISHNARAO, J.:— This appeal involves the determination of the scope and interpretation of O. 33, R. 5 (d-1) and R. 6 Civil P. C. as amended in Madras and adopted in Andhra Pradesh. Though the question raised was directly decided by a Division Bench of the Andhra High Court in Venkatasubbaiah v. Thirapathalaiah, 1955 Andh WR 261 = (AIR 1955 Andhra 155) and followed in a subsequent Division Bench decision of the Andhra Pradesh High Court, Sri Manohar, learned counsel appearing for one of the respondents in this appeal, challenged the correctness of the view taken by this Court and contended that the view taken by this Court requires reconsideration by a Full Bench in view of the decision of the Madras High Court dissenting from the view taken by the Andhra High Court. It has therefore become necessary to consider whether the view of this Court requires reconsideration.

2. The facts out of which the above Civil Miscellaneous Appeal arises are as follows: The appellant filed a suit O. P. No. 76 of 1960 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Chittoor for partition of the suit properties and for recovery of a share therein, with a prayer to permit him to sue as a pauper under O. 33, R. 1, Civil P. C. The plaint contains various allegations according to which the plaintiff claims a share in the suit properties. It was alleged inter alia in the plaint that there were attempts at partition which according to the plaintiff were either abortive or incomplete. The suit was contested by the various respondents stating that the suit was barred by limitation, that there was an actual registered deed of partition and that some of the defendants acquired title by adverse possession. The learned Subordinate Judge framed two points for consideration: (i) whether the petitioner is a pauper; and (ii) whether the petition is barred in law and if so, whether the petition is liable to be rejected. On the first point it was found that the plaintiff was a pauper and the said finding is not questioned before us. But on the second point, it was held that in view of a previous partition which was proved by the respondents, the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed. It was further held that the first respondent who was the manager of the plaintiff's branch was debarred from enforcing the partition and that the plaintiff was also precluded from claiming partition. In coming to the finding on the second point, the lower appellate court permitted the respondents to adduce documentary evidence to substantiate their allegations in defence, namely, that there was a prior completed partition, that the first respondent was the manager of the plaintiff's branch and that he lost his right to claim a partition. On behalf of the plaintiff he filed into court an extract showing his date of birth and another document. In addition to this documentary evidence, oral evidence was also received on the question whether the plaintiff is entitled to any relief in the suit for partition. In view of the finding on the second question, the O. P. was rejected by the trial Court. Against the said order of rejection, which amounts to a rejection of the plaint, the plaintiff filed the above C. M. A. in this court. As the value of the suit is Rs. 84,000/- this appeal is posted before us for disposal.

3. The learned counsel for the appellant Sri W. V. V. Sundara Rao challenged the correctness of the order of the trial court on the ground that the enquiry conducted with respect to the second point for determination by the court below was beyond the scope of O. 33, R. 6 and that the said enquiry should be confined merely to the prohibitions set out in Rule 5 (d) or (d-1) which are founded only on the allegations contained in the plaint. In other words, his argument is that de hors the allegations in the plaint, the Court should not permit the defendants to adduce evidence in support of their allegations which raise disputed questions of fact on the determination of which depends the plaintiff's right to obtain a decree in the suit. According to the learned counsel, the scope of the enquiry and the right of the defendants to let in evidence at this stage should be confined only to the matters disclosed from the allegations in the plaint and not otherwise.

4. Before considering the rulings touching this point, it is necessary to set out the relevant provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure which are as follows:—

Order 33, Rule 5: The court shall reject an application for permission to sue as a pauper—

- (a) where it is not framed and presented in the manner prescribed by Rules 2 and 3, or
- (b) where the applicant is not a pauper, or
- (c) where he has, within two months next before the presentation of the application, disposed of any property fraudulently or in order to be able to apply for permission to sue as a pauper, or
- (d) where his allegations do not show a cause of action, or
- (d-1) (Madras, Andhra Pradesh and Kerala) where the suit appears to be barred by any law, or
- (e) where he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the proposed suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter.

Rule 6 (as amended in Madras, Andhra Pradesh and Kerala) Notice of day for enquiring into the applicant's right to sue as a pauper — Where the Court sees no reason to reject the application on any of the grounds stated in Rule 5, it shall 'nevertheless' fix a day (of which at least ten days' clear notice shall be given to the opposite party and to the Government Pleader) for receiving such evidence as the applicant may adduce to prove that the application is not subject to any of the prohibitions in Rule 5 and for hearing any evidence which may be adduced to the contrary.

The Allahabad High Court added the following explanation to Order 33, Rule 5.

Order 33, Rule 5:

"Explanation.— An application shall not be rejected under clause (d) merely on the ground that the proposed suit appears to be barred by any law."

The above amendments were effected by the Madras High Court in 1923. The rules as amended were subsequently adopted by the Andhra and the Andhra Pradesh High Courts. It is obvious that the Kerala High Court also adopted the rules as amended by the parent High Court at Madras.

5. It will be noticed from the above rules that in addition to the newly added sub-clause (d-1), the scope of the enquiry under Rule 6 has been enlarged giving power to the Court to receive evidence not only in respect of the question of pauperism covered by sub-clause (b) of Rule 5 but also with respect to any of the other prohibitions contained in Rule 5. We will now refer to the decisions which have considered the scope of the above amendment.

6. In Mythili Ammal v. Mahadeva, AIR 1948 Mad 433. Satyanarayana Rao, J. sitting single held that it would be open to the defendants to show that the suit is barred either by res judicata or by limitation and that accordingly they would be entitled to adduce evidence on the said questions. It does not however appear from a reading of the judgment what the allegations in the plaint were and whether the question of res judicata was raised for the first time by the defendants and whether the plea of limitation depends upon the determination of any disputed questions of fact requiring evidence. The judgment merely shows that the trial Court was wrong in holding that the said question should be decided only with reference to the allegations in the plaint. The view of the trial Court was rejected and a direction was given to permit the defendants to adduce the necessary evidence. Except referring to the amended Rule, we do not find any discussion as to the scope of the Rule in the judgment of the learned Judge. This ruling was followed by the same learned Judge sitting single in Ponnuswami v. Alamelammal, AIR 1949 Mad 591, in which it was observed that a court is not justified in shutting out evidence by the opposite party to show that the suit sought to be instituted in forma pauperis is barred by limitation more than 12 years having elapsed from the date of the alienation impugned in the suit. It is not possible to gather from the judgment whether the suit was barred on the very allegations in the plaint, but the learned Judge is of the opinion that the defendant should be permitted to substantiate his defence plea of limitation by adducing evidence even in an enquiry under Order 33, C.P.C.

7. We will next refer to the judgment of a Division Bench of the Andhra High Court consisting of Subba Rao, C. J., and Bhimasankaram, J., in 1955 Andh WR 261 = (AIR 1955 Andhra 155), a case arising out of a suit filed in forma pauperis for partition. In the plaint it was alleged that the alienations were not supported by consideration and were not supported by any legal necessity or binding purpose. The trial Court made an elaborate enquiry and held that the petitioner had no cause of action with respect to certain items of property and accordingly dismissed the suit in so far as the suit related to those properties. On appeal before the High Court, the question was whether such an elaborate enquiry was contemplated under Order 33, Rule 6 as amended in Madras. After tracing the history and the reasons for the amendment introducing sub-clause (d-1), Subba Rao, C. J. who delivered the judgment on behalf of the Division Bench observed that clauses (d) and (d-1) only indicate what has been the law all along, viz., that a court shall decide whether the petition discloses a subsisting cause of action and though Rule 6 gives an opportunity to the defendants to adduce evidence, the evidence contemplated under the said rule is intended only to prove that the application is not subject to any of the prohibitions in Rule 5, meaning thereby such prohibitions in respect of which evidence is necessary for the petitioner to establish, that a particular prohibition does not affect his petition. In other words, it was pointed out that Rule 6 as amended gives full effect to the intention of the framers namely to give an opportunity to the parties to adduce evidence only on the prohibition mentioned in Rule 5. The word "appears" occurring in sub-clause (d-1) has been interpreted as confining the scope of the enquiry to something which is "manifest" on the allegations in the plaint. The following observations contained in the judgment of Subba Rao, C. J. may also be usefully set out in this connection:

"If, on the other hand, the construction now sought to be put upon Madras Rule 6 by the learned counsel for the respondents is accepted, the distinction between a pauper petition and a suit disappears. Order 33 has been enacted to serve a treble purpose (i) to protect the bona fide claims of a pauper, (ii) to safeguard the interests of revenue, and (iii) to protect the defendant's right not to be harassed. By enabling the Court to prevent persons with property from suing as paupers or third parties who acquire an interest in the claims of paupers from using the names of the paupers and to dismiss petitions which do not ex facie disclose a subsisting cause of action, the interests of bona fide paupers are safeguarded and defendants are protected from unnecessary harassment. The procedure prescribed also protects revenue, for an enquiry if it is found that the petitioner is not a pauper, he will have to pay court-fee. On the other hand, if a Court should make an enquiry and decide on the evidence, even before the suit is numbered, whether the petitioner has a subsisting cause of action, the entire suit should be heard before leave is granted. The words "subsisting cause of action" will be comprehended the entire dispute between the parties the question whether the plaintiff has a right to the relief claimed, whether the defendant has infringed that right and whether the suit claim is barred by limitation by res judicata or any other statutory law would have to be decided on the evidence. If the petition was dismissed on such an enquiry, the petitioner would have got a trial without payment of court-fee. If the petition was allowed on such an enquiry, the same questions should be decided again if the suit was numbered. There would be two trials on the same evidence and perhaps two conflicting decisions and the Court's time would unnecessarily be wasted. This could not have been the intention of the framers of Madras Rule 6 and we cannot attribute that intention to them."

In this view, the Division Bench dissented from the view taken by Satyanarayana Rao, J., in his decisions cited supra AIR 1948 Mad 433 and AIR 1949 Mad 591.

8. The next case to be considered in point of time is Anganna v. Angamuthu, AIR 1956 Mad 271, in which Govinda Menon, J., delivering the judgment on behalf of the Division Bench consisting of himself and Basheer Ahmed Sayeed, J., dissented from the view expressed by Subba Rao, C. J. in the aforesaid case 1955 Andh WR 261 = (AIR 1955 Andhra 155) and held that the enquiry under the amended Rule 6 is not confined within the narrow limits pointed out by Subba Rao, C. J. but that the said rule is intended to enable the opposite party to adduce any evidence to show that the suit is barred. As regards the word "appears" in Rule 5, sub-clause (d-1), it was pointed out by Govinda Menon, J. that it merely connotes that no finality is attached to the decision at that stage and nothing more. In the case before them, the defence raised was one of limitation and it does not appear from the judgment whether the suit was barred on the basis of the mere allegations in the plaint. Differing from the view expressed by Subba Rao, C. J. of the Andhra High Court, Govinda Menon, J. followed the prior decisions of Satyanarayana Rao, J. sitting single which were dissented from by Subba Rao, C. J. In coming to this conclusion, Govinda Menon, J., relied upon certain extracts from the reports of the Rule Committee in connection with the amendment of Rule 6 to the following effect:

"The Committee are of the opinion that the safeguard provided in Rule 5 will not be effective if the enquiry were to proceed 'merely on the allegations in the plaint'. Therefore, they have made provisions by appropriate amendment to Rule 6 for enabling the defendant to assist the Court in determining the existence or otherwise of the prohibitions in Rule 5."

Again a single Judge of the Madras High Court (Ramaswami, J.) in re, K. Annamalai Chettiar, AIR 1956 Mad 677, rendered subsequent to the decision of the Division Bench of Govinda Menon and Basheer Ahmed Sayeed, JJ., suggested a via media course without referring to the said Division Bench decision of the same Court. It was held by Ramaswami, J., that the court has the power to enquire at the initial stage of pauperism into a question of limitation allowing evidence to be adduced by both sides, that the scope of the enquiry is a matter within the discretion of the trial Judge and that such an enquiry should be limited within the ambit of the word 'appears' occurring in clause (d-1), 'appears' meaning 'be visible' and 'be manifest' connoting something more than what is 'ex facie' patent and something less than discovery after deep delving into the evidence in the case and that it is something betwixt and between the extremes and the line of demarcation will be dependant upon the circumstances of each case and the exercise of sound judicial discretion.

9. Coming back to the Andhra Pradesh High Court it was held in a decision of a single Judge (Jaganmohan Reddy, J., as he then was) in Md. Salamatulla v. Fazlur Rahman, AIR 1963 Andh Pra 51, that irrespective of the question whether the issues involved are of a simple or complicated nature, the allegations in the plaint would determine the question whether a cause of action has arisen or not. The question as to scope of enquiry under Rule 6 did not however come up for decision in the said case. But it is significant to note that the allegations in the plaint are held to be the basis for ascertaining whether a plaint disclosed a cause of action or not.

10. Turning to the latest decision of a Division Bench of this Court consisting of Satyanarayana Raju, J. and Kumarayya, J. in Sri Anjaneya Dasu Ashramam v. Somasundaramma, (1966) 1 Andh WR 72 we find that the view expressed by Subba Rao, C. J. in 1955 Andh WR 261 = (AIR 1955 Andhra 155) is followed though no reference was made to the dissenting judgment of Govinda Menon, J. of the Madras High Court. In the case before the Division Bench, the trial Court permitted the defendants to adduce documentary evidence in support of the plea that the suit was barred by limitation. Kumarayya, J. delivering the judgment on behalf of the Division Bench held as follows:

"A prima facie case as to this bar should be found on the averments in the petition itself and not on those in the counter which has to be proved at the trial. Though the words "in the petition" are not specifically used in clause (d-1), the very fact that the penalty in Rule 5 of rejection is in relation to the application itself, it must necessarily follow that the suit should appear, from the application itself, to be barred by limitation. We have already noticed that notwithstanding the absence of the said words in clause (d), a Division Bench of this Court has considered the 'allegations' used in that sub-clause (d) to be allegations in the application itself.....We are therefore of the opinion that the penalty in Rule 5 would be attracted if the suit appears to be barred by any law on the averments in the petition itself. The trial court, therefore, went wrong in considering the counter or the documents in respect thereof".

11. Finally, we wish to refer to a decision of the Supreme Court in Vijai Pratap v. Dukh Haran Nath, AIR 1962 SC 941, a case which went up from the Allahabad High Court in which considering the scope of Order 33, Rule 5(d) as it stood in the Civil Procedure Code, it was held by Shah, J. who delivered the judgment on behalf of the court to the following effect:

"By the express terms of Order 33, Rule 5, Clause (d) the court is concerned to ascertain whether the allegations made in the petition show a cause of action. The court has not to see whether the claim made by the petitioner is likely to succeed; it has merely to satisfy itself that the allegations made in the petition, if accepted as true, would entitle the petitioner to the relief he claims. If accepting those allegations as true no case is made out for granting relief no cause of action would be shown and the petition must be rejected. But in ascertaining whether the petition shows a cause of action the court does not enter upon a trial of the issues affecting the merits of the claim made by the petitioner. It cannot take into consideration the defences which the defendant may raise upon the merits; nor is the court competent to make an elaborate enquiry into doubtful or complicated questions of law or fact. If the allegations in the petition, prima facie, show a cause of action, the court cannot embark upon an enquiry whether the allegations are true in fact, or whether the petitioner will succeed in the claims made by him. By the statute, the jurisdiction of the court is restricted to ascertaining whether on the allegations a cause of action is shown; the jurisdiction does not extend to trial of issues which must fairly be left for decision at the hearing of the suit."

In the above case, the Supreme Court was no doubt not considering a rule like the one as amended in Madras. But nevertheless, the principle underlying sub-clause (d) of Rule 5 has been authoritatively stated by the Supreme Court.

12. The views expressed in the above rulings may be summed up as follows: According to this Court, the expression 'his allegation' occurring in sub-clause (d) refers to the petitioner's allegations in the plaint. Sub-clause (d) under which the pauper petition is liable to be rejected if the allegations wherein do not show a cause of action is very wide in its scope while the cases contemplated by the amended sub-clause (d-1) namely the suit being barred by any law are only particular instances where the petition does not disclose a cause of action. Hence the amended sub-clause (d-1) should be read as referring also to the allegations in the petition. The enquiry contemplated under the amended Rule 6 is only confined to the prohibition contained in Rule 5 which have reference only to the allegations in the pauper petition and not de hors the said allegations. It is therefore not permissible to a court to permit an elaborate enquiry at the instance of the defendants on the basis of pleas raised by them in defence to the suit. According to the Madras High Court, one view is that the enquiry under the amended Rule 6 is not confined within the 'narrow' limits laid down by this Court but the defendants are permitted to adduce any evidence to show how the suit is barred. A third and intermediate view was taken in the Madras High Court according to which the limit of the enquiry lies in between the views expressed by this Court and the Division Bench of the Madras High Court and that the limit of enquiry is entirely in the discretion of the court. The scope of the enquiry under Rule 5 (d) without reference to the above amendment as laid down by the Supreme Court is to the same effect as the view expressed by this Court as regards the amended rule.

13. On a consideration of the above decisions, we have no hesitation in following the view of this Court in 1955 Andh WR 261 = (AIR 1955 Andhra 155) as laying down the correct interpretation of the relevant rules and we are unable with due respect to accede to the view expressed by Govinda Menon, J. in AIR 1956 Mad 271 or the view expressed by Ramaswami, J., in AIR 1956 Mad 677. We do not also agree with the comment of the learned counsel Shri Manohar that the conclusions arrived at by Subba Rao, C.J. were based only on the provisions of Rule 5 but not on the amended Rule 6 whereas the ruling of the Madras High Court in AIR 1956 Mad 271 (supra) placed strong reliance upon the language of the amended Rule 6. On the other hand, on a scrutiny of the judgment of Subba Rao, C. J. we find that Rule 6 has been interpreted in so many terms with reference to the provisions of Rule 5 and we do not agree that the final conclusion was based solely on the provisions of Rule 5. We also find that Govinda Menon, J. while dissenting from the view of Subba Rao, C. J. did not make any reference to the various grounds and reasons which constituted the foundation for the conclusions arrived at by Subba Rao, C. J. We are also convinced that the test laid down by Ramaswami, J. according to which the limits of the enquiry should be left to the discretion of the trial Judge is not a safe and proper guide.

Having regard to the various reasons given by Subba Rao, C. J. in 1955 Andh WR. 261 = (AIR 1955 Andhra 155) with which we are in entire agreement, we are of the opinion that the view expressed therein is the only reasonable construction to be placed on the amended Rule 6 and if the contrary view expressed by the Division Bench of the Madras High Court is to be accepted, a trial Court has virtually to conduct a miniature trial of the whole suit and it may not be possible to put any stop or limit to the nature or quantum of evidence which the parties may desire to adduce. Turning to the instant case, we find that there was no allegation in the petition that there was a prior partition evidenced by a registered document. It is not therefore open to the court to take evidence in support of the defence plea that there was a prior partition evidenced by a registered document. Even if the petition did contain an allegation regarding a prior partition, it will be open to the plaintiff to say either that it was not acted upon or that there were valid grounds for reopening the same. Hence the enquiry conducted by the lower court is beyond the limits of the view expressed by the Andhra High Court with which we are in entire agreement.

14. Before parting with this case, we wish to express our opinion as to the desirability of applying the amended Madras Rules 5 (d-1) and 6 in Andhra Pradesh. Taking the amended clause (d-1) we feel that the word 'appears' does not admit of a precise definition. It is explained as meaning 'manifest' or 'appearing on the face of'. But it is equally difficult to determine the limits of what is apparent and what is not, the expression is as much inscrutable and elusive as the familiar expression 'error apparent on the face of the record'. Sub-clause (d) of Rule 5 is indeed wide enough to cover cases where a suit may be rejected on the ground that it is barred by law.

There is, therefore, no real need to introduce sub-clause (d-1). The object of introducing an amendment to a rule is to clarify any ambiguity or lacuna in the existing rules. But unfortunately the amended Rules 5 (d-1) and 6, far from clarifying the existing Rule, tend to create confusion. In the first place, the amended Rule does not afford any guide as to how and on what material the bar of the suit should be determined. If the rule is intended to refer only to certain statutory bars which preclude the court from entertaining a suit and if such a question is to be decided solely on the allegations in the pauper petition, no difficulty arises.

The expression 'bar' connotes a bar on the court from entertaining the suit or against the person approaching the court for relief initially. But it is quite a different thing to say that on an adjudication of the disputes raised in the suit, the plaintiff is denied relief which he wants in the suit. In one sense it can be said that a plaintiff who fails to establish his case is precluded from getting any relief before the court. Hence it is necessary to distinguish between a bar of the suit and the plaintiff failing to obtain a relief before the court on some other ground. The expression 'barred' used in Rule (d-1) cannot, therefore be regarded as referring to a case where a plaintiff is precluded from obtaining relief if he fails on the merits of his claim. Instances of bar of a suit can be easily visualised such as (i) where the jurisdiction of a civil court is specifically ousted by the statutory provisions like the Andhra Tenancy Act, Rent Control Act, Sales Tax Act, etc., and (ii) provisions in the C.P.C., like Section 11, Order 2, Rule 2, Order 9, Rule 9, Order 23, Rule 1(3) etc. If the petition does not disclose any facts even assuming that the same are intentionally suppressed, the court will not be in a position to reject the petition on the ground that it is barred by law. In such cases, it is not desirable at the initial stage to permit the defendants to adduce evidence in respect of their pleas raised in defence in order to establish a bar to the suit. If it is possible to reject the petition as barred by law on a mere reading of the petition, there should be no objection to the court doing so either on hearing the petitioner alone or on hearing the respondent if such assistance is required. In such cases the enquiry will be confined only to questions of law. But if the petition discloses facts which relate to a plea of bar of suit and the petitioner nevertheless explains how the suit is not barred, in such cases, the defendants may be permitted to adduce evidence to the limited extent touching the allegations in the petition to show that the petition is really barred.

To take an example, the petitioner alleges that there was an adjudication in a prior suit but that it does not operate as res judicata. In such a case, the defendant may produce the judgment or the pleadings in the prior suit and satisfy the court that the suit is barred by res judicata. Similarly where a petition alleges that there was a prior suit and that the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different, it will be open to the defendant to place before the court the pleadings in the previous suit and establish that the suit is barred under Order 2, Rule 2, C.P.C. In all other cases, where a plaintiff is precluded from filing a suit by virtue of any express provisions of statute, there will be no difficulty in deciding the question. But where the defence is that the suit is barred by limitation, several complicated questions arise, for a plea of limitation is sometimes based upon disputed questions of fact. If on a reading of the allegations in the petition it is possible to hold that the suit is barred, it will be always open to the court to reject the same. But in cases where evidence may have to be taken in order to decide the question of limitation, the case presents some difficulty. Even accepting the limited view taken by Subba Rao, C. J. in 1955 Andh WR 261 = (AIR 1955 Andhra 155), it may not be possible in practice to prescribe any limits for the enquiry which has to be conducted. To illustrate this difficulty, let us take the case of a suit for money brought on the basis of a promissory note where the plaintiff relies upon certain acknowledgments or payments as saving the suit from the bar of limitation, the only defence raised being a denial of the truth of the endorsements or acknowledgments. If the plaintiff is directed to satisfy the court prima facie in support of his allegations, the plaintiff-petitioner may have to adduce evidence of a hand-writing expert and if the defendant is naturally given the liberty to adduce rebutting evidence, the whole trial will be over even before the suit is registered.

To take another example, in a suit for ejectment, the plaintiff alleges that there was trespass on the part of the defendant on a date within 12 years of the suit. If the allegations in the plaint are to be taken as the basis, there was no bar of limitation. But if the defendant is permitted to adduce any evidence to rebut the allegations in the plaint, the court may have to take evidence of both parties on the question of possession both oral and documentary on which the court has to give a finding whether the plaintiff was in possession within 12 years of the suit, as required by Article 142 of the Limitation Act. In such a case also, the suit is completely disposed of even before it is registered. It is needless to multiply the illustrations as it is not our purpose and it is also not possible to attempt at a fixation of the limits of the enquiry contemplated by Rule 6 or the ambit of the expression 'appears to be barred' in sub-rule (d-1). So far as sub-rule (d-1) is concerned, it may be deleted and it will be sufficient to amend (d) as follows:

"Where the allegations in the petition show that the suit is barred by law, or do not show a cause of action."

But as regards Rule 6 as amended, we have no hesitation in suggesting that the amended Rule should be deleted so far as we are concerned, that is to say, the enquiry should be confined only to the question of pauperism as contemplated by Rule 6 of the C.P.C. as it stands, thereby avoiding an enquiry whether prima facie or regular as regards the other prohibitions contained in Rule 5. In this connection, it may be noted that the ruling of the Supreme Court cited supra emphasises the need to look to the plaint allegations alone at the stage of an enquiry under Order 33, C.P.C. We therefore suggest that in order to avoid confusion and uncertainty it is necessary and desirable that Rule 6 as amended (Madras) should be deleted so far as Andhra Pradesh is concerned.

15. For the above reasons, we set aside the order of the lower court including the findings therein and direct the Court below to register the petition as a plaint and proceed to dispose of the same according to law. As the petition is already nine years old by now, we direct the lower court to dispose of the same as expeditiously as possible. The appellant is entitled to his costs throughout.

PARATHASARATHI, J.:—16. I agree with the reasoning and conclusions of my learned brother. The question raised in this appeal relates to a rule of practice, and it cannot be gainsaid that it should be expressed in the Code of Procedure in such language as would tend to certainty and uniformity in its application. If the provisions in the Code, as they stood before the Rules 5 and 6 were amended, had produced a baffling diversity or conflict, the amendments have, by no means helped the evolution of a better rule; on the other hand, confusion has become worse confounded, and it has become necessary to recast the rules or revert to the unamended rules.

17. The expression 'barred by any law' is not unambiguous in its import and is not capable of easy or precise application. Does it connote only a legal impediment in the form of an objection like a plea of limitation or res judicata? Or, is it to be extended to other cases of which an example may be given? Supposing the suit is for recovery of possession of property in a case where a statute has prohibited the alienation in question except as a prior sanction of prescribed authority, and such sanction is not alleged to have been obtained by the suitor. Does the application in such a case come within the expression 'barred by law'? Instances of this nature can be multiplied. The question is, what is the category or type of impediment that is contemplated by the expression 'barred by law'.

18. The word 'appears' in clause (d-1) has been productive of conflicting decisions. It is a word with multiple shades of meaning and the context in which it occurs does not limit its import in any manner. Rule (d-1) has been introduced by the Madras amendment, because it was considered that clause (d) of the Code in its unamended form was inadequate. It is open to question whether the clause (d) in the unamended form is not sufficient to eliminate vexatious or harassing actions by paupers. Is not the expression 'does not disclose a cause of action' of sufficient amplitude to protect the interests of defendants? It must be remembered that the provisions of Order 33 are designed to enable indigent suitors with a grievance to seek legal redress. The legislative intentment is not to shut out a bona fide litigant by a too meticulous or deep probe at the outset into the merits of the case. That is why the clause (d) of the Code provides that 'his allegations' i.e., the averments made by the pauper petitioner should be subjected to a test to ascertain whether they disclose a cause of action. In other words, if a triable claim emerges from the averments of the petitioner and there is no manifest hurdle under law to the trial of that claim, the pauper is given a chance by the legislature to invoke the Court's aid. That being the basic objective of the legislature, would it be consistent with it to amend the rule so as to make it incumbent on him to overcome a preliminary skirmish, the result of which should be to show that there is no bar to the action under law? This, it should be remembered, is only the first round and a second contest at the regular trial is inescapable. Does it stand to reason and is it consistent with justice that the indigent suitor should be put to the expense of two trials, the one preliminary and the other more elaborate? It is, therefore, necessary to re-examine the position whether clause (d-1) is to be retained, especially because in the majority of the States there is no such rule and the absence of such a rule does not seem to have occasioned hardship. Nor has it promoted unhealthy litigation as far as one could judge the result.

19. It might be said that the effect of clause (d-1) is not to enlarge the scope of inquiry very much beyond the limits indicated by clause (d) in the unamended form. If clause (d-1) does not contemplate widening of the limit of enquiry, and it is intended to cover the same field as clause (d), it is obvious that there is no need for a superfluous provision which, in actual practice, has contributed to a good deal of uncertainty and conflict of judicial opinion. On the other hand, if it is accepted that clause (d-1) is intended to enlarge the field of inquiry, it is obvious that to do so is not consistent with the provisions of clause (d) and is also not consistent with the legislative policy and intentment. The position, therefore, is that clause (d-1) must be regarded as superfluous if it covers the same field and must be said to be inconsistent with the provisions of clause (d) if the intention is to enlarge substantially the area of conflict at the initial stage.

20. Rule 6 has been amended so as to provide for the Court receiving evidence that may be adduced by the applicant to prove that his application is not subject to any of the prohibitions in Rule 5 and also for evidence in rebuttal thereof. With reference to the prohibitions in Rule 5 other than those mentioned in clauses (d) and (d-1), there arises no difficulty. When the case of pauperism pleaded by a petitioner is challenged, or when it is shown that he has fraudulently disposed of property or has entered into an agreement in the manner prohibited by clause (e), it is necessary to have an inquiry into the matter; and if at such inquiry both the parties are allowed to lead evidence, the adjudication relates to matters which are not germane to the merits of the case. It is only with reference to the prohibition in clauses (d) and (d-1) that difficulty arises. It would be desirable to specify in Rule 6 that the evidence adduced by the petitioner or the rebuttal evidence adduced by the respondent should be limited to matters contained in Rule 5 with the exception of clauses (d) and (d-1). Even if the retention of clause (d-1) in the present form is considered necessary, the alternative of limiting the inquiry as to the prohibitions under Rule 5 to cases other than those covered by clauses (d) and (d-1) should be considered. It is, therefore, necessary to consider whether Rule 6 should not be recast in such a manner as to exclude from its scope inquiry into the matters covered by clauses (d) and (d-1) of Rule 5.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 419
(V 57 C 68)

KUPPUSWAMI, J.

G. Madhava Rao and others, Petitioners v. The Regional Transport Authority, Kurnool represented by its Secretary and others, Respondents.

Writ Petns. Nos. 4809, 4813, 4820, 5136, 5387, 5413, 5416, 5419 and 4636 of 1968, D/- 3-2-1969.

(A) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Section 62(c) — Temporary permits — Particular temporary need — Scheme for nationalisation of bus transport in the particular District pending consideration for a considerable time — Representations from public for increase of buses on existing routes and for plying of buses on new routes — Held there was sufficient temporary need justifying grant of temporary permits. AIR 1966 SC 156 & W. P. No. 3756 to 3758 of 1968 (AP), Relied on. (Para 6)

(B) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Section 62(c) — Temporary permits — Successive grants of temporary permits. (Constitution of India, Art. 226).

The Regional Transport Authority cannot abuse its power by going on granting temporary permits in quick succession and not take speedy action for completing the procedure under Section 57 for granting regular permits and if upon the facts of any particular case it appears that the Regional Transport Authority is so abusing its powers, its action is liable to be corrected by granting a writ. AIR 1966 SC 156 & W. P. No. 84 of 1968, D/- 4-4-1968 (AP), Relied on. (Para 6)

(C) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), Sections 62, 47 — Temporary permits — Grant of — Provisions of Section 47 apply — Opportunity must be given to existing operators to make representations against issue of temporary permits. Case law discussed. (Para 24)

(D) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 47(3) — Limiting number of stage carriages — Section 47(3) does not render it obligatory on the part of the authority to limit number of stage carriages though if such limit is fixed, grant of permit has to be subject to that limit. (Para 28)

(E) Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 47(1) — Right of representations — Right of persons providing transport facilities near proposed route — Under S. 47(1) representations of persons providing passenger transport facilities not only along the proposed route but also near the proposed route have to be taken into consideration. (Para 29)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1968) W. P. No. 84 of 1968, D/- 6
4-4-1968 (A. P.)
(1968) W. P. Nos. 3756 to 3758 of 6
1968 (AP)

- (1968) AIR 1968 Punj 344 (V 55) =
70 Pun LR 613, Prem Bus Service
v. R. T. A. Patiala 24
(1966) AIR 1966 SC 156 (V 53) =
1965-3 SCR 786, M. P. S. R. T.
Corpn. v. R. T. Authority 6
(1966) AIR 1966 All 455 (V 53),
Surendra Singh v. State of U. P. 25
(1963) AIR 1963 SC 64 (V 50) =
1963-3 SCR 523, Abdul Mateen v.
Ram Kailash Pandey 28
(1962) AIR 1962 Raj 174 (V 49) =
ILR (1961) 11 Raj 1037, Abdul
Gafoor v. State of Rajasthan 24
(1959) AIR 1959 Punj 1 (V 46) =
ILR (1958) Punj 1590 (FB), Ambala
Ex. Servicemen Transport Co-op.
Society Ltd v. Punjab State 24
(1954) AIR 1954 Raj 33 (V 41) =
ILR (1953) 3 Raj 215, Kotah Transport Ltd. v. R. T. Authority 24
(1953) AIR 1953 Mad 279 (V 40) =
1952-2 Mad LJ 894, C. S. S. Motor
Service v. State of Madras 25

P. Babul Reddy and E. P. K. Sikkhamani,
(in W P Nos. 4809, 4813 and 4820 of 1968) and Mrs. K. Amareswari, A. S. C. Bose and P. Rajagopalachari (in W. P. Nos.
5126, 5387, 5413, 5416, 5419 and 4636
of 1968) for Petitioners; 4th Govt. Pleader, for No 1 (in all Petitions); K. Srinivasa Murthy and G. Veerareddy, for No. 2 (in W. P. No. 4809 of 1968), for Nos. 2 to 14
(in W. P. No. 4813 of 1968), for Nos. 2 to 4
(in W. P. No. 4820 of 1968) and C. Audi-narayana Reddy, for No. 2 (in W. P. Nos.
5128 and 4636 of 1968), for Respondents.

ORDER:— In these Writ Petitions the validity of the notifications made under Section 62 of the Motor Vehicles Act calling for applications for the grant of a temporary permit for various routes in the District of Kurnool is challenged.
Though in some cases the notifications are different, the contentions urged against the validity of the notifications are identical and therefore, all the Writ Petitions were heard together.

2. It is sufficient, therefore, to set out the contentions in the main Writ Petition
No 4809 of 1968. The petitioner in that Writ Petition alleges that he is the holder of a stage carriage permit on the route Kurnool to Chazalamarra. The District of Kurnool is very much affected by drought conditions and the operators are already finding it difficult to find sufficient traffic for existing buses. While so, the Government issued instructions to the Regional Transport Officers to grant as many temporary permits as possible so that the revenues of the State may be augmented.
In pursuance of those directions applications for the grant of temporary permits are being periodically called and the present impugned notification dated 23-10-1968 is one such. The conditions necessary for the grant of a temporary permit under Section 62 of the Motor Vehicles Act do not exist. Further, temporary permits have already been issued in succession. In almost all the routes covered by the impugned notification and in cases like the route Nandyal to Atmakur temporary permits were issued on four occasions successively. This shows that the respondent is clearly abusing its power to grant temporary permits.

A further contention is raised that the procedure adopted for the granting of temporary permits is merely to call for applications and consider the applications in a meeting of the Regional Transport Authority or on some occasions even by circulation. No opportunity is provided for the existing operators like the petitioner to make any representations in the matter of issuing temporary permits as contemplated in Section 47 of the Motor Vehicles Act. Further, the respondent is considering the applications ignoring Rule 212 of the Andhra Pradesh Motor Vehicles Rules. For all the above reasons, it is stated that the impugned notification calling for applications for temporary permits is illegal and without jurisdiction.
The petitioner, therefore prays for the issue of a writ or order or direction prohibiting the respondent from proceeding further in pursuance of the notification dated 23-10-1968 calling for the applications for the grant of a temporary permit on the route Kurnool to Nandikotkur.

3. In the counter-affidavit filed by the Secretary, State Transport Authority,
Hyderabad, it is stated that a draft scheme for nationalisation of bus transport in Kurnool District was notified and the same was pending consideration for a considerable time before the Government and was finalised only recently by G. O. Ms.
1103/dt. 1-7-1968 approving the scheme regarding some of the routes and allowing the other routes to be operated by the private operators. Till the final approval of the scheme by Government, it was not known which routes were going to be nationalised and which were not in the District. The Regional Transport Authority could not therefore notify new routes or increase the number of buses on existing routes and grant permits on pucca basis as the scheme might be approved at any time and as there was considerable uncertainty as to which routes will be nationalised and which will not be. On all the routes for which applications were called for, for the grant of temporary permits, the traffic survey has revealed the need either to increase the buses on the existing routes or put buses on the new routes as the case may be, but early steps could not be taken for grant of permits on pucca basis in the circumstances aforesaid.

There were number of representations from the public to the effect that the existing transport facilities are inadequate and to increase the buses on those routes and also to ply buses on the new routes for which applications for grant of temporary permits were called for. The steps for following the procedure and for grant of permits on pucca basis (would have — Ed.) taken considerable time. The needs of the public are sought to be met till pucca permits are granted by grant of temporary permits for further period. Thus, there is a temporary need to justify the grant of temporary permits under Section 62 (c) of the Motor Vehicles Act. The department after examination of the traffic potential on all the routes was satisfied about the need to increase transport facilities in these areas by plying some more buses. The allegation that the permits were granted for augmenting the revenues of the State is denied. The grant of successive temporary permits was under unavoidable circumstances and there was ample justification for the same. Hence, there is no abuse of power as alleged by the petitioner.

4. The respondent also contended that Section 62 of the Act which deals with the grant of temporary permits, does not envisage an opportunity being given to the existing operators, nor are they entitled to be heard. Section 47 of the Act which deals with the grant of pucca permit has no application to the case of grant of temporary permits and the notification cannot be attacked on the ground that the petitioner and other existing operators are not being given an opportunity either to make representations or that they are not being heard.

5. As is apparent from a perusal of the affidavit and the counter-affidavit the main contentions urged against the impugned notification are the following:—

1. That the requirements of Section 62 for the issue of temporary permits are not satisfied and the power conferred under that section is being abused by the issue of the impugned notification; and
2. In any event the impugned notification is contrary to the provisions of the Act, inasmuch as no opportunity has been given to the existing operators to make their representations against the issue of temporary permits and their being not heard in that connection.
6. Contention No. 1.

In order to appreciate this contention it is necessary to set out Section 62 of the Motor Vehicles Act which is in the following terms:

"62. Temporary permits: A regional Transport Authority may without following the procedure laid down in Section 57, grant permits, to be effective for a limited period not in any case to exceed four months to authorise the use of a transport vehicle temporarily—

- (a) for the conveyance of passengers on special occasions such as to and from fairs and religious gatherings, or
- (b) for the purposes of a seasonal business, or
- (c) to meet a particular temporary need,
- (d) pending decision on an application for the renewal of a permit; and may attach to any such permit any condition it thinks fit:

xx xx"

It is clear that the notification in question cannot be brought under clauses (a), (b) and (d) but it is sought to be justified as coming under clause (c), i.e., to meet a particular temporary need, which has been set out in the counter-affidavit, to have arisen in the following circumstances. The scheme for nationalisation was pending consideration for a considerable time and was finalised recently. Till that time it was not known which routes were going to be nationalised and which were not. At the same time there were representations from the public for the increase of buses, on the routes already existing and to ply buses on new routes. The traffic potential justified the increase of the transport facilities. Therefore, pending steps for nationalisation of the buses in such routes where the Government approves the scheme and pending issue of a pucca permits after due notification etc, on the routes which were decided by the Government not to be nationalised it was felt that temporary permits should be issued.

In such circumstances it has been held in M. P. S. R. T. Corpn. v. R. T. Authority, AIR 1966 SC 156 that S. 62 (c) applies. In that case applications for temporary permits were called for as the public were agitating for the need of town bus operations and the particular need had to be met temporarily till regular operations are introduced. The High Court took the view that temporary permit cannot be granted for any route when there is a permanent need for providing transport facilities on that route and it was decided to invite applications for that purpose. This view was held to be not correct by the Supreme Court. It observed:

"There is no reason why the clause in Section 62(c) that the Regional Transport Authority may grant a temporary permit "to meet a particular need" should be given any special restricted meaning. There is no antithesis between a particular temporary need and a permanent need and if the Regional Transport Authority considered it in the circumstances there was temporary particular need and granted a temporary permit, the action cannot be challenged."

This decision was followed by this Court in W. P. Nos. 3756 to 3758 of 1968

(AP) where it was held that there is nothing in Section 57 or Section 62 of the Motor Vehicles Act postulating that unless an enquiry regarding the need for the grant of a pucca permit is completed, the question of granting temporary permits cannot be taken up. In that case it was also pointed out that the formalities as required under M. V. Act, 1939 for the grant of pucca permit would take some time more and there is demand from the travelling public to provide additional transport facilities immediately on the route in question as they could not get accommodation in the existing bus, and it was desirable to meet this temporary need by granting a temporary permit on this route. It was held that the enquiry to the need or otherwise regarding the grant of a pucca permit cannot be a ground for withholding the grant of temporary permits. I am therefore of the view that there was sufficient temporary need in this case justifying the grant of temporary permits under Section 62(c) of the Act.

It was also sought to be argued that the temporary permits are being issued in succession and in some cases they were issued on four occasions successively and therefore it is clear that the provisions of Section 62 of the Act were being abused and under the guise of granting temporary permits to satisfy a particular temporary need, permits were being renewed indefinitely from time to time. This, itself according to the petitioner showed that the true reason for granting the permits was not any temporary need, but to augment the revenues of the State. The Supreme Court, however in AIR 1966 SC 156 has observed that all that Section 62 enjoins is that at any one time the Regional Transport Authority is not permitted to issue to any person a temporary permit for a period exceeding 4 months, but the mere fact that the Regional Transport Authority has granted a temporary permit for a second time and the total duration of the two permits is more than 4 months would not invalidate the second permit. Following this decision it was held by this Court in W. P. No. 84 of 1968, D/- 4-4-1968 (AP) that where temporary permits were being granted every four months because scheme for nationalisation of the routes in question and other routes was pending with the Government, that was a sound reason for granting successive permits and it could not be said that there is any abuse of Section 62 of the Act.

It is true as pointed by the Supreme Court that the Regional Transport Authority cannot abuse its power by going on granting temporary permits in quick succession and not take speedy action for completing the procedure under Section 57 of the Act for granting regular permits and if upon the facts of any particular case it appears that the Regional Transport Authority is so abusing its powers, its action is liable to be corrected by granting a writ. In this case nothing has been placed before me to substantiate the allegation that there has been abuse of power in granting successive temporary permits. On the other hand, the counter-affidavits, the terms of which have already been set out, give the reasons for granting temporary permits. For all the reasons stated above, I am unable to agree with the contention that the requirements of Sec. 62 are not satisfied or that the power conferred under that Section is being abused.

7. Contention 2: It is next contended by the Petitioner that the temporary permits cannot be granted without providing an opportunity to the existing operators to make their representations. This contention is based upon Section 47(1) of the Act which directs that the Regional Transport Authority shall in considering an application for a stage carriage permit, take into consideration any representations made by persons already providing passenger transport facilities by any means along or near the proposed route or area or by any association representing persons interested in the provision of road transport facilities recognised in this behalf by the State Government, or by any local authority or police authority within whose jurisdiction any part of the proposed route or area lies. It is admitted by the respondent that no such opportunity was given to make any representations in terms of this section, but it is contended that Section 47 has no application at all to the case of a temporary permit, which is governed only by the provisions of Section 62 of the Act and that section does not contemplate giving of an opportunity to anyone, much less to the existing operators to make their representations in the matter of granting of temporary permits. It is therefore, to be considered whether Section 47 of the Act applies to the grant of temporary permits.

8. Section 47 occurs in Chapter IV of the Motor Vehicles Act which is headed 'Control of Transport Vehicles' and consists of Sections 42 to 68.

9. Section 42 declares that no owner of a transport vehicle shall use or permit the use of the vehicle in any public place save in accordance with the conditions of a permit granted or countersigned by the authority concerned.

10. Section 45 provides that every application for a permit shall be made to the Regional Transport Authority of the region in which it is proposed to use the vehicle or vehicles.

11. Sections 46 and 48 deal with the application for a stage carriage permit and the grant of a stage carriage permit.

12. Sections 49 to 51 deal with contract carriage permits, Sections 52 and 53 with private carrier's permit, and Sections 54 to 56 with public carrier's permit.

13. Section 57 relates to the procedure in applying for and granting permits of all types.

14. Section 58 deals with the duration and renewal of permits.

15. Section 59 deals with the general conditions attaching to all permits, Section 60 with the cancellation and suspension of permits, and Section 61 with the transfer of permit.

16. No distinction is made in these sections between a regular permit and a temporary permit. The sections refer generally to permits, indicating any particular type of permit whenever it is necessary to do so. In this connection it is important to bear in mind the following definition of 'permit' under Section 2(20) of the Act; 'permit' means the document issued by the Commissioner or a State or Regional Transport Authority authorising the use of a transport vehicle as a contract carriage, or authorising the owner as a private carrier or public carrier to use such vehicle." This would clearly include even a temporary permit. As the expression used in Section 47 is 'stage carriage permit' it would follow that it would apply to all permits for use of such carriages whether they are a regular permit, or temporary permits. Is there anything in the language of Section 47 or in the context in which the expression 'stage carriage permit' occurs to limit the operation of the section to 'regular permits' only and not include temporary permits within its purview?

17. It is argued that Section 47 occurs after Sections 45 and 46 and can refer only to permits referred to in those sections. This argument presupposes that Sections 45 and 46 apply only to regular permits and have no application to temporary permits. I do not see any reason why the application of these sections should be limited to regular permits only. In these sections the expression used is 'a permit' which according to the definition would include 'a temporary permit' also. On the other hand, wherever it is necessary to exclude temporary permits from the operation of a particular section, care has been taken to say so in express terms. For instance Section 57(8) refers to an application to vary the conditions of any permit, other than a temporary permit. Section 58 directs that a stage carriage permit or a contract carriage permit other than a temporary permit issued under Section 62 shall be effective without renewal for such period, not less than three years and not more than five years as the Regional Transport Authority may specify in the permit. Similarly,

Section 58-B refers to a private carrier's permit or a public carrier's permit other than a temporary permit. Section 59-A prescribes the form of every permit other than a temporary permit issued under Section 62. These instances where a temporary permit is expressly excluded from the operation of the section point to the conclusion that, but for such exclusion the expression 'permit' would embrace not only regular permits but temporary permits. A reading of the various provisions in the chapter also leads to the conclusion that these provisions would equally apply to temporary permits. For instance, Section 45 prescribes that every application for a permit shall be made to the Regional Transport Authority and Section 46 prescribes the particulars which an application for a permit should contain. These provisions are equally necessary in connection with a temporary permit. It may be that some of these and other provisions by their very nature cannot be made applicable to temporary permits. But that is not a reason why it should be held that these sections have no application to temporary permits. The same reasoning holds good in respect of Section 47 which directs that in considering an application for a stage carriage permit, the Regional Transport Authority shall have regard to the several matters mentioned in that section. These matters have to be considered even in the case of application for a temporary permit, except in so far as they are obviously inapplicable owing to the nature of the provision, to the case of a temporary permit. The position is the same with regard to the sections dealing with private carrier's permits, public carrier's permits or contract carriage permits.

18. In Section 62 of the Act it is specifically provided that the procedure laid down in Section 57 need not be followed. But there is no such exemption in the case of the requirements of other sections. It has to be remembered that Section 62 deals with temporary permits for all types of transport vehicles, whether they be stage carriages or contract carriages or private carriers or public carriers. The fact that mention is made only to Section 57 indicates that the other sections applicable to any particular case should be followed.

19. It was then argued that whereas Section 48 which deals with the grant of stage carriage permits is made subject to the provisions of Section 47, it does not state that Section 62 is subject to the provisions of that section. This argument in my opinion is without force.

20. Sections 49 to 51 which deal with the contract carriage permit correspond to Sections 46 to 48 which deal with stage carriage permits. Section 51 is made subject to the provisions of Section 50.

In the same way Section 48 is made subject to the provisions of Section 47. Similarly, in the case of public carrier permits Section 56 is made subject to the provisions of Section 55. As has already been noticed Section 62 deals with the grant of temporary permits of all types of transport vehicles and therefore, would be subject to the provisions relating to all the different types of permits which preceded the Section and if the language similar to Ss. 48, 51 or 56 were used it would be necessary to mention a number of sections which preceded Section 62. Perhaps, it was not considered necessary to expressly state that this was subject to the provisions of various other sections in the Act, as the sections in an Act have to be read together and no express provision is necessary to mention that a particular section is subject to another provision. The mere fact that in some cases it has been so stated, does not mean that in all other sections which do not contain a similar clause the said section must be applied without due regard to other provisions.

21. It was contended by the learned Government Pleader that if the provisions of Section 47 have to be complied with, especially those relating to the taking into consideration of any representations, the very object and purposes of the provision relating to the temporary permits would be defeated. It was stated that the period of a temporary permit can in no event exceed four months and the grant of temporary permits was for the purpose of convenience of the passengers on special occasions like fairs and religious gatherings, for the purpose of seasonal business, to meet a temporary need and pending decision on an application for renewal of a permit. It was argued that a temporary permit being designed to cover such a situation, it is of the utmost importance that it should be granted expeditiously and if the procedure adopted under Section 47 is to be followed, the lapse of time consequent upon such procedure would defeat the very purpose for which the temporary permits are granted. Instances like earth-quake or floods were given as illustrations to point out that if the procedure under Section 47 is to be followed before the grant of temporary permits on such occasions, considerable hardship would be caused to the public. I do not think that extreme illustrations of this kind serve any useful purpose. These temporary permits are normally intended to be given on special occasions such as fairs, and religious gatherings or for the purposes of seasonal business or to meet a particular temporary need etc. These occasions are known sufficiently in advance and it is not impossible to comply with the provisions of Section 47 and hear representations if any, before the granting of temporary permits.

22. Further a provision is made in Section 42(3) of the Act whereunder it is stated that there is no necessity even for a permit in certain cases, for instance in the case of any transport vehicle used solely for police, fire brigade or ambulance purposes or for the conveyance of corpses or a transport vehicle used for towing a disabled vehicle or for removing goods from a disabled vehicle to a place of safety, or any transport vehicle used for any other public purpose prescribed in this behalf. It is therefore possible for the Government to make rules to the effect that there is no need even for a permit where a transport vehicle is used in connection with earth-quake or in the event of floods or such conditions of great emergency.

23. It is not right to judge the applicability of Section 47 to temporary permits granted under Section 62 merely with reference to the requirements under Section 47(1) in regard to representations made by the persons already providing transport facilities etc. Section 47 also provides that the Regional Transport Authority shall in considering an application for a stage carriage permit have regard to the various matters like the interests of the public, the advantages to the public of the services to be provided, adequacy of other passenger transport services, the benefit to any particular locality or localities likely to be afforded by the services etc. If the argument that Section 47 will not apply to the grant of temporary permits under Section 62 were to be accepted, then there would be no criteria at all in considering several applications made for the issue of temporary permits. Even if conditions under Section 62 are satisfied, it may be that there are more than one application for the issue of temporary permit in any particular route and it could not have been the intention of the framers of the Act that such an application should be considered without any criteria and it should be left to the sweet will and discretion of the authority to grant the permit to whomsoever they like.

24. For all these reasons I have no hesitation in rejecting the contention of the learned Government Pleader that the requirements of Section 47 need not be complied with while granting permits under Section 62. This view of mine finds support in the decision in Ambala Ex. S. T. Co-op. Society v. Punjab State, AIR 1959 Punj 1 (FB). In that case in repelling the argument that the power conferred under Section 62(d) of the Act (as amended by the Punjab Legislature) which enabled the authority to grant temporary permit in any such circumstances as may in the opinion of such authority justified granting of such permits, was uncontrolled or unrestricted and therefore void, it was observed that the power of issuing temporary permits is controlled by Section 55 and Section 56 of the Act and the Legislature had in the aforesaid provisions indicated the basis for the exercise of the same. Section 55 provides that the Regional Transport Authority shall in considering an application for a public carrier's permit take into consideration any representations made by persons already providing goods transport facilities by any means, whether by road or otherwise in the proposed area or along or near the proposed route etc. In that case their Lordships were dealing with a public carrier's permit and therefore they referred to Sections 55 and 57.

The same reasoning holds good in the case of temporary stage carriage permit in which case Section 62 will be controlled by the provisions of Sections 46 to 48. This decision was followed in a recent decision in Prem Bus Service v. R. T. A. Patiala, AIR 1968 Punj 344 where it was held that the requirements of Section 47 have to be followed in the grant of temporary stage carriage permit under Section 62 in the same manner and to the same extent as is required in the grant of regular stage carriage permit. It was further held that a statutory duty is cast on the Regional Transport Authority to take into consideration any representations made by the persons already providing passenger transport facilities by any means along or near the proposed route, as required by Section 47 (1). A similar view has been taken by the Rajasthan High Court in Kotah Transport Ltd. v. R. T. Authority, AIR 1954 Raj 33 in which it was held that provisions of the Sections 45 to 48 would apply also to the case of the issue of temporary permits. In Abdul Gafoor v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1962 Raj 174 it was held that it is in consonance with the principles of natural justice that the persons who are already holding permits in certain routes and are likely to be affected by the grant of temporary permits must be given an opportunity of being heard in the matter.

25. The learned Government Pleader drew my attention to the decision in C. S. S. Motor Service v. State of Madras, 1952-2 Mad LJ 894 = (AIR 1953 Mad 279) in which it was held that the factor to be considered in granting of a permit is not whether the existing operators will suffer by competition but whether the extension of service will be in the interests of the public. Similarly in Surendra Singh v. State of U. P., AIR 1966 All 455 it was observed that no operator on a particular route can be heard to say that if the strength of the route is increased his financial interest would suffer and consequently the increase should not be allowed.

26. These decisions in my view have no application. It is one thing to say that the interests of the existing operators cannot be taken into account in considering the question whether a permit should be issued or not, but it is quite another thing to say that their representations need not be considered. The consideration of the representations is specifically provided for in Section 47(1). Further such representations need not be limited to how they may be affected by the issue of a permit, but may also relate to the various factors referred to in Section 47(1) in which case it would be necessary for the authorities to consider those representations in so far as they are relevant to Section 47(1).

27. In this case no doubt the petitioners have come to the court even when the notifications calling for applications for the temporary permits were issued without waiting to see whether an opportunity would be given to the existing operators to make their representations and whether these representations would be taken into consideration. But the attitude of the Government as expressed in the counter-affidavit clearly shows that they have all along been of the view and are still of the view that it is not necessary to give the petitioners any such opportunity or take into consideration any representations made by them. This view according to me is not justified.

28. Another contention that was sought to be raised though feebly, is that as the limit of the number of stage carriages generally or of any specific type for which such carriage permits may be granted in the region has not been fixed by the Regional Transport Authority in this case, temporary permits cannot be granted until such limit is fixed. I do not see any force in this contention. Section 47(3) authorises the Regional Transport Authority to limit the number of stage carriages having regard to the matters mentioned in sub-section (1). It does not render it obligatory on the part of the authority to do so. If, no doubt such a limit is fixed the grant of any permit, whether it be under Section 48 or under Section 62, in view of what has been stated above has to be subject to that limit. But, so long as no such limit is fixed the authority is empowered to grant permits unfettered by Section 47(3). The decision of the Supreme Court in Abdul Mateen v. Ram Kailash Pandey, AIR 1963 SC 64 is only an authority for the proposition that where a limit has been fixed under Section 47(3) by the Regional Transport Authority and thereafter the said authority proceeds to consider applications for permits under Section 48 read with Section 47, the Regional Transport

Authority must confine the number of permits issued by it within those limits. I do not consider this as an authority for the extreme contention urged on behalf of the petitioners that until such a limit is fixed, no permits and in particular, temporary permits can be granted.

29. Mr. Srinivasamurthi who appeared for respondents-operators in W. P. 4313/68 who were granted temporary permits contended that the routes in question in which they were granted permits were the routes 9 to 12, 16, 17 and 19 to 22 with which the petitioners in the Writ Petition were not at all concerned and therefore they are not entitled to question the grant of temporary permits for these routes. But under Section 47(1) the representations of persons providing passenger transport facilities not only along the proposed route but also near the proposed route have to be taken into consideration. It is the case of the petitioners that they are providing passenger transport facilities near the proposed routes and therefore it cannot be said that their representations need not be considered.

30. As I have negatived the contention of the petitioners that the conditions for the issue of temporary permits do not exist or that there has been an abuse of the power to grant temporary permits under Section 62 the request of the petitioners to issue a writ prohibiting the respondent from proceeding in pursuance of the notifications calling for applications for grant of temporary permits cannot be granted. But, in view of my decision on the second contention, the respondent has to provide an opportunity to the petitioners to make their representations before the applications for the grant of temporary permits are considered on merits. A writ will be issued accordingly.

31. There will no order as to costs.

Writ issued.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 426
(V 57 C 69)

FULL BENCH

NARASIMHAN, KRISHNA RAO AND KUPPUSWAMI, JJ.

J. Devaraja Rao and others, Appellants
v. Income-Tax Officer, Anantapur and another, Respondents.

Writ Appeal No. 111 of 1964, D/- 2-1-1970, decided by F.B. on Order of Ref. made by Jaganmohan Reddy, C.J. and Sambasiva Rao, J., D/- 26-6-1964.

(A) Hindu law — Debts — Father — "Pious obligation" of son — Income-tax arrears in respect of father's separate business prior to partition between father and son — Son is bound to pay under doctrine of pious obligation. AIR 1959

Mad 71 & AIR 1959 Andh Pra 631, Rel. on.
(Para 17)

(B) Hindu law — Texts — Interpretation of "Smritis" — Unsafe to apply dictionary meaning to words in text of "smritis".

In interpreting 'smritis' which were rendered thousands of years ago it is not safe to merely take the dictionary meaning and apply it to the texts. It has to be remembered that 'smritis' also deal with religious and moral law. (Para 6)

(C) Hindu law — Debts — Father — Pious obligation of son — Tax debts — Income-tax arrears — Debt binding on son.

Even if some type of taxes or duties (sulka debt) were exempt from the doctrine of pious obligation for certain reasons which appealed to the ancient smriti text writers, it is for the court to decide in the context of the present society whether any particular tax liability is of such a nature as could be treated as one tainted with illegality or immorality or opposed to right conduct as to bring it within the exceptions to the general rule that the son is liable to pay the father's debt. The liability to pay arrears of income-tax cannot be regarded as one such. On the other hand it is obligatory on the son that he should pay taxes which are legitimately due to the State by his father. Even from ancient times till the present day the liability to pay tax to the State is regarded as one of the foremost duties of the citizens. Arrears of income-tax due by the father in respect of separate business prior to partition between him and his son can be recovered from the son after the partition under the doctrine of pious obligation. Case law and Hindu Religious Texts discussed. (Paras 8, 9)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1960) AIR 1960 SC 954 (V 47) =
1960-3 SCR 842, Luhar Amritlal
Nagji v. Doshi Jayantilal Jethalal 5, 11
(1959) AIR 1959 SC 282 (V 46) =
1959 SCR 1384, S. M. Jakati v.
S. M. Borkar 6, 11, 12
(1959) AIR 1959 Andh Pra 631
(V 46) = 36 ITR 47, Chaganti
Raghava Reddy v. State of Andhra 15
(1959) AIR 1959 Mad 71 (V 46) =
35 ITR 142, M. R. Radhakrishnan
v. Union of India 15
(1955) AIR 1955 Mad 382 (V 42) =
ILR (1955) Mad 1179, Perumal
Chetti v. Province of Madras 6, 9
(1943) AIR 1943 PC 142 (V 30) =
70 Ind App 171, Hemraj v. Khemchand 4, 6, 11
(1926) AIR 1926 Mad 323 (V 13) =
ILR 49 Mad 211, Nidavolu
Achutan v. Ratnajeev 6, 10
(1912) ILR 39 Cal 862 = 16 Cal
WN 519, Chhakauri Mahton v.
Ganga Prasad 1

(1907) ILR 32 Bom 348 = 10 Bom
 LR 297, Durbar Khachar v.
 Khachar Harsur 4
 (1898) 25 Ind App 54 = ILR 20 All
 267 (PC), Rao Balwant Singh v.
 Rani Kishori 6
 (1857) 6 Moo Ind App 393 = 18
 WR 81 (PC), Hanuman Prasad v.
 Mt. Babooe 11

P. Rama Rao, for Appellants; T. Ananta
 Babu, for Respondents.

KUPPUSWAMI, J.:— This appeal was referred to a Full Bench by a Division Bench consisting of Jaganmohan Reddy, Chief Justice (as he then was) and Sambasiva Rao, J., in view of the importance of the question that arises in this case, namely whether the arrears of income-tax, due by the father in respect of a separate business prior to a partition between him and his sons can be recovered from the sons after the partition under the doctrine of pious obligation.

2. This appeal is against the order of Gopalakrishnan Nair, J., dismissing a Writ Petition praying for the issue of a Writ of Mandamus directing the respondent to forbear from collecting certain arrears of income-tax by attachment and sale of their properties. The father of the petitioners, appellants herein was one Venkateswara Rao. He and his divided brother Lakshman Rao carried on business in partnership under the name and style of Govindarao & Sons. For the years 1945-46, 1946-47 and 1947-48 this firm was assessed to a total income-tax of Rs. 92, 178-44. The firm was dissolved by an agreement between the two partners in the end of 1948. The tax was not paid by the partners in spite of demand. On 20-11-1952 Venkateswara Rao and his sons who constituted a joint family partitioned their family properties, each of them taking a separate share. No arrangement was made for payment of the arrears of income-tax due by the father, Venkateswara Rao, as a partner of the aforesaid firm. Eventually the Income-tax Officer issued a certificate under Section 46(2) of the Income-tax Act for recovery of the tax due by proceeding against the properties of the father which the father as well as the sons obtained in the partition. The properties were attached and were sought to be brought to sale.

The sons, thereupon filed Writ Petition No. 1221 of 1963 before this Court praying for the issue of a writ of mandamus directing the authorities to forbear from proceeding with the recovery of the arrears of income-tax. Several contentions were raised before Gopalakrishnan Nair, J., all of which were negatived by him. It is sufficient to mention only the third contention raised before him, as that is the only contention that is pressed before us, i.e. the doctrine of pious obligation of the sons of a Hindu to discharge the pecuniary liability of their father which is not tainted by illegality or immorality does not extend to the liability of the father to pay arrears of income-tax. Gopalakrishnan Nair, J., negatived this contention stating that the debts due to the Government undoubtedly stand on a higher footing than a debt due to a private individual or institution and the pious obligation of the sons to discharge their father's debt would extend also to the above debt due to the State. In the result he dismissed the Writ Petition. The same contention is reiterated before us in this Appeal.

3. Under ancient Hindu Law as laid down by the 'Smritis' the non-payment of a debt was regarded as a sin, the consequences of which follow the debtor even after his death. A text which is attributed to Brihaspathi says "He who having received a sum lent or the like does not repay it to the owner, will be born hereafter in the creditor's house a slave, a servant, a woman or a quadruped." There are other texts which say that a person in debt goes to hell. Hindu Law-givers therefore imposed a pious duty on the descendants of a man including his son, grandson, and great grandson to pay off the debts of their ancestor and relieve him of the afterdeath torments consequent on non-payments. In the original texts a difference was made in regard to the obligation resting upon sons, grandsons and great grandsons in this respect. The son was bound to discharge the ancestral debt as if it was his own together with interest and irrespective of any assets that he might have received. The liability of the grandson was much the same except that he was not to pay any interest. The great grandson was liable only if he received assets from his ancestor. This doctrine as formulated in the original texts which usually referred to as the doctrine of pious obligation has been modified in some respects by judicial decisions. Under the decisions as they now stand there is no difference between, son, grandson and great grandson so far as the obligation to pay the debt of the ancestor is concerned. But none of them has any personal liability in the matter irrespective of receiving any assets. To this general obligation of discharging the father's debts, several exceptions were laid down by the Smriti writers. It is useful to set down the various texts which deal with this:

MANU. VIII. 159.

प्रातिभाष्यं द्यूयादानमाक्षिकं सौरिकंच यत् ।

दण्डशुल्कावशेषं च पुत्रो दातुमर्हति ॥

But money due by a surety, or idly promised, or lost at play, or due for spirituous liquor, or what remains unpaid of a fine and tax or duty, the son (of the party owing it) shall not be obliged to pay.

GAUTAMA. XII. 41.

प्रातिभाष्यं वणिक् शुल्कमयश्च दण्ड न पुत्रान् प्राप्तेषुः॥

Money due by a surety, a commercial debt, a fee (due to the parents of the bride), debts contracted for spirituous liquor or in gambling and a fine shall not involve the sons (of the debtor).

YAJNAVALKYA. II. 89. (47)

सुराशमयूत कृत दण्डशुल्कवशिष्टम् ।

वृथादानं तथैवेह पुत्रं दद्यात् पैतृकम् ॥

A son has not to pay, in this world his father's debt incurred for spirituous liquor for gratification of lust, or in gambling, nor a fine nor what remains unpaid of a toll; nor (shall he make good) idle gifts.

NARADA :

न पुत्रेण पिता दद्यात् दद्यात्, पुत्रस्तु पैतृकम् ।

कामक्रोधसुराशून प्रातिभाष्यहृणादिना ॥

A father must not pay the debt of his son but a son must pay a debt contracted by his father excepting those debts which have contracted from love, anger, spirituous liquor, games, or bailments.

BRIHASPATI. XI. (10-118, Gaekwad's Edition, 1941).

सारसिद्धं वृथादानं कामक्रोधप्रतिश्रुतम् ।

प्रातिभाष्यं दण्डशुल्कदण्डं पुत्रं न दापयेत् ॥

Sons shall not be made to pay (a debt incurred by their father) for spirituous liquor, for idle gifts, for promises made under influence of love or wrath, or for suretyship; nor the balance of a fine or toll (liquidated in part of their father.)

VYASA OR USANAS.

दण्ड वा दण्डशेषं वा शुल्कं तच्छेषमेव वा ।

न दातव्यं तु पुत्रेण यच्च न व्यावहारिकम् ॥

The son has not to pay a fine or the balance of a fine, or a tax (or toll), or its balance (due by the father), nor that which is not proper.

This text is attributed to Vyasa according to Ratnakara and to Usanas according to Mitakshara and will be referred to in this Judgment as the text of Usanas. The translations are according to Gbosh in his book on Hindu Law.

4. These passages and in particular the last mentioned one which uses the general expression "न व्यावहारिकं" (Na Vyavaharikam) have been the subject of several decisions including those of the Privy Council and of the Supreme Court. Though the expression used is 'Na Vyavaharikam' it is ordinarily referred to by a single expression 'Avyavaharika' which means the same thing. There has been a considerable difference of opinion as to the true meaning of this expression — Colebrooke translated these words as meaning "debt for a cause repugnant to good morals". Mandlik translated it as "not proper". In Darbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur, (1907) ILR 32 Bom 348 it was translated as "a debt which as a decent and respectable man the father ought not to have incurred." In Chhakauri Mahton v. Ganga Prasad, (1912) ILR 39 Cal 862 Justice Mookerjee preferred to read it as "not lawful, usual or customary". But the Privy Council in Hemraj v. Khem Chand, 70 Ind App 171 = (AIR 1943 PC 142), after referring to the translation of Colebrooke, and Mandlik and the judgments of the Court in India interpreting the term "avyavaharika", observed that having regard to the principles underlying the rule of pious obligation which forms the foundation for the son's liability, the translation of the term as given by Colebrooke makes the nearest approach to the true conception of the term as used in the Smriti text and may well be taken to represent its correct meaning. In their Lordships' view the term does not admit of a more precise definition. It was held that when a particular debt is called in question, it would be the duty of the courts to examine its nature in the light of the principles mentioned in the judgment, which are not exhaustive but only basic, and to see whether in the circumstances it is of the kind which give exemption to the son from the liability to pay it, on the ground that it is repugnant to morals. In that decision it was also observed that the duty cast on the son being religious or moral, the character of the debt should be examined from the standpoint of justice and morality.

5. The Supreme Court in Luhar Amrit Lal Nagji v. Doshi Jayantilal Jethalal, (1960) 3 SCR 842 = (AIR 1960 SC 964) also expressed the same view.

6. Colebrooke's translation was also accepted by the Supreme Court in S. M. Jakati v. S. M. Borkar, AIR 1959 SC 282. They observed that it is the pious duty of the sons to discharge their father's debts not tainted with immorality or illegality. In Perumal Chetti v. Province of Madras, AIR 1955 Mad 382 Chief Justice Rajamannar delivering the judgment of the Division Bench observed :

"We have our doubts if that term had a precise and definite meaning even in the days of the Smritis. It is like "just and convenient", "reasonable and prudent", "justice, equity and good conscience". To give the latest example it is an expression as elastic and indefinite as the expression "reasonable restrictions" in Article 19 of our Constitution. Colebrooke translated the expression "avyavaharika" as "repugnant to good morals".

There have been other translations, like 'improper' and 'not lawful, usual or customary'. "Vyavahara" is a word which has more than one meaning. But we agree with Mr. Venkata Subramania Aiyar that the word has reference to the ideal of good conduct according to the notions prevailing at the material time. But we are unable to hold that any debt which the father ought not to have strictly contracted is necessarily a debt which is 'avyavaharika.' There should be an element of moral turpitude involved in the debt. It is only then that it could be called 'avyavaharika'.

Whatever may be the difference in the translations of this expression, it is now clear that the expression 'avyavaharika' has been understood as repugnant to good morals or tainted with immorality or illegality or involving some moral turpitude. Even if a wider meaning such as 'improper' is given there can be no doubt that the liability in the present case, namely, the liability of the father to pay arrears of income-tax which had accrued in respect of the business which he was carrying on cannot be said to be 'avyavaharika'. In our opinion it is impossible to argue that the liability to pay taxes legally due to the Government is an 'avyavaharika' debt within the meaning of the texts as interpreted by the judicial decisions, some of which have been referred to above. It is stated that the assessment was made on an estimated income but even so the tax so levied would still be tax legitimately due at it has been held that even an estimate cannot be arbitrary and must rest on some rational basis. There would be some scope for argument if a penalty or fine had been levied due to the negligence or laches of the assessee or due to his non-compliance with any provision of law. As that is not the case here we express no opinion on that matter. We may also state that Mr. Rama Rao also did not seriously contend before us that the said liability would be in the nature of an 'avyavaharika' debt not binding upon the son. His main argument however, was that the exemption from liability of the son under the doctrine of pious obligation is not only in respect of an 'avyavaharika' debt, but in respect of the various classes of debts, mentioned in the several texts referred to earlier. He submitted that one class of debts which is specifically mentioned in the text of Usanas and the other texts is 'sulka'. According to the dictionary meaning as well as the meaning given by the various recognised translators of the texts from time to time, the expression 'sulka' would also include a tax. As the smritis expressly state that the son is not liable to pay the 'Sulka' which remained unpaid by the father it is argued that the son is not liable for the arrears of income-tax payable by the father in this case. It is very difficult at this distance of time to find out what the 'smriti' text writers meant by the expression 'sulka'. The dictionary meaning as given in Apte's Dictionary is 'toll, tax, customs duty particularly levied at ferries, passes, roads. The other meanings of 'sulka' given are 'gain, profit, money advanced to ratify a bargain, purchase price of a girl; money given to the parents of a bride; a nuptial present; marriage settlement or dowry presents given by the bridegroom to his bride.' In the various translations, sometimes, the expression 'toll' is used, sometimes 'tax', sometimes 'duty'. In arriving at the meaning of the expression used in the texts it is important to bear in mind the context in which these passages occurred. As observed already these texts refer to the exceptions to the general rule that a son is liable to pay the debts of his father. As pointed by the Privy Council in 70 Ind App 171 = (AIR 1943 PC 142) most of the debts mentioned in the texts as debts which he need not pay, are of objectionable character, even if some type of taxes or duties were exempt from the doctrine of pious obligation for certain reasons which appealed to the ancient Smriti text writers; it is for the court to decide in the context of the present society whether any particular tax liability is of such a nature as could be treated as one tainted with illegality or immorality or opposed to right conduct as to bring it within the exceptions to the general rule that the son is liable to pay the father's debt. We have no hesitation in holding that the liability to pay arrears of income-tax cannot be regarded as one such. On the other hand it appears to us that it is obligatory on the son that he should pay taxes which are legitimately due to the State by his father. Even from ancient times till the present day the liability to pay tax to the State is regarded as one of the foremost duties of the citizens. We cannot believe that the ancient law givers who laid so much stress upon the duty of the son to his father's debt would have exempted him from payment of the taxes legally due by the father to the State. It has been repeatedly held that the son is liable to pay the debts of the father incurred during the course of trade which he had lawfully carried on. It does not stand to reason that while the son is liable to pay the debts of the father so incurred, he is not liable to pay the tax due in respect of the profits of that trade, or debts incurred by the father for the purpose of the payment of those taxes. In interpreting these 'Smritis' which were rendered thousands of years ago it is not safe to merely to take the dictionary meaning and apply it to the texts. In this connection it has to be remembered that these 'Smritis' also deal with religious and moral law. According to Hindu conception 'Dharma' is of widest significance and includes religious, moral, social and legal duties and can only be defined by its contents. The Hindu 'Dharma sastra' therefore deals with religious and moral law as well as civil and criminal law. It is true that the Smriti writers knew the distinction between 'vyavahara' or the like, the breach of which results in judicial proceedings, and the law in the widest sense. But having regard to the fact that all the old texts and commentaries are apt to mingle religious and moral considerations, not being positive laws, with the rules intended to be positive laws, their Lordships of the Privy Council have repeatedly emphasised the necessity for caution in the interpretation of 'Smritis', vide Rao Balwant Singh v. Rani Kishori, (1898) 25 Ind App 54 (PC). In Nidavolu Achutan v. Ratnajee, AIR 1926 Mad 323. Couts-Trotter, C. J. observed that the governing provision in the texts is that which excludes from the rule debts that are not 'vyavaharika' and particular instances given in the Smritis must be treated as a mere expression of opinion on the part of the authors as to what class of debts would fall under general words.

7. Strange in his book on Hindu Law seems to think that the reason that debts due for tolls are excepted may be that they are to be regarded as ready money payments, for which credit will have to be given at the risk of him by whom they ought to have been received.

8. In Mayne's Hindu Law it is stated that the expression 'sulka' in the Smritis is ambiguous. It is sometimes translated as a toll or a tax. Another meaning of the word 'sulka' is a nuptial present, given as the price of a bride. Reference is made to Haradatta's translation where he assigns the meaning of bride price to 'sulka' and to the fact that this translation is supported by Sarvajna Narayana in his gloss on the text in Manu. Mayne is of the opinion that this stands to reason as a promise of bride price is not enforceable even according to the modern decisions and being unapproved marriage neither the liability to pay the bride price nor a debt incurred for the purpose of paying it can be lawful or proper (vyavaharika). Even if the meaning is not restricted to the last mentioned one, namely, the bride price, we are of the opinion that having regard to the context in which it occurs, 'sulka' must be confined only to such liability, though in the nature of tax or a duty, which would involve some moral turpitude on the part of the father or the incurring of which would be tainted with illegality or immorality.

9. The Bench of the Madras High Court in AIR 1955 Mad 382 had to consider whether court-fee payable by the father in a litigation which he carried on comes within the expression 'Danda' used in the text which as has been noticed is also one of the specifically enumerated class of debts mentioned in the text. It was observed that the conception of the court-fee at the present day is radically different from 'Danda' which was imposed on the parties to a litigation in the days of 'Smritis', and that whatever the theory underlying the court-fee may be, it is clearly not in the nature of punishment. They observed that the conception of 'Dharma' and Nyaya changes and the liability even under the 'Smritis' would have to be judged by the present day notions and if judged by those notions, it could not be said that the liability to pay court-fee was in anyway inconsistent with right conduct. We are of the view that the same approach should be made in interpreting the expression 'sulka' in the same texts.

10. If the expression 'sulka' were to be regarded as meaning any tax or duty, we would hold that the texts in so far as they refer to 'sulka' have become obsolete. In this connection we may again refer to the decision in AIR 1926 Mad 323 where it was argued that as "commercial debt" is one of the exceptions mentioned in the text of Gautama the son is not liable to pay, under the doctrine of pious obligation, any commercial debt. Couts-Trotter, C. J., observed that a modern court would be free to consider the particular instances given as obsolete under the conditions of today. He observed "I am clearly of opinion that commercial debts fall into that category and we ought to say that the pious obligation extends to them. It may well be that in the time of Gautama it was thought that to engage in trade was degrading at any rate in the case of higher castes, but no one could pretend that that view would be entertained today."

11. Mr. Ananta Babu contended on behalf of the respondents that the only question for consideration of the court is whether a particular debt is 'avyavaharika' or not and if it is satisfied that the debt is not 'avyavaharika' it has to uphold the son's liability to pay the father's debts. He contended that though the Smriti texts mentioned several classes of debts, specifically therein enumerated, in view of the judicial decisions ever since the decision in Hanoomanprasad v. Mt. Baboo, (1857) 6 Moo Ind App 393 (PC) the position is that the courts have been considering only whether a particular debt is 'avyavaharika' or not and not whether any debt falls under anyone of the other enumerated categories mentioned in one or other of the texts. He relied upon the decision of the Privy Council in 70 Ind App 171 = (AIR 1943 PC 142) and of the Supreme Court in (1960) 3 SCR 842 = (AIR 1960 SC 964) and AIR 1959 SC 282 in support of this contention. In the first case the Privy Council observed that if on examination it is found that at its inception the debt was not tarnished or tainted with immorality or illegality, then it must be held that it would be binding on the son. In (1960) 3 SCR 842 = (AIR 1960 SC 964) it was observed that in this branch of law several considerations have been introduced by judicial decisions which have substantially now become a part and parcel of Hindu Law as it is administered; it would, therefore, not be easy to disengage on said considerations and seek to ascertain the true effect of the relevant provisions contained in ancient texts considered by themselves. They said that they were not prepared to decide the point raised purely in the light of ancient Sanskrit Texts.

12. In AIR 1959 SC 282 it was observed in paragraph 12 as follows :

"In Hindu Law there are two mutually destructive principles, one the principle of independent coparcenary rights in the sons which is incident of birth, giving to the sons vested right in the coparcenary property, and the other the pious duty of the sons to discharge their father's debts not tainted with immorality or illegality."

These decisions lend support to the contention of Mr. Ananta Babu to a considerable extent that the question of liability of the son has to be decided with respect to the question whether the debt is 'avyavaharika' or not or in other words whether the debt is tainted with illegality or immorality. At the same time we have to observe that in these decisions their Lordships were not considering the exact question raised before us, namely, whether even assuming that a particular debt is not 'avyavaharika' or tainted with immorality or illegality, the son is exempted from liability by reason of the fact that it is one of the enumerated class of debts mentioned in smritis dealing with the exemption. If the liability is to depend solely on the question whether it is 'avyavaharika' or not there would be no need at all to examine the question whether any particular debt falls within any of the enumerated categories. But we have several decisions wherein are considered questions whether a particular debt is a surety debt within the meaning of the texts, or whether it is 'Danda' or whether it incurred 'in love or wrath' etc.

13. It is unnecessary to pursue this line of argument further as practically the same result has been arrived at by our holding that in interpreting the enumerated class of exemptions we have to bear in mind the context in which they appear in the various texts and therefore, they should be confined to cases where some moral turpitude on the part of the father was involved or there could be said that the incurring of the debt was tainted with some illegality or immorality.

14. The two decisions in which the question relating to the liability of the son to pay arrears of income-tax payable by the father directly arose for consideration may now be referred to.

15. In M. R. Radhakrishnan v. Union of India, 35 ITR 142 = (AIR 1959 Mad 71) the Division Bench of the Madras High Court held that there was no element of moral turpitude in not paying income-tax due. The assessment actually made was not in any sense a penalty or fine imposed for non-production of accounts or for suppression of material information. That was the case in which the income-tax was levied on an estimated income. Dealing with the argument that it came directly within the expression 'sulka' it was observed that it is impossible to be certain of the meaning of this word as it occurs in the Smritis. It may mean either a toll or a tax or a nuptial present given as the price of a bride. They pointed out that the appellant's counsel did not develop the point, nor did he cite any authority for the position that the word 'sulka' occurring in the Smriti text would apply to arrears of income-tax. Though there is no full discussion on this subject in that decision we are inclined to agree with the ultimate decision for the reasons which we have given earlier.

16. In Chaganti Raghava Reddy v. State of Andhra, 36 ITR 47 = (AIR 1959 Andh Pra 631) it was contended that as the assessments were according to the best judgment not being on merits it was in the nature of penalty arising out of the misdeeds of the father and consequently the sons were not liable to such debt of the father. This contention was negated. Though there is no discussion on this question the conclusion is in accordance with the view which we have expressed above.

17. For all the reasons above stated we are of the opinion that Gopalakrishnan Nair, J., was right in holding that the arrears of income-tax due by the petitioner's father in respect of separate business prior to partition between him and his son can be recovered from the son after the partition under the doctrine of pious obligation.

18. No other question has been argued before us.

19. The writ appeal is dismissed with costs. Advocate's fee Rs 250/-.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 432
(V 57 C 70)

CHINNAPPA REDDY, J.

Indian Detonators Ltd., Kukatpalli,
Petitioner v. Indian Detonators Ltd.,
Workers' Union and others, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 771 of 1968, D/- 14-10-1969.

(A) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 19(3) — Period of operation of settlement — Award cannot be award for one purpose and settlement for another purpose — Settlement merging into award ceases to be settlement and operates as award — It will be in operation for period provided by statute — Expression "subject to the provisions of this section" refers to provisions applicable to award and not to settlements. (Para 5)

(B) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 2(p) — Settlement — Procedure to be followed — Parties arriving at settlement and reporting same to Tribunal — Act prescribes no procedure to be followed in such case. (Para 4)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1961) AIR 1961 Mad 212 (V 48) =

1960-2 Lab LJ 556, Workers, 32

Textile Mills in Coimbatore v.

Dhanalakshmi Mills Ltd., Tiruppur 5

(1958) AIR 1958 SC 1018 (V 45) =

1959 SCR 1191, State of Bihar v.

D. N. Ganguli 4

P. R. Ramachandra Rao, for Petitioner;
V. Jagannadha Rao, for Respondent No. 1;
2nd Govt. Pleader and C. Seetharamiah, for Respondents Nos. 2 and 3.

ORDER:—The Indian Detonators Limited is the petitioner in this application for the issue of a writ of Certiorari in which a decision of the Industrial Tribunal, Hyderabad is questioned. The case of the petitioner is as follows:—

There was an Industrial Dispute between the Indian Detonators Limited and its workmen, represented by the Indian Detonators Limited Employees' Union. The Industrial Dispute was referred by the Government to the Industrial Tribunal for adjudication. Before the Tribunal could take up the dispute for adjudication the parties, that is, the management and the Employees' Union arrived at a settlement which they agreed should be in force till 30-6-1969. One of the terms of the settlement was that the workmen should not, during the period of operation of the settlement, make any demands involving a financial burden on the management. The parties requested the Tribunal to pass an award in terms of the settlement and the Tribunal did so on 29-4-1966.

On 16-6-1967, a rival and newly registered Union called the Indian Detonators Limited Workers' Union presented a charter of demands to the Management. Some of the demands involved financial burden on the management. Conciliation proceedings failed and the Conciliation Officer submitted a report to that effect to the Government. At that stage the Government entertained a doubt whether the settlement embodied in the award of 29-4-1966 would be in force till 30-6-1969 or whether it would be in force for a period of one year only from the date of award. The Government therefore referred the question for the decision of the Tribunal under Section 36-A of the Industrial Disputes Act. The Tribunal held that the necessary consequence of the settlement merging in the award was that it would be in force for a period of one year only from the date of award. The management questions the decision of the Tribunal and contends that the award was in force till 30-6-1969.

2. The Workers' Union submits that the earlier settlement was a collusive settlement between the management and the Employees' Union and that the Employees' Union represented no more than 15 out of 558 workmen and all the 15 were drivers of motor vehicles. On the other hand the Workers' Union represented 507 out of 558 workmen. The period for which an award may be in force is determined by statute and it is not open to the management to bargain out of the statute.

3. In order to appreciate the question at issue it is necessary to refer to a few statutory provisions. The definition of a 'settlement' in Section 2(p) of the Act comprehends a settlement arrived at in the course of conciliation proceedings as well as a written agreement between the employer and the workmen arrived at otherwise than in the course of conciliation proceedings. Under Section 12 of the Act it is the duty of the Conciliation Officer to endeavour to induce the parties to come to a fair and amicable settlement of an existing or an apprehended industrial dispute. Without delay, he is to investigate the dispute and all matters affecting the merits and the right settlement of the dispute. He is to report to the Government whether a settlement is arrived at or not. If he reports that there is no settlement, the Government is to decide whether a reference is to be made to a Tribunal, Board, or Labour Court. Section 10 authorises the Government to refer any existing or apprehended industrial dispute for adjudication to a Tribunal, Board or Labour Court.

Section 15 prescribed the duties of a Tribunal and Section 16(2) prescribes the form of the award of a Tribunal. Section 2(b) defines an award as meaning an interim or a final 'determination' of any industrial dispute or any question relating thereto. Section 18 provides that a settlement arrived at by an agreement between the employer and the workmen otherwise than in the course of conciliation proceedings shall be binding on the parties to the agreement. Where, however, a settlement is arrived at in the course of conciliation proceedings or where a Tribunal makes an award, the settlement or award shall be binding not only on the parties to the dispute, but, where one of the parties is composed of workmen it shall also be binding on all persons employed in the establishment or part of the establishment, as the case may be, on the date of the dispute and all persons who subsequently become employed in that establishment or part.

Thus while a settlement arrived at in the course of conciliation proceedings and an award are binding on every workman of the establishment a settlement arrived at otherwise than in the course of conciliation proceedings is binding only on the parties to the agreement. This distinction is of great importance. Under Section 19, a settlement, whether it is arrived at in the course of conciliation proceedings or otherwise than in the course of conciliation proceedings, comes into operation on the date agreed upon by the parties to the dispute and shall be binding for the period agreed upon by the parties. If no date or period are agreed upon it shall come into operation on the date on which the memorandum is signed by the parties and shall be binding for a period of six months from that date. An award of a Tribunal, however, becomes enforceable on the expiry of 30 days from the date of publication of the award by the Government. This is provided by Section 17(a) of the Act.

Section 19(3) of the Act provides that the award shall remain in operation for period of one year from the date on which the award becomes enforceable. The Government is clothed with the power to reduce the period during which an award shall remain in operation. The Government is also vested with the power to extend the period of operation of an award by any period not exceeding one year at a time, so, however, that the total period of operation of an award does not exceed three years.

4. From a perusal of the provisions referred to above, it is evident that the Industrial Disputes Act does not prescribe the procedure to be followed by an Industrial Tribunal if the parties to the dispute before it arrive at a settlement and report such settlement to the Tribunal. As pointed out by their Lordships of the Supreme Court in State of Bihar v. D. N. Ganguly, AIR 1958 SC 1018, industrial peace and harmony being the primary objects of the Act, it would be unreasonable for a Tribunal to insist upon dealing with the dispute on the merits notwithstanding its settlement. Their Lordships said:—

"It is true that the Act does not contain any provision specifically authorising the industrial tribunal to record a compromise and pass an award in its terms corresponding to the provisions of Order XXIII, Rule 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But it would be very unreasonable to assume that the industrial tribunal would insist upon dealing with the dispute on the merits even after it is informed that the dispute has been amicably settled between the parties. We have already indicated that amicable settlements of industrial peace and harmony are the primary objects of this Act. Settlements reached before the conciliation officers or boards are specifically dealt with by Sections 12(2) and 13(3) and the same are made binding under Section 18. There can, therefore, be no doubt that if an industrial dispute before a tribunal is amicably settled, the tribunal would immediately agree to make an award in terms of the settlement between the parties."

This does not, however, mean that an Industrial Tribunal would mechanically accept a settlement arrived at between the parties and pass an award in terms of the settlement. Since an award has the effect of binding not only the parties to the dispute, but also all other workmen of the establishment it is the duty of a Tribunal in such an event, to consider whether the settlement arrived at is fair, just and equitable. An award, according to the definition, is a determination of the dispute. If there is no determination there can be no award. Where an agreement arrived at between the parties is presented to the Tribunal it may adopt it as its own determination and pass an award in terms of the agreement. But then it must apply its mind to the terms of the agreement and decide whether the agreement is a fair and just settlement of the dispute. It may then adopt it as its own award. This position was explained by Ramachandra Iyer J., in Workers, 32 Textile Mills in Coimbatore v. Dhanalakshmi Mills Ltd., Tiruppur, AIR 1961 Mad 212. In that case the learned Judge observed:—

"The question that has to be decided is whether the compromise entered into on 23rd March, 1957 by the Indian National Trade, Union Congress Unions, could be held to finally terminate the industrial dispute and whether there has been a valid award in regard to it. The Industrial Tribunal merely adopted the compromise, and passed an award in terms thereof. There was no finding arrived at by the Industrial Tribunal after hearing all the parties as to whether that agreement was a fair and just settlement of the dispute, so that it could be adopted as an award by the Tribunal itself ... ..

... There has been no determination as such by the Industrial Tribunal of the question referred to it ... .. There is no power in the Industrial Tribunal similar to one conferred under Order 23, Rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code to record a compromise. What the Industrial Tribunal is empowered, is to pass an award which is defined as interim or final determination.

It is implicit in the word 'determination' that it should be judicial, implying that the Tribunal exercises its own judgment. This does not, however, mean that the Tribunal is precluded from taking note of a compromise entered into between the workers and the management. Where there is a compromise, it should consider whether, in its opinion, the compromise could be adopted as its own determination of the dispute, that is, whether it is fair, just and equitable between the parties.

This is necessary as the award would affect parties other than those actually appearing before the Tribunal. Section 18 of the Act states that an award which has become enforceable shall be binding on the parties to the industrial dispute, namely, the management and all the workmen. The binding nature of the award does not depend on any particular worker or the union to which he belongs eo nomine a party."

5. In the present case the agreement was reported to the Tribunal and an award was passed in terms of the agreement. The question is whether the award was in force till 13-6-1969 or whether it was in force for a period of one year only from the date of publication of the award. According to the respondents once the agreement merged into the award it ceased to be a settlement and it could only operate as an award in which case it was in force for a period of one year only from the date of publication of the award. On the other hand it was urged by the learned counsel for the management that under Section 19(3) while an award was to remain in operation for a period of one year from the date of publication, Section 19(3) itself mentioned that it was 'subject to the provisions of this Section'. Therefore, it was urged that an award in terms of a settlement would, like a settlement, be in operation for the period agreed upon as provided by Section 19(2) of the Act.

I am afraid it is impossible to agree with this contention. An award cannot be an award for one purpose and a settlement for another purpose. A settlement which merges into an award loses its character as a settlement once it becomes an award. It will operate as an award and it will be in operation for the period provided by the statute. The expression 'subject to the provisions of this section' in Sec. 19(3) of the Act refers only to those provisions which are applicable to award and not to settlements. Such provisions are contained in the two provisos to Section 19(3), in Section 19(4) and in Section 19(6). The learned counsel for the petitioner contended that it would be unreasonable to hold that while a settlement arrived at in the course of conciliation proceedings would be binding for the period agreed upon, an award in terms of a settlement would be binding for a period of one year only. He questioned why a greater sanctity should be attached to a settlement arrived at in the course of conciliation proceedings rather than to an award of an Industrial Tribunal embodying the terms of settlement even after a determination that the terms were just and fair.

Possibly it is because a Conciliation Officer has greater freedom of action, and, before he reports to the Government that a matter has been settled by agreement between the parties he investigates with a view to find out whether the agreement represents the agreement of all the workmen. An Industrial Tribunal, notwithstanding that its award is binding on all the workmen, may not have the same freedom to make a roving investigation to find out whether the agreement represents the agreement of all the workmen, though its award is binding on all the workmen. On the other hand, the plain truth may be that the situation was not contemplated by the legislature. But effect must be given to the provisions of the statute as they stand and I must hold that the award was in operation for a period of one year only.

In the result the Writ Petition is dismissed, with costs. Advocate's fee Rs. 100/-.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 434
(V 57 C 71)

CHINNAPPA REDDY AND MADHAVA REDDY, JJ.

Rangapalli Basamma, Petitioner v. Gift Tax Officer, Hindupur, Respondent.

Writ Petn. No. 1745 of 1967, D/- 8-4-1970

Gift Tax Act (1958), Ss. 13, 16 and 19(3) — Sections 13 and 16 are applicable to legal representatives — Gifts made by deceased person escaping assessment — Notice to all legal representatives necessary — Assessing Officer must make dif-

IN/IN/D992/70/BDB/T

gent efforts to find them out — Only then notice on few would represent the estate — Failure to find out legal representative — Notice on one legal representative only is invalid.

Section 19(3) makes Sections 13 and 16 applicable to legal representative. If an action is proposed to be taken under Section 16 on the ground that the gifts made by a deceased person have escaped assessment notice to all legal representatives of the deceased is necessary.

(Para 4)

In order that few of several legal representatives may sufficiently represent the estate there must be a diligent and a bona fide inquiry by the assessing officer to ascertain the legal representatives. Section 19 of Gift Tax Act is similar to Section 24-B of Income-Tax Act (1922). (1967) 64 ITR 106 (Andh Pra), Followed; (1965) 57 ITR 168 (SC) & AIR 1949 FC 195, Applied.

(Para 5)

It is therefore the duty of a Gift Tax Officer to make an enquiry regarding the existence of legal representatives other than the person to whom a notice is issued, if not before the notice is issued at least after the person files a writ making express allegations that there were other legal representatives. To say in counter-affidavit that there are no legal representatives is most unsatisfactory and such notice issued without proper enquiry would become invalid.

(Para 2)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1967) 64 ITR 106 (AP), I.-T. Officer v. Muram Reddy Sulochannamma 4
(1965) 57 ITR 168 (SC), First Addl. I.-T. Officer v. Buseela Sadanandan 5
(1949) AIR 1949 FC 195 (V 36) = 1949 FCR 396, Tirthalal v. Shusan Kemoyardasi 5
(1927) AIR 1927 Lah 94 (V 14) = 100 Ind Cas 418, Muhammad Hassan v. Inayat Hussain 4
(1905) 32 Ind App 23 = ILR 32 Cal 296 (PC), Khirajamal v. Daim 4

C. J. Roy and O. Adinarayana Reddy, for Petitioner; T. Anantababu, for Respondent.

CHINNAPPA REDDY, J.:— The petitioner is the widow of late Sri Siddappa of Gorantla who died on 23-11-1961. Late Siddappa left behind him his widow, the petitioner his daughter Gowramma by a deceased wife, and his permanently kept mistress Mudiramma. About five years prior to his death Siddappa made a gift of Rs. 1,38,000/-, Rs. 69,000/- to T. M. Nagaraju son of Bhagirathamma, daughter of the petitioner and Rs. 69,000/- to Mallikarjunappa and Viswanadhappa, sons of Gowramma. Bhagirathamma predeceased her father. By a will dated 10-6-1957 Siddappa bequeathed the properties mentioned in the A Schedule annexed to the will to Gowramma with limited interest and thereafter to her sons, properties mentioned in the B Schedule to the petitioner with limited interest and thereafter to her daughter and her daughter's sons and the properties mentioned in the C Schedule to Mudiramma with absolute rights. After the death of Siddappa the Assistant Controller of Estate Duty passed an order dated 8-10-64 treating the petitioner as the accountable person and determining the net value of the estate at Rs. 2,08,354/-. The Assistant Controller treated the sum of Rs. 1,38,000/- as an asset of the estate on the ground that the gifts of cash to the grandsons were not bona fide gifts because no gift tax was paid thereon.

On 8-3-65 the Assistant Controller issued notices to the petitioner Gowramma and Mudiramma calling upon them to pay the proportionate estate duty which he determined at Rs. 5430-96 in the case of Gowramma, Rs. 5405-52 in the case of the petitioner and Rs. 167 in the case of Mudiramma. Meanwhile the accountable person, namely the petitioner, preferred an appeal to the appellate Controller of Estate Duty objecting to the inclusion of the sum of Rs. 1,38,000/- in the estate of the deceased. The appellate Controller allowed the appeal on 24-8-65 and held that the amount could not be treated as an asset of the estate.

The Department preferred an appeal to the Income-tax Appellate Tribunal. The Tribunal rejected the appeal by its order dated 16-6-67. The Tribunal upheld the gifts as true and valid. The Tribunal also relied on the circumstance that the will D/- 10-6-57 made no reference to the cash of Rs. 1,38,000/- and inferred therefrom that the amount of cash had ceased to be part estate of Siddappa. After the disposal of the appeal by the appellate Controller and during the pendency of the Department's appeal before the Appellate Tribunal the Gift Tax Officer, Hindupur issued notices to the petitioner under Section 16(1) of the Gift Tax Act intimating her that a gift which was assessable to tax for the assessment year 1958-59 had escaped assessment and proposing to assess the said gift. The petitioner thereupon filed the present application for the issue of a Writ of Mandamus to prohibit the Gift Tax Officer from taking proceedings in pursuance of these notices.

2. The petitioner alleged in the affidavit filed in support of the Writ Petition that there were three legal representatives of the deceased Siddappa, herself, Gowramma and Mudiramma and that the Gift Tax Officer issued a notice under Section 16(1) of the Gift Tax Act only to her and not to the other two legal representatives. She therefore stated that the notice issued to her was bad in law. The Gift Tax Officer filed a counter-affidavit referring to the fact that in the estate duty proceedings the petitioner was treated as the accountable person and stating that he had no knowledge of any other legal representatives of the deceased except the petitioner. According to him, there was no satisfactory reason to believe that there were other legal representatives of the deceased apart from the petitioner. He put the petitioner to strict proof of the allegation that there were other legal representatives.

To say the least, the counter-affidavit of the Gift Tax Officer is very unsatisfactory. It was his duty to make an enquiry regarding the existence of legal representatives other than the petitioner if not before issuing the notice to the petitioner, at least after the petitioner filed the present Writ Petition making an express allegation that there were other legal representatives. To say that he had no satisfactory reason to believe that there were other legal representatives, is only to pretend to be blind to glaring facts. In his counter-affidavit the Gift Tax Officer referred to the proceedings of the Assistant Controller of Estate Duty, the appellate Controller of Estate Duty and the appellate Tribunal. The order of the Appellate Tribunal referred to the will executed by late Siddappa wherein he referred to his daughters, grandchildren and his mistress, apart from the petitioner. The Assistant Controller of Estate Duty had made an order apportioning the duty payable between the petitioner, (and Mudiramma?).

3. In the face of these facts we do not see how the Gift Tax Officer could venture the statement that he had no knowledge that there were other legal representatives and that there was no satisfactory reason to believe that there were other legal representatives. It can only mean that the Gift Tax Officer was indifferent and did not care to enquire into the question as to who were the legal representatives of Siddappa and to acquaint himself with the necessary and relevant facts. Sri Ananta Babu, learned counsel for the Department tried to urge that even if there were other legal representatives, there was nothing to indicate that the Gift Tax Officer was in a position to know who the others were or that there were other legal representatives in existence on the date of the issue of notice. We are not a little surprised at this argument because if notices were issued to the petitioner, Gowramma and Mudiramma by the Assistant Controller of Estate Duty apportioning the duty between them and if the reason for the notice of the Gift Tax Officer was the infructuous attempt of the Assistant Controller to levy estate duty we see no reason why the Gift Tax Officer should have assumed that the petitioner alone was alive and that the others were not.

4. The question for consideration is what is the effect of the failure of the Gift Tax Officer to enquire and find out all the legal representatives of late Siddappa on the notice issued to the petitioner. Under Section 16(1) (a) of the Gift Tax Act where a Gift Tax Officer has reason to believe that by reason of the omission or failure on the part of the assessee to make a return of the gifts made any taxable gift has escaped assessment, he may at any time within eight years serve on the assessee a notice containing all or any of the requirements which may be included in a notice under Section 13.

Under Section 19 of the Act where a person dies, his executor, administrator or other legal representative shall be liable to pay out of the estate of the deceased person, to the extent to which the estate is capable of meeting the charge, the gift tax payable by such person or any sum which would have been payable by him under the Act. The third sub-section of Section 19 also provides that the provisions of Sections 13, 14 and 16 shall apply to an executor, administrator or other legal representative as they apply to any person referred to in those Sections. 'Legal Representative' is defined in Section 2(xvi-b) of the Act as having the same meaning assigned to it as in Section 2 (ii) of the Code of Civil Procedure. Section 2 (ii) of the Civil Procedure Code defines a 'legal representative' as meaning a person who in law represents the estate of a deceased person, and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased and where a party sues or is sued in a representative character the person on whom the estate devolves on the death of the party so suing or sued.

We have already said that Section 19(3) makes Sections 13 and 16 applicable to legal representative. One of the results of the applicability of Sections 13 and 16 to a legal representative is the necessity to give notices to all the legal representatives if action is proposed to be taken under Section 16 of the Act on the ground that the gifts made by a deceased person have escaped assessment. Considering the provisions of Section 24-B of the Income-tax Act of 1922 which are similar to the provision of Section 19 of the Gift Tax Act a Division Bench of this Court consisting of Manohar Pershad, C. J. and Sharfuddin Ahmed, J. affirming a judgment of Gopalakrishnan Nair, J. held in Income-Tax Officer v. Muram Reddy Sulochannamma, (1967) 64 ITR 106 (AP) that a notice served on some out of several legal representatives was bad in law. The learned Chief Justice observed:—

"The question whether notice to one legal representative is sufficient or not or whether all the legal representatives have to be served with notices had come up before a Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of E. Alfred v. First Addl. Income-tax Officer, Salem and it has been held that in cases where an assessment under the Indian Income Tax Act is sought to be reopened and where the assessee is dead before the issue of a notice under Section 34 of the Act, the assessment could be completed only according to the provisions of Section 24-B (2) of the Act. The liability imposed under Section 24-B (2) of the Act attaches itself to all the legal representatives of a deceased on whom notices are served and as such all legal representatives of the deceased assessee are liable to be served with such notices."

A reference was made to the observations of Sir Shadi Lal C. J. in Muhammad Hassan v. Inayat Hussain, AIR 1927 Lah 94:

"These words mean the representation before the court of the plenary interest of the deceased party. Sometimes that interest may be represented by a single individual but it may also be represented by a number of persons as the case may be. But there should be a complete representation of the interests of the deceased person, whether through a single individual or through a number of persons, so that there cannot be a partial representation of that interest. In other words, the expression, 'legal representative', means and includes one person as well as several persons according as they represent the whole interest of the deceased person."

The learned Chief Justice also referred to the observations of the Privy Council in Khierajmal v. Daim, (1905) 32 Ind. App. 23 (PC):

"Ordinarily therefore, it is necessary to implead all the legal representatives of the deceased person on the record and a few of them do not represent the whole interest of the deceased. and, if all are not made parties to the suit or appeal, it results in the abatement of these proceedings. On similar principles, before an arbitrator can proceed further with the reference and give a binding award he should give notice to all the legal representatives of the deceased party and attempt to make them parties to the reference by notice though he may not be bound to follow the strict procedure of law required for substitution of parties under Order 22 of the Code of Civil Procedure."

Holding that the estate of the deceased in the case before them could not be said to be represented by the person on whom the notices were served, the Learned

Judges further held that the failure of the Income-tax Officer to issue notices to some of the legal representatives rendered the notices to other legal representatives also invalid. We are bound by the decision of the Division Bench. Sri Ananta Babu, at one stage, faintly suggested that the decision required reconsideration. He did not however pursue the argument and no good reason was shown to us why we should take a different view.

5. In First Additional Income-tax Officer v. Buseela Sadanandan, (1965) 57 ITR 168 (SC) their Lordships of the Supreme Court accepted the statement of the law made by Mahajan, J. in Tirthalal v. Shusan Kemoyardasi, AIR 1949 FC 195 that if there were two or more legal representatives of a deceased person, all must be impleaded to make the representation complete. Their Lordships however added that if a party after diligent and bona fide enquiry ascertained who the legal representatives of a deceased defendant were and brought them on record within the time limited by law, there would be no abatement and the impleaded legal representatives would sufficiently represent the estate of the deceased.

Basing his submission on this statement Sri Ananta Babu submitted that it was enough if the proceeding was initiated within the prescribed time against one of several legal representatives and that notices could be issued to other legal representatives later. Their Lordships of the Supreme Court took care to say in the above mentioned case that in order that few of several legal representatives may sufficiently represent the estate there must be a diligent and bona fide enquiry to ascertain the legal representatives. We have already pointed out that there was no bona fide attempt by the Gift Tax Officer to ascertain the legal representatives of Siddappa.

The petitioner was not a universal legatee under the will. She was given, but a life estate, in some items of property. The will and the proceedings and the Assistant Controller of Estate Duty apportioning the estate duty showed that there was also a daughter living. The petitioner was therefore not the sole residuary heir either. Viewed from any angle the petitioner was not the sole legal representative and that should have been patent even to the Gift Tax Officer. We have therefore no option but to allow the Writ Petition. The petitioner is entitled to her costs. Advocate's fee Rs. 100/-.

Petition allowed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 438
(V 57 C 72)

OBUL REDDI AND MADHAVA REDDY, JJ.

Raja Bomadevara Veeraraja Venkata Narasimha Rao, Petitioner v. State of Andhra Pradesh represented by Collector, Krishna Chilikalapudi and another, Respondents.

Leave to Appeal to Supreme Court Petn. No. 53 of 1970, D/-10-4-1970 against order of High Court in W. A. No. 29 of 1968, D/-14-10-1969.

Constitution of India, Art. 133(1) — Final Order — Meaning of — Question is not whether order has far-reaching consequence adversely affecting rights of parties but whether, by itself, it has determined rights of parties — Order in writ appeal reversing order in writ petition that delay in filing an application was not condonable is not a final order. AIR 1950 FC 77 & AIR 1953 Mad 727, Rel. on; AIR 1966 SC 1445, Distinguished. (Paras 2, 5 & 6)

Cases Referred:	Chronological	Paras
(1968) AIR 1968 SC 733 (V 55) =
1968-2 SCJ 548, M. M. Thakkar v. State of Gujarat		6
(1966) AIR 1966 SC 1445 (V 53) =
1966-3 SCR 198, Ramesh v. Gendalal		4
(1953) AIR 1953 Mad 727 (V 40) =
ILR (1954) Mad 164, H. Chandanmull and Co. v. Mohanlal M. Mehata		6
(1950) AIR 1950 FC 77 (V 37) =
1949 FCR 242, Mohd. Amin Bros. v. Dominion of India		3
(1949) AIR 1949 FC 1 (V 36) =
1947 FCR 180 = 49 Cri LJ 625, S. Kuppuswami Rao v. King		3
(1933) AIR 1933 FC 58 (V 20) =
60 Ind. App. 76, Abdul Rahman v. D. K. Cassim and Sons		3

A. Venkataramana, for Petitioner; Govt. Pleader, for Respondents.

OBUL REDDI, J.:— The question involved in this application for grant of leave to appeal to the Supreme Court is whether an order passed on an application made under Section 15(2) (a) of the Estates Abolition Act read with Section 5 of the Limitation Act excusing the delay in filing an appeal before the Tribunal is a 'final order'. The facts necessary for the disposal of this question may be briefly set out:— The State of Andhra Pradesh filed an application before the Tribunal under Section 15(2) (a) of the Estates Abolition Act read with Section 5 of the Limitation Act to condone the delay in filing the appeal. The Tribunal, having regard to the facts presented before it found that sufficient cause was shown for condoning the delay, and therefore it was a fit case where the discretion should be exercised in favour of the State which filed the application. That order of the Tribunal was challenged in Writ Petition No. 16 of 1965. Our learned brother Chinnappa Reddy, J. before whom it came up for hearing, quashed the order of the Tribunal holding that the Tribunal had not exercised the discretion but had surrendered it, and that it was wholly unjustified in condoning the delay. That order was assailed before us in Writ Appeal No. 29 of 1968 and disagreeing with our learned brother, we came to the conclusion that it has not been shown that the Tribunal had acted either arbitrarily or capriciously in exercising its discretion or that it committed any error apparent on the face of the record in condoning the delay and that it had condoned the delay for sufficient reasons. In that view of the matter, we set aside the order of the learned Single Judge and allowed the appeal. It is this order that the petitioner proposes to challenge in the Supreme Court by obtaining a certificate under Art. 133 of the Constitution.

2. Mr. A. Venkataramana, the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner, contended that in so far as the order on the application for condonation of delay is concerned, there is a finality inasmuch as the order of this Court is not appealable and, therefore, the petitioner, is entitled to ask for a certificate under Art. 133(1) of the Constitution as the value of the subject-matter pertaining to the appeal before the Tribunal exceeds Rs. 20,000/-. There is no controversy so far as the value of the subject-matter is concerned as the extent of land involved is about 750 acres in Krishna District. The only question is whether the order in the Writ Appeal is a 'final order' in the sense that it finally decides the rights of the parties. The judgment of ours upholding the order of the Tribunal in our opinion, is not a 'final order' as there is no final adjudication of the rights of the parties.

3. The expression 'final order' was construed by B. K. Mukherjee, J. (as he then was) in Mohd. Amin Bros v. Dominion of India, AIR 1950 FC 77 and the learned Judge observed at p. 78:

"The expression 'final order' has been used in contradistinction to what is known as 'interlocutory order' and the essential test to distinguish the one from the other has been discussed and formulated in several cases decided by the Judicial Committee. All the relevant authorities bearing on the question have been reviewed by this Court in their recent pronouncement in S. Kuppuswami Rao v. King, 1947 FCR 180 = AIR 1949 FC 1 = 49 Cri LJ 625 and the law on point, so far as this Court is concerned seems to be well-settled x x x x x To quote the language of Sir George Lowndes in Abdul Rahman v. D. K. Cassim and Sons, 60 Ind.

App 76 = AIR 1933 PC 58, "the finality must be a finality in relation to the suit. If after the order, the suit is, still alive suit in which the rights of the parties have still to be determined, no appeal lies against it".

The fact that the order decides an important and even a vital issue is by itself not material. If the decision on an issue puts an end to the suit the order will undoubtedly be a final one, but if the suit is still left alive and has got to be tried in the ordinary way no finality could attach to the order."

4. Mr. Venkataramana relied upon two decisions of the Supreme Court in support of his contention that the present order finally decides the question involved in the sense that the Government would have had no right to prefer an appeal in which event the order of the Assistant Settlement Officer would have remained final. In Ramesh v. Gendalal, AIR 1966 SC 1445 at p. 1449 Hidayatullah, J. (as he then was) had occasion to deal with the question whether an order made by the High Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Art. 226 is a final order or not. His Lordship's observations which have been strongly relied upon may be extracted:

"We are concerned here with the exercise of extraordinary original civil jurisdiction under Art. 226. Under that jurisdiction, the High Court does not hear an appeal or revision. The High Court is moved to intervene and to bring before itself, the record of a case decided by or pending before a Court or tribunal or any authority within the High Court's jurisdiction. A petition to the High Court invoking this jurisdiction is a proceeding quite independent of the original controversy. The controversy in the High Court, in proceedings arising under Article 226 ordinarily is whether a decision of or a proceeding before, a Court, a tribunal or authority, should be allowed to stand or should be quashed, for want of jurisdiction or on account of errors of law apparent on the face of the record. A decision in the exercise of this jurisdiction, whether interfering with the proceeding impugned or declining to do so is final decision in so far as the High Court is concerned because it terminates finally the special proceeding before it. But it is not to be taken that any order will be a final order. There are orders and orders. The question will always arise what has the High Court decided and what is the effect of the order. If, for example, the High Court declines to interfere because all the remedies open under the law are not exhausted, the order of the High Court may not possess that finality which the article contemplates. But the order would be final if the jurisdiction of a tribunal is questioned and the High Court either upholds it or does not. In either case the controversy in the High Court is finally decided. To judge whether the order is final in that sense it is not always necessary to correlate the decision in every case with the facts in controversy especially where the question is one of jurisdiction of the Court or tribunal. The answer to the question whether the order is final or not will depend on whether the controversy is finally over but whether the controversy raised before the High Court is finally over or not. If it is, the order will be appealable provided the other conditions are satisfied, otherwise not."

5. This is not a case, as has been pointed out by their Lordships, where the jurisdiction of the Tribunal has been questioned but a case where the discretion exercised by the Tribunal was assailed on the ground that judicial discretion was not properly exercised. We would certainly have had no hesitation in holding that our order is a 'final order' if the jurisdiction of the tribunal was questioned and a decision was given on that.

6. The other decision relied upon by the learned counsel is M. M. Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, (1968) 2 SCJ 548 = (AIR 1968 SC 733) which, in our view, is not of much assistance to him. Their Lordships dealing with the question as to whether a judgment or an order is final or not, observed thus:

"The question as to whether a judgment or an order is final or not has been the subject-matter of a number of decisions; yet no single general test for finality has so far been laid down. The reason probably is that a judgment or order may be final for one purpose and interlocutory for another or final as to part and interlocutory as to part. The meaning of the two words 'final' and 'interlocutory' has therefore to be considered separately in relation to the particular purpose for which it is required. However generally speaking a judgment or order which determines the principal matter in question is termed final. It may be final although it directs enquiries or is made on an interlocutory application or reserves liberty to apply."

In this connection, the learned Counsel for the petitioner sought to place reliance on the observation of Rajamannar, C. J. in H. Chandanmull & Co. v. Mohanlal M. Mehata, AIR 1953 Mad 727, that the question is not free from doubt. But it should not be forgotten that, in that case too, the learned Chief Justice was of the view that an order refusing to excuse the delay in filing an application cannot be treated except as a procedural order. Though it may have far-reaching consequences and adversely affect the rights of the parties, by itself it cannot be held to have decided the rights of the parties. Therefore, the question is not whether our order has far-reaching consequence adversely affecting the rights of the parties, but whether by itself, it can be held to have determined the rights of the parties. Since there has been no determination of the rights of the parties and their rights cannot be determined on an application of this nature, which is purely procedural to condone delay, there is no final order. We are therefore, unable to certify that this is a fit case to grant leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. The petition is accordingly dismissed.

Petition for leave dismissed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 440
(V 57 C 73)

SHARFUDDIN AHMED AND
PARTHASARATHI, JJ.

Kasturi Lakshmiyahamma, Appellant v. Sabnis Venkoba Rao and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 377 of 1964, D/- 14-3-1969.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 4 read with O. 7, R. 6 — Particulars to be given where necessary — Fraud — Plea of, as a ground for exemption from limitation as required by O. 7, R. 6 — Plaintiff must set forth particulars of fraud alleged — Mere general words such as fraud or collusion are quite ineffective to give legal basis for plea in absence of particular statements of fact. (1880) 5 App Cas 685 (1897), Rel. on. (Paras 8, 9)

(B) Limitation Act (1908), S. 18 — Plea of fraud as a ground of exemption from limitation — It is necessary for plaintiff to give particulars of fraud alleged — General allegations not enough — Particulars should be such as to make out that plaintiff was kept in dark about her right to sue — Held on allegations in plaint that there was nothing to sustain plea that there were fraudulent representations so as to prevent plaintiff having knowledge of her right to sue. (Paras 8, 9, 13)

(C) Limitation Act (1908), S. 18 — Plea of fraud as a ground from exemption from limitation — Suit to set aside transfer by guardian — Relief of partition claimed only against alienees — Fraud relevant to sustain claim against transferees can only be a fraudulent design of concealment on their part or alternatively that they were accessory to fraud committed by guardian or that they were not transferees in good faith and for valuable consideration — Plaint not disclosing any of these allegations — Held that so far as alienees were concerned plaintiff was not entitled to invoke benefit of S. 18. (Para 14)

(D) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 44 — Article applies not only to transfers of Hindu minor's property by legal guardian but also to transfers by de facto guardian — Observation in AIR 1949 FC 218 held obiter and dissented from. AIR 1940 Mad 33 (FB) & (1912) ILR 34 All 213 (PC). Distinguished. (Para 18)

(E) Hindu Law—Minority and guardianship — De facto guardian has in certain circumstances competence to transfer ward's estate — Alienation is only voidable in same manner as alienation made by de jure guardian — AIR 1926 Mad 457 & AIR 1915 Mad 296, Rel. on. (Paras 19, 21)

(F) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 44 — Transfer of minor's property by de facto guardian with concurrence of minor's lawful guardians amounts virtually to a transfer by lawful guardians themselves — Suit to set aside transfer is governed by Art. 44. 1969-1 Mad LJ 177 & AIR 1915 Mad 296, Rel. on. (Paras 23, 24 & 26)

(G) Limitation Act (1908), S. 18 read with S. 8 and Art. 44 — Starting point — Sale by de facto guardian of minor's property in 1938 — Plaintiff attaining majority in 1942 — Suit by plaintiff in 1954 to set aside sale on ground that it was not for necessity or for benefit on allegation that she was kept concealed of her right to sue by fraud of defendant — Plaintiff getting knowledge of right to sue in 1947 when she obtained certified copies of sale deed — Held that in the absence of any specific plea that there was fraudulent representation in 1942 or thereafter, no question of extension of time under S. 18 can really arise and suit filed more than three years after attaining majority was barred by time under Art. 44 read with S. 8 — At any rate suit should have been filed within three years after 1947 when plaintiff obtained knowledge of her right to sue assuming that plaintiff was kept from her knowledge of right to sue till 1947 due to fraud of defendant. (Paras 28, 29)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1969) 1969-1 Mad LJ 177 = 81
Mad LW 406, Mayilasami Chettiar v. Kalimaal 26
(1950) AIR 1950 Mad 390 (V 37) =
1950-1 Mad LJ 76, Ethilavulu Ammal v. Pethakkal 17, 20
(1949) AIR 1949 FC 218 (V 36) =
1950-1 Mad LJ 586, Sriramulu v. Pundarikakshayya 18
(1940) AIR 1940 Mad 33 (V 27) =
ILR (1940) Mad 358 (FB), Chennappa v. Onkarappa 18
(1928) AIR 1928 Mad 226 (2) (V 15) =
1927 Mad WN 356, Ramaswamy Pillai v. Kasinatha Iyer 20
(1926) AIR 1926 Mad 457 (V 13) =
ILR 49 Mad 768, Seetharamama v. Appiah 19
(1915) AIR 1915 Mad 296 (V 2) =
ILR 38 Mad 867, Muthukumara Chetty v. Anthony Udayan 19, 23

- (1915) AIR 1915 Mad 659 (2) (V 2) =
 ILR 38 Mad 1125, Thayammal v.
 Kuppanna Koundan 20
 (1912) ILR 34 All 213 = 39 Ind
 App 49 (PC), Matadin v. Ahmad
 Ali 20
 (1880) 5 AC 685, John Wallingford
 v. Mutual Society 9
 I. V. Narasimha Rao, for Appellant; P.
 Satyanarayana (for Nos. 4, 7, 9, 13) and
 P. V. Seshayya, (for Nos. 1 to 3) for Respondents.

PARTHASARATHI, J.:— The main question for decision in this appeal relates to a plea of limitation, which along with other defences, was successfully urged in the trial Court to non-suit the plaintiff. The plaintiff, and the 12th defendant who took no part in the proceedings, are sisters and their father is the 1st defendant in this action. Their mother died in 1932. At a time when both the daughters were still minors, the 1st defendant conveyed on 11-7-1938 under six separate deeds, the property belonging to them to the defendants 4 to 9. He purported to act on their behalf as guardian though by that time both of them were married. The plaintiff, who is younger in age, was however still living with her father, the consummation of the marriage apparently not having taken place, by the date of the sales. They are impugned on the ground that they were not justified by necessity. Nor were they effected for the benefit of the minors or for proper price. The father is charged with having acted in bad faith and the sale proceeds had not been accounted for.

2. The sales that are impeached were effected in 1938 and this action in forma pauperis was commenced on April 20, 1954. The age of the plaintiff was given as 27 years as on the date of the plaint. That would imply that she attained the age of majority in 1945. The plaintiff avers that the several acts relating to management by the 1st defendant and the nature of her title were concealed from her knowledge and that the plaintiff was told when she questioned her father that there was no property of her mother. The plea advanced in the pleading is that by reason of the fraud and deception practised by her father, she was kept in the dark as to her right to sue and she came to know about her right only about the middle of the year 1947. The suit is thus said to be saved from the bar of limitation. No relief for setting aside of the sales is prayed for and the plaintiff asked for partition and possession of her half share of the property. Her sister did not join in the suit. Nor did she support the case of the plaintiff by appearance at the trial or participation in the proceedings.

The 1st defendant denied the charges of fraud and deception. He asserted that the sales were effected with the approval and knowledge of the plaintiff's husband and father-in-law and the price realised was adequate. The sales were effected because it was beneficial to sell the property. The moiety of sale proceeds of the plaintiff was paid over to the plaintiff's father-in-law and husband. The alienees filed a separate pleading and resisted the suit.

3. The Subordinate Judge, Ongole, who tried the suit held that the suit is barred by limitation. The learned Judge also held that the sales in dispute were effected by the 1st defendant as guardian of the plaintiff and the 12th defendant and that the transactions are valid and binding on the plaintiff. The learned Judge also found that there was a deliberate over-valuation of the suit property by the plaintiff and that at the time of the institution of the suit, the market value of the property was about Rs. 500/- per acre.

4. The plaintiff has preferred this appeal and the main point for determination is, whether the suit was brought within the time allowed by law.

5. It is necessary to set out certain relevant facts before considering the argument of the learned counsel for the appellant. The elder sister of the plaintiff, who is impleaded as the 12th defendant, refused to join the plaintiff in the institution of the suit. Nor did the 12th defendant, raise any dispute at any time questioning the validity of the alienations effected by her father. The 12th defendant did not participate at the trial and chose to remain ex parte. The dispute relates to the sale of about 13 acres of dry land comprised in S. No. 6 and situate at Mamidipalem village in Ongole Taluk. The lands were admittedly held by the plaintiff's mother, who, it appears acquired title to them under a will made by her grandmother, Kolluri Chenchamma on the 24th of July, 1924. The plaintiff's mother granted a lease under Ex. B-4 on the 17th of June, 1927 under which the rent reserved for the entire extent of land was Rs. 70/- per year. The tenant appears to have complained in a post-card Ex. B-5 addressed by him to the 1st defendant on 15th May, 1931 that the rent was exorbitant.

6. The 12th defendant is stated to have been born in 1921; and it would, therefore, appear that shortly after the sales, she attained majority. In the pleading of the 1st defendant, he gives the date of birth of the plaintiff as 11-11-1924. The 1st defendant was a clerk serving under the District Board and was not a resident of the village where the lands were situate. The 1st defendant also pointed out in his pleading that the testatrix, who made the will in 1924, had only a woman's estate and there was thus a cloud on the title, because of the incompetence of the testatrix. If that were the correct position, the will would be inoperative and by the date of the death of the plaintiff's mother in 1932, she did not prescribe for title by adverse possession. This flaw in the title was one of the considerations that weighed with the 1st defendant in effecting the sales. The income was not regularly realised and it was never more than Rs. 70/- per year. They were dry lands of poor quality and only 3 acres out of the total extent was stated to be of comparatively better quality. The rest of the extent was of saline soil.

7. The plaintiff's father-in-law was not a stranger to the 1st defendant. The two families were related to each other even prior to the plaintiff's marriage, and it was not a distant relationship either. The plaintiff's father-in-law was no other than the 1st defendant's sister's husband.

8. In paragraph 4 of the plaint, it is alleged, inter alia, that the documents of title relating to the property were never made available to the plaintiff and they were in fact suppressed by the 1st defendant who is charged with having taken undue advantage of the minority of the plaintiff by abusing the fiduciary capacity in which he was placed. It is also said that the moneys realised by the sales were never accounted for. The plaintiff avers that till 1947, she never knew and could never know on account of the deception and fraud practised by the 1st defendant that her mother died possessed of the properties. The sales were effected without any necessity therefor. The plaintiff was not apprised of the sales and was kept in the dark about them. They were effected for very low amounts. It is necessary to set out a few sentences from the paragraph:

"The petitioner was also being told by the 1st respondent that he had no property and that the petitioner's mother had no property and it was very difficult for him to get on with his petty salary. The petitioner, believed the said representations. The non-disclosure of the petitioner's mother's property, the non-accounting for the realisations therefrom, the non-disclosure of several acts of management in respect of the petitioner's property, and the non-disclosure of the several alienations made by the 1st respondent and the deliberate false representations that the plaintiff's mother had no property made by the 1st respondent are tantamount to fraud in the eye of law." When fraud is alleged against the defendant, it is an acknowledged rule of pleading that the plaintiff must set forth the particulars of the fraud which he alleges. In the present case, fraud is alleged as a ground upon which the plaintiff justifies the institution of the suit long after the expiry of the period normally allowed for the institution of the suit. Though no specific reference to the provisions of Section 18 of the Limitation Act is made in the plaint, it is manifest that the pleading proceeds upon the hypothesis that the right to institute the suit has been kept from the knowledge of the plaintiff by means of fraud practised on her. The requirements of Rule 6 of Order 7, Civil Procedure Code, are clear. It is necessary that the plaintiff should show the ground upon which the exemption from the normal period of limitation is claimed. The question is whether the plaint in this case fulfils the requirements of law.

9. As observed by Lord Selborne in Wallingford v. Mutual Society, (1880) 5 AC 685 at p. 697:

"With regard to fraud, if there be any principle which is perfectly well settled it is that general allegations however strong may be the words in which they are stated, are insufficient even to amount to an averment of fraud of which any Court ought to take notice."

It is not the mere use of general words such as 'fraud' or 'collusion' that can serve as the foundation for the plea. Such expressions are quite ineffective to give the legal basis in the absence of particular statements of fact which alone can furnish the requisite basis for the action. In the present case, it is necessary to scrutinise the averments in the plaint minutely in order to ascertain whether the particulars constituting the fraud are set out with reasonable precision. If the general words, of which we find there is a superfluity, are omitted, what is it that remains in the pleading of the plaintiff?

10. The first averment is to the effect that the documents of title relating to the property were never made available to the petitioner and that they were suppressed by her father. Assuming that this allegation is correct, does it establish fraud? The fact that the documents of title in the hands of the 1st defendant were not handed over to the plaintiff, does not necessarily indicate a fraudulent purpose. It is obvious that when the property was sold, the title deeds, if any, would be made over to the purchasers. That apart, in the case on hand, the 1st defendant purported to convey the property only on the basis that it belonged to the plaintiff and the 1st defendant and not on any other footing. When the impugned sales themselves proceeded on the basis that the property that was conveyed belonged to the minors that there was no need to prove the title of the minors and absence of title deeds was no impediment to the plaintiff or persons interested in her in taking action to challenge the validity of the alienations. It is clear that the omission to deliver the documents of title, even if those documents were with the 1st defendant, would not amount to fraud, because the sale was made explicitly on the footing that it was the property of the minors alone that was sold.

11. The next complaint that we find in the pleading is that the 1st defendant took undue advantage of the minority of the petitioner and abused his fiduciary capacity and failed to account for the moneys realised by him. None of these charges can have any bearing on the question whether the plaintiff is entitled to the extension of time under Section 18 of the Limitation Act. It will be readily appreciated that all these complaints, even if true, do not make out that the plaintiff was kept in the dark about her right of suit.

12. The next grievance that is set out is that the sales were effected without necessity and without accounting for the profits realised by the 1st defendant. This averment again has no bearing on the point in issue. It is next said that the plaintiff was not informed about the sales. We do not conceive it to be the duty of the guardian to notify the ward about the sales either during minority or after the ward attains majority. There is no such obligation cast on the guardian under law, and the omission to apprise the plaintiff of the sales does not ipso facto assume a fraudulent colour. The plaintiff herself was not very positive in her averment as to fraud. In the passage extracted above, after referring to certain features, the plaintiff only described them as being tantamount to fraud in the eye of law. It is obvious that none of the features mentioned by the plaintiff with the exception of the alleged false representations can constitute fraud.

13. It is no doubt alleged that there were deliberate false representations made by the 1st defendant that the mother left no property. But no particulars are given as to when such representations were made. The allegation is very vague and is not in conformity with the requirements of Rule 6 of Order 7. It is well settled that in order to make out extension of time for the institution of suit on the ground of fraud, it should relate to the active concealment of the right of the plaintiff to institute the action. It is necessary to make out that as a result of the fraudulent design, the plaintiff has been prevented from exercising the right to sue in respect of the particular property. A mere allegation that there was a misrepresentation made by the 1st defendant that the mother had no property, is inadequate to make out that there was any concealment, by fraudulent design, from the plaintiff becoming aware of her right to impeach the alienations in question. It may be that the assertion that there was no property of the mother was made in the sense that after the sales there was no further property of the mother in the hands of the 1st defendant. The averment is highly dubious and equivocal. There is nothing to sustain the plea that there were fraudulent representations so as to prevent the plaintiff having knowledge of her right to challenge the alienations in question. It is an accepted principle that charges of fraud must be clear and specific and should contain detailed particulars. A general allegation that there had been a misrepresentation, without specifying the time when it was made, the occasion for the query and the answer, and the precise representation that is said to have been made, cannot be of any avail when the provisions of Section 18 of Limitation Act are sought to be invoked. There is nothing to show that there has been a design or a conspiracy to conceal the particulars relating to the sales. Mere silence or a passive attitude on the part of the 1st defendant or that the 1st defendant withheld the information as to the sale, are insufficient because what is required under Section 18 is that the person having a right to institute the suit has been kept from gaining the knowledge of such right.

14. Another drawback in the plaint is that no fraud or wilful concealment of facts is attributed to the defendants 4 to 9 against whom alone the claim for partition is to be proved. Nowhere in the plaint is there any indication that the defendants 4 to 9 were accessory to the fraud, committed or practised by the 1st defendant. There is consequently no basis for the enlargement of the period of limitation so far as the defendants 4 to 9 are concerned. The right to partition is claimed against them and it is they who are said to be in unlawful possession of the property. The fraud that is relevant to sustain the claim against them can only be a fraudulent design of concealment on their part; or, alternatively, it must be made out that they were accessory to the fraud committed by the 1st defendant or that they are not transferees in good faith and for valuable consideration. The plaint does not disclose any act or omission on their part to show that they are guilty of fraud or accessory thereto. Nor is it the case of the plaintiff that there was no consideration at all for the sale. We are accordingly of opinion that even on the basis of the averments in the plaint, no case for the application of the provisions of Section 18 has been made out. In any case, so far as the defendants 4 to 9 are concerned there is a conspicuous absence on the part of the plaintiff of any averment to entitle her to the benefit of the provisions of Section 18 against them.

15. We are of opinion that the appeal should fail even on this short ground.

But as the other questions also had been argued, we shall deal with them too.

16. It is admitted by the plaintiff that certified copies of the sale deeds were obtained in or about July 1947. It follows that whatever may have been the position prior to July 1947, after that date, the plaintiff did not suffer from any disability occasioned by the fraud of the 1st defendant. It is stated in paragraph 9 of the plaint, that after the plaintiff came to learn of the transactions, notices were caused to be issued early in 1948. The reference, apparently, is to Ex. B-6 dated 6th January, 1948. The plaintiff admitted that she could not pursue promptly her remedies because her father-in-law passed away after 1948 and the family was thrown in debt. The question that arises for consideration is, whether the inaction of the plaintiff from July 1947 till April, 1954 irrespective of any other fact does not render this action time-barred. This would depend upon the provision of the Limitation Act which is applicable to the case. It was contended before us by the learned counsel for the appellant that by the date of the sales, the plaintiff had been married and therefore the legal guardian was the husband. It is pointed out that as a consequence of the marriage, the 1st defendant could no longer effect the alienations as the legal guardian and therefore, the sales are void and do not come within the purview of Art. 44 of the Limitation Act, 1908.

17. It was pressed before us that the case is governed by the ratio of the decision in Ethilayulu Ammal v. Pethakkal, 1950-1 Mad LJ 76 = (AIR 1950 Mad 390). Satyanarayana Rao, J., was in that case dealing with a surrender made on behalf of a minor Hindu widow by the father as her guardian. The learned Judge applied the principle well known to Hindu law, that a surrender by a widow is not a transfer. She simply withdraws herself from the ownership and the succession is accelerated by her voluntary effacement. A surrender does not achieve or bring about a transfer of property. Moreover, it must be a voluntary act of the limited owner herself and not of any other person. The decision to efface her interest in the estate is to be of the widow alone. It was these considerations that impelled the learned Judge to hold that there was no transfer of property at all and the case would not attract the provisions of Article 44 of the Limitation Act. After expressing his decision on this principle the learned Judge nevertheless proceeded to state that the father was, if at all, only a de facto guardian of the widowed daughter and a transfer effected by such a person would not bring the case within the scope of Article 44. When the decision was reached that there was no transfer of property at all, the further question whether a de facto guardian's transfer is one within the meaning of Article 44 at all did not call for any decision. The observations on this aspect made by the learned Judge, cannot be considered to be the ratio decidendi of that case.

18. The learned Judge was not unmindful of the language of Article 44 which provides for the setting aside of alienations by guardians. No distinction is made in Article 44 between de facto or lawful guardians. There is no warrant for reading the provisions of Article 44 so as to restrict its operation to transfers effected only by lawful guardians other than de facto ones. The expression used by the legislature is 'guardian' simpliciter. It admits of no doubt that a de facto guardian has competence, in certain circumstances to convey the ward's estate. Ever since the early decision in Hanuman Pershad's case, Courts have always recognised the validity of alienations made by a de facto guardian. We are unable to accept the reasoning of the learned Judge in support of his observation that a de facto guardian's sale is outside the purview of Article 44. Nor are we persuaded that the reliance placed by him on the decision in Chennappa v. Onkarappa, ILR 1940 Mad 358 = (AIR 1940 Mad 33) (FB) is apposite. Cases relating to the power of acknowledgment of a debt, rest on a different basis and do not furnish an acceptable analogy. The observations of the Federal Courts in Sriramulu v. Pundarikakshayya, 1950-1 Mad LJ 586 = (AIR 1949 FC 218) go to show that the reasoning of Satyanarayana Rao, J. in his obiter dicta, runs counter to the settled proposition as to legal competence of a de facto guardian. At pages 604-605, the Federal Court observed:

"The dealings of such a guardian with regard to the estate of the infant would, in Hindu Law, be not regarded as void altogether but would be voidable only; and the same tests would be applied in determining the validity of such acts as are applied in the case of a de jure guardian. To this extent and this extent only, a de facto guardian is to be treated as having the same position as a de jure guardian in Hindu law."

19. There is a long and unbroken current of authority to sustain the view that the Hindu Law recognises the power of a de facto guardian to deal with the property of a minor in cases of necessity. Courts have repeatedly held that alienations by such guardians are only voidable in the same manner as alienations made by a de jure guardian. See Seetharamanna v. Appiah, ILR 49 Mad 768 = (AIR 1926 Mad 457) and Muthukumara Chetty v. Anthony Udayan, ILR 38 Mad 867 = (AIR 1915 Mad 296).

20. There are, however, some decisions which laid down that Article 44 is inapplicable to alienations made by de facto guardians and they were relied upon by Satyanarayana Rao, J. Mention may be made of the decisions in Thayammal v. Kuppanna Koundan, ILR 38 Mad 1125 = (AIR 1915 Mad 659 (2)) and Ramaswamy v. Kasinatha Iyer, AIR 1928 Mad 226 (2). It is difficult to sustain the ratio of these decisions. The reliance placed by the learned Judges who decided ILR 38 Mad 1125 = (AIR 1915 Mad 659) (supra) on the Privy Council decision in Mata Din v. Ahmed Ali, ILR (1912) 34 All 213 is based upon a faulty appreciation of the effect of the decision of the Privy Council. The Privy Council had to deal with a case under Muhammadan Law, where the acts of a de facto guardian are held to be completely unauthorised or void. The application of that principle to the position of a de facto guardian in Hindu Law is misconceived and is opposed to a long current of authority. The subsequent decisions in AIR 1928 Mad 226 (2) (supra) and 1950-1 Mad LJ 76 = (AIR 1950 Mad 390) (supra) have merely adopted the ruling in ILR 38 Mad 1125 = (AIR 1915 Mad 659) (supra) without reference to the erroneous premises on which it rested.

21. The alienations made by a de facto guardian are on a par with those made by a de jure guardian. If they lack justification, they are in both cases voidable. And, when they are voidable, the application of Article 44 is an inescapable corollary. To hold that the alienations made by a de facto guardian are voidable but at the same time they are outside the purview of Article 44, is to take up an inconsistent position. This incongruity was not justified in the above cases by reference to any provision of law or principle.

22. It is, however, unnecessary for us to labour the point further, in view of the distinguishing feature of the case on hand. In respect of the property now in dispute, there was no doubt that the 1st defendant was allowed by the lawful guardians of the two married daughters to make the alienations to the defendants 4 to 9. The position virtually is that the lawful guardians themselves effected the sales. We see no reason to depart from the conclusion of the trial Court that the 1st defendant acted with the consent of the lawful guardians.

23. In ILR 38 Mad 867 = (AIR 1915 Mad 296) (supra) while the father of a minor son and his lawful guardian was alive, the mother effected a sale of the property of the minor son. The property was settled jointly on the minor and his mother and the minor was described in the deed of settlement as being under her protection. The learned Judges observed at page 875:

"The son was to live with his mother. It may be that the Zamindar did not part with his guardianship altogether and that the mother's power as guardian was restricted to the property but there can be no doubt that she did become his guardian under Ex. N. with respect to the properties comprised in it."

24. The position in this case is similar, that, in so far as the alienations are concerned, the de facto guardian was authorised by the lawful guardians to act in the manner that he did. We see no reason to differ from the finding of the lower court that the 1st defendant had acted with the concurrence of the lawful guardians before he effected the sales.

25. This conclusion is rendered irresistible by some significant but unexplained features in this case. Firstly, there is the indisputable fact that the 12th defendant never felt aggrieved by the sales. She was aged 17 at the time and was mature enough to judge for herself the propriety of her father's act. It is hardly likely that she and her husband would have refrained from taking action if the father's dealings were vitiated by any sinister or improper conduct or if she was not in receipt of her share of the realised price. Secondly, there is the clinching circumstance that in the lawyer's notice Ex. B-6 dated 6-1-1948, issued under the instructions of the plaintiff's father-in-law, nothing was said in disparagement of the sales. No dispute was raised about them and the notice was confined to a claim to another item of property. It is necessary to bear in mind that the plaintiff's father-in-law was a clerk in the District Court, Rajahmundry. He did not lack the means of judging the propriety of the transaction and was intimately associated with the 1st defendant by reason of antecedent relationship. He could not have been handicapped by lack of competent legal advice, which he could have for the mere asking. Nor did he labour under any ignorance of the essential facts of the transaction. Even after the copies of the sale deeds were obtained and a notice was issued by a lawyer, he did not choose to assail the transactions of sale. There is the further circumstance that the plaintiff's husband does not choose to give evidence denying his approval of the sales, though the 1st defendant urged the plea in his pleading. The cumulative effect of all these facts or omissions is decisive and we have no reason to reject the case of the 1st defendant that the sales were made by him in his name because he was authorised to effect them by the sons-in-law and daughters.

26. The sales are, in substance, though not in form, alienations made by the de jure guardians. In a recent decision of the Madras High Court in Mayilasami Chettiar v. Kalimaal, 1969-1 Mad LJ 177 the consent of the lawful guardian was expressed in the form of an attestation of the deed executed by a de facto guardian. It was deemed sufficient to assimilate the transaction to an alienation made by the former. After reviewing some of the earlier authorities, the learned Judge observed:

"Thus, it is amply clear that even where there is a legal guardian in existence, any alienation of minor's property by a de facto guardian would be valid if it is for necessity."

27. In the case on hand, the alienation was not for necessity but it was made because it was adjudged to be beneficial to the interests of the minor. The annual income which was not steady or constant was only Rs 70/-. The title itself was doubtful. The lands were of poor quality. The plaintiff's husband was in the East Godavari District, whereas the 12th defendant's husband was employed in the Hyderabad State. The 1st defendant himself was in service in a different place. The lands, if not wholly unproductive, were manifestly of inferior quality. The sales were consequently binding on the minors in the circumstances of the case. We are of opinion that the provision of the Limitation Act that is applicable is Article 44.

28. It is a matter of admission that there was no question of the plaintiff having been kept in ignorance of her right after July, 1947. The suit should have been instituted before the end of July, 1950 but it was actually laid on April 20, 1954. If Article 44 is applicable and in our opinion that is the true position, the suit cannot be said to be saved from the bar of limitation even if the plaintiff's story as to fraudulent misrepresentation or omission is accepted as true. This is because the maximum length of time for which extension is possible is only three years from July 1947.

29. In this view of the question, it is not necessary to determine the correctness of the approach made by the lower Court. It only remains to point out that the plaintiff having been a minor on the date of sales, the criterion really should be whether the period of limitation to challenge or set aside the sales did not begin to run from the date of sales, and to consider whether there was any supervening fraud that held the cause of action in abeyance. Normally speaking, there could not have been any question of the plaintiff having been defrauded till she attained the competence to sue. It should be borne in mind, that the plaintiff's case is that the right to sue was kept concealed from her. It is obvious that the relevant point of time is when she had the competence to sue; and the test should be whether she was entitled to extension of time by reason of fraud practised on her at the relevant point of time. According to the 1st defendant, the plaintiff attained majority in 1942. In the absence of a specific plea that there was any fraudulent representation in 1942 or thereafter, no question of the extension of time under Section 18, can really arise. Neither of the contesting parties defined the position correctly and the lower Court also had not clarified it and had not formulated the question precisely. We are of opinion that in any view of the matter, the suit is barred by time.

30. In the result, the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs. The appellant will pay to the State the Court-fee due on the memorandum of appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

‘AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 446
(V 57 C 74)

A. KUPPUSWAMI AND SRIRAMULU, JJ.

Gajula Abdul Jabbar, Appellant v. Rayachoty Co-operative Society, Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 227 of 1968, D/-9-4-1970 against decree of 2nd Addl. Dist. J. Cuddapah, in Appeal Suit No. 8 of 1967.

Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 9, 47 — Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Co-operative Societies Act (6 of 1932), Sections 51 and 151 — Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Co-operative Societies Rules (1932), R. 22(12) — Registered Society purchasing debtor's immovable property in enforcement of award — Debtor's failure to deliver possession — Suit for recovery of possession is maintainable — Section 47, Civil P. C. is no bar — Rule 22 (12) has no relevancy.

Where a registered Co-operative Society, in an enforcement of an award in its favour, purchased the debtor's immovable property and on debtor's failure to deliver possession filed a civil suit for recovery of possession, such a suit is maintainable. It is not barred on the ground that the enforcement of the award was a proceeding in execution of a decree to which Section 47, C.P.C. applied. There is no provision either in the Andhra Pradesh Co-operative Societies Act or the Rules framed thereunder, that Section 47, C.P.C. will apply to any proceeding to enforce award. Nor is there any provision there that the provisions of Civil P. C. will apply to such proceedings, or to say that an award under Section 151 of the Act is executable as if it was a decree of a Civil Court. The civil suit under Section 9, C.P.C. is, therefore, not barred expressly or by necessary implication. Rule 22(12) has no relevance to the question of maintenance of such a suit. AIR 1955 Andhra 10, Applied.

IN/IN/D983/70/HGP/T

(Paras 3, 4)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1955) AIR 1955 Andhra 10 (V 42)

= 1954 Andh LT (Civil) 109,

Sriniwasacharyulu v. Hanu-mantha Rao

5

E. Subramanyam, for Appellant; K. Siva Prasada Rao, for Respondent.

A. KUPPUSWAMI, J.:—The appellant who is the defendant in O. S. No. 161 of 1966 District Munsif's Court, Nandalur, became indebted to the plaintiff which is a Co-operative Society. There was an award for Rs. 1256-06 by the Deputy Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Cud-dapah on 13-7-53. The Society enforced the said award by bringing the appellant's property to sale in E. P. No. 278 of 1953-54 and the property was purchased by the Society itself and a sale certificate was duly granted in favour of the plaintiff on 3-6-1956. The appellant, however, did not deliver possession and therefore the Society filed several Execution Applications for the delivery of the suit property through Court. In the first E. A. No. 346 of 1959 delivery was ordered, but the petition was dismissed on the ground that the decree-holder was away from town. E. A. No. 682 of 1961 was dismissed, as batta was not paid in time. E. A. No. 290 of 1962 was dismissed on the ground that the application was barred by limitation under Article 181 of the Limitation Act. After the dismissal of the last execution petition, the Society filed the suit, O. S. No. 161 of 1966 before the District Munsif's Court, Nandalur, for recovery of possession of the property.

2. The main contention of the defendant was that the suit was not maintainable. This contention was accepted by the learned District Munsif who dismissed the suit with costs. On appeal by the plaintiff, the lower appellate Court took a different view and held that the suit was maintainable. The decree of the trial Court was set aside and the appeal was allowed with costs throughout. The defendant has preferred the appeal to this Court.

3. The principal contention reiterated before us by Mr. Subrahmanyam on behalf of the appellant is that the suit is not maintainable in view of Section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. His contention is that the only remedy of the Society, which is in the position of a decree-holder purchaser, when an obstruction is caused by the judgment-debtor, is to file an execution petition and no suit lies to recover possession of the property. In order to appreciate this contention, it is necessary to refer to the relevant provisions of the Co-operative Societies Act.

As the award is of the year 1953, both the Advocates stated before us that the case is governed by the Andhra Pradesh (Andhra Area) Co-operative Societies Act of 1932 and not by the new Act, viz., the Andhra Pradesh Co-operative Societies Act, 1964. Section 51 of the old Act provides for the decision of any dispute by the Registrar. Section 57-A provides:

"The Registrar or any person subordinate to him empowered by the Registrar in this behalf may subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the State Government and without prejudice to any other mode of recovery provided by or under this Act recover—

"(a) any amount due under a decree or order of a Civil Court, a decision or an award of the Registrar or arbitrator, or an order of the Registrar, obtained by a registered society including a financial bank or liquidator;

(b)	xx	xx
(c)	xx	xx
(d)	xx	xx"

It is well settled that under Section 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure a person has a right to resort to a Civil Court by means of a suit unless such a suit is barred expressly or by necessary implication. The contention of the appellant is that the enforcement of the award is a process in execution of a decree and Section 47, C.P.C. applies and therefore the suit is barred. No section of the Act or any rule was brought to our notice which states that Section 47, C.P.C. is applicable to any proceeding to enforce an award. There is no provision in the Act or in the rules which says that generally the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code are applicable to proceedings taken under this Act, nor is there any provision which says that an award obtained under Section 151 of the Act is executable as if it were a decree of court. In these circumstances, it is not possible to accept the argument that an award is in the nature of a decree, that proceedings to enforce the award are in the nature of execution proceedings and Section 47 is applicable to such proceedings. We have, therefore, no hesitation in rejecting the contention that the suit is barred by reason of Section 47, C.P.C.

4. Reliance was placed on Rule XXII of the Rules. Rule XXII deals generally with the procedure in execution of the decree, decision, award or contribution order. It provides for the attachment and sale of moveable and immovable property and the procedure in connection with such attachment and sale. Sub-rule (12) of Rule XXII provides as follows:—

"Where any lawful purchaser of immovable property is resisted and prevented by any person other than a person (not being the defaulter) claiming in good faith to be in possession of the property on his own account from obtaining possession of the immovable property purchased, any court of competent jurisdiction, on application, and production of the certificate of sale provided for by sub-rule (10) shall cause the proper process to be issued for the purpose of putting such purchaser in possession, in the same manner as if the immovable property purchased had been decreed to the purchaser by a decision of the court."

It was argued that this sub-rule provides for the obtaining of possession from a person other than the defaulter who resists delivery of possession, but there is no provision in the rules for recovering possession from the defaulter himself when he resists such a delivery. In our opinion this has no relevance to the question with which we are concerned viz., whether a suit lies for recovery of possession of the property which the society had purchased while enforcing an award in its favour. On the other hand, the fact that this rule does not provide for any remedy against the obstruction of a defaulter goes to a certain extent against his submission. As no remedy is provided under the rules to remove the obstruction caused by a defaulter it follows that a suit to recover the property which he purchased in execution, will lie in such a case.

5. In Srinivasacharyulu v. Hanumantha Rao, 1954 Andh LT (Civ) 109 = (AIR 1955 Andhra 10) it was held that the provisions of S. 66, C.P.C. are not applicable to proceedings under the Co-operative Societies Act. Though that decision does not deal directly with the question at issue, the decision is based upon the principle that the provisions of the C.P.C. are not generally made applicable to proceedings under the Co-operative Societies Act. In the same way as Section 66, C. P. C. was held not applicable, it follows that Section 47, C.P.C. also would not be applicable to proceedings under the Act, as there is no provision making that section applicable.

6. We agree with the view of the learned Additional District Judge that the suit is maintainable.

7. Another contention was raised that one of the items viz., Item No. 1 had been purchased by a third party in execution of another decree and therefore, he was a necessary party. We do not understand how the appellant can have any grievance at the third party not being made a party to these proceedings. If, according to him, the property has already been purchased by a third person he is not interested in the same. There are no merits in this objection.

8. In the result the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

END

Section 12, which is the other material section, runs thus:

"12. Whoever shall print or publish any book or paper otherwise than in conformity with the rule contained in Section 3 of this Act shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punished by fine not exceeding two thousand rupees or by simple imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or by both".

It is also interesting that although initially the sentence was Rs. 5,000/- and sentence of two years' imprisonment in default, the Legislature has thought it fit to reduce the sentence as noted above. The object of the Act is to prevent publication of anonymous literature and to take note of all the books and papers published in a legitimate way.

5. The short question that comes up before this Court for consideration is whether on the evidence adduced by the prosecution, namely, to the effect that the accused, who is admittedly the author of these writings and was in possession of the printed pamphlet with his name on the title page of the book and was found himself distributing the same in the market place at the town where the accused is said to have his address, within two months of the printing, the date whereof is 15-8-66 can be said to be publishing the pamphlet within the meaning of the word in Section 12 read with Section 3 of the Act. Section 3 requires that whenever a certain thing is printed the name of the printer and the place of printing shall be legibly mentioned. Secondly, if there is a publisher the name of the publisher and its place of publication must also be similarly legibly printed. If a printed book of the nature of these exhibits proved in this case, does not bear the printer's name and place of printing and the publisher's name and the place of publication, the book becomes an offender under Section 3. When the book becomes an offender, the next question to be considered is whether such a book when it is published by another person, that person is liable under Section 12 or not. Section 12 in terms does not refer to merely the press owner or the printer. It uses the words "whoever shall print or publish". Any person who prints or publishes a book in violation of the requirement mentioned in Section 3, is liable under Section 12.

6. Mr. Saikia, the learned counsel for the petitioner, submits that there is no evidence in this case that the accused went to a printing press, got the thing printed or that he had anything to do with the printing as such. According to him, therefore, the accused cannot be convicted under Section 12 in absence of evidence of those particulars. We have examined the question very carefully and we are of the view that a mere distributor or a hawker of a printed literature not containing the name of the printer or the name of the publisher may not be liable under Section 12, but the author of a printed book who is a literate person and who admits that he has written the subject-matter which is dealt with in such printed pamphlet and whose name is mentioned in the title page of the book and further which he having obtained it, passed it on to others, must be held to be publishing the particular printed literature of which he is the author, within the mischief of Section 12 of the Act. In the view we have taken on the evidence against the accused, he cannot be equated with a hawker or a mere distributor. On the evidence produced he must be held to have arranged the printing of these books of which he is undoubtedly the author and having himself circulated it to the public openly must be held to have published the books within the meaning of the expression 'publish' in Section 12 of the Act.

7. Mr. Saikia has also drawn our attention to a decision of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Abdul Hakim v. State, reported in AIR 1960 All 450, where the learned Single Judge observed: "Section 12 of our Act (meaning this Act) does not punish the publication of a book not printed in conformity with the provision of Section 3".

With great respect, we cannot accept this wide proposition in absolute terms laid down in this decision. On the other hand, we are in respectful agreement with the observation of Ramaswami, J. in the case of G. Alavandar, reported in AIR 1957 Mad 427 at p. 429, paragraph (5a):

"But a man who causes a book to be printed and offers it to the public for sale is a publisher within the meaning of Section 3 and Section 12 of the Act."

While dealing with the Publishers and Printers, we find in Article 267 of Halsbury's Laws of England, Second Edition, Vol. 26:

"A publisher is a person who puts forth a work to the public. In the case of literary works the publisher is an intermediary between the public and the author".

We are definitely of opinion that in this case the accused has put forth his own book to the public and this book being printed in clear violation of Section 3, he has published this offending book within the meaning of Section 12. When publishing it, it was his duty as well to see that the requirements of Section 3 had been complied with. A publisher also cannot avoid the responsibility cast under Section 3 of the Act with regard to his published book or paper. A publisher cannot escape liability under Section 12 by merely stating that he is not a person connected with the press or having anything to do with the actual printing. We are, therefore, clearly of opinion that the accused has been rightly convicted under Section 12 of the Act for publishing the books and the above-mentioned Division Bench decision of this Court, on the basis of the finding in that case, is, with all respect, correct.

8. The revision petition is accordingly rejected.

M. C. PATHAK, J.: 9. I agree.

D. M. SEN, J.: 10. I agree.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1970 ASSAM & NAGALAND 130
(V 57 C 32)

FULL BENCH

P. K. GOSWAMI, C. J.,

M. C. PATHAK AND

D. M. SEN, JJ.

U. Shan Manik and others, Accused-Petitioners v. Ka Brie Nongrum and another, Opposite-Parties.

Criminal Revn. No. 90 of 1967, D/-11-5-1970.

1. United Khasi Jaintia Hills Autonomous District (Administration of Justice) Rules, 1953, Rr. 21 and 22 — Under R. 21 the Subordinate District Council Court is not competent to try an offence under S. 147 Penal Code — Jurisdiction of Assistant to Dy. Commissioner to try such offence is saved by R. 22.

Sch. 6, Para 5, Constitution of India gives powers to Judge, District Council Court to try certain offences mentioned therein. Notification No. TAD/GA/234/66/11 D/-26-11-66 by Government of Assam does not relate to the jurisdiction to try an offence under Section 147, Penal Code. AIR 1965 Assam & Nagaland 51, Approved. (Para 4)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1965) AIR 1965 Assam & Nagaland

51 (V 52) = 1965 (2) Cri LJ 72.

U. Bithliang v. State of Assam, 1, 5

B. S. Guha, for Petitioners; Dr. J. C. Medhi, Advocate-General for Assam; N. M. Lahiri, Advocate-General for Meghalaya; D. K. Hazarika, as Public Prosecutor, for Opposite-Parties.

GOSWAMI, C. J.:— This Criminal revision is placed before this Full Bench without any referring order as required under the High Court Rules. All the same, having heard the learned Counsel on both sides, we may frame the question in the following term:

"Whether the decision in the case of U. Bithliang Malangiang v. State of Assam, reported in AIR 1965 Assam and Nagaland 51, which is a Division Bench decision of this Court, has been correctly made".

The second point which is necessary for consideration is whether a certain trial under Section 147, Indian Penal Code, pending in the Court of the Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner Shillong, is competent under the United Khasi-Jaintia Hills Autonomous District (Administration of Justice) Rules, 1953. In other words, whether the Judge, District Council Court, has exclusive jurisdiction for trial of such a case under these Rules. It may be stated here that the learned Counsel for the petitioners felt that the decision above referred to needs reconsideration and that is why, we have entertained this case before the Full Bench.

2. The facts of the case are that on 7th February, 1966, a complaint was lodged by the Opposite Party No. 1 against the accused petitioners and the Police after investigation of the case submitted charge-sheet under Section 147/448/427, Indian Penal Code and the Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner took cognizance of that charge-sheet and proceeded with the trial.

3. It is admitted that both parties belong to the Scheduled Tribes (Khasi tribals) and the place of occurrence is also within the autonomous District of United Khasi-Jaintia Hills. The petitioners, therefore, moved the Additional Deputy Commissioner for transferring the case to the Judge, District Council Court and by order dated 17-5-1967 that Court rejected the application relying on the decision of the Division Bench of this Court above referred to.

4. Mr. Guha, the learned Counsel for the petitioners, relies upon a notification of the Governor dated 26-11-1966 for his submission that the Judge, District Council Court alone had exclusive jurisdiction to try the cases. The notification may be set out:

"Dated Shillong, the 26th November, 1966.

No. TAD/GA/234/66/11:— In exercise of the powers conferred by the sub-paragraph (1) of paragraph 5 of the Sixth Schedule to the Constitution of India, the Governor of Assam is pleased to confer on Shri B. R. Lazo Judge District Council Court, United Khasi-Jaintia Hills, with the powers to try offences punishable with imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years under the Indian Penal Code or under any other law for the time being applicable to the United Khasi-Jaintia Hills Autonomous District".

We fail to understand how this notification assists the learned counsel in this case to exclude the jurisdiction of the Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner for trial of the offences of which he took cognizance. We have in Chapter II of the United Khasi-Jaintia Hills Autonomous District (Administration of Justice) Rules, 1953 hereinafter called 'the Rules' the different classes of Courts, namely, (i) Village Courts (ii) Subordinate District Council Court and Additional Subordinate District Council Court, and (iii) District Council Court. Chapter III describes the powers of the Courts. Rule 21, which is material is in the following terms:

"21. Courts not competent to try suits and cases in respect of certain offences.— (1) A Subordinate District Council Court or an Additional Subordinate District Council Court shall not be competent to try suits and cases in respect of offences—

- (i) under Sections 124-A, 147 and 153 of the Indian Penal Code,
- (ii) under Chapter X of the same Code in so far as they relate to the contempt of a lawful authority other than an authority constituted by the District Council,
- (iii) of giving or fabricating false evidence.....

* * * *

The rest is not material for our purpose in this case. Rule 22 may be set out:

"22. (1) Suits and cases referred to in Rule 21 shall continue to be tried and dealt with by the existing Courts until such time as the Governor deems fit to invest the Subordinate District Council Court and Additional Subordinate District Council Court with such powers by notification in the Gazette.

(2) For the purposes of this rule the existing Courts mean the Courts of the Deputy Commissioner and his Assistant."

[Since under Rule 21 the Subordinate District Council Court is not competent to try an offence under Section 147, Indian Penal Code, the jurisdiction of the Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner to try these offences is saved by Rule 22. That is the short answer to the submissions made by the learned Counsel. But says Mr. Guha that the Judge, District Council Court, has simple powers to try offences of this kind and the notification of the Governor set above clearly gives him jurisdiction to try the offences of this description between the members of the Scheduled tribes. As pointed out earlier, the Judge, District Council Court has been given powers under the relevant paragraph of the Sixth Schedule to try certain offences mentioned therein. That notification does not relate to the jurisdiction to try offences of the description which arises for consideration in this case. That notification cannot be called in aid for the purpose of empowering the Judge, District Council Court, to try an offence originally under Section 147, Indian Penal Code. We are, therefore, satisfied that the learned Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner is competent to proceed with the trial of the case in his Court. The decision which was arrived at by a Division Bench of this Court in AIR 1965 Assam and Nagaland 51 (supra), with all respect, is correct although we find an additional reason for coming to the same conclusion reached in that case.

5. The petition is accordingly rejected.
D. M. SEN, J.:— 6. I agree.
PATHAK, J.:— 7. I agree.

Petition rejected.

AIR 1970 ASSAM & NAGALAND 131
(V 57 C 33)

P. K. GOSWAMI AND
M. C. PATHAK, JJ.

Sujit Kantha Neogi and another, Petitioners v. Union of India and others, Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 461 of 1968, D/- 13-8-1969.

(A) Evidence Act (1872), Section 123 — Evidence as to affairs of State — Documents marked as annexure to petition — Waiver of privilege by respondent.

Where certain documents annexed to a petition were described in the counter-affidavit of the respondent Railway authority as general secret and confidential instructions having no bearing on the case and the petitioner neither took steps to call for their originals nor explained how he came by those documents, it cannot be said that the Railway authority had waived any claim to privilege in respect of those documents under Section 123, and it is entitled to raise the objection under Section 123 at the hearing particularly when the documents are introduced by the petitioner not in accordance with law. (Para 5)

(B) Evidence Act (1872), Section 123 read with Section 162 — Evidence as to affairs of State — Documents claimed to be privileged — Duty of Court — It has to determine question without inspecting documents on basis of collateral evidence.

When a privilege is claimed with regard to certain documents the Court without inspecting the documents will determine the validity of objection under Section 123, particularly with regard to the character of the document whether it relates to the affairs of the State. The Court under Section 162 of the Evidence Act will not inspect the document, although it is brought to Court in order to determine whether it relates to the affairs of the State. It will however have power to determine the point by entertaining collateral evidence or evidence aliunde. AIR 1961 SC 493 & AIR 1934 PC 254, Rel. on. (Paras 6, 7)

(C) Evidence Act (1872), Section 123 read with Section 162 — Documents annexed to petition already in Court — Claim of privilege under Section 123 by respondent after service of Rule nisi — Court may adopt judicial blindness to these documents and proceed in accordance with law — But if petitioner does not take any step to direct respondent to produce originals before Court, no question of taking collateral evidence to determine validity of objection arises — Court is justified in excluding these documents from consideration in arriving at its decision in case on merits. (Paras 7, 8)

LM/EN/F693/69/KSB/P

(D) Evidence Act (1872), Section 123 — 'Affairs of State' — Meaning of — State activities of a welfare State like India are fast expanding after independence — Administrative instructions and guidance notes secretly given to various departments of Government can claim status of being documents relating to affairs of State — AIR 1961 SC 493 & 1942 AC 624, Rel. on. (Para 9)

(E) Constitution of India, Article 311 — Temporary servant — Railway servant having no lien on post — Termination of service in exercise of power under R. 149 Railway Establishment Code — Nothing to show that any slur or stigma was cast on petitioner — Order is valid and not open to any objection. (Para 10)

(F) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 2(o) — Retrenchment — Meaning of — Termination of service in accordance with service rule is not retrenchment for purposes of Section 25-F.

Ordinary meaning of retrenchment fulfils requirements of Section 2(o), that is to say when a portion of staff or labour force is discharged as surplus. AIR 1957 SC 121, Rel. on. (Para 11)

Hence, where the services of a railway employee is terminated in accordance with Rule 149, Railway Establishment Code, the termination is not retrenchment within Section 2(o) and therefore provisions of Section 25-F cannot be invoked. (Para 11)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1968) AIR 1968 SC 1089 (V 55) =

1968 Lab IC 1286, State of Punjab v. Sukh Raj Bahadur 4

(1964) AIR 1964 SC 1658 (V 51) = 67 Pun LR 90, Amar Chand Butail v. Union of India 5

(1961) AIR 1961 SC 493 (V 48) = 1961-2 SCR 371, State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdeo Singh 5, 6, 9, 10

(1960) AIR 1960 SC 610 (V 47) = 1960-2 SCR 866, State of Bombay v. Hospital Mazdoor Sabha 11

(1958) AIR 1958 SC 36 (V 45) = 1958 SCR 828, P. L. Dhingra v. Union of India 4, 10

(1957) AIR 1957 SC 121 (V 44) = 1957 SCR 121, Hari Prasad Shishankar Shukla v. A. D. Divakar 11

(1956) 1956 SC 1 (HL) = 1956 SLT 41, Glasgow Corp'n. v. Central Land Board 5

(1942) 1942 AC 624 = 22 MLR 187 (HL), Duncan v. Cammell Laird and Co. Ltd. 6, 9

(1934) AIR 1934 PC 254 (V 21) = 40 Mad LW 173, Henry Greer Robinson v. State of Australia 6

B. C. Ghose, B. K. Das, P. K. Bhattacharjee, S. K. Chattopadhyay and P. K. Singha, for Petitioner; B. C. Barua, Advocate-General and A. R. Barooah, for Opposite Parties.

GOSWAMI, J.:— This Rule was obtained against an order dated 24th October, 1968, terminating the service of the petitioner, who was at the material time a temporary Assistant Station Master in the service of the Northeast Frontier Railway. The petitioner's case is that he joined service under the Railway as a temporary Signaller at the salary of Rs 110/- per month in the scale of Rs. 110-200/-, sometime in March, 1962. In April, 1962, he was appointed to the post of Assistant Station Master (ASM). The petitioner states that he has rendered good and efficient service since his date of appointment and even after completion of about six years, he is still kept as a temporary employee. He is a member of the N. F. Railway Mazdoor Union which is a registered trade union of the non-gazetted railway servants and he is also an office-bearer of the same. The Union decided to call a token strike for one day on 19th September 1968 in accordance with the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act with intimation to the authorities. The President of India promulgated the Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance, 1968 (hereinafter called 'the Ordinance') on 13th September, 1968 and various orders were passed declaring the strike as illegal. That a strike took place, as notified, on 19th September, 1968 for a period of 24 hours commencing at 6 A.M. of the day. The petitioner was arrested by the police on the same day at about 8-30 A.M. under Sections 4 and 5 of the Ordinance, but was released on bail that very day. It may be useful to quote paras 18 to 21 of the petition:

"18. That the Home Minister, Government of India made repeated directions for inflicting punishments on all those who were alleged to have participated in the aforesaid strike in the aforesaid manner namely by termination of service in case of temporary employees. Similar statements were made by the Home Minister and Prime Minister on the floor of the Parliament.

19. That in pursuance of the policy of the Government, the Ministry of Home Affairs, Government of India in its Office Memorandum issued under Nos. 13/9(S)/68 Est(B) dated 16-9-68 and 13/9(S)/68 Est(B) dated 24-9-68 issued orders directing and detailing the actions to be taken against the employees who participated in the strike. In that instructions, inter alia, it was ordered to terminate the services of the temporary Government servants who had taken active part in the strike by giving one month's pay in lieu of notice.

20. That prior to 19th September, 1968 and thereafter, the Railway Board also issued instructions to all Zonal Railway directing repression and persecution of the railway employees who would participate in the token strike of 19th September, 1968. In pursuance of the Government's policy of repression and persecution the Railway Board under secret letter No. E(L)68STI-56 dated 17-9-68 followed by further instructions conveyed through the Secret Wireless Message No. E(L)68STI-56 dated 20th September, 1968 and Demi-official Secret Letter No. E(L) 68STI-56 dated 23rd September 1968 from Sri K. V. Kasthuri Rangam, Director (Establishment), Railway Board issued directions to the all Zonal Railway including Northeast Frontier Railway for taking action against the employees who would take part in the token strike of 19th September 1968. In that instructions, inter alia, it was ordered to terminate the services of temporary employees who would be arrested in connection with the strike by giving pay and allowances in lieu of notice.

21. That before and after the strike several other communications were also received by the General Manager, Northeast Frontier Railway (Respondent No. 2) and other officers in the Railway Head Quarters at Pandu directing disciplinary actions who according to the Administration and their officers alleged to have taken active part in the aforesaid strike and the General Manager and its staff in the Railway Head Quarters issued consequential directions to his subordinate officer in the Northeast Frontier Railway."

The petitioner states that on 23rd September, 1968, the General Manager, respondent No. 2, issued orders instructing all his subordinate Gazetted Officers to suspend and terminate the services of the temporary employees who are arrested for any offence by application of Rule 149 RI, as per Annexure II to his petition. Further the petitioner states that on 30th September, 1968, the General Manager "again issued further secret orders to all his subordinate Gazetted Officers detailing the guide-lines for taking action against the employees in connection with the strike of 19th September, 1968." The document containing these is marked as Annexure III to his petition. That on 23rd October, 1968, the General Manager "again relayed further confidential orders issued by the Railway Board, to all his subordinate Gazetted Officers detailing the action to be taken in context of the token strike of 19th September, 1968." A copy of the said order is marked as Annexure IV to his petition. The petitioner states that in pursuance of the aforesaid directions issued by the General Manager, the Area Officer, respondent

No. 4, suspended the petitioner with effect from 19th September, 1968 by his order dated 25th September, 1968 (Annexure V). That on 2nd October, 1968, the petitioner was served with a notice dated 26th September, 1968/2nd October, 1968 signed by the District Operating Superintendent, respondent No. 3, terminating forthwith his service and directing that he be paid a sum equivalent to the amount of his pay and allowance for one month in lieu of notice period under Rule 149 of the Indian Railway Establishment Code, Vol. I (Annexure VI). That on 5th October, 1968, the Deputy General Manager, by a telegram cancelled the said order of termination of service and also released the petitioner from suspension and directed the authority to issue a formal revocation order and to intimate the date on which the petitioner is to be put back to duty (Annexure VII). Even so, the respondent No. 3, under the orders and directions of the General Manager passed the impugned order dated 24th October, 1968 terminating the petitioner's service with immediate effect under Rule 149 (Annexure VIII). The petitioner states that the Assistant Station Masters working in the Railway who are junior in service to the petitioner are still continuing in service. He states that no reasonable opportunity to show cause against the termination order was afforded to him.

2. The petitioner submits that the order of termination of service is by way of punishment and as such is violative of Article 311(2) of the Constitution. He also submits that the order is mala fide and has been made in colourable exercise of powers with the object of wrongfully removing the petitioner from service. The petitioner also submits that the impugned order is void and illegal and it contravenes the provisions of Section 25-F of the Industrial Disputes Act.

3. The learned Advocate-General, who represents the respondents in this proceeding, submits on the other hand relying on the several counter-affidavits that the order is in bona fide exercise of the powers under Rule 149 and is a termination simpliciter and is not by way of punishment. With regard to the Annexures III and IV of the petition it is claimed by the respondents that they are general, secret and confidential administrative instructions and the petitioner should not be allowed to rely on them. The learned counsel also claims privilege under Section 123 of the Indian Evidence Act with regard to these documents. The respondents further submit that Section 25-F of the Industrial Disputes Act is not attracted in the instant case, as it is not a case of retrenchment.

4. Mr. Ghose, the learned counsel for the petitioner is conscious that he is arguing the case of a temporary railway employee. He also rests his case on the second test laid down in Parshotam Lal Dhingra's case, (AIR 1958 SC 36), namely, that the order visits the petitioner with penal consequences. Indeed, he relies on the decision of the Supreme Court in the State of Punjab v. Sukh Raj Bahadur, AIR 1968 SC 1089 wherein, inter alia, the following propositions have been held to be established on a conspectus of the cases decided by the Supreme Court.

"1. The services of a temporary servant or a probationer can be terminated under the rules of his employment and such termination without anything more would not attract the operation of Article 311 of the Constitution.

2. The circumstances preceding or attendant on the order of termination of service have to be examined in each case, the motive behind it being immaterial.

3. If the order visits the public servant with any evil consequences or casts an aspersion against his character or integrity, it must be considered to be one by way of punishment, no matter whether he was a mere probationer or a temporary servant.

4. ...
5. ...
The learned counsel strenuously contends that his case comes within the purview of the second and third propositions mentioned above. The learned Advocate-General, on the other hand contends emphatically that the case comes squarely within the terms of the aforementioned proposition No. 1. In order to establish the petitioner's case in this behalf, Mr. Ghose draws our attention to Annexures II, III & IV of his application. In fact, his whole contention rests on the Annexures III & IV which are claimed as privileged documents by the learned Advocate-General. The claim of privilege in this case assumes a great importance, as, if Annexures III & IV are left out, the petitioner will have no other material to make out his case.

5. The law regarding the claim of privilege is now laid down in a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh. AIR 1961 SC 493. The principles laid down therein have been reiterated in AIR 1964 SC 1658. The learned Advocate-General claims privilege under Section 123 of the Evidence Act read with Section 162. Section 123 runs as follows:—

"No one shall be permitted to give any evidence derived from unpublished official records relating to any affairs of State, except with the permission of the officer at the head of the department concerned, who shall give or withhold such permission as he thinks fit."

The law laid down in AIR 1961 SC 493 has been summarised thus:

"It is perfectly true that in holding an enquiry into the validity of the objection under Section 123 the Court cannot permit any evidence about the contents of the document. If the document cannot be inspected its contents cannot indirectly be proved; but that is not to say that other collateral evidence cannot be produced which may assist the Court in determining the validity of the objection.

...
Thus our conclusion is that reading Sections 123 and 162 together the Court cannot hold an enquiry into the possible injury to public interest which may result from the disclosure of the document in question. That is a matter for the authority concerned to decide, but the Court is competent, and indeed is bound, to hold a preliminary enquiry and determine the validity of the objections to its production, and that necessarily involves an enquiry into the question as to whether the evidence relates to an affair of State under Section 123 or not. In this enquiry, the Court has to determine the character or class of the document. If it comes to the conclusion that the document does not relate to affairs of State then it should reject the claim for privilege and direct its production. If it comes to the conclusion that the document relates to the affairs of State it should leave it to the head of the department to decide whether he should permit its production or not."

It is clear that the two documents are marked as secret and confidential ones by the Railway and these are unpublished official records. The petitioner has not taken any steps to call for the originals of these documents from the respondents. The petitioner also does not state how he has come by these confidential documents. The matter has therefore come before this Court in a rather irregular manner. Mr. Ghose, however, contends that the existence of these documents of their genuineness is not questioned by the respondents and hence they have waived their claim of privilege and no objection should be entertained with regard to it. It is true that in para 14 of the counter-affidavit of respondent No. 3, these documents are described as "general, secret and confidential administrative instructions and those instructions have no bearing with the instant case". There is no reference to any claim of privilege under Section 123 of the Evidence Act. In a matter such as this, we are not prepared to accept the submission of the learned counsel that the respondents have waived their claim of privilege with regard to these documents, particularly in view of the fact that the petitioner has not introduced these documents in accordance with the procedure laid down under the law. We have therefore allowed the learned Advocate-General to take his objection under Section 123 of the Evidence Act.

6. The law in India is now clear that when privilege is claimed with regard to a certain document, it is for the Court to determine at the first instance whether the document relates to the affairs of the State. This decision rests entirely with the Court. How that decision will be arrived at by the Court is however a ticklish matter. The Court under Section 162 of the Evidence Act will not inspect the document, although it is brought to Court in order to determine whether it relates to the affairs of the State. It will however have power to determine the point by entertaining collateral evidence or evidence aliunde. As the Supreme Court observed—

"If the document cannot be inspected, its contents cannot indirectly be proved; but that is not to say that other collateral evidence cannot be produced which may assist the Court in determining the validity of objection."

Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493 (supra). This view is in accord with the decision of the Privy Council in Henry Greer Robinson v. State of South Australia, AIR 1934 PC 254. The Court is only debarred under Section 162 from inspecting the document in order to determine whether it relates to the affairs of the State; but is not prevented from arriving at its decision by entertaining other appropriate and relevant evidence. The law in England has undergone a change after the House of Lords decision in Duncan v. Cammell Laird and Co. Ltd., 1942 AC 624, wherein it has been held that once the Crown makes the claim supported by the affidavit of the appropriate Minister, it is the Judge's duty to reject the evidence even if the party who wants to prove it has it in possession. Once the Minister affirms that production of the evidence is against national interest the Judge cannot question whether the claim of privilege is justified or not. A decision of the House of Lords in Glasgow Corpn. v. Central Land Board, 1956 SC (HL) 1, referring to Duncan's case, 1942 AC 624, observed that the Scottish law has always reserved to the courts the inherent power to inspect the documents and to override the certificate of the head of the department that production would be against the public interest. It has been held that impartial administration of justice in the courts of law is also a matter of public interest, and that indeed it is of a higher order. The practice in the United States is in accord with the principles laid down in the Privy Council case AIR 1934 PC 254 (supra). Even after the passing of the Crown Proceeding Act in England in 1947, the powers in England are much narrower than those conferred under Section 162 of the Evidence Act, Sodhi Sukhdev, AIR 1961 SC 493 (supra).

7. The position in law therefore is that the Court without inspecting the documents will determine the validity of objection under Section 123, particularly with regard to the character of the document whether it relates to the affairs of the State. So far as this case is concerned, the position is however rather anomalous as the documents are already produced in court and the claim of privilege has been lodged afterwards, after service of the Rule. There are therefore two courses open to the Court. Firstly the Court may adopt a judicial blindness to these documents and proceed in accordance with law. For that however, there is no application by the petitioner to the Court to direct the respondents to produce the originals of these documents. There is therefore no question of taking collateral evidence in order to determine the validity of the objection. On this short ground alone, the documents in question can be ruled out of consideration in this proceeding.

8. The statute has clearly proscribed inspection of documents relating to the affairs of the State. The rule of conduct which is prescribed by this law is that no person should pry into confidences of Governmental affairs. But the conduct of the petitioner clearly runs counter to the rule for conduct laid down by the statute. It is significant, as Cohen has neatly observed in his "Ethical Systems"— "Words are frail packages for legislative hopes. The voyage to the realm of law observance is long and dangerous." It is a question of serious import whether a person should be allowed to take advantage of his illegitimate action in securing by any means whatsoever secret and confidential documents of the Government. It is not possible to show any leniency in a matter of this description and we cannot too strongly condemn this unlawful practice and would be loath to give the erring party any advantage of his wrong action. It should be a warning to those who want to thrive from such unethical disclosures which are clearly opposed to the provisions of law. Where it is possible, as in this case, the Court will without any hesitation, help law coincide with morality. We will be, therefore, justified in not looking into these two documents in assessing the submission of the learned counsel.

9. Mr. Ghose next contends that Section 123 is not attracted in this case as the documents do not relate to any affairs of the State. This argument will be inadmissible in view of our conclusion that the petitioner has not properly applied to this Court for production of the originals by the appropriate authority. But even excusing this absence of preliminary and having examined, out of hand, the contents of the two documents, we are satisfied that they relate to the affairs of the State. The concept of State has undergone a tremendous change. Besides, the State is a dynamic organisation. A democratic State, as is ours, being the creature of a written Constitution, holds out the picture of a welfare State. The affairs in the welfare State of today cannot be compared with those which were obtaining prior to independence, and even during that period, as days rolled on, State activities were expanding. It is no longer the regal functions alone which the State exercises. Its activities permeate through various fields and aspects of the body politic. As observed in the majority judgment in Sukhdev Singh's case, AIR 1961 SC 493 (supra):—

"The inevitable consequence of the change in the conception of the functions of the State is that the State in pursuit of its welfare activities undertakes to an increasing extent activities which were formerly treated as purely commercial and documents in relation to such commercial activities undertaken by the State in the pursuit of public policies of social welfare are also apt to claim the privilege of documents relating to the affairs of State."

We therefore see no force in the contention of the learned counsel that these documents do not relate to affairs of the State. They are administrative instructions and guidance notes secretly given to various authorities at different levels and the subordinate officers in the departments are entitled to such advice and instructions from time to time in dealing with matters involving law and order and discipline in the entire organisation. No objection can be taken to such instructions and guidance being given and no one can be allowed to make capital out of such confidential instructions which are not intended for outsiders or for publication. As observed by the House of Lords in Duncan's case, 1942 AC 624 (supra) —

"Practice of keeping a class of documents secret is necessary for the proper functioning of the public service."

Hence assuming for the moment that we have collateral evidence to determine the nature of the two documents, which however in this case have already become public property, we are clearly of opinion that they are unpublished official records relating to affairs of the State and in absence of a proper application through Court, enabling the appropriate authority itself to consider the question of public injury if these are disclosed, make these documents non-existent for judicial consideration in the present proceeding. We must not however be understood to mean that the contents of these documents even if proved and permitted to be disclosed would establish the petitioner's pleas in this case.

10. If these two documents go out of consideration, there is no case made out by the petitioner to bring his case within the second test laid down in Dhingra's case (AIR 1958 SC 36), nor in the second and third propositions of Sukhdev's case, AIR 1961 SC 493. The order is in full conformity with Rule 149 and it does not cast any slur or stigma on the petitioner. The order cannot be said to be by way of punishment, as the petitioner, being a temporary employee, had no lien to the post. The termination is thus in exercise of the power conferred under Rule 149 of the Railway Establishment Code and the order is not open to any valid objection under the law.

11. Mr. Ghose next contends that the order being in violation of Section 25-F of the Industrial Disputes Act, is void and illegal and as such should be quashed in our writ jurisdiction. In this context, he draws our attention to the amended Rule 149 by adding sub-rule (6) therein which runs as follows:—

"6. Notwithstanding anything contained in clauses (1), (2) and (4) of this Rule, if a Railway servant or apprentice is one to whom the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act 1947 apply, he shall be entitled to notice or wages in lieu thereof in accordance with the provisions of that Act."

He therefore contends that since the termination in question is retrenchment within the meaning of Section 2(oo) of the Industrial Disputes Act, the provisions of Section 25-F thereof are clearly attracted. In this case, Mr. Ghose relied upon the State of Bombay v. Hospital Mazdoor Sabha, AIR 1960 SC 610. He submits that the Supreme Court has approved of the decision of the Bombay High Court holding that the orders which do not comply with the mandatory provisions of Section 25-F, were invalid and inoperative and did not interfere with the writs of mandamus issued by that Court. The learned counsel has failed to take note of the concession made by the appellants that the case was one of retrenchment. The chief question that was canvassed in that decision is one centering round the meaning of industry under Section 2(j) of the Industrial Disputes Act. In the instant case, the respondents do not admit that it is a case of retrenchment within the meaning of Section 2(oo) of the Act. The Supreme Court has interpreted the definition of retrenchment in Section 2(oo) in Hari Prosad Shishankar Shukla v. A. D. Divikar, AIR 1957 SC 121 and has held that the ordinary meaning of retrenchment fulfils the requirements of Section 2(oo), that is to say when a portion of the staff or the labour force is discharged as surplus. The present termination of the service of the petitioner is therefore not a case of retrenchment within the meaning of Section 2(o) and as such he cannot invoke the provisions of Section 25-F of the Act, which is mentioned in sub-rule (6) of Rule 149, sought to be invoked in his favour. The objection on this ground is therefore without any substance.

12. In the result, the application fails and is dismissed, but we make no order as to costs.

M. C. PATNAIK, J.: 13. I agree.

Application dismissed.

AIR 1970 ASSAM & NAGALAND 137
(V 57 C 34)

P. K. GOSWAMI, C. J. AND
D. M. SEN, J.

Priyalal Barman, Appellant v. The State, Respondent.

Death Reference No. 2 of 1970 and Criminal Appeal No. 6(J) of 1970, D/-27-5-1970, Ref. made by Dist. and S. J. Cachar, D/-20-1-1970 and judgment D/-12-1-1970.

(A) Evidence Act (1872), S. 32(1) — Dying declaration — Evidentiary value of.

The dying declaration is only a piece of untested evidence. It must, like any other evidence, satisfy the Court that what is stated therein is the unalloyed truth and the whole truth and that it is absolutely safe to act upon it. (Para 14)

(B) Evidence Act (1872), Section 3 — Benefit of doubt — Dying declaration not satisfactory — Police investigation inadequate and defective — Evidence not conclusive — Benefit of doubt given to accused. (Para 16)

(C) Assam Police Manual, Part V, (1968 Edition), Rule 188 — Case diary without pagination — Various stages of investigation not correctly entered — Diary held not in conformity with Rule 188 and created suspicion. (Para 18)

(D) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 172(2) — Case diary of Police investigation — Its use and value.

Case diary is a very important document which has to be maintained in a faithfully regular manner. Although it cannot be treated as evidence in trial, the Court is entitled to peruse the same under Section 172(2). This duty to peruse is incumbent upon a Public Prosecutor and almost always so upon a Court trying serious offences. When the cases for prosecution and defence are both inadequate the case diary enables the Court to discover for itself the material facts and arrive at truth in the interest of justice. (Para 19)

D. C. Chakraborty, for Appellant; T. N. Singh, Public Prosecutor, for Respondent.

GN/GN/D160/70/HGP/B

GOSWAMI, C. J.:— This is a case of triple murder which took place on the night of 18th April, 1969. The accused, a son, is said to have murdered his father, his step-mother and his step-brother, and he has been sentenced to death under Section 302, I. P. C. The accused has appealed against his conviction and there is also the usual reference under Section 374, Cr. P. C. Both are taken up together. The accused was also convicted under Section 457, I.P.C., but no separate sentence was awarded to him.

2. There lived a man named Gopicharan Barman, aged about 55 years, at village Ratanpur under Udharbond Police Station. He seems to be a substantial man, having land and granary and several houses within his homestead and has also allowed the accused, who is his son, to build another house for him (accused) within his compound. Gopicharan's first wife is the mother of the accused who was driven away from his house while he was only three years of age. Gopicharan had a second wife Bazodi who had a son Parimal, aged about 11 years. The accused's mother since then resided at a place called Barbond about six miles from Ratanpur. The accused grew up and was serving in the Military Department and came to Ratanpur about two months prior to the occurrence and shared his stay with his father as well as his mother. The accused built the fifth house near his father's house at Ratanpur. On the previous day of the occurrence, Gopicharan went to the accused's house where heated altercation took place between the two. This quarrel was over a sum of Rs. 1400/- (evidence of P.W. 5). On the morning of the occurrence, when Ananta Kumar (P.W. 1) was going by the side of Gopicharan's house, he heard a cry of distress — "Give me water, give water" — coming from inside the house. Ananta Kumar lives only hundred yards off from Gopicharan's house and his wife was also coming out at that time. Having heard the scream, he went inside the compound and found Gopicharan lying dead at the court-yard 'smeared with blood'. The cry for water was coming from inside the house and Ananta Kumar asked his wife to give water and he went to bring people. He then returned with Pulin, Rajendra and Arun and found Gopicharan's son Parimal lying dead on the bed. There was blood on his person. Bazodi, second wife of Gopicharan was lying on the bed with bleeding injuries by the side of her dead son Parimal. It is said that Bazodi told them that at night their son Jaurang (accused) "came and cut his father, his brother and herself". While Gopicharan and Parimal were already dead, Bazodi died on Sunday, the 20th at 10 A.M., the occurrence having taken place on Friday night.

3. Before the death of Bazodi, Ananta went to the Udhambond Police Station, eight miles away, and verbally reported the occurrence and the Sub-Inspector of Police recorded the same (Ext. 1) on 19th April, 1969 at 10-45 A.M. This first information report mentions the name of the accused to be the assailant of all the three persons mentioned above. It also appears that Santa Barman, Member of the Gaon Panchayat and another person were present when Bazodi mentioned the name of the accused to Ananta Kumar for the first time when the latter came with these persons to find out what had happened inside the house.

4. The police officer registered the case and took up investigation and after leaving the police station at 11 A.M., arrived at the place of occurrence at half past twelve. He found the dead body of Gopicharan lying in the courtyard of the dwelling house near the verandah. His son Parimal Barman was found lying dead on the bed inside the house. He also found Bazodi lying injured by the side of her dead son. According to the Sub-Inspector of Police (P.W. 10) "Bazodi Barman stated that on the night of previous day, Jaurang forcibly entered the house and cut her, her husband and her son with a Bhujali". He sent for the doctor who came and recorded a statement of Bazodi at his request. He held inquest over the dead bodies of Gopicharan and Parimal (Exts. 4 and 5) and he drew up also a sketch map with index (Exts. 6 and 6(1)). He also stated that "the statements of Bazodi taken by Arun Master and the doctor were handed over to me". He came to know of the death of Bazodi on 20th and held inquest over her dead body (Ext. 7). He had on the previous day sent the dead bodies of Gopicharan and Parimal for post-mortem examination and sent the dead body of Bazodi for the same purpose on 20th. He seized an umbrella (Ext. I) and a naked lamp (Ext. II), a bamboo door and a little blood soaked soil (Ext. III) at the house of Gopicharan. After completion of the investigation, he submitted a charge-sheet. The cross-examination of this witness was only two sentences, namely "Bazodi Barman made all the statements in Bengali. I recorded her statement in English."

5 to 7. [After narrating the evidence given by P.Ws. 2, 3 and 4, his Lordship proceeded:] P.W. 6 is Dr. S. K. Choudhury who held the post-mortem examination on the dead body of all the three deceased persons. He found the following injuries on the dead body of Parimal:

"One transverse incised wound 6" x 2" x brain cavity deep on the back of head.

One incised wound 4" x 2" x 1" on the back of lower part of left forearm.

Fracture of occipital bone and both parietal bones on the back of head measuring 5 1/2" x 1" x thickness of the bone.

Membrane incised in the back of head measuring 5" x 1" x thickness of membrane. Haemorrhage seen in the brain on back." He also found on the dead body of Gopicharan the following injuries:

"One incised wound 6" x 2" x brain cavity deep on the left side of head 2" above the ear, placed longitudinally.

One incised wound 6" x 5" x 1" on the back of right shoulder.

Fracture of the left temporal bone and left parietal bone measuring 5 1/2" x 1 1/2" x thickness of bone.

Membrane incised on the left side measuring 5" x 1" x thickness of membrane. Haemorrhage seen on the left side of brain."

He noticed on the dead body of Bazodi, aged about 45 years, the following injuries:—

"One incised wound 7" x 2" x 4" on the outer front and inner side of upper third of left arm.

One incised wound 6 1/2" x 3" x 1" on the upper part of left side of back.

Muscles, nerves and arteries of upper third of left arm is cut. There is fracture of left humerus on the upper third." Death of all the above three persons, according to the opinion of the doctor, is due to shock and haemorrhage caused by the injuries described. He also states that all the injuries on the three persons can be caused by a sharp cutting weapon like Bhujali.

8. P.W. 7 is Dr. Pabitra Kumar Singh Chaudhuri, who had examined Bazodi earlier at 7-30 P.M. on 19th April, 1969 on being requisitioned by the Police Officer (P.W. 10), while she was yet alive and found two incised wounds noticed by the doctor P.W. 6 later. He found her pulse weak, almost imperceptible, due to severe bleeding and that she was in a state of shock. He recorded her dying declaration marked Ext. 3 on the requisition of P.W. 10. According to him, she could very clearly understand what he wanted about the circumstances leading to the injuries. He could also follow her distinctly. He "recorded just what she stated". He read over the statement to her after recording the same and she admitted it to be correct and put her thumb impression. He recorded the statement after examination of the injuries. P.Ws. 8 and 9 are the constables who escorted the dead bodies.

9. The above is all the evidence and it appears therefrom that Bazodi was the only person who could speak about the identity of the assailant and we find that there are two of her recorded statements Exts. 2 and 3. We have also the evidence of P.Ws. 1, 2, 3 and 4, besides P.Ws. 7 and 10 who deposed before the Court about the statement made by Bazodi implicating the accused. The learned Sessions Judge has relied upon the two dying declarations and also was satisfied that there was no possibility of Bazodi making any mistake about the identity of the culprit. Relying on the evidence of P.W. 5, he also held that it might be on account of the quarrel over Rs. 1400/- that the accused came at night and "committed this dastardly crime".

10. The most important point for consideration is whether we shall be justified in relying upon the dying declarations as well as the statements which had been alleged to be made to the witnesses mentioned above. It is no doubt true that at 10-45 A.M. on 19th April, 1969, the name of the accused appears in the first information report lodged by P.W. 1 who went to the Thana accompanied by P.W. 3. This fact is also corroborated by P.W. 1 in his evidence. One thing is however noticeable that P.W. 1 did not immediately go inside the house to ask the screaming wife as to what has happened and how it happened. He left his wife there and came sometime afterwards with Arun, Pulin and Rajendra, the last two being not examined in the case. P.W. 1 states that when this time he went inside Bazodi made the statement implicating the accused and while he was there Santa Barman and Satyendra came and they heard what Bazodi said. (The translation in the paper book of the evidence of P.W. 1 is wrong at places and I had to go through the Assamese deposition in original). P.W. 4 Atashi, who was perhaps the first person to meet Bazodi and who gave her water in the morning, stated as follows:

"Bazodi said that at night Jaurang had come and had cut herself, her husband and her son with a Bhujali".

This witness was not examined in the committing court and for the first time examined before the Sessions Court on 9-1-1970 and it is not even clear when Bazodi made that statement to her. On the other hand, the evidence of P.W. 2 is that Ananta came and called him and he was at that time with Sudhir, Pulin and others. He went to inform P.W. 3, the Member, and others. Up to this time he does not speak about any statement made by Bazodi. He came later at 12 noon and found Santa Member (P.W. 3), Ananta (P. W. 1), Satyendra and others present at that place. He then stated that Bazodi was then speaking. Santa Barman asked him to record the statement. Then he recorded Ext. 2.

11. From the above it appears that Ext. 2 which was recorded after 12 noon on the second visit of P.W. 2 contained the first written record of the statement of Bazodi taken down after 12 noon in the presence of Santa and Ananta. Indeed Ext. 2 contains the signature of several persons including Santa Barman and Ananta. If, therefore, Ext. 2 was recorded by Arun as stated by him after 12 noon, there was no necessity for this recording, as according to the Police Officer (P.W. 10), he arrived at the place of occurrence at half-past twelve on being informed of the occurrence by P.W. 1, who was even accompanied by Santa. Naturally, therefore, Santa and Ananta would have in all probability either accompanied this officer from the Thana or, at any rate, would have arrived back about the same time. Looking at Ext. 2 now, it is written in Bengalee and the writer's signature appears as Arun Kumar Deb. There is also not too distinct thumb impression said to be of Bazodi taken by Arun Kumar. The dying declaration is (in) the following terms:

"The statement of the injured: My name is Bazodi Bala Barman. My husband is Gopicharan Barman. On last Friday night after we slept, Jaurang son of Gopicharan Barman came about 12 or 1 O'Clock while we were asleep. The said Jaurang Barman was forcibly pulling the door. By (at?) this time, I lighted the lamp. Then Jaurang having entered the house put out the lamp and first cut my husband and thereafter me with a dao and thereafter my son and went away. I could recognise him. Finish — 19th April 1969 (Eng.)."

This very witness, who recorded the statement, stated in his evidence as follows:—

"Bazodi said that at 12 P.M. or 1 A.M. at night, she had heard a sound coming from the door and had asked her husband to light a lamp. It was said that as soon as the lamp was lighted, Jaurang felled the door and entered the house. Bazodi further stated that Jaurang, having entered the house, had put out the lamp. She stated further more that Jaurang, having put out the lamp, flashed with a torch and cut his father. She stated further more that after that he had cut Parimal with a Bhujali. She stated further more that thereafter Jaurang had cut herself (Bazodi)."

P.W. 1 Ananta, who is said to be present at the time of recording of Ext. 2 does not mention about Ext. 2 and only stated in his evidence that "Bazodi said to us that at night their son Jaurang came and cut his father, his brother and herself". P.W. 3 who was also present at the time of recording of Ext. 2, stated that "Bazodi said that she had heard a sound at the door and her husband had lighted a lamp. After a little while, accused Jaurang having broken and felled the door on the courtyard, entered the house and began to cut all. Bazodi stated that Jaurang had cut his father, his brother and herself". P.W. 10 also stated:

"Bazodi Barman stated that on the night of previous day, Jaurang forcibly entered the house and cut her, her husband and her son with a Bhujali. I sent for the doctor at Udhband. Having come, the doctor examined Bazodi and recorded a statement of Bazodi at my request."

He also stated that "the statements of Bazodi taken by Arun Master and the doctor were handed over to me. All these have been filed in this case."

12. Although it appears from the records and case diary, the relevant seizure lists for seizing the documents Exts. 2 and 3 have not been exhibited in the case. Yet the two relevant seizure lists are dated 19-4-69 and 26-4-69, that is to say, the police officer took possession of Ext. 2 on 19th April 1969 according to this unexhibited seizure list and his statement in Court, but he seized Ext. 3 on being produced by the doctor on 26th April, 1969, a week after the recording. It is therefore intriguing how he could state in his evidence that these two statements Exts. 2 and 3 were handed over to him together on that day, which is the impression sought to be given in the evidence. Again, if the statement was recorded by the doctor, whom he had requisitioned for the purpose, it is rather surprising that he would not take possession of Ext. 3 on the same day and left it to be seized after a week. This might not throw doubt about the recording of the statement Ext. 3 on the 19th April, 1969, but only shows that Ext. 2 may not have been recorded as stated by P.W. 2 Arun Kumar in his evidence. One cannot help doubting the dying declaration Ext. 2 for another reason. This statement does not appear to be ipsissima verba that is to say, in the words of the declarant. She would never describe herself in the way recorded in the statement unless asked to do so. Further, she would not say in the very next morning of the occurrence "on last Friday night" when it happened only a few hours earlier. Besides, the signature of Arun Kumar (P.W. 2) and the endorsement of the thumb impression of Bazodi appear to be not in one sitting, although Arun has stated in his evidence that the statement was read over to her and she admitted it to be correct and put her thumb impression then and there. While the entire statement in Ext. 2 written by Arun gives the picture of a bold writing, his signature and his endorsement on this document written in different ink seem to be hesitant and feeble. It does not appear that this document was carefully noticed by either the defence counsel or by the learned trial Judge. Otherwise we would have found certain questions put to Arun Kumar in cross-examination or at least from the Court.

13. Let us now look at Ext. 3, the second dying declaration which is said to be written by the doctor on the request of the Police Officer, who must have been present at the time of recording. The statement herein runs as follows:—

"Last night at about two, my son Jaurang forcibly entered the house and firstly cut my husband dead, then cut me and then cut my son Parimal dead. He cut all by Bhojali."

The doctor, P.W. 7, has proved this Ext. 3 which he recorded at 7-30 P.M. on 19th April, 1969 when he came there on receipt of information from the Police Officer (P.W. 10). Although we do not distrust the doctor, who had written this document, we cannot help thinking that the last sentence in Ext. 3 "He cut all by Bhojali" was written not in the same sitting. Even the thumb impressions in the document appear to have been taken on different occasions. Although the document is dated 19-4-1969 and is said to have been handed over to the Police Officer the same day as noticed earlier, the document was seized on production by the doctor only on the 26th April, 1969. It is not known whether this discrepancy about the time when the document came to the possession of the Police may have something to do with the insertion of the last sentence in Ext. 3. At any rate, if the earlier statement recorded in Ext. 2 is absolutely true and safe, as deposed to by Ananta and corroborated by different witnesses who also gave oral evidence to the same effect, the second document Ext. 3 would lose much of the importance. We, therefore find that the whole case turns on the alleged statement of Bazodi implicating the accused as the assailant of herself as well as the other two deceased.

14. The questions will require consideration before we are in a position to act on that statement. Firstly, assuming that she had stated as recorded in the dying declarations and as deposed to by the witnesses, was it possible for her to recognise the assailant that night? For this purpose, it is necessary to compare the evidence of all the witnesses describing the statements of Bazodi as also those recorded in Exts. 2 and 3. The night was said to be a stormy night and there was heavy downpour. The accused was not in the house of the deceased on that day but must have come from his mother's house which is six miles away. The room inside, at the moment there was knock at the door, was dark and unless a lamp was lighted it was not possible for Bazodi to have recognised the assailant. She is not said to have stated that she recognised him by any other means, say by voice. The question of lighting the lamp, therefore, is of some importance. Arun Kumar, who has himself recorded the dying declaration Ext. 2 stated that Bazodi has asked her husband to light the lamp. Even P.W. 3 Santa Barman stated that Bazodi stated that her husband lighted the lamp. On the other hand, the statement in Ext. 2 is that she lighted the lamp. It is, therefore, doubtful whether the lamp was lighted at all to enable Bazodi to recognise the assailant. This aspect did not receive due consideration from the learned Sessions Judge. It may not be overlooked that she is the step-mother of the accused. Although the father, advancing in age, seems to have reconciled to allowing the son to come and reside near his house perhaps with his mother in the same compound, Bazodi may not have taken all these developments kindly. Besides, if, as stated by P.W. 5, a sum of Rs. 1400/- had been stolen and the father had altercation with him over it on the previous day, this fact also would be in the know of Bazodi. For these two reasons, if not for more which are undisclosed, Bazodi may have grudge and even strong suspicion against the accused whom she may even honestly think or imagine to be the dangerous miscreant of that night. It may not also be ruled out that when neighbours and other villagers, who naturally came in the morning on hearing of this horrible calamity, would start discussing to the hearing of Bazodi to locate the assailant and with the informations available then and the play of feelings and reactions on the mind of Bazodi at that grievously distressing state of her mind, it is no wonder that the accused might be thought of as the possible culprit and that is how the name of the accused might have been broadcast leading ultimately to the lodging of the first information report at the Thana against him. We are, therefore, unable to place on the statement and declaration of Bazodi such reliance as would be necessary to enable us to convict the accused in a serious charge of this nature. The dying declaration is only a piece of untested evidence and must, like any other evidence, satisfy the Court that what is stated therein is the unalloyed truth and the whole truth and that it is absolutely safe to act upon it.

15. On the top of that, the police investigation is so inadequate and purposeless that no attempt was made to produce any corroborating circumstances from any other source to establish the charge against the accused. There was no attempt to find out any foot-prints or finger-prints of the accused about which there was certainly some possibility. Secondly, there is no evidence about the conduct of the accused after the occurrence if he was the murderer of his father and his step-brother at that stage. Neither the prosecution attempted to ask the police officer any questions with that regard, nor did the police officer even bother to state when, where and in what state the accused was found and arrested. The evidence of the mother of the accused who lives at Barbond would have also thrown some light about the accused whether he was absent from his house on that night. After all her husband had been murdered by somebody. Even it cannot be said that she would be hostile witness until her statement has been recorded at least by the Police Officer. Her utility as a witness cannot be brushed aside by saying that she was at one stage driven out by her deceased husband. Certain things would have come to light from which the Court would have been in a position to judge the truth of the charge against the accused. Since the prosecution has not chosen to adduce any evidence regarding the conduct of the accused, it may be presumed that there was nothing unusual in his conduct.

16. We are, therefore, clearly of opinion that the evidence produced in the case does not establish the charges framed against the accused. He is entitled to benefit of reasonable doubt and is acquitted of the charges under Sections 302 and 457, Indian Penal Code.

17. It is necessary to observe that the dying declaration appears to be the be-all and end-all of the investigation in this case and the police officers thought that they had no other duty in the matter. While the same together with an answer was supplied by the informant, the police did not make any effort on their part to confirm and arrive at the answer by means of a conscientious process of their own bringing credit to the force.

18. Further, it does not give us the impression that the learned Sessions Judge perused the case diary of the police which he was entitled to do under the law. We have thought it our duty to go through the same and found to our surprise that Rule 188 of the Assam Police Manual, Part V (1968 Edition) does not seem to be complied with. That Rule requires as follows:—

"..... The forms of case diary are issued in bound books of 100 forms each. Carbon paper is separately supplied and a tin slab to write on.

Each form has a separate printed number running consecutively through the book so that no two forms will bear a same number. Investigating officers will write their case diaries on these forms, placing one or two sheets of carbon paper underneath the original according to the number of copies required. On the conclusion of an investigation the sheets of the original diary will be removed from the book and filed together ..... The present case diary of such a serious case has no pagination and is not at all maintained in conformity with Rule 188. While going through the same, we find the seizure of the seizure list Ext. 2 being noted as Item VI at 3 P.M. on 19-4-69, on the reverse of a certain page in carbon, although the reverse of the succeeding page contains endorsement No. V at 5 P.M. the same day. It is further intriguing that after five pages there is another endorsement VI at 7 P.M. of the identical day. These various stages of the investigation, which have to be recorded faithfully, do not give the impression of being correctly entered and one may naturally feel suspicious particularly because the seizure list Ext. 2 which has not been even exhibited in this case has been entered in the case diary in such dubious manner.

19. The case diary is a very important document which has to be maintained in a faithfully regular manner. The contents of the diary cannot be treated as evidence in a trial but the Court is entitled to peruse the same under Section 172(2) of the Criminal Procedure Code to aid it in the trial. This duty is incumbent upon a Public Prosecutor and almost always so upon a Court trying a serious offence of this nature. Where prosecution and defence are both inadequate, it will enable the Court to rise up to the occasion and discover for itself the material facts and circumstances from the case diary, which can be brought to light through the witnesses examined in the case to arrive at the truth in the interest of justice.

20. We feel distressed to see these defects in the investigation and hope the authorities will look into the matter and take appropriate steps to remedy them.

21. In the result, the Reference of the learned Sessions Judge is rejected and the appeal is allowed. The conviction under Sections 302 and 457, Indian Penal Code, and the sentence of death are set aside. The accused shall be set at liberty forthwith.

D. M. SEN, J.: 22. I agree.

Appeal allowed and reference rejected.

AIR 1970 ASSAM & NAGALAND 142
(V 57 C 35)

P. K. GOSWAMI, C. J. AND D. M. SEN, J.
Mano Ranjan Paul, Petitioner v. State of Assam and others, Respondents.

Civil Rule No. 14 of 1970. D/- 7-5-1970.

Assam Settlement of Forest Coupes and Mahals by Tender System Rules (1967). Rules 6 and 10 — Settling authority settling mahal in favour of A. not on his tender, but on price mentioned in B's tender — Acceptance of A's tender (after allowing him to raise his price stated in B's tender) is not in conformity with the Rules — Order of settlement set aside in writ petition — (Constitution of India, Art. 226). AIR 1954 SC 592, Ref.

GN/HN/D336/70/VBB/M

(Para 7)
Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1954) AIR 1954 SC 592 (V 41) =
1955 SCR 303, K. N. Guruswamy
v. State of Mysore

J. P. Bhattacharjee and P. C. Katakya, for Petitioner; D. Pathak and G. R. Kalita, for Respondents.

GOSWAMI, C. J.: The dispute in this writ application centres round the settlement of Khoraghat Sand cum Gravel Mahal No. 1 of Dhubri division for the years 1969-71. A sale notice dated 27th August, 1969 issued by the Divisional Forest Officer, Goalpara West Division under the provisions of the Assam Settlement of Forest Coupes and Mahals by Tender System Rules, 1967, inviting sealed tenders for settlement of the said Mahal was published in the Assam Gazette on 17th September, 1969. The petitioner along with two others submitted their tenders. The petitioner was the highest bidder offering outright price of Rs. 87,227/- for the Mahal and Respondent No. 5 offered a sum of Rs. 71,750/-. As the Mahal was for more than Rs. 50,000/-, the Governor was the final settling authority and by order dated 13th November, 1969, the said Mahal was settled with the respondent No. 5 at the highest bid offered by the petitioner, namely, Rs. 87,227/- for the entire period. The petitioner made a review application to the Governor against the settlement order and the same was rejected on 5th January, 1970. Hence this writ application under Article 226 of the Constitution, challenging the settlement order in favour of the respondent No. 5.

2. Settlement of forest coupes and mahals by tender system is now governed by Rules framed under Sections 33, 34 and 72(e) of the Assam Forest Regulation, VII of 1891, on 25th September, 1967 and published in the Assam Gazette on 8th November, 1967. These Rules are called "the Assam Settlement of Forest Coupes and Mahals by Tender System Rules, 1967", hereinafter referred to as 'the Rules'. We should now notice some material provisions of these Rules. Rule 3 provides for a notice calling for tender for settlement of mahal and it shall be published in the official gazette not less than 15 days before the last date fixed for submission of tender. Rule 4 provides for particulars to be included in the said notice. Rule 5 relates to earnest money. Rule 6, which is important, may be set out:

"6. Tender and its enclosures:—

(1) There shall be a separate tender for each coupe or mahal with the requisite court-fee affixed to it.

(2) Each tender shall be in the tender form prescribed in Schedule A below and the tenderer shall state in the tender his full name and address and his father's name (or husband's name if the tenderer is a woman) and full address, with post office and telegraph office.

(3) The tenderer shall also state in the tender the maximum outright price or the monopoly fee per rupee of royalty, as the case may be, which is (sic) prepared to pay for each coupe, or mahal, and shall also make a declaration as follows:—

"I agree that I will not withdraw the tender offered by me during the time that will be required for intimation of acceptance of the tender for coupe/mahal being given to me; nor will I withdraw it afterwards, should my tender be accepted. If I withdraw the tender, then I am liable to pay the whole sum of the tender or such amount on account of deficiency as in the opinion of the Conservator of Forests, Assam may be considered necessary to make good the whole of the loss and damages that may be suffered by Government in consequence thereof, and I shall pay the same, and if I fail to pay it, then it will be recovered from me as arrear of land revenue."

(4) The tender shall be accompanied with the following documents, namely—

(i) A copy of the treasury challan or a bank draft evidencing deposit of the prescribed earnest money.

(ii) An up-to-date income tax clearance certificate.

(iii) & (iv) are not material for our purpose.

(v) Documents evidencing financial soundness of the tenderer;

Provided that such documentary evidence shall not be necessary in case of a tenderer who has been registered under any rule prescribed by the State Government for registration of forest contractors, but in such case he shall furnish the particulars of his registration."

Rule 7: "Any other conditions not inconsistent with the rules:— The Authority calling for tender may call for any other particulars from the intending tenderer with a view to identifying the tenderer or to eliciting information about his financial soundness."

Rule 8: "Procedure for dealing with the tenders:— (1) After the scrutiny of the tenders, the orders for acceptance of any tender shall be passed by the respective competent authorities whose competency shall be according to the delegation of financial powers under the Assam Delegation of Financial Powers Rules, 1960.

(2) Where, according to the limit of financial power under the Delegation of Financial Powers Rules, 1960, the officer receiving the tenders is not competent to pass order of acceptance of tender, he shall forward the tender papers with his comments to his next higher authority for necessary action."

Rule 9: "Appeal and review:— (1) An appeal shall lie, within 15 days from the date of issue of the order or acceptance of tender as follows:—

(a) against the order passed by the Divisional Forest Officer,— to the Conservator whose order in appeal shall be final.

(b) against the order passed by the Conservator,— to the Governor of Assam, whose order in appeal shall be final.

(2) A petition shall lie to the Governor for review of his original order within 15 days from the date of issue of such order but no petition for review of appellate order of Governor shall lie.

(3) x x x x".

Rule 10: "No obligation to accept highest or any tender:— There shall be no obligation on the part of the competent authority to accept the highest or any tender or to assign any reason for rejecting any tender."

The above are the material provisions which need consideration in deciding the present controversy between the parties.

3. It is clear that settlement is to be regulated by the above Rules which it is not disputed are statutory. Under Rule 6(4), it is necessary that the tender shall be accompanied with certain documents mentioned therein. Neither the petitioner nor the respondent No. 5 submitted any documents evidencing their financial soundness as required under Rule 6(4) (v). The petitioner, on the other hand, submitted an affidavit testifying to his financial condition before the Minister, Revenue and Forest, on 13th November 1969, on which date the impugned order of settlement was made in favour of the respondent No. 5. It appears that neither in the order granting the settlement nor in the order rejecting the review application any question was raised about the defects in the tender on account of non-compliance with Rule 6(4) (v). At any rate, both the petitioner and the respondent No. 5 are on the same boat on this score. It is, no doubt, true that the respondent No. 5 was the sitting lessee, but he has not submitted any certificate of registration as forest contractor as required under the proviso to Rule 6(4) (v).

4. The main question, which is canvassed before us, is whether the Governor is entitled to settle the mahal in favour of respondent No. 5, not on his tender, but accepting the price mentioned in the tender of the petitioner which is the highest price offered for the mahal.

5. When Rules are framed for settlement of these mahals, it is necessary that the settling authority acts in conformity with those Rules and the procedure laid down therein. The scheme and the intention disclosed in the elaborate rules noticed above provide for a wide publicity in the official gazette giving sufficient time for submission of tenders which should be in the prescribed form. The tenders again cannot be entertained beyond the hour fixed for the purpose, have to be opened then and there in the presence of the public unless for special reasons the officer notifies otherwise in the office notice board. There is a gradation of officers for various tenders according to the price tendered. The settling authorities are not bound to accept the highest tender, nor any tender; nor to assign any reason for rejecting any tender. There is a right of one appeal only against the order passed by the Divisional Forest Officer to the Conservator and against that passed by the Conservator to the Governor. A petition for review of the Governor's original order is also provided for, but no petition for review of the appellate order of the Governor shall lie. The tenders as well as the appeal and review application have got to be affixed with requisite court-fee. The tenders, therefore, under the Rules, have got to contain the necessary material informations accompanied with documents which the settling authority is required to scrutinise to find out the most suitable tenderer. It is clear that whichever is the settling authority, it is required to act in accordance with the procedure laid down under these Rules. What will be the legal effect in case any defect is noticed, while acting within these Rules, need not be considered in this case. Whatever that may be, one thing is absolutely clear that the settling authority has to find out the most suitable tenderer from all points of view in accordance with its honest and best judgment. It is in a sense unfettered in this domain and in absence of mala fides, this Court will not interfere with its discretion. That, however, should make the position of the settling authority more responsible and difficult as it must not do anything which is not contemplated under these Rules.

6. The settling authority under Rule 10, no doubt, (a) is not bound to accept the highest tender; (b) may or may not accept any tender. There is, however, no tertium quid a third course open to it. To borrow an ancient adage, the settling authority wants to draw from A's well with B's rope. The settling authority cannot substitute a new tender for the tender which is before it. In other words, the Rules do not countenance direct or indirect negotiation or dialogue between the settling authority and any of the tenderers on any account after the submission of the tender. The tender has to be accepted as it is. The tender must contain a definite price which has to be either accepted or rejected—about which he has to give a declaration under Rule 6(3). Otherwise, it would defeat the very object and purpose underlying these Rules and a settlement in disregard of this salutary principle envisaged in the Rules is invalid in the eye of law.

7. It is manifest in this case that the settling authority, while granting the mahal to the respondent No. 5, acted on a non-existent tender which is accepted beyond the prescribed time. This is not permissible under the Rules. The object of inviting sealed tenders is to keep the price offered by various tenders secret and the method adopted by the settling authority in allowing one of the tenderers to raise the price in the manner done would run counter to the procedure laid down in these Rules besides giving rise to various speculations, rightly or wrongly, about the motive of the settling authority. The scheme of these Rules providing for secrecy, as noticed above, and other requirements to be complied with, both by the tenderers as well as by the settling authorities, clearly go to show that acceptance of a tender after allowing the tenderer, to raise his price is not contemplated under these Rules. In this connection, we feel tempted to quote the following passage from a decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1954 SC 592, Guruswamy v. State of Mysore wherein the unanimous Court, dealing with sale of liquor licences, observed as follows:

"The procedure of tender was not open here because there was no notification and the furtive method adopted of settling a matter of this moment behind the backs of those interested and anxious to compete is unjustified. Apart from all else, that in itself would in this case have resulted in a loss to the State ..... But deeper considerations are also at stake, namely, the elimination of favouritism and nepotism and corruption; not that we suggest that that occurred here, but to permit what has occurred in this case would leave the door wide open to the very evils which the legislature in its wisdom has endeavoured to avoid."

While quoting the above, we must not be understood to mean that we have any suspicion in this case in our mind of any malpractice on the part of the settling authority.

8. In the result, the petition is allowed. The order of settlement in favour of the respondent No. 5 is set aside. Rule Nisi is made absolute. We make no order as to costs.

D. M. SEN. J.: 9. I agree.

Petition allowed.

called the employee's contribution. The liability to pay both the contributions in respect of every employee, whether employed by him directly or through an immediate employer, is, however, cast on the principal employer by Section 40 and the principal employer is given the right to recover from the concerned employee the employee's contribution, by deduction from his wages. Sections 46 to 73 deal with the various benefits available under the Act to insured persons and with other connected matters.

18. The provisions relating to E. I. Court are contained in Chapter VI which deals with "Adjudication of Disputes and Claims" and comprises Sections 74 to 83. Section 74 enjoins the State Government to constitute an E. I. Court for each local area and to appoint to it as judges, such number of persons (possessing the prescribed qualifications) as it may think fit. Sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 75 enumerate the various matters to be decided by the E. I. Court. They consist of claims and questions under the Act regarding which disputes may arise between employers, employees and the Corporation and are to be decided in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Section 75(3) bars the jurisdiction of Civil Courts to decide or deal with any question or dispute covered by S. 75(1) and 75(2) or to adjudicate on any liability which by or under the Act is to be decided by the E. I. Court. Section 76 deals with the territorial jurisdiction of an E. I. Court and the transfer of proceedings from one E. I. Court to another. Section 77 provides that proceedings before an E. I. Court shall be commenced by application and every such application shall be in such form, shall contain such particulars and shall be accompanied by such fee, if any, as may be prescribed by rules made by the State Government in consultation with the Corporation.

19. Section 78 which deals with the powers of the E. I. Court reads:

"ui. (1) The Employees' Insurance Court shall have all the powers of a Civil Court for the purposes of summoning and enforcing the attendance of witnesses compelling the discovery and production of documents and material objects, administering oath and recording evidence and such Court shall be deemed to be a Civil Court within the meaning of Section 195 and Chapter XXXV of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(2) The Employees' Insurance Court shall follow such procedure as may be prescribed by rules made by the State Government.

(3) All costs incidental to any proceeding before an Employees' Insurance Court shall, subject to such rules as may be made in this behalf by the State Government, be in the discretion of the Court.

(4) An order of the Employees' Insurance Court shall be enforceable as if it were a decree passed in a suit by a Civil Court."

20. Section 79 permits any application, appearance or act required to be made or done by any person (other than a witness) to be made or done by a legal practitioner or by an officer of a registered trade union authorised in writing by such person or with the permission of the E. I. Court, by any other person so authorised.

21. Section 80 provides that the E. I. Court shall not direct the payment of any benefit to a person unless he has made a claim (to the Corporation) for such benefit within twelve months after the claim became due and in accordance with the regulations made (by the Corporation) in that behalf. The proviso to the section empowers the Court to relax this condition in appropriate cases.

22. Section 81 provides that an E. I. Court may submit any question of law for the decision of the High Court and if it does so, it shall decide the question pending before it in accordance with such decision.

23. Section 82 lays down that an appeal shall lie to the High Court from an order of the E. I. Court only if it involves a substantial question of law and not otherwise; the period of limitation for such an appeal is sixty days and the provisions of Sections 5 and 12 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, apply to such appeals.

24. Section 83 empowers the E. I. Court to withhold payment of any sum directed to be paid by it where the Corporation has presented an appeal to the High Court against its order.

25. It will be seen from these provisions that the E. I. Court is a creature of the Act, brought into existence for a specific purpose and has to discharge only such functions as are assigned to it under the Act. In deciding matters which come before it for decision, it has to apply the provisions of the Act and has no power nor can have any occasion, to administer the ordinary substantive law of the land. In conducting the proceedings before it, it has to follow such procedure as may be prescribed by rules framed by the State Government and not the procedure followed by the ordinary Civil Courts. If the rules happen to prescribe the same or similar procedure as that of the ordinary Civil Courts, that would not change the legal position. The E. I. Court will then be following that procedure because of the rules and not because it is a 'Court' properly so called. The procedure may be altered by the State Government at any time by altering or amending the rules or by replacing them by fresh rules. The E. I. Court exercises the powers of a Civil Court for the purposes of summoning and enforcing attendance of witnesses etc. because those limited powers are specially conferred upon it by Section 78 of the Act and it is to be 'deemed to be' a Civil Court for certain specified purposes because the Act so provides. It has no power to execute its own orders. An order passed by it is enforceable 'as if it were' a decree passed in a suit by a Civil Court. It is thus clear that the E. I. Court does not satisfy the tests laid down by the Supreme Court in Brijnandan Sinha's case, AIR 1956 SC 66. It is not, therefore, a 'Court' in the strict sense or in the accepted connotation of that term in legal parlance. It follows that it is not a 'Court' for the purposes of the Limitation Act of 1963, and applications made to it are not covered by Article 137 of that Act.

26. Admittedly, there was no other provision of law prescribing any period of limitation for applications to the E. I. Court at the time when the applications with which we are concerned in the present case were filed and no question of condonation of delay can therefore, arise.

27. Mr. Govilkar for the appellants, submits that at any rate there were latches on the part of the respondent Corporation and that should be sufficient to refuse relief to it. The argument would have had some force if the relief sought by the respondent Corporation had been a discretionary relief; but that is not so. There is no dispute that if a proper application is filed before it and the claim is legally established, the Employees' Insurance Court has no discretion to refuse relief on the ground of latches.

28. In the result, both the appeals fail and are dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

AIR 1970 BOMBAY 418 (V 57 C 72)

CHANDRACHUD AND APTE, JJ.

Sayaji Mills Ltd., Appellants v. P. A. Bhaskar, Respondent.

A.F.O.D. No. 406 of 1964, D/- 25-8-1969, against decision of Judge, City Civil Court, Bombay in Short Cause Suit No. 2083 of 1958.

Employees' Provident Funds Act (1952), Section 16(1) — Suit claiming exemption under — Burden of proof — Factory whether entitled to exemption depends on facts of each case — Setting up of new factory — What constitutes — Allegations of material facts in plaint without proof not sufficient to claim exemption —

GN/GN/D271/70/KSB/T

(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 104) — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 2).

Section 16(1) creates an exemption in favour of infant factories and not in favour of persons who run those factories. Whether a particular establishment is an infant factory for the purpose of claiming exemption under S. 16 (1) of the Act, must primarily depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The mere circumstance that the ownership has changed hands, cannot justify the conclusion that the Act will cease to apply to the particular establishment if prior to the change of hands, the Act was applicable to it. (Paras 15, 16)

H, a Cotton Mill, manufacturing textile goods since 1931 was ordered to be wound up on 17-12-1954 on creditor's petition. Prior to this the mill had discharged all its workers and the manufacturing operations had come to an end. The plaintiff, a limited company purchased on 22-7-55 from the official liquidator the mill with all the lands, buildings and stock in trade but without the goodwill of the business or the assets of the mill as a going concern. The plaintiff Company commenced the manufacturing operations on 12-11-1955. The plaintiff filed a suit for declaration against the Provident Fund Commissioner claiming exemption under Section 16(1) of the Act on the ground that the mill was renovated and set up on 12-11-1955 and the Act would not apply to its establishment from that date for a period of three years.

Held that the provisions of the Act and the Scheme were applicable to the mill since the plaintiff had not established by evidence that a new factory was established on 12-11-1955. The burden of establishing that the exemption contained in Section 16(1) applied to the particular establishment was on the plaintiffs. It was not enough for them to say in the plaint, that they had brought in fresh capital or had renovated the old machinery or had purchased new machinery. Pleadings are not evidence, and therefore, the Court cannot assume the existence of the multifarious facts pleaded in the plaint. Misc. Appln. No. 329 of 1956, D/- 5-11-1956 (Bom), Foll.; AIR 1965 Mad 598, Dissented from; AIR 1966 Mad 416 (Overruling AIR 1965 Mad 508), Relied on. Case law reviewed. (Paras 14, 28)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1963) AIR 1968 Guj 71 (V 55) =

1963 Lab IC 342, New Ahmedabad Bansidhar Mills Pvt. Ltd.

v. Union of India 27

(1966) AIR 1966 Mad 416 (V 53) =

1966-1 Mad LJ 338, M/s. R. L. Sabni and Co. v. Union of India 26

(1965) AIR 1965 Andh Pra 200

(V. 52) = 1965-2 Andh WR 326,

Nazeena Traders (P.) Ltd. v.

Regional Provident Fund Commr.,
Hyderabad 27
(1965) AIR 1965 Mad 508 (V 52),
Vittaladas Jagannathdas v. Regional Provident Fund Commr. 25
(1963) AIR 1963 Cal 513 (V 50) =
1963-1 Lab LJ 96, Jamnadas
Agarwalla v. Regional Provi-
dent Fund Commr. W. B. 22
(1962) AIR 1962 Punj 507 (V 49) =
ILR (1962) 2 Punj 456, Regional Provident Fund Commr., Punjab
v. Lakshmi Ratten Engineering Works Ltd. 24
(1959) AIR 1959 Cal 783 (V 46),
Vegetable Product Ltd. v. Regional Provident Fund Commr.,
W. B. 22, 27
(1959) AIR 1959 Ker 3 (V 46) =
1958 Ker LJ 631, Kunnath Textiles v. Regional Provident Fund
Commr. 27
(1959) AIR 1959 Punj 27 (V 46) =
(1959-60) 16 FJR 235, Hindustan
Electric Co. Ltd. v. Regional Provident Fund Commr. 23
(1958) AIR 1958 Punj 55 (V 45) =
59 Pun LR 559, Robindra Textile
Mills v. Secy., Ministry of Labour,
Govt. of India, N. Delhi 23, 27
(1957) AIR 1957 Cal 702 (V 44) =
61 Cal WN 694, M/s. Bharat Board
Mills Ltd. v. Regional Provident
Fund Commr. 21
(1956) Misc. Appln. No 389 of 1956,
D/- 5-11-1956 (Bom), Chhaganlal
Textile Mills Pvt. Ltd. v. Regional Provident Fund Commr. 19
R. Jethmalani, for Appellants; R. J.
Joshi i/b Little and Co., Attorneys, for Respondent.

CHANDRACHUD, J.:— This appeal arises out of a suit for a declaration that the provisions of the Employees' Provident Funds Act, 1952 (Act XIX of 1952), hereinafter called "the Act", cannot be enforced against the plaintiffs in regard to the factory established by them in the name of "Sayaji Mills No. 2", at Ferguson Road, Bombay, until the expiry of three years from the 12th November, 1955. The plaintiffs also asked for a declaration that they are not bound to make any contribution to the Employees' Provident Fund either under the Act or under the Employees' Provident Fund Scheme, 1952. The facts giving rise to the suit are these:

2. Since about 1931, a Cotton Mill in Bombay run by Hirji Mills Ltd. used to manufacture textile goods. On a petition filed by their creditors, Hirji Mills Ltd. were ordered to be wound up under an order of this Court, dated 17th December, 1954. On 22nd July, 1955, the plaintiffs, Shri Sayaji Mills Ltd., a public limited company registered under the Indian Companies Act, purchased the assets of the Hirji Mills Ltd. for Rs. 42,80,000/-, from the Official Liquidator. The conveyance in favour of the plaintiffs was executed on the 5th of December, 1955. The break-up of the consideration shows that, Rs. 5,00,000/- was the price of the land, Rs. 10,62,000/-, the price of the structures and the balance viz., Rs. 27,18,000/-, the price of the plant, machinery and stock-in-trade.

3. The plaintiffs neither acquired the goodwill of the business nor did they purchase the assets of the Hirji Mills Ltd., as a going concern. The manufacturing operations carried on by the Hirji Mills Ltd., had come to an end some time prior to 17th December, 1954 when the winding up order was passed. The Mills had discharged their workers prior to the winding up order.

4. After their purchase, the plaintiffs commenced the manufacturing operations on the 12th November, 1955. On the 28th February, 1956 the Regional Provident Fund Commissioner for this State, who is the defendant to the suit, made certain enquiries of the plaintiffs and called for the relevant information under the Act. The defendant then asked the plaintiffs to make the employers' contribution to the Provident Fund under the Act, but the plaintiffs contended that they were an infant factory within the meaning of Section 16 of the Act and were, therefore, not liable to make contributions to the Provident Fund for a period of three years from the 12th November, 1955 when they commenced manufacturing operations. This contention was rejected by the defendant, who by a letter of 12th December, 1956 called upon the plaintiffs to remit to him contributions payable by them under the Scheme framed under the Act.

5. The plaintiffs thereafter filed a Writ Petition in this Court under Article 226 of the Constitution challenging the right of the defendant to enforce the provisions of the Act against them for a period of three years from the 12th November 1955. That petition was withdrawn and thereafter the plaintiffs brought the present suit.

6. The learned Principal Judge of the City Civil Court, Bombay, who tried the suit, held by his judgment dated 12th December 1963 that the plaintiffs had not established a new factory on the 12th November 1955 as alleged by them and that the provisions of the Act and the Scheme applied to them from the very date that they commenced manufacturing operations, viz., the 12th November, 1955. The correctness of this judgment is challenged by the plaintiffs in this appeal.

7. For a proper appreciation of the question which arises for our decision, it would be necessary to notice some of the provisions of the Act. Section 1(3) of the Act, as it stood at the material time, provided that subject to the provisions contained in Section 16, the Act would apply (a) to every establishment which is a factory engaged in any industry specified in Schedule I and in which fifty or more persons are employed, and (b) to any other establishment employing fifty or more persons or class of such establishments which the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify in this behalf. Section 2(g) defines a "factory" to mean any premises including the precincts thereof, in any part of which a manufacturing process is being carried on or is ordinarily so carried on, whether with the aid of power or without the aid of power. Section 2(h) defines "Fund" to mean Provident Fund established under a Scheme. Section 2(i) defines "Scheme" to mean a "Scheme" framed under the Act. Section 5 empowers the Central Government to frame a Scheme to be called "the Employees' Provident Fund Scheme" for the establishment of provident funds under the Act for employees or for any class of employees and specify the establishments or class of establishments to which the said Scheme shall apply. This section further provides that there shall be established as soon as may be after the framing of the Scheme, a Fund in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the Scheme. Under Section 6, the employer's contribution to the Fund has to be six and a quarter per cent of the basic wages and the dearness allowance for the time being payable to each of the employees. It is in regard to this contribution that the present dispute has arisen.

8. Section 16 of the Act as it stood at the material time read as follows together with the marginal note:

"Act not to apply to factories belonging to Government or local authority and also to infant factories.

"16 (1) The Act shall not apply to

(a) any factory belonging to the Government or a local authority,

(b) any other factory, established whether before or after the commencement of this Act, unless three years have elapsed from its establishment."

9. Sub-section (1) was substituted by Section 3 of the Employees' Provident Funds (Amendment) Act, 1958 (Act XXII of 1958) and thereafter it reads thus:

"This Act shall not apply to any establishment until the expiry of three years from the date on which the establishment is, or has been set up.

Explanation. For the removal of doubts, it is hereby declared that an establishment shall not be deemed to be newly set up merely by reason of a change in its location".

10. Section 16(1) was further amended by Section 5 of the Employees' Provident Funds (Amendment) Act, 1960 (Act 46 of 1960). Under Clause (a) of the amended sub-section, the Act does not apply to an establishment registered under the Co-operative Societies Act. The Act does not apply to any registered Co-operative Societies employing less than fifty persons and working without the aid of power. Under clause (b) of the amended sub-section the Act does not apply to any other establishment employing 50 or more persons or twenty or more but less than fifty until the expiry of three years in the case of the former and five years in the case of the latter from the date on which the establishment is or has been set up. The explanation to the sub-section is retained.

11. It shall have been noticed that though Section 16(1) has undergone these amendments, the basis of exemption has remained substantially unaltered in so far as the factories like the one before us are concerned.

12. The question which we have to consider is whether by reason of the plaintiffs having purchased the assets of the Hirji Mills on 22nd July 1955 and by reason of their having commenced manufacturing operations under their own auspices on the 12th of November 1955, the Act will not apply to them until the expiry of 3 years from the date on which the factory was established, i.e., from the 12th of November 1955. It is common ground that the relevant date for the purposes of Section 16(1) is not the date on which the plaintiffs purchased the factory, nor the date on which the conveyance was executed in their favour, but the date on which they commenced manufacturing operations.

13. It is urged by Mr. Jethmalani, who appears on behalf of the plaintiffs, that between the 17th of December 1954, when the High Court passed the winding up order against the Hirji Mills Ltd., and the 12th of November, 1955 when the plaintiffs commenced manufacturing operations, a factory, as defined by Sec. 2(g) was not in existence, and therefore, a new factory must be held to have been established on 12th November 1955. According to the learned counsel, Hirji Mills Ltd., which had to suffer an order of liquidation, had stopped manufacturing operations for an indefinite period and the possibility of resumption of those operations within a foreseeable period could not have been envisaged with reasonable certainty. The Mills had discharged all of their workers, and therefore, not only was no manufacturing process carried on, but the workers with whose co-operation alone such a process could have been resumed, were also discharged, and therefore, the identity of the establishment was completely destroyed even prior to the order of winding up. It is finally said that the plaintiffs renovated the mills, brought in new capital, re-employed only 65 to 70 per cent of the old workers and that too on fresh terms and conditions of service, and therefore, the factory established by the plaintiffs on the 12th November, 1955 is an infant factory which would attract the application of Section 16(1).

14. We are unable to accept this argument. In the first place, it is necessary to clarify that no evidence was led by the plaintiffs to show that they had in fact renovated the old Mills or that they had brought in new capital. Mr. Jethmalani says that the averments made by the plaintiffs in paragraph 3 of the plaint, that they had put in their own capital, that they had brought new machinery, that they had renovated the old machinery, that they had employed new staff and workmen, entered into fresh commitments for supply of raw materials, made new arrangements for the sale of finished goods and commenced production of goods of an entirely different type, were not traversed by the defendant in his written statement. Now, by paragraph 7 of his written statement the defendant denied that the factory set up by the plaintiffs on 12th November, 1955 was a new factory within the meaning of the Act. The defendant also denied that on the closure of the Hirji Mills Ltd., the provisions of the Act had ceased to apply to the factory run by them, because according to the defendant, the Act would apply to the factory irrespective of the closure of the Mills. The burden of establishing that the exemption contained in Section 16(1) applied to the particular establishment was on the plaintiffs. It was not enough for them to say in the plaint that they had brought in fresh capital or had renovated the old machinery or had purchased new machinery. Pleadings are not evidence, and therefore, we cannot assume the existence of the multifarious facts on which the plaintiffs' counsel relies.

15. The importance of considerations such as those referred to by the plaintiffs in paragraph 3 of the plaint is that whether the exemption under Section 16(1) of the Act can apply, i.e., whether a particular establishment is an infant factory, must primarily depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The mere circumstance that the ownership has changed hands, cannot justify the conclusion that the Act will cease to apply to the particular establishment if prior to the change of hands, the Act was applicable to it.

16. Section 1(3) (a) makes it clear that subject to the provisions contained in Section 16, the Act applies to every establishment which is a factory engaged in any industry specified in Schedule I and in which fifty or more persons are employed. It was conceded by Mr. Jethmalani before us that the requirements of Section 1(3) (a) are satisfied in this case, that is, that the establishment run by the plaintiffs is a factory, that the factory is engaged in an industry specified in Schedule I and that fifty or more persons are employed in the factory. Section 16(1) creates an exemption in favour of infant factories, not in favour of new or infant owners. In terms, the exemption is created by the statute in favour of factories and not in favour of persons who run those factories. The circumstance, therefore, that the Hirji Mills Ltd., changed hands cannot give to the plaintiffs the benefit of the exemption contained in Section 16(1).

17. The fact that Hirji Mills went into liquidation does not mean that the factory had ceased to function for all time or that by reason of the winding up order the prospect of the resumption of the manufacturing process by the factory could not be envisaged. It is well known that despite a winding up order the Liquidator can be empowered to run the business and even after the winding up order is passed, instances are not lacking, particularly in regard to textile Mills, where the manufacturing process is permitted to be resumed in pursuance of a Scheme framed by the Court in consultation with the creditors of the Company. In the first place, therefore, the plaintiffs have failed to establish that they either brought fresh capital or new machinery or that they renovated the machinery so as to justify the conclusion that the identity of the old establishment was destroyed. Secondly, the old establishment cannot be deemed to have been closed for an indefinite period.

18. There are a series of decisions of various High Courts on the point which arises before us. The decisions are so uniform that one can risk the proposition that it is settled law that the exemption under Section 16(1) cannot apply merely be reason of a change in the ownership of a factory.

19. The starting point of almost all of these decisions is an unreported decision of Justice Tendolkar of this Court, in Misc. Appln. No. 389 of 1956, D/-5-11-1956 (Bom). There, a Company called the Chalisgaon Shri Laxminarayan Mills Co. Ltd. carried on business of manufacturing textiles in their mills known as the Chalisgaon Shri Laxminarayan Mills. The Company was ordered to be wound up at the instance of the creditors in August 1951. In March, 1952 the Liquidator gave a lease of the Mills to Messrs. Kotak and Co. for a period of three years from 1952 till 1955. On the termination of the lease, the lessee discharged all the employees and paid them their dues fully, including the provident fund standing to their credit. On the 28th February, 1955 the Liquidator granted a lease to Babulal Shrivallabh for a period of one year from the 1st of March, 1955 to 29th February, 1956. The lease, inter alia, provided that the lessee shall not be liable in respect of any liabilities of the Mills incurred prior to the 1st of March, 1955 and that they shall work the Mills as a new concern and not as successors of either the lessors or of Messrs. Kotak and Co. The new lessees, viz. Messrs. Babulal Shrivallabh, entered into possession on 13th of March, 1955 and announced by a notice that workers would be recruited on a new and purely temporary basis and that no worker will be entitled to any benefit that may have accrued to him for his previous service in the Mills. The lessees applied for and obtained a licence under the Factories Act for working the Mills. Pending their contention before the Regional Provident Fund Commissioner that the Act will not apply to them for a period of three years after the date on which they started the manufacturing process, the Liquidator sold the Mills to them on the 4th of September, 1956. Thereafter they floated a private Limited Company and transferred the Mills to that Company. The correspondence with the Regional Provident Fund Commissioner was continued by the Company and when the Regional Provident Fund Commissioner finally intimated to it that it would not be entitled to the exemption under Section 16(1), it filed a Writ Petition which was heard by Tendolkar, J.

20. The learned Judge rejected the contention of the Company that the Mills ceased to be established when the liquidation order was passed, that they ceased to be established for a second time when the lease of Kotak and Co. expired or that the new establishment was set up when Messrs. Babulal Shrivallabh obtained a fresh lease. After referring to the provision contained in Section 1(3) of the Act, the learned Judge says:

"The important point to notice about this provision is that the Act is made applicable to factories and not to the owners thereof; or, in other words, it applies to factories irrespective of who the owners from time to time may be". The learned Judge proceeds:

"The question is whether the order of liquidation and the consequent temporary discontinuance of business until a lease was granted to Kotak and Company has the consequence of making the factory which was established cease to be established. In my opinion the answer to this question must be in the negative. A temporary cessation of the activities of an established factory cannot lead to the result that the factory ceases to be established for the purposes of the Employees' Provident Funds Act, for if it did, the class of employers who spare no ingenuity in seeking to deprive the employees of all the benefits conferred upon them by statute would have convenient handle whereby the activities of an established factory have to be discontinued for a few months in order to deprive the employees of the benefits under the Employees' Provident Funds Act. I take it that the establishment of a factory involves that the factory has gone into production and no more ..... but once it goes into production, a temporary cessation of its activities, for whatever reasons that cessation takes place, cannot, in my opinion, take the factory out of the category of an established factory for the purposes of the Employees' Provident Funds Act." Towards the conclusion of his judgment, the learned Judge says that:

"..... even a complete change in the whole body of employees cannot make a factory which is established, cease to be established. In any event, the Employees' Provident Funds Act is a beneficial legislation for the benefit of the employees and every construction of its provisions which would defeat the object of the legislation and lead to an evasion, must be rejected, unless the clear language of the Act leave no option to the Court but to accept such an interpretation."

We are in respectful agreement with this view.

21. This decision has been uniformly followed by various High Courts and we must briefly notice those decisions. In M/s. Bharat Board Mills Ltd. v. Regional Provident Fund Commr., AIR 1957 Cal 702 the learned Single Judge observed:

"The date of establishment of a factory is the date when the factory starts its manufacturing process. The fact that a new company or concern subsequently takes over or acquires the factory does not shift the date of the establishment of the factory to the date of its taking over or acquisition; nor does the fact that the factory had ceased to produce goods for a certain time and resumed production after certain brief intervals result in extinction of the old factory and establishment of a new factory".

In this case Messrs. Bharat Board Mills Ltd., had purchased machinery from another Company, viz. India Paper and Board Mills Company under an agreement dated 12th October 1950. Under a sale dated the 13th October, 1950 Messrs. Bharat Board Mills Ltd. also purchased a structure along with some lands. They obtained a certificate of incorporation and commenced business on 31st July, 1950. They had not purchased the goodwill of the India Paper and Board Mills Company. They did not take over the liabilities of that Company and what was more, the awards of the Industrial Tribunal which decided certain disputes between the factory and its employees and between the previous and present owners thereof, treated the purchasers as a new concern. In spite of these facts, the contention that the purchasers were entitled to the benefit of exemption contained in Section 16(1) of the Act was rejected by the learned Judge.

22. The same view has been taken in Vegetable Products Ltd. v. Regional Provident Fund Commr. W. B., AIR 1959 Cal 783, which also relies on the judgment of Tendolkar, J. and in Jamnadas Agarwalla v. Regional Provident Fund Commr. W. B., AIR 1963 Cal 513, which follows the earlier decision in the Bharat Board Mills' case. In the Vegetable Products' case, the business of manufacturing vegetable oils was carried on by a company prior to December, 1951. In February, 1952 the Company was ordered to be wound up. In December, 1953, the Official Liquidator sold the factory. The contention of the purchasers that they had established a new factory after their purchase when they started manufacturing operations was rejected by the learned Judge even though there was a time-lag of nearly two years between the cessation of its business by the old company and the commencement of their business by the purchasers.

23. Justice Tendolkar's Judgment has been followed consistently by the High Court of Punjab also. In Robindra Textile Mills. v. Secy. Ministry of Labour, Govt. of India, New Delhi, AIR 1958 Punj 55 Bishan Narain J. says:

"Neither the Act nor the scheme provides tests for determining when a factory can be said to have been established and it is therefore, necessary to examine the provisions of the Act and the Scheme to find out the intention of the legislation". The learned Judge refers to the definition of the "factory" in Section 2(g) and concludes that the change of ownership cannot start a fresh date of the establishment of a factory, nor even the fact that subsequently, the original machinery was re-conditioned. According to the learned Judge, the emphasis in the Scheme is on the factory which carries on manufacturing process and on the employees who are the beneficiaries under the Act, and the exemption cannot apply merely because the factory has changed hands. The same view has been taken by Mr. Justice Grover, as His Lordship then was, in Hindustan Electric Co. Ltd. v. Regional Provident Fund Commr., AIR 1959 Punj 27. In that case the Government of India sold a factory belonging to it on the 17th February, 1955. The Regional Provident Fund Commissioner called upon the purchasers to contribute to the Provident Fund but they contended that they established the factory after their purchase in October, 1955 and, therefore, they would be entitled to the protection available to the 'infant factories' under Section 16(1) of the Act. This contention was rejected on the ground that the date of the establishment of a factory is the date when the factory starts its manufacturing process and the fact that a new company or concern subsequently takes over acquires the factory, does not shift the date of the establishment of the factory to the date of its being taken over. The period of three years under Section 16(1) was held to begin from the date of the original establishment of the factory and not from the date when the purchasers started manufacturing operations.

24. This judgment went in appeal in Regional Provident Fund Commissioner, Punjab v. Lakshmi Ratten Engineering Works Ltd., AIR 1962 Punj 507 where a Division Bench, consisting of Dulat J. and Dua, J. (as His Lordship then was) affirmed the view of Grover, J. in regard to the interpretation of Section 16(1) of the Act. The learned Judges held that what was exempted by Section 16 was only the factory which was not established for more than three years. If the factory was being used for manufacturing purposes long before the new purchasers acquired it, it could not be said that the factory was not established for more than three years.

25. The only decision which has struck a discordant note is that of Anantnarayanan, J. in Vittaldas Jagannathdas v. Regional Provident Fund Commr., AIR 1965 Mad 508 in which it was held:—

"that an establishment means an "Organised body of men maintained for a purpose" ..... Where, therefore, on the entire complex of facts of a given case, it can be concluded that the legal entity "the establishment" had come totally to an end, and was succeeded by a fresh legal entity, then that fresh entity is the entity to which the Act applies as a first impact and, if that entity is entitled to infancy protection, that protection will have to be granted as a matter of course, even if it happens by coincidence to have employed a large part of the personnel of the previous establishment".

That was a case of a lease of a cinema house and the learned Judge held that on the termination of the old lease of the talkies a new establishment must be deemed to have come into existence so as to attract the exemption of Section 16(1). With respect we are unable to agree with this decision. In the case of a lease of a cinema house, it would, in our opinion, be difficult to hold that the new lessee who conducts the same business has set up a new establishment so as to be able to claim the exemption under Section 16(1). If a new lessee or a new purchaser comes on the scene one may say that a new concern has come into existence. What is, however, relevant for the purposes of Section 16 is not whether it is an old or a new concern, but whether it is a new establishment.

26. The decision of Anantanarayan, J. was overruled by a Division Bench in M/s. R. L. Sahni and Co. v. Union of India, AIR 1966 Mad 416, while hearing an appeal in another matter. The learned Chief Justice who delivered the Judgment of the Bench says that the exemption under Section 16(1) is available to the establishment as such and not to the owner or the lessee or the manager thereof. It cannot be postulated that each time there is a change of hands, a new establishment comes into existence. In taking this view, the Division Bench has followed the decision of the High Courts of Calcutta and Punjab, to which we have referred earlier.

27. A Division Bench of the High Court of Kerala in Kunnath Textiles v. Regional Provident Fund Commr., AIR 1959 Ker 3, a Division Bench of the High Court of Andhra Pradesh in Nazeena Traders (P) Ltd. v. Regional Provident Fund Commr. Hyderabad, AIR 1965 Andh Pra 200 and a single Judge of the High Court of Gujarat in New Ahmedabad Bansidar Mills Pvt. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1968 Guj 71, have taken the same view. The decision of the Kerala High Court is not apposite to the point before us because there the existing owners had resorted to a subterfuge for evading their liability under the Act. The Judgment of the Andhra Pradesh High Court does not refer to previous authorities, but the learned Judge of the Gujarat High Court has relied on the judgment of Tendolkar, J. and on AIR 1958 Punj 55 & AIR 1959 Cal 783, to which we have already referred.

28. In the result, we hold that the provisions of the Act and the Scheme are applicable to the plaintiffs. They are, therefore, liable to make their contribution to the Employers' Provident Fund. The decree, passed by the learned Judge is accordingly confirmed and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 BOMBAY 424 (V 57 C 73)
PALEKAR AND TULZAPURKAR, JJ.

Rustom K. Karanjia and another, Plaintiffs v. Krishnaraj M. D. Thackersey and others, Defendants.

Appeal No. 24 of 1965 and Suit No. 319 of 1964, D/- 22-7-1969.

(A) Torts — Libel — Qualified privilege — Privileged occasion — Fact that subject-matter is of general public importance not sufficient — Party must have duty to communicate to the public.

HN/IM/D864/DHZ/M

It is not sufficient to attract the protection of qualified privilege that the subject-matter is one of general public interest. The person or the newspaper who wants to communicate to the general public must also have a duty to communicate, and the person to whom the communication is made must have a corresponding duty or interest to receive it. The principle on which the privilege is based is that such communications are protected for the common convenience and welfare of Society.

(Paras 21, 22)

The journalist like any other citizen has the right to comment fairly and, if necessary, severely on a matter of public interest, provided the allegations of facts he has made are accurate and truthful, however defamatory they may be otherwise. Since his right to comment on matters of public interest is recognized by law, the journalist obviously owes an obligation to the public to have his facts right. Where the journalist himself makes an investigation, he must make sure that all his facts are accurate and true, so that if challenged, he would be able to prove the same. Public interests are better served that way. Case law discussed.

(Para 25)

(B) Torts — Libel — Qualified privilege — Malice — Burden of proof — Burden is on plaintiff

Malice in law, which is presumed in every false and defamatory statement, stands rebutted by a privileged occasion. In such a case, in order to make a libel actionable, the burden of proving actual or express malice is always on the plaintiff. Malice in that sense means making use of a privileged occasion for an indirect or improper motive. Such malice can be proved in a variety of ways, inter alia (i) by showing that the writer did not honestly believe in the truth of the allegations, or that he believed the same to be false (ii) or that the writer is moved by hatred or dislike, or a desire to injure the subject of the libel and is merely using the privileged occasion to defame and (iii) by showing that out of anger, prejudice or wrong motive, the writer casts aspersions on other people, reckless whether they are true or false. (1930) 1 KB 130 & (1892) 1 QB 431, Relied on.

(Para 26)

(C) Torts — Defamation — Damages — Damages are compensatory and not punitive.

Damages for defamation are purely compensatory. There is no room for importing the concept of exemplary or punitive damages except in two well-defined categories of cases. The first category is of those cases where the plaintiff is injured by the oppressive, arbitrary or unconstitutional action by the executive or the servants of the Government. The second category is comprised of those cases in which the defendant's conduct has been calculated by him to make a profit for himself which may well exceed the compensation payable to the plaintiff. Where a newspaper is the defendant, it cannot be said without more that the publication has been made with a view to make profits. Aggravated damages may be awarded within the compensatory principle if there has been any kind of high-handed, oppressive, insulting or contumacious behaviour by the defendant which increases the mental pain and suffering which is caused by the defamation and which may constitute injury to the plaintiff's pride and self-confidence. But these elements cannot be taken into consideration to award what are in law punitive or exemplary damages. (1964) 1 All ER 367 & (1964) 3 All ER 947, Relied on. (Paras 38, 41)

(D) Torts — Defamation — Damages — Damage to reputation — Diminution in esteem and extent of mental distress to be considered.

In an action for defamation the wrongful act is damage to the plaintiff's reputation. The injuries that he sustains may be classified under two heads: (i) the consequences of the attitude adopted to him by other persons as a result of the diminution of the esteem in which they hold him because of the defamatory statement; and (ii) the grief or annoyance caused by the defamatory statement to the plaintiff himself. It is damages under this second head which may be aggravated by the manner in which, or the motives with which, the statement was made or persisted in. The presence of the plaintiff in the witness-box gives the jury or the judge an opportunity, which the Appellate Court does not have, to form their view of his personality whether he is a particularly sensitive man, and to assess the grief and annoyance which it would cause him as a sort of person they thought him to be. (1964) 3 All ER 947, Relied on.

(Para 42)

(E) Torts — Defamation — Damages — Exemplary damages awarded by trial Court when not due — High Court in appeal has power and duty to interfere with the decree for damages — (Letters Patent (Bom.), Cl. 15). (Para 43)

(F) Torts — Defamation — Damages — Power of appellate Court to interfere.

Appellate Courts are, and should be, most reluctant to interfere with the assessment of damages for defamation by the trial Judge but, that is so, because the latter has a unique opportunity of seeing the parties before him when equating the two incommensurables, viz., the diminution in esteem and the mental distress of the plaintiff. Where the plaintiff has not entered the witness-box or examined anybody for proving the same, the Appellate Court is in no worse position than the trial Judge in making the proper assessment. Even otherwise, what are proper damages is always a matter of impression. (Para 45)

(G) Torts — Defamation — Damages — Costs of the litigation cannot be included in damages — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 35).

The costs between an attorney and client are very much more than the costs between party and party, and costs actually incurred are much more than the costs awarded by the decree. But this consideration is extraneous to the question as to what damages are to be awarded for the injury caused. A party complaining about a tort like libel can only ask compensation for the injury sustained. It cannot include any part of the costs. Costs have to be decreed only in accordance with the rules of the court.

(Para 46)

(H) Torts — Defamation — Damages — Plea of justification entirely given up — Evidence relating to justification cannot be reconsidered for purposes of mitigation of damages. (Para 47)

(I) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, Rr. 4 and 33 — Defamation — Damages — One decree against all defendants — Variation in appeal must be even against defendant not appealing.

There must be one verdict and one judgment against all for the total damages awarded. What the plaintiff is entitled to receive is a sum representing the damages that he has suffered from a single wrong inflicted by all. There cannot be two decrees for different amounts in respect of the same libel. The fact that one of the defendants has not appealed is not of much consequence in view of the principles underlying Rules 4 and 35 of Order 41. (Para 49)

(J) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 35 — Costs — Appeal on two grounds — On one ground arguments going on for 22 days and appellant failing — Appellant succeeding partially on the other ground — Held if appellant had confined his arguments only to second ground appeal would have been disposed of in not more than five or six days — Hence appellant should pay four-fifth of the costs of appeal to respondent and bear his own costs. (Para 50)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1967) 1967-3 All ER 523 (PC).

Australian Consolidated Press v. Uren 39

(1975) 1965-2 All ER 523 = 1975-1
WLR 805, Broadway Approvals
Ltd. v. Dhams Press Ltd. 38

(1964) 1964-1 All ER 367 = 1964
AC 1129, Rookes v. Barnard 38, 39, 40

(1964) 1964-3 All ER 947 = 1964-2
WLR 45, McCarey v. Associated Newspapers Ltd. 38, 40, 42

- (1963) 1963-2 All ER 151 = 79
LCR 489, Lewis v. Daily Telegraph Ltd.
- (1961) 1961-1 AC 1690 = 1961-1 All ER 876, Plato Films Ltd. v. Spicidel
- (1960) 1960-3 WLR 352 = 1960-2 QB 535, Webb v. Times Publishing Co. Ltd.
- (1964) 50 TLR 581 = 78 SJ 617, Youssouf v. Metro-Goldwyn Mayer Pictures Ltd.
- (1930) 1930-1 KB 131 = 45 TLR 619, Watt v. Longsdon
- (1917) 1917 AC 509 = 86 JKB 849 (HL), Adam v. Ward
- (1916) 1916-2 AC 15 = 85 LJKB 698, London Association for Protection of Trade v. Greenlands Ltd
- (1915) 31 TLR 299 (CA), Adam v. Ward
- (1914) AIR 1914 PC 116 (V 1) = 30 TLR 462 = 41 Ind App 149, Channing Arnold v. King Emperor
- (1909) 25 TLR 534 = 1909-2 KB 958, Mangena v Wright
- (1893) 59 Fed 530, Post Pub. Co. v. Hallam
- (1892) 1 QB 431 = 61 LJ QB 409, Royal Aquarium and Summer and Winter Garden Society v. Parkinson
- (1891) 7 TLR 502 = 1891-2 QB 341, Stuart v. Bell
- (1889) 23 QBD 400 = 5 TLR 651, Allbutt v. General Council of Medical Education and Registration
- (1877) 2 CPD 215 = 46 LJQB 308, Purcell v. Sowler
- (1863) 122 ER 288 = 3 F & F 421, Campbell v. Spottiswoode
- (1862) 4 F & F 12 = 176 ER 445, Cox v. Feeney
- (1834) 149 ER 1044 = 1 CM & R 181, Toogood v. Spyring
- 28 DLR 343 (Canada), Banks v. Globe & Mail Ltd.
- 22 DLR (2d) 277 (SC Canada), The Globe and Mail Ltd. v. Boland and defendant No. 4 who is respondent No. 2(a) in the appeal.

2. The plaintiff is a prominent businessman and industrialist of Bombay. At the time of the suit he was a partner in a firm which had been carrying on the business of Managing Agents of four textile mills. He was a Director of the Bank of India and of several other well-known companies. He was also the Chairman of the Textile Control Board which had been set up by the Government during the last World War. He was also the Chairman of the Indian Cotton Mills Federation.

3. Defendant No. 1 is the Editor of the "Blitz" and has accepted responsibility for the Article referred to above. Defendant No. 2 is a Private Limited Company which owns the newspaper. Original defendant No. 3, with whom we are no longer concerned, was the printer of the issue of the "Blitz", but since at an early stage of the suit he tendered an apology, the plaintiff withdrew his suit against him. Defendant No. 4 was joined subsequently in the suit as a joint tort-feasor since it was, principally, upon material furnished by him and with his agreement that the article was published in "Blitz".

4. The plaintiff claimed that the Article aforesaid, which is separately exhibited as Exhibit 6, was grossly defamatory of him. The whole of the Article was reproduced in the plaint. He alleged that the allegations and imputations made in that Article along with the several innuendoes set out in detail in the plaint were false and malicious, and as a result of the same, the plaintiff was injured in his character, credit and reputation and in the way of his business and had been brought into the public hatred, contempt and ridicule. Therefore, he alleged, he had suffered damages which he assessed at Rs. 3,00,000/-. As the Article itself showed that the defendants contemplated publishing a series of similar articles, the plaintiff further asked for a permanent injunction.

5. The suit was, principally, contested by defendants 1 and 2. That the Article was defamatory was not seriously disputed. The principal defences offered were, (i) justification (ii) fair comment on a matter of public interest; and (iii) qualified privilege. It was also contended that the damages claimed were excessive and disproportionate.

6. After a trial, which, we are told, went on for 101 days, in which most of the evidence was produced by the defendants and very little on behalf of the plaintiff, the learned Judge negatived the three defences referred to above, and holding that the plaintiff had been grossly defamed by that article and punitive damages were awardable in this case.

PALEKAR, J.:— This appeal by defendants 1 and 2 arises out of a libel suit filed by the plaintiff-respondent No. 1, on the original side of this Court in respect of an Article published in the English Weekly "Blitz" in its issue of 24th September 1960. The plaintiff sought to recover Rs. 3,00,000/- as general damages and prayed for an injunction. A decree has been passed for the full claim with costs and future interest against defendants 1, 2 decreed the full claim of damages of Rs. 3,00,000/- with costs. He also gave the injunction asked for.

7. It is from this decree that the present appeal has been filed by defendants 1 and 2. Learned counsel for the appellants did not press their appeal against the finding of the learned Judge on the pleas of justification and fair comment, but confined their arguments to the plea of "qualified privilege". They also pressed the plea that the damages awarded to the plaintiff were excessive, disproportionate and unreasonable.

8. The defence of "qualified privilege" is set out in the written statement at para 11A and is as follows:

"11A. Without prejudice to the aforesaid contentions of the defendants and in the alternative, these defendants say that the said Article appearing in the issue of Blitz dated 24th September 1960 is protected as being on an occasion of qualified privilege in that the defendants honestly and without any indirect or improper motive and for general welfare of society published the said Article as it was the duty as Journalists to do and believing the allegations contained in the said article to be true."

Mr. Chari in his address assured us that he would stick to this defence as set out in the written statement. The law with regard to "qualified privilege", which holds good to this day, has been stated by Parke, B. in Toogood v. Spyring. (1834) 149 ER 1044 at p. 1049, as follows:

"In general, an action lies for the malicious publication of statements which are false in fact, and injurious to the character of another (within the well-known limits as to verbal slander), and the law considers such publication as malicious, unless it is fairly made by a person in the discharge of some public or private duty, whether legal or moral, or in the conduct of his own affairs, in matters where his interest is concerned. In such cases, the occasion prevents the inference of malice, which the law draws from unauthorized communications, and affords a qualified defence depending upon the absence of actual malice. If fairly warranted by any reasonable occasion or exigency and honestly made, such communications are protected for the common convenience and welfare of society, and the law has not restricted the right to make them within any narrow limits"

9. Before we proceed to determine whether the Article containing defamatory allegations was published on a privileged occasion, we have to see what precisely the Article would convey to its reader. See the speech of Lord Reid at page 153 in Lewis v. Daily Telegraph, Ltd., (1963) 2 All ER 151.

10. The first thing to be noted while reading the Article is that the Article is not an attack on the personal or private character of the plaintiff. The attack is directed against the business organisation going by the name of "House of Thackersey" of which, it is alleged, the plaintiff is the head. According to Mr. Chari, the Article is not an aimless literary composition. The writer under the pen-name of "Blitz's Racket-Buster" wanted to expose in a series of articles, first how this "House of Thackersey", that is, the business organisation, consisting, principally, of the plaintiff, his brothers, their wives and close relations and friends, built up, thanks to the official position held by the plaintiff as the chairman of the Textile Control Board — a vast Empire of wealth by — having recourse to unlawful and questionable means, involving tax-evasion on a colossal scale, financial jugglery, import-export-rackets, and customs and foreign-exchange violations. Secondly, he wanted to suggest that owing to conditions prevailing at the time and owing to the enormous power and prestige wielded by the plaintiff, investigations into the operations of the "House" got bogged down for years leaving the "House of Thackersey" free to acquire great wealth.

11. According to Mr. Chari, the several individual allegations made in the article are merely incidental or subsidiary and fall squarely in the general pattern of the two purposes mentioned above. The main part of the Article begins with a historical narration giving some details about the "House of Thackersey." It is mentioned there that the business carried on by this "House" was on the brink of disaster in 1953 but it got a boost like any other business in the early War years. The plaintiff's position in the textile trade was recognised by the Government who appointed him as the Chairman of the Textile Control Board. This gave the plaintiff a chance not only to further the interest of his satellite concerns but also to exert pressure to smother investigations made with regard to the operations of the "Thackersey House" and the plaintiff's personal involvement as a Director in the affairs of the Sholapur Mills. Owing to the inaction of Government, and being emboldened by such inaction, the "House of Thackersey" was left free to build its vast cartel and mint untold wealth. That was the position of the "House of Thackersey" before it embarked, according to the Article, on a career of building a financial empire.

12. This empire was built by the "House" by embarking on a new line of business in the import-export field. Bogus factories and firms were brought into existence with a view to wangle fabulous licences for unlawfully importing artificial silk yarn. This yarn was sold through the media of these bogus factories. Enormous profits were made in these transactions which were concealed by financial jugglery which enabled the "House of Thackersey" to evade income-tax, which, with penalty, was computed at Rs 4.66 crores. In order to manage these operations on a large scale, bank credits were obtained from obliging banks by the two firms of China Cotton Exporters and Laxmi Cotton Traders which had been recently started. Laxmi Cotton Traders was supposed to be practically owned and managed by the ladies of the house-hold who knew little business. The Article suggested that these concerns were really the Concerns of the plaintiff, and enormous credits had been obtained from the banks not on the standing of the Concerns themselves but on the standing of the plaintiff who had become, in the meantime, a Director in a couple of Insurance Firms, two Banks, and several other Concerns for this purpose.

13. That was one way how the "House of Thackersey" accumulated vast wealth in India. Another way to which they had recourse was to accumulate large funds of foreign currency in foreign countries which the "House of Thackersey" surreptitiously brought into India in violation of Customs and Foreign Exchange Regulations. This part of the case, however, was reserved for the Article to be published in the next week. "Blitz" promised that in the next Article, it would narrate (i) how these funds were brought to India from China and even Pakistan; (ii) how the Reserve Bank, the Finance Ministry and the Special Police Establishment got the scent and started investigations way back in 1953-54 (iii) how investigations had still remained incomplete, (iv) how investigating officers were frequently transferred; and (v) how one officer, just on the eve of leading a mass police raid on the "Thackersey Empire" unfortunately met with a fatal car-accident.

14. Special reference was also made to the inaction of Government with regard to tax evasion by pointing out in the first two paragraphs of the Article that though income-tax evaded together with penalty was computed at about Rs. 4.66 crores and the case had passed through the Finance Ministry during the regimes of three successive Finance Ministers, Government had not succeeded in collecting the amount. On the other hand, it is suggested in paragraph 3 that the vast Industrial Empire of the Thackerseys continued to flourish and prosper, while its supreme boss, the plaintiff, as the Chairman of the Indian Cotton Mills Federation lorded over the entire textile-trade and openly defied the Government's plans to reduce cloth prices.

15. Thus, on a reading of the Article, Mr. Chari submits, the several allegations and imputations in the Article complained of as defamatory were made in the context of dealing with two principal objects of the Article, one being to show how an influential business organisation amassed wealth by unlawful and questionable means, and secondly, how, when a probe into their unlawful activities was undertaken, the investigation somehow got bogged down for years on end with no tangible results.

16. If, as Mr. Chari submits, these were the objects with which the Article was written—and we shall assume for the purposes of his argument that it was so—there is no escape from the conclusion, that the subject-matter of the Article was of great public interest. The public are vitally interested in being assured that great concentration of wealth which is discouraged by Clauses (b) and (c) of Art 39 of the Constitution does not take place, and if it does, either because of Government's inaction or because of deliberate violation of the law on the part of any business organisation, the public have a legitimate interest to know about it. If again, owing to corruption, inefficiency or neglect on the part of the State investigating machinery, offenders are not speedily brought to book, that would also be a matter of vital public interest.

17. Mr. Chari, therefore, contends that this particular situation gave the newspaper "Blitz" a privileged occasion, that is to say, an occasion giving rise to a duty on the part of the newspaper to address a communication to its readers, the citizens of India, who were interested in receiving the communication. Therefore, any defamatory matter incidental to the subject-matter of the communication was protected by law unless express malice was proved by the plaintiff.

18. On the other hand, it was contended by Mr. Murzban Mistry, on behalf of the plaintiff, Respondent No. 1, that a privileged occasion cannot be created by a person for himself to enable him to publish a defamatory statement which he cannot sustain or justify. According to him, a man publishing, without undertaking an obligation to justify, that on his own investigation he had found a public officer to be corrupt cannot claim immunity from liability for defamation by saying that he published it on an occasion of qualified privilege. If the contrary were true, he urged, public or private life would become impossible, because a journalist claiming to investigate for himself facts about an individual in his private or public affairs would be entitled to publish grossly defamatory statements about him on the ground of public interest and claim protection under the principle of qualified privilege. Mr. Mistry does not agree that the Article was but in order to meet the argument of Mr. Chari, he is prepared to assume that the Article was published in the public interest. But in his submission, the law does not permit publication of a defamatory matter even in the public interest when the journalist is not in a position to show that he has any duty to communicate the defamatory matter to the general public.

19. The proposition for which Mr. Chari contends, when reduced to general terms, would be that, given a subject-matter of wide public interest affecting the citizens of India, a newspaper publishing to the public at large statements of facts relevant to the subject-matter, though defamatory in content, should be held to be doing so on an occasion of qualified privilege.

20. In our opinion, such a broad proposition is not recognized by the law. The question arose before the Court of Appeal in England in Adam v. Ward, (1915) 31 TLR 299 (CA). In that case, Major Adam, as Member of Parliament, made certain defamatory observations about Major-General Scobell relating to the latter's discharge of his official duties. Scobell was the Brigadier and Major Adam's superior when Major Adam formerly held a commission in the 5th Lancers being a regiment commanded by Scobell. While Major Adam enjoyed absolute immunity for his speech made in Parliament, Major-General Scobell could, under the statutory regulations, only appeal to the Army Council to make an inquiry into his own conduct. The Army Council made the necessary inquiry and absolved Major-General Scobell from all blame. The Secretary of the Army Council, Ward, made the communication to Major-General Scobell and the same was published by Ward in all the newspapers through the usual media. This communication contained some references to Major Adam. They were admitted to be defamatory. The libel action commenced by Major Adam against Ward on the basis of this publication was resisted by Ward on the ground of qualified privilege. In the judgment delivered by Lord Justice Buckley, in which the other two Lord Justices concurred, it was distinctly accepted that the matter was of general public interest. The question was whether, assuming that the matter was of general public interest, Ward had any duty to communicate to the general public. Dealing with this question, Lord Justice Buckley observed—

"Involved in this question of duty is the question of the subject-matter being such as there exists a duty to communicate. If the communication be to the public, this question may be whether the matter is matter of public interest ... In Cox v. Feeney, (1862) 4 F and F 13 at

p. 18 a dictum of Chief Justice Tenterden is quoted in the following terms—

"A man has a right to publish, for the purpose of giving the public information that which it is proper for the public to know."

With great respect, I doubt whether there is contained in those words an accurate statement of the circumstances in which a privileged occasion arises for the publication of matter interesting to the public. I am not prepared to hold that the publication even by a public body of its proceedings or conclusions in a matter of public interest is on that account and without more privileged. Purcell v. Sowler, (1877) 2 CPD 215 is, I think an authority to the contrary. I doubt whether in Mangena v. Wright, 25 TLR 534 = (1909) 2 KB 958 Mr. Justice Phillimore was right in saying, at p. 978, that "where the communication is made by a public servant as to a matter within his province, it may be 'the subject of privilege in him' if those words are intended to convey that those facts without more will create a privileged occasion."

It is clear, therefore, that Lord Justice Buckley was clearly of the opinion that the mere fact that the subject-matter was of general public interest did not afford any protection to the publisher, because he proceeded—

"More, I think, is wanted. But the following proposition, I think, is true that if the matter is matter of public interest and the party who publishes it owes a duty to communicate it to the public, the publication is privileged, and in this sense duty means not a duty as matter of law, but, to quote Lord Justice Lindley's words in Stuart v. Bell, 7 TLR 502 = (1891) 2 QB 341, at p. 350, 'a duty recognized by English people of ordinary intelligence and moral principle, but at the same time not a duty enforceable by legal proceedings, whether civil or criminal'. It is upon these principles, I think, that I have to determine whether in the present case the publication was upon a privileged occasion ...".

21. It is clear from the above observations of Lord Justice Buckley that the Court was clearly of the opinion that it was not sufficient to attract the protection of qualified privilege that the subject-matter is one of general public interest. The person or the newspaper who wants to communicate to the general public must also have a duty to communicate, and if no such duty, apart from the fact that the matter is one of public interest, can be spelt out in the particular circumstances of the case, the publication could not be said to be upon a privileged occasion. This case went in appeal to the House of Lords and is reported in Adam v. Ward, (1917) AC 309 (HL). It is noteworthy that the proposition put forward in the judgment of Buckley L.J. was not only not disapproved by the House of Lords, but, in fact, the whole argument turned upon the question whether Ward had a recognizable duty to perform to the public. On the facts, the House of Lords agreed with the view taken in the Court of Appeal and held that Ward had a duty to communicate the same to the public, because it was only in vindication of the character of Major-General Scobell, which had been unjustly and unfairly attacked in Parliament. In fact, Lord Dunedin in his speech at p 324 observed—

"He (Major-General Scobell) is bound to refer the matter to the Army Council and await their verdict. The verdict is in his favour. What would that avail him unless there was a right in the Army Council to publish the result at which they had arrived? If it were not so, then the absolute privilege of the House of Commons, intended to safeguard the liberty of discussion would be really turned into an abominable instrument of oppression."

On a more or less similar grounds the other Law Lords accepted that Ward, as the Secretary of the Army Council, had a duty to communicate the subject-matter to the public. If it were the law that given a subject-matter of great public interest everyone has an interest or duty to communicate and to receive the communication, then it would not have been necessary for both the courts, viz. the Court of Appeal and the House of Lords, to deal with the question at great length as to whether Ward, the Secretary of the Army Council, had a duty to communicate. We may here further note that while examining the law on the question of qualified privilege Lord Atkinson in his speech at p. 334 has clearly defined when a privileged occasion arises. He observed.—

"... a privileged occasion is, in reference to qualified privilege, an occasion where the person who makes a communication has an interest or a duty, legal, social, or moral to make it to the person to whom it is made, and the person to whom it is so made has a corresponding interest or duty to receive it. This reciprocity is essential ....".

Nothing turns upon the question as to whether a matter is of general public interest. The real question is whether the person making the communication has a duty or interest and whether the person receiving the communication has a corresponding interest or duty.

22. The duty aforesaid giving rise to a privileged occasion may arise in a variety of ways, and it would be idle, as pointed out by Lord Buckmaster L.C. in London Association for Protection of Trade v. Greenlands, Ltd. (1916) 2 AC 15, to put any limits on the same. However, it is always necessary to remember in that connection the observations of Parke, B. in (1834) 149 ER 1044 already referred to which not only define what a privileged occasion is but also the principle on which it is based. The principle is that such communications are protected for the common convenience and welfare of society. Where the common convenience and welfare of the society are not involved, no occasion could be regarded as a privileged occasion. It is for this reason that qualified privilege is denied to a defamatory statement in a newspaper. For example, in The Globe And Mail Ltd. v. Boland, 22 Dominion LR (2d) 277, the Full Court of the Supreme Court of Canada held—

"While newspapers may rely on the defence of fair comment in publishing allegedly defamatory statements about a candidate's fitness for office during an election campaign, they cannot invoke the defence of qualified privilege in so publishing defamatory statements."

It was further pointed out in that case—

"There is no such duty on a newspaper during an election campaign as to permit it to defame a candidate, subject to liability only if express malice is shown."

In that case, the editor of the daily newspaper "Globe & Mail" wrote an editorial on 27th May 1957 containing allegations defamatory of the plaintiff Boland who was a candidate for election to the Federal Assembly from Parkdale constituency in the City of Toronto. The Editorial commented on his fitness for office with certain innuendoes. In the suit filed by Boland, the newspaper put forward the plea of qualified privilege. It pleaded that it was the duty of the defendant newspaper to publish and in the interests of public to receive the communications and comments with respect to the candidature of Boland, the plaintiff, and by reason of this, the words complained of were published under such circumstances and upon such occasion as to render them privileged. The learned trial Judge upheld the pleas of qualified privilege in the following words:

"I have come to the conclusion that a Federal election in Canada is an occasion upon which a newspaper has a public duty to comment on the candidates, their campaigns and their platforms or policies, and Canadian Citizens have an honest and very real interest in receiving their comments, and that therefore, this is an occasion of qualified privilege."

The Supreme Court of Canada held that this was an erroneous statement of the law. It was pointed out by Justice Cartwright, who delivered the judgment of the court, that the learned trial Judge had confused the right which the publisher of a newspaper has, in common with all Her Majesty's subjects to report truthfully and comment fairly upon matters of public interest with a duty of the sort which gives rise to an occasion of qualified privilege. In that connection, he quoted the well-known passage of Lord Shaw in Arnold v. King Emperor, (1914) 30 TLR 462 at p. 468 = 41 Ind App 149 at p. 169 = (AIR 1914 PC 116) as follows:

"The freedom of the journalist is an ordinary part of the freedom of the subject, and to whatever lengths the subject in general may go, so also may the journalist, but, apart from statute law, his privilege is no other and no higher. The responsibilities which attach to this power in the dissemination of printed matter may, and in the case of a conscientious journalist do, make him more careful; but the range of his assertions, his criticisms, or his comments, is as wide as, and no wider than, that of any other subject. No privilege attaches to his position." Proceeding further, Justice Cartwright observed—

"To hold that during a Federal election campaign in Canada any defamatory statement published in the press relating to a candidate's fitness for office is to be taken as published on an occasion of qualified privilege would be, in my opinion, not only contrary to the great weight of authority in England and in this country but harmful to that 'common convenience and welfare of society' which Baron Parke described as the underlying principle on which the rules as to qualified privilege are founded. (See (1834) 1 CM & R 181 at p. 193 = 149 ER 1044). It would mean that every man who offers himself as a candidate must be prepared to risk the loss of his reputation without redress unless he be able to prove affirmatively that those who defamed him were actuated by express malice. I would like to adopt the following sentence from the judgment of the Court in Post Pub. Co. v. Hallam, (1893) 59 Fed 530 at p. 540: 'We think that not only is such a sacrifice not required of every one who consents to become a candidate for office, but that to sanction such a doctrine would do the public more harm than good.'

In the same connection, Justice Cartwright referred to the opinion of Gatléy at page 242 of his book on "Libel and Slander", Sixth Edition, under footnote No. 53—

"It is, however, submitted that so wide an extension of the privilege would do the public more harm than good. It would tend to deter sensitive and honourable men from seeking public positions of trust and responsibility, and leave them open to others who have no respect for their reputation."

The view thus taken was further supported by Justice Cartwright by referring to the words of Cockburn, C. J. in Campbell v. Spotiswoode, (1863) 122 ER 288.

"It is said that it is for the interests of society that the public conduct of men should be criticised without any other limit than that the writer should have an honest belief that what he writes is true. But it seems to me that the public have an equal interest in the maintenance of the public character of public men and public affairs could not be conducted by men of honour with a view to the welfare of the country, if we were to sanction attacks upon them, destructive of their honour and character, and made without any foundation." After quoting the above passage, Justice Cartwright has tersely remarked—

"The interest of the public and that of the publishers of newspapers will be sufficiently safeguarded by the availability of the defence of fair comment in appropriate circumstances".

This principle was applied by the same court in Banks v. Globe & Mail Ltd., 28 Dominion LR 343, where it was held that the proposition of Law that given proof of the existence of subject-matter of wide public interest throughout Canada, without proof of any other special circumstances, any newspaper in Canada (and semble therefore, any individual) which sees fit to publish to the public at large statements of fact relevant to that subject-matter is to be held to be doing so on an occasion of qualified privilege, is untenable. In that case the same newspaper Globe & Mail published an editorial defamatory of one Mr. Harold C. Banks, Canadian director of the Seafarers' International Union. On a suit filed by Banks, qualified privilege was claimed on the ground that it was the duty of the newspaper to publish and in the interests of the public to receive communications and comments with respect to the strike and the resultant transfer of eight vessels from Canadian Registry, and by reason of this, the said words were published under such circumstances and upon such occasion as to render them privileged. The learned trial Judge held that the matter was of great public interest. He observed—

"The members of the public have a real, a vital I might go so far as to say — a paramount interest in receiving those comments."

He also pointed out that it was a matter of vital interest to all the citizens of Canada and, therefore, the defence of qualified privilege was available. The Supreme Court held that there was no qualified privilege and again pointed out that the learned Judge had confused the right which the publisher of a newspaper has, in common with all Her Majesty's subjects, to report truthfully and comment fairly upon matters of public interest with a duty of the sort which gives rise to an occasion of qualified privilege. After referring to its earlier decision in 22 Dominion LR (2d) 277 (SC Canada) referred to above, it held that in the absence of proof of special circumstances, there is no defence of qualified privilege with respect to defamatory statements of facts made as comments upon a matter of public interest, and the same holds good for newspapers as for anyone else. The 'special circumstances' obviously refer to circumstances giving rise to a legal, social, or moral duty, and recall to mind the words of Buckley, L.J. in (1915) 31 TLR 299 (C.A.) referred to above where he said "More, I think, is wanted."

23. That the existence of a duty for qualified privilege is more fundamental than the existence of a matter of public interest as asserted by Lord Justice Buckley is emphasised by Lord Dunedin in appeal in that case ..... (See 1917 AC 309 (HL)) After stating at the beginning of his speech at p. 322 that the Judgment of Buckley L.J. in the Appeal Court was entirely satisfactory to his mind, he observed at p. 331 as follows:

"The second matter is more serious. In order to dispose of the question of privilege he (the trial Judge) put to the Jury certain questions, of which three were as follows: Was the publication—that is, the document published—of a public nature? Was the subject-matter of that publication by defendant, matter about which it was proper for the public to know? Was the matter contained in the letter proper for the public to know? To all of which the jury returned a negative answer, and upon that the learned Judge said 'Upon these findings I hold that the publication was not a privileged publication nor a publication on a privileged occasion.' It is clear that so far as the questions go they assume that the foundation of the duty or right which was invoked to support the privilege was that the matter discussed was one of public importance; whereas the true foundation in this case was the duty of the Army Council to make publicly known their vindication of General Scobell's honour. ...."

This is exemplified by an older case reported in Allbutt v. The General Council of Medical Education and Registration, (1899) 23 QBD 400. The facts are that the General Medical Council published a book containing the minutes of the proceedings of the Council including a statement that the name of the plaintiff had been removed from the register of medical practitioners on the ground that he had been guilty of grave professional misconduct, and a report of the proceedings before the Council in relation to the charge. It was held, having regard to the character of the report, the interests of the public in the proceedings, and the duty of the Council towards the public, the publication of the report was privileged. Gatlley in his book "Label and Slander", Sixth Edition, at para 532 (p. 245) has put the matter as follows:

"Duty to the Public necessary. But where no duty to the public can be proved, no privilege will attach to the publication of libellous matter in a newspaper. ...."

24. One more case referred to by Mr. Chari remains to be noted, and that is Webb v. Times Publishing Co. Ltd., (1960) 3 WLR 352. In that case, a wife felt defamed by a fair and accurate report in the "London Times" of a judicial proceeding in a Swiss Court in which her husband made a confession containing matter defamatory of the wife. The learned Judge held that the defendant, the Proprietor of the Times, was protected by qualified privilege not on the ground that the "Times" had a duty to the English public to report on a matter of public interest but on the ground that the report was based on a judicial proceeding in a foreign court which gave it sufficient status, and that plea of "fair information on a matter of public interest" on the analogy of "fair comment on a matter of public interest" was open to the defendant under the law. It is easy to see how the facts in that case are distinguishable. As a matter of fact, Gatlley in his book at page 245 in footnote 67 has stated that in spite of 1960-3 WLR 352, the correct statement of English Law is what is laid down in 28 DLR 345 (Canada) referred to above.

25. It was, however, contended for the defendants that in a case like the present where a journalist honestly believes that the public exchequer is deprived of a large sum of money and the Government is seized with paralysis in bringing the culprit to book speedily, this court, having regard to the conditions obtaining in this country, should recognize in the journalist a duty to bring the facts to the notice of the public with a view to put pressure on the Government to act. In this connection, reference was made to certain passages in the Report of the Press Commission, Part 1, 1954, particularly, paragraphs 910 and 911 in Chapter 19 at page 339. The Chapter is headed "Standards and Performance". We have gone through the paragraphs referred to, but we find there nothing to justify the contention that such a need was felt by the Press Commission. On the other hand, after stating in paragraph 914 that the newspapers ought to be accurate and fair, it sternly condemned Yellow Journalism (paragraph 929), "Sensationalism" (Paragraph 931) and "Malicious and irresponsible attacks" (paragraph 936) even when such attacks had been made on the plea that the newspapers wanted to expose evil in high places. We do not, therefore, feel the need of recognizing any such new duty, because the journalist like any other citizen has the right to comment fairly and, if necessary, severely on a matter of public interest, provided the allegations of facts he has made are accurate and truthful, however defamatory they may be otherwise. Since his right to comment on matters of public interest is recognized by law, the journalist obviously owes an obligation to the public to have his facts right. Where the journalist himself makes an investigation, he must make sure that all his facts are accurate and true, so that if challenged, he would be able to prove the same. We think, public interests are better served that way. In our opinion, therefore, the plea of qualified privilege put forward on behalf of the defendants fails.

26. Mr. Mistry, on behalf of the plaintiff, further argued that even if qualified privilege was assumed in favour of the defendants, he was able to show that the attack on his client was malicious. The law is clear in the matter. Malice in law, which is presumed in every false and defamatory statement, stands rebutted by a privileged occasion. In such a case, in order to make a libel actionable, the burden of proving actual or express malice is always on the plaintiff. Malice in that sense means making use of a privileged occasion for an indirect or improper motive. Such malice can be proved in a variety of ways, inter alia (i) by showing that the writer did not honestly believe in the truth of these allegations, or that he believed the same to be false; (ii) or that the writer is moved by hatred or dislike, or a desire to injure the subject of the libel and is merely using the privileged occasion to defame. .... (See Watt v. Longsdon, (1930) 1 KB 130 and the observations of Greer, L. J. at p. 154.....) and (iii) by showing that out of anger, prejudice or wrong motive, the writer casts aspersions on other people, reckless whether they are true or false, ..... (See observations of Lord Esher, M. R. in Royal Aquarium and Summer and Winter Gardens Society v. Parkinson, (1892) 1 QBD 431 at p. 444). Mr. Mistry contends that almost all the material defamatory allegations in the Article come under one or more of the above categories.

27. In this connection, he first refers to the episode of 1947 set out in the plaint itself. It appears that on 31st May 1947 defendant No. 1 printed and published an Article in the "Blitz" under bold headings:

- (1) "Cloth Control Boss in Black-Market Swoop" "Thackersey Mills were involved in Bombay's Biggest Black-market Swoop";
- (2) "Anti-Corruption Branch follows Blitz' clues "Phony" Cloth Control Proved by Latest Black Market Swoop";

(3) "Textile Control Boss, too, in Thick of it";

and alleged that certain bales of cotton cloth were found in a certain godown in a raid by the police and these bales of cloth were the product of Crown, Hindustan and Great Western Mills which are under the agency of Mr. Krishnaraj Thackersey (the plaintiff), the Chairman of the Textile Control Board. Since the plaintiff was not responsible for the destination of these cloth bales after the Mills had sold the same in accordance with the Control Order he, through his solicitors, served a notice on 16th June 1947 requiring defendant No. 1 to publish a full and unqualified apology in his newspaper in a prominent manner with the approval of the plaintiff's attorneys. After receipt of this notice, defendant No. 1 published in the issue of 21st June 1947 what he called an explanation. In this explanation, while he made it clear that he stood by the report, he explained that only the cloth manufactured by those mills had been seized in the black-market raid and that the Mill-owners and the Mills concerned were in no way engaged in or guilty of black-market operations. This explanation apparently did not satisfy the plaintiff. So, he filed a criminal complaint in the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate for defamation. It is the case of the plaintiff that after the complaint was filed, defendant No. 1 completely surrendered himself to the mercy of the plaintiff and entreated the plaintiff to accept an unconditional and unqualified apology for having wrongfully published the said statement and the Article in the "Blitz". On such apology being accepted by the plaintiff, defendant No. 1 was discharged. It is the plaintiff's submission that this episode rankled in the mind of defendant No. 1, and, therefore, when in 1960 some material was brought to him by defendant No. 4, the plaintiff (defendant?) took advantage of that opportunity to write the Article in suit maliciously. Mr. Chari submitted that more than 13 years had elapsed after this episode of 1947 and that it was more natural for defendant No. 1 to treat the episode as closed after the apology than to entertain any grouse against the plaintiff. He argued that it was not unusual for journalists to publish news or reports based upon what they thought was a reliable source, but later when they find that the source was unreliable they would be only too eager to make amends by apologising for the allegations made. That is exactly what happened, according to Mr. Chari, in 1947. The defendant No. 1 honestly believed that the plaintiff who was the Chairman of the Textile Control Board was concerned with the black-market-operations, but when it was brought to his notice that the plaintiff, after the Mills had sold the cloth, had nothing to do with the destination of those goods, defendant No. 1 made an ample apology by publishing two explanations. As the first explanation did not satisfy the plaintiff, he made the second explanation which satisfied him and, therefore, after the same was accepted by the plaintiff, there should be nothing to rankle in the mind of defendant No. 1. The course of events, however, does not bear out Mr Chari's plea, and it appears to us that defendant No. 1 must have nursed a grievance. His own written statement shows that he never surrendered himself to the mercy of the plaintiff, nor had he entreated the plaintiff to accept an unconditional and unqualified apology. According to him, what really made him give the second explanation after the criminal complaint was filed was that it was the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate himself who intervened in the matter and told defendant No. 1 that as he had already published an explanation, he might as well publish another in a form desired by the plaintiff and then put an end to the matter. This, according to defendant No. 1, was the real background of what is deemed to be an apology in the criminal court. In his evidence before the court, he gives a different version. He says that when the complaint was filed against him, he had been legally advised that he had a good fighting case. The reason for the apology was that defendant No. 1 was at that time going abroad on an important mission and he had to obtain his freedom by apologising. He had applied to the Magistrate to postpone the bearing of the case, but since his application was opposed by the plaintiff, he accepted the suggestion made by the Magistrate that it would be desirable that he should go a little further than the first explanation, and hence he published the second explanation. That second explanation, which is called an apology by the plaintiff, is at page 1674 of the paper-book. In this explanation, defendant No. 1 says that no allegations or insinuations of black-marketing should (by reason of the words or expressions used by him) be read into the said report or its headings as against Mr. Thackersey personally or his group of Mills. Then he said—

"We unequivocally withdraw all such allegations and insinuations which could be so read in our said report and express our regret to him."

The evidence given by defendant No. 1 now would go to show that he had made this apology not because he was really satisfied about the truth of the matter but because of other considerations. As a matter of fact, he has stated in his evidence that even at that time, that is to say, prior to the publication of the Article dated 31st May 1947, he had information which led him to believe that the plaintiff was indulging in black-marketing. It is therefore, obvious that the regret expressed in the second explanation was much against his grain. He could not have easily forgotten that he had been compelled to make an undeserved apology to a person who, to his own information was a black-marketeer. The things which he came to know about the plaintiff after 1947 would only help to keep this memory fresh in his mind, because in his evidence before the court he says at p 398—

".....I had a bad impression about the plaintiff. My impression was that he indulged in a number of malpractices, that he was unscrupulous. .... One of the general impressions which I had carried even prior to the reading of the article in the "Peep" was that the plaintiff was a black-marketeer. From the complaint which I received prior to reading the article in the "Peep", I felt that the plaintiff was engaged in black-marketing, tax-dodging and trying to influence Government officials by underhand means that is to say, corrupting Government officials. .... The information which led me to believe that he was concerned with tax-dodging and corrupting officials was received by me thereafter and before 1960. .... From 1947 I had heard of serious complaints being made to the then Bombay Government by one Doshi and by others about the misuse by the plaintiff of his position as Chairman of the Textile Control Board ....."

It will be thus seen that although a long time had elapsed after 1947 before he wrote the Article in suit, defendant No. 1 must have been very grievously conscious that he had been made to apologise to the plaintiff in the complaint filed before the Presidency Magistrate in 1947, most undeservedly, especially, as his impression about the plaintiff as a black-marketeer had been confirmed after 1947. He carried the worst impression of the plaintiff even before defendant No. 4 came to him with his material. As a matter of fact, the very alacrity with which defendant No. 1 decided to publish a series of Articles on the plaintiff would go to show that the episode of 1947 had not been forgotten by him. His own evidence goes to show that sometime in July 1960 defendant No. 4 saw him with his material. His first interview lasted for about two hours. Most of the time was occupied in questioning defendant No. 4 and trying to understand his case. He had hardly any time to go through the voluminous documentary material that defendant No. 4 had brought. He only cursorily glanced through it. He then called his deputy, Mr. Homi Mistry, and asked him to prepare a series of articles. But what is pertinent to be noted is that even at the very first interview, even before any of the material had been checked, he had asked Mr. Homi Mistry to prepare a series of Articles, "because his mind was made up to expose the plaintiff". All this shows that the reason for writing this Article was not mere public interest.

28. That brings us to the actual defamatory allegations made in the Article. (Then after dealing with the allegations (paras 28 to 36) His Lordship proceeded). Therefore, although Mr. Chari has tried to put the case on a high level, viz. that whole Article was written with a view to serve public interests, we find here that the writer himself did not intend to do so.

37. Having, therefore, given our careful consideration to the Article and the aspects of malice put before us by learned counsel for the plaintiff, we are satisfied that the whole Article was conceived in express malice and, therefore, no qualified privilege can at all be claimed.

38. That brings us to the question of damages. The plaintiff claimed general damages of Rupees three lacs, and the whole claim has been decreed. The learned Judge took the view that exemplary damages were necessary to be awarded and he has made it clear in the last but one para of his judgment that the deterrent aspect was not absent from his mind. It is contended on behalf of the defendants that the damages are excessive and unreasonable, and, in any case, exemplary damages could not have been awarded. It is now settled after the decision of the House of Lords in Rookes v. Barnard, (1964) 1 All ER 367, and the decision of the Court of Appeal in McCarey v. Associated Newspapers, Ltd. (1964) 3 All ER 947, that, at common law, damages for defamation are purely compensatory. There is no room hereafter for importing the concept of exemplary or punitive damages except in two well-defined categories of cases. The first category is of those cases where the plaintiff is injured by the oppressive, arbitrary or unconstitutional action by the executive or the servants of the Government. The second category is comprised of those cases in which the defendant's conduct has been calculated by him to make a profit for himself which may well exceed the compensation payable to the plaintiff. Except in these two types of cases, there is no departure from the ordinary compensatory principle for all torts, including libel. Where a newspaper is the defendant, it cannot be said without more that the publication has been made with a view to make profits. As pointed out in Broadway Approvals, Ltd. v. Odhams Press, Ltd. (1957) 2 All ER 523 at p 527, newspapers in the ordinary course of their business publish news for profits. Only when a more pecuniary benefit is shown to have been made by a newspaper would it become liable for punitive damages.

39. Mr. Mistry invited our attention to a recent decision of the Privy Council in Australian Consolidated Press, Ltd. v. Uren, (1967) 3 All ER 523 (PC) in which the Privy Council did not apply the principle about exemplary damages as laid down by Lord Devlin in 1964-1 All ER 367 referred to above. The case, however, shows that the Privy Council did not purport to dissent from the view taken by the House of Lords. The question before them was, whether it was necessary to overrule the unanimous view of the Full Court of the High Court of Australia which had refused to follow 1964-1 All ER 367 on the ground that the High Court had for years accepted as part of the Australian law that punitive damages was an element to be considered in the award of damages in a libel action. The Privy Council held that it was not necessary. So far as this country is concerned, that is not the position. The research of learned counsel has not been able to show us that in India punitive damages had been always considered as a part of the Indian law of libel. On the other hand, having inherited the jurisdiction of the late Supreme Court, the Original Side of this Court has always followed the common law of England in matters of torts, including libel, and since 1964-1 All ER 367 explains what the common law is in this respect, we feel we should be guided by it though by no means the decision is binding on us.

40. The present position in law with regard to damages in a libel action is stated by Lord Justice Pearson in (1964) 3 All ER 947, as follows:

"If I may summarise shortly in my own words what I think is to be derived from that case, it is this, that from henceforth a clear distinction should be drawn between compensatory damages and punitive damages. Compensatory damages in a case in which they are at large may include several different kinds of compensation to the injured plaintiff. They may include not only actual pecuniary loss and anticipated pecuniary loss or any social disadvantages which result, or may be thought likely to result, from the wrong which has been done. They may also include natural injury to his feelings; the natural relief and distress which he may feel in being spoken of in defamatory terms; and, if there has been any kind of high-handed, oppressive, insulting or contumacious behaviour by the defendant which increases the mental pain and suffering which is caused by the defamation and which may constitute injury to the plaintiff's pride and self-confidence, those are proper elements to be taken into account in a case where the damages are at large. There is, however, a sharp distinction between damages of that kind and truly punitive or exemplary damages. To put in another way, when you have computed and taken into account all the elements of compensatory damages which may be awarded to the plaintiff and arrived at a total of £X, then it is quite wrong to add a sum of £Y by way of punishment of the defendant for his wrong-doing. The object of the award of damages in tort nowadays is not to punish the wrong-doer, but to compensate the person to whom the wrong has been done. Moreover, it would not be right to allow punitive or exemplary damages to creep back into the assessment in some other guise. For instance, it might be said 'You must consider not only what the plaintiff ought to receive, but what the defendant ought to pay'. There are many other phrases which could be used, such as those used in the extracts which I have cited from some of the decided cases. In my view, that distinction between compensatory and punitive damages has now been laid down quite clearly by the House of Lords in (1964) 1 All ER 367 and ought to be permitted to have its full effect in the sphere of libel actions as well as in other branches of tort. ...."

41. Therefore, aggravated damages may be awarded within the compensatory principle in circumstances specifically referred to above, viz., if there has been any kind of high-handed, oppressive, insulting or contumelious behaviour by the defendant which increases the mental pain and suffering which is caused by the defamation and which may constitute injury to the plaintiff's pride and self-confidence. But these elements cannot be taken into consideration to award what are in law punitive or exemplary damages.

42. What are then the injuries for which the plaintiff should be compensated? That is explained by Lord Justice Diplock in that same case at page 959 as follows:

"In an action for defamation, the wrongful act is damage to the plaintiff's reputation. The injuries that he sustains may be classified under two heads: (i) the consequences of the attitude adopted to him by other persons as a result of the diminution of the esteem in which they hold him because of the defamatory statement, and (ii) the grief or annoyance caused by the defamatory statement to the plaintiff himself. It is damages under this second head which may be aggravated by the manner in which, or the motives with which, the statement was made or persisted in. There may also be cases where Lord Devlin's second principle is applicable, as, for example, if a newspaper or a film company (as in Yousouf v. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, Ltd. (1934) 50 TLR 581) has, in the view of the damage-awarding tribunal, deliberately published a defamatory statement in the expectation of increasing its circulation and profits by an amount which would exceed any damages awarded by way of compensation alone. ...."

The plaintiff claimed in the present suit general damages of Rs. 3,00,000/- on the ground that the plaintiff has been injured in his character, credit, and reputation and in the way of his business and has been brought into the public hatred, contempt, and ridicule. The plaintiff, however, has not entered the witness-box or adduced evidence of his friends or associates in business to show to what extent he is avoided by friends or shunned by his associates in trade or business, nor has he shown the extent of diminution in the esteem in which he was held. There is no special damage alleged or proved in the way of business or trade. As to grief or annoyance caused to him, the plaintiff has not helped the court in making any accurate estimate by his evidence. As pointed out by both Diplock and Willmer, L. JJ. in 1964-3 All ER 947 referred to above, the presence of the plaintiff in the witness-box gives the jury or the judge an opportunity which the Appellate Court does not have to form their view of his personality whether he is a particularly sensitive man, and "to assess the grief and annoyance which it would cause him as a sort of person they thought him to be". Thus, unfortunately in this case both the incommensurables, viz. diminution in esteem and the extent of mental distress which to some extent must have been, undoubtedly, caused by the publication, present a problem of evaluation or equation.

43. The learned Judge, however, has awarded the full claim of Rs. three lacs and damages describing the same as exemplary damages. In the first place, this was not a case for exemplary damages, because it is not the case that the defendants made any profit by the publication of the Article in his journal. Undoubtedly, he has referred to some substantial aggravating circumstances and that would justify awarding aggravated damages, but it would be difficult to say what the learned Judge may have awarded as aggravated damages if the punitive element had been excluded. Since exemplary damages have been awarded when they were not due, this court has the power and the duty to interfere with the decree for damages.

44. On the other hand, there is hardly any doubt that the Article, as admitted by the defendant No. 1, is grossly defamatory. A worse libel is difficult to imagine. The plaintiff is a prominent businessman and industrialist and was sometime or the other the Chairman of the Mill-owners Association, Chairman of the Textile Control Board, and the Chairman of the Federation of Textile Mills. That would be sufficient to show his standing in trade and industry, and yet he is ac-caused in the Article of being involved in a "Scandal bigger than Mundhra" and of being a tax-evader, financial juggler, and import-export-racketeer and a swindler. He is also accused of having smuggled foreign exchange in violation of the Customs and Foreign Exchange Regulations. He is further accused of having himself used his position as the Chairman of the Textile Control Board in order to assist his satellite concerns. He is also accused of having started bogus factories and firms with a view to obtain fabulous import-licences for goods to be eventually sold in the black-market in order to evade the income-tax. These accusations are, undoubtedly, grossly defamatory. To add insult to injury, the defendants recklessly pleaded justification and improperly persisted in it when any reasonable person after being shown his error in the witness-box would have gracefully withdrawn the allegations and apologised. In the conduct of the litigation also they showed, as pointed out by the learned Judge, concentrated venom and hostility and augmented the injury caused by the defamatory article by making baseless new allegations that the plaintiff had corrupted officials engaged in investigation in the case against his concerns and even bribed a senior Minister of the Central Government. These matters were rightly taken into consideration by the learned Judge in not only awarding substantial damages but aggravated damages.

45. Nevertheless, it appears to us that the learned Judge was in error in decreeing the full claim made by the plaintiff. It is the contention of the defendants that the damages are not only excessive but unreasonable and disproportionate in the circumstances of the case. We are aware that Appellate Courts are, and should be, most reluctant to interfere with the assessment of the learned trial Judge or a jury, but, that is so, because the latter have a unique opportunity of seeing the parties before them when equating the two incommensurables, viz., the diminution in esteem and the mental distress of the plaintiff. Where the plaintiff has not entered the witness-box or examined anybody for proving the same, it is quite open to the defendants to contend that the Appellate Court is in no worse position than the learned trial Judge in making the proper assessment. Even otherwise, what are proper damages is always a matter of impression, and, we should think that a claim of Rs. 3,00,000/- is much too high. We have only to bear in mind that a sum of three lacs is no mean sum by Indian standards. There are few persons in India who would save, after payment of taxes, that much sum in a lifetime of honest toil. Looked at that way, one may complain that this is almost a bounty.

46. Mr. Mistry for the plaintiff submitted that although at first blush rupees three lacs may appear to be a large sum, the court will also have to take into consideration the cost that his client had to undergo in order to vindicate his honour. It is true, he submitted, that he has been awarded costs in the trial court, but those costs are between party and party and are very much less than the cost which he has to pay to his Attorneys and counsel. There can be no doubt that the costs between an attorney and client are very much more than the costs between party and party, and costs actually incurred are much more than the costs awarded by the decree. The trial went on for 101 days and costs must have risen from day to day, and, therefore, the costs awarded in the decree will not cover the costs the plaintiff had incurred. But this consideration is extraneous to the question as to what damages are to be awarded for the injury caused. A party complaining about a tort like libel can only ask compensation for the injury sustained. It cannot include any part of the costs. Costs have to be decreed only in accordance with the rules of the court.

47. Mr. Zaveri for the defendants contended that there were certain matters in the evidence which ought to have been taken into consideration by the learned trial Judge in mitigation of damages. In this connection, he referred to the evidence which in his submission went to show (i) that China Cotton Exporters of which the plaintiff was one of the partners had paid Rs. 45,000/- to one Piloo Sidhwa in order to influence Central Ministers to lift the ban on the export of cotton or to obtain licences for export of cotton; (ii) that the same firm had, in the course of disposing of the imported art silk yarn in the market, purported to sell it to handloom factories, which were not in existence, the device of bogus factories being resorted to for the purpose of evading the condition of import which obliged them to sell the yarn to genuine handloom factories. Mr. Mistry objects that the defendants having given up, without any reservation, the plea of justification in this court, which the learned Judge found against the defendants, it would be incompetent for this court to consider the evidence bearing on the point of justification even for assessing damages. The danger is of inconsistent findings. To illustrate, the trial court held that no such amount was at all paid to Sidhwa. It also held that though Govardhandas & Co., who managed the yarn business on behalf of Messrs. China Cotton Exporters, had not made proper inquiries about the factories being genuine, none of the partners including the plaintiff had knowledge of the same. In other words, the finding of the learned trial Judge is that Messrs. China Cotton Exporters or the plaintiff had no knowledge that the Concerns, National Handloom Weaving Works and Rayon Handloom Industries, to which the yarn was supposed to have been sold, were not genuine Handloom factories. If on a consideration of that evidence in this court, even for the purposes of assessing damages, we were to come to a contrary conclusion, that would be tantamount to holding that justification was partially proved. That would result in inconsistent conclusions, viz., no justification whatever on merits but partial justification in mitigation of damages. Such a result ought not to be countenanced. Since the plea of justification has been entirely given up, the evidence which relates to justification cannot be reconsidered. It is true that we have some reported cases in which it has been held that though the whole justification may not be proved, partial justification may be taken into consideration for the purposes of mitigation of damages ..... (See for example the speech of Lord Denning at page 1142 in Plato Films Ltd. v. Speidel, 1961 AC 1090.) But in the present case, in the first place, there is no plea of general bad character of the plaintiff. Secondly, not even partial justification has been held proved. The utmost that can be said on behalf of the defendants is that we should take the findings of the learned Judge as they are and see if there is anything in those findings which can be properly urged in mitigation of damages. That attempt has failed.

48. On a consideration of the issues involved and discussed above, we think, the amount of damages awarded by the learned trial Judge will have to be reduced. We think that the proper damages to be awarded should be Rs. one and half lacs. The decree will have to be modified to that extent.

49. One thing more has to be noted. The decree was passed against defendants 1, 2 and 4. There was one decree against all of them. Defendant No. 4 being held to be a joint tort-feasor. As a matter of fact, the whole Article admittedly was based upon the material and documents produced by defendant No. 4 and the evidence has revealed that even the final draft of the Article was approved by defendant No. 4, who, in his own hand, made some corrections in the draft. Defendant No. 4, however, has not come in appeal. He became an insolvent after the decree and the Official Assignee has been brought on record as respondent No. 2(a). The question is whether the decree against him also requires to be varied. Gatlley in his Book on Libel and Slander, Sixth Edition, at para 1299 (p. 606) has pointed out that there must be one verdict and one judgment against all for the total damages awarded. What the plaintiff is entitled to receive is a sum representing the damages that he has suffered from a single wrong inflicted by all. It would, therefore, follow that there cannot be two decrees for different amounts in respect of the same libel. The fact that defendant No. 4 has not appealed is not of much consequence in view of the principles underlying Rules 4 and 33 of Order 41, Civil Procedure Code.

50. In the result, the appeal is partially allowed, the decree of the trial Court is confirmed with the only modification that for the amount of Rs. 3,00,000/-, Rs. 1,50,000/- (Rs. one and half lacs) will be substituted. As regards the costs of the appeal, we are informed that the bearing of this appeal went on for about thirty days. The appeal was on all points decided against the defendants in the trial court, but at the hearing of the appeal, learned counsel for the defendants confined his arguments only to two questions, viz. (i) qualified privilege and (ii) quantum of damages. On the issue of "qualified privilege", the arguments went on for very long, for more than 22 days, and on that point, the appellants have failed. It is true that they have succeeded in the appeal partially to the extent of reduction of quantum of damages by half, but if they had confined their arguments only to the quantum of damages, the appeal would have been disposed of in not more than five or six days. In these circumstances, therefore, we think that the appellants will have to pay four-fifth of the costs of the appeal to respondent No. 1 and bear their own costs.

Appeal partially allowed.

AIR 1970 BOMBAY 438 (V 57 C 74)

VISADALAL AND NATHWANI, JJ.

Dinkar Bandhu Deshmukh and another, Appellants v. State, Respondent.

Confirmation Case No. 17 of 1969 with Criminal Appeal No. 1293 of 1969 D/- 25-11-1969

(A) Evidence Act (1872), Section 134 — Conviction on basis of evidence of single witness — Corroboration, when necessary.

As a general rule, a Court can and may act on the testimony of a single witness though uncorroborated. Unless corroborated or insisted upon by statute, the court should not insist on corroboration except in cases where the nature of the testimony of the single witness itself required the same as a rule of prudence. The question of corroboration arises only in regard to a witness who is neither wholly reliable nor wholly unreliable in which the Court should be circumspect. AIR 1957 SC 614, Foll. (Para 5)

DN/DN/BC07/70/RGD/A

(B) Evidence Act (1872), Section 191 — Criminal trial — Accused relying on particular fact to discredit prosecution witness — Fact should be brought out in cross-examination of prosecution witness.

It is true that the onus of proving guilt rests throughout the trial, on the prosecution and never shifts on to the shoulders of the accused, but if the accused wants to rely on a particular fact for discrediting a prosecution witness, that fact must be adequately brought out in the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution. (Para 7)

(C) Evidence Act (1872), Section 3 — Credibility of witness — Partisan witness — Witness having respect or loyalty to same religious institution as the victim does not make him partisan witness. (Para 9)

(D) Evidence Act (1872), Section 157 — Statement made "at or about" the time when fact took place — Tests indicated.

Where the question is whether delay in making a statement fulfils the "at or about" condition of Section 157 there can be no hard and fast rule. The main test is whether the statement was made as early as can reasonably be expected in the circumstances of the case and before there was opportunity for tutoring or concoction.

[Held applying the test to the facts of the case, the statement alleged to have been made was made as early as could reasonably be expected in the circumstances of the case and before there was opportunity for tutoring or concoction. AIR 1952 SC 54, Applied. (Para 14)]

(E) Evidence Act (1872), S. 155(1) — Applicability.

If a witness goes into the box and makes a statement that he believes that another witness is unworthy of credit there would be two safeguards: (1) the statement would be on oath and (2) it could be tested by cross-examination. To draw an inference against the credibility of a witness without anybody going into the witness box in the manner contemplated by Section 155(1) of the Evidence Act would not be legitimate. It would be a proposition which in some conceivable cases might be dangerous to accused persons themselves. Opinion evidence is, as a general rule, not admissible and Section 155(1) is exception to that rule. (Para 18)

(F) Evidence Act (1872), Section 27 — Discovery evidence is not substantive evidence but only corroborative evidence.

Discovery evidence, by itself, is subsidiary and cannot sustain a conviction, but where there is plenty of other evidence to sustain the prosecution case, discovery evidence is a valuable piece of corroborative evidence. (Para 19)

(G) Evidence Act (1872), Section 32(1) — Deceased widow asking for police protection on account of apprehension of trouble from her brothers-in-law at the time of undertaking sowing operation — Two months later deceased found murdered — Her application for police protection held admissible under S. 32(1). (Para 20)

(H) Evidence Act (1872), Section 8 — Complaint by deceased widow, some days prior to her murder that she apprehended trouble from accused in her sowing operation — Prosecution case not that making of complaint was cause of her murder — Complaint held not admissible under Section 8 showing motive — Held, however, that previous litigation between deceased and accused formed motive for the murder. (Para 23)

(I) Evidence Act (1872), Section 8 — Evidence of subsequent conduct — Absconding of accused — Nature of evidence required stated.

In order that the Court can legitimately draw the inference that the subsequent conduct of an accused was that of a guilty person and not of an innocent man, there must be proper material placed before the court. Where all that the prosecution has placed before the Court are two bald statements, both made by Police Sub-Inspector (1) that the accused was not in the village on the day soon after the incident when the police went there, and (2) that police Sub-Inspector had sent about four constables in search of the accused to some villages, that evidence is wholly insufficient to lead to the inference that the accused was absconding since the date of the incident. In order to lead to that inference, the investigating police officer must lay before the Court further evidence to show that continuous watch was kept at the house of the accused concerned, and that a watch was also kept by him of the places which the accused frequented, including his place of work, but the accused did not turn up at all at any of those places during a certain period of time. In the absence of such evidence no inference can be drawn that the accused was absconding and his subsequent conduct was that of a guilty person. (Para 21)

(J) Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 11 and 101 — Criminal trial — Evidence of alibi — Onus of proof is on accused. (Para 21)

(K) Penal Code (1860), Section 302 — Accused creating false sense of security and confidence in their widowed sister-in-law, a helpless woman who had gone to work on her field — Sister-in-law taken unawares and pounced upon by accused and murdered — No extenuating circumstance — Maximum penalty of law held rightly inflicted. (Para 24)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1960) AIR 1960 Bom 290 (V 47) = 61 Bom LR 1620 = 1960 Cri LJ 894, Allijan Munshi v. The State	20
(1957) AIR 1957 SC 614 (V 44) = 1957 SCJ 527 = 1957 Cri LJ 1000, Vadivelu v. State of Madras	5, 6
(1956) AIR 1956 SC 460 (V 43) = 1956 Cri LJ 827, Gurcharan Singh v. State of Punjab	21
(1952) AIR 1952 SC 54 (V 39) = 1952 Cri LJ 547, Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan	14

R. Jethmalani with S. N. Deshpande, for Appellants, M. P. Kanade, Asst. Govt.
Pleader, for State.

VIMADALAL, J.:— This is a confirmation case in respect of the sentence of death passed by the Sessions Judge at Satara against accused No. 2 before him. The same has come up for hearing along with the appeal filed by original accused Nos. 1 and 2 from the conviction and sentence imposed upon them by the trial Judge. It may be mentioned that the trial Judge had acquitted the 3rd accused in the said case.

2. The facts necessary for the purpose of disposing of the matter before us are that accused Nos. 1 and 2 are brothers, and they had a third brother named Shankar who was married to the deceased Housabai. Shankar died some time in the year 1952, without issue and, after his death, Housabai adopted Varkari Sampaday and was residing in a Math at Pandharpur conducted by one Madan Maharaj. The deceased Madhav Buwa was the Secretary of the Math and witness Macchindra was also one of its inmates. Housabai used to reside in the premises of the Math after the death of her husband, but she claimed partition and separate possession of her share in the joint family property by filing Civil Suit No. 120 of 1960 against the two accused in the appropriate Court, and having succeeded in that suit, obtained possession of her share of the lands on the 23rd of April 1968. The enforcement by Housabai of her rights of partition and separate possession of her share of the family lands appears, naturally, to have embittered the relations between her and her brothers-in-law accused Nos. 1 and 2, and she apprehended some trouble from them at the time of undertaking sowing operations in the field of which she had been given possession pursuant to the decree of the Court. She accordingly, sought police protection by making two applications which are Exhibits 42 and 43 in the present case and, with the assistance of a constable, she went through the sowing operations without any untoward incident occurring. The time for harvesting having arrived, Housabai left the Math some time in the beginning of December 1968, accompanied by Madhav Buwa (since deceased) and witness Macchindra, in order to go to her lands at Nandgaon. She did not put up at the house of her brothers-in-law accused Nos. 1 and 2 from whom she presumably apprehended trouble, but put up at the house of witness Ramchandra Gadhawe in the village of Targaon which is separated from the village of Nandgaon only by the river Krishna. From there, Housabai, together with Macchindra and Madhav Buwa, used to go to Housabai's field for the purpose of harvesting operations, and it may be stated that Housabai had actually introduced her two companions to accused Nos. 1 and 2 on the very first day, and had also spoken to accused Nos. 1 and 2 who had given her some jowar, flour and fuel which she needed. The work of removing the crop went on and was still incomplete after the expiration of a period of 13 days during which Housabai, Madhav Buwa and Macchindra continued to stay at the house of Ramchandra Gadhawe. As, however, they had over-stayed their hospitality, they had thereafter to shift from the house of the said Ramchandra, and they then put up in the house of one Nivrutti Bartakke which was also situated in the village of Targaon. They had put up at the said Nivrutti only for a couple of days when the incident in the present case occurred on the 19th of December 1968.

3. On that day, Housabai, Madhav Buwa and Macchindra had gone to the field of Housabai at about 8 a.m., as usual, for removing the crop and had worked in the field for the whole day. Accused Nos. 1 and 2, accompanied by accused No. 3 who was their distant uncle, had come into the neighbouring field belonging to accused Nos. 1 and 2 at about 4 p.m. that day and had started cutting the wood of a Babul tree in their field. Accused No. 1 had for that purpose an iron bar, accused No. 2 had in his hand an axe and accused No. 3 had with him a saw. Housabai and her companions finished the day's work in the field at about 5-30 p.m. and began to collect their belongings in order to leave the field. It is the prosecution case that, seeing this, accused No. 1 left his field with the iron bar in his hand and went ahead. Shortly thereafter Housabai, Madhu Buwa and Macchindra left the field and were walking on a foot-track by the side of a canal in single file, Madhu Buwa being first, followed by Macchindra, followed by Housabai. According to the prosecution, accused Nos. 2 and 3 also left the field and followed fairly close behind Housabai and actually spoke to her as they went along. It is the prosecution case that when Housabai and her companions came to a place near the engine house of one Ghorpade, accused

No. 1 suddenly darted out from the bed of the canal and gave a blow with the iron bar which was in his hand on the neck of Madhav Buwa, whereupon Madhav Buwa fell down instantaneously. Macchindra who was following Madhav Buwa at a distance of about 10 or 11 paces was taken aback and on looking behind towards Housabai who was following him at a distance of about 15 paces, he saw that accused No. 2 gave an axe-blow on the back of her head, whereupon Housabai also fell down. According to the prosecution accused No. 3 then exhorted accused Nos. 1 and 2 not to allow Macchindra to escape, but Macchindra threw away the bag which was in his hand and ran for his life into the adjoining field. Seeing him running away, accused No. 2 is alleged to have thrown the axe towards Macchindra, with the result that the handle of the axe hit Macchindra on his right thigh, and this was followed up by accused No. 2 throwing a stone at Macchindra which hit him on the back side of his waist. The prosecution story is that Macchindra, though injured, managed to run away and he ultimately went to a temple at a village named Borban of which witness Pandurang Narayan was the pujari to whom he narrated the incident. The prosecution story is that Pandurang, however, refused to give him shelter for the night and Macchindra, therefore, proceeded to the adjoining village of Targaon where he went to the house of Ramchandra Gadhave with whom they had previously put up and narrated the incident to him. Ramchandra, however, also declined to give him shelter for the night and Macchindra, therefore, proceeded to the house of witness Nivrutti Bartakke in Targaon itself with whom they had been putting up since a couple of days. It is the case of the prosecution that Macchindra narrated the incident to Nivrutti Bartakke also, but Nivrutti advised him not to stay there and accompanied him up to Targaon Railway Station from where, after various intermediate efforts to which it is unnecessary to refer, Macchindra ultimately succeeded in proceeding by a State Transport bus to Satara which he reached at about 9 a.m. the next morning. There he contacted one Shivaji More who was known to him and narrated the incident to him also. Accompanied by the said Shivaji, Macchindra proceeded to the house of the Mamlatdar who, however, was out and on being directed by his peon to report the matter to the Police Station at Borgaon, he ultimately went to Borgaon which he reached at about 3 p.m., and had his statement recorded by the Police Sub-Inspector at the Police Station at that place. Investigation thereafter started. Macchindra was treated for his injuries at the dispensary at Satara, and on the next day, he accompanied the police party to Nandgaon which they reached at about 12 noon. Accused No. 3 was found there and he and accused No. 1 were arrested on the same day, but it is the case of the prosecution that accused No. 2 was not to be found at his house and was arrested only on the 28th of December 1968. The dead bodies of Madhav Buwa and Housabai were recovered from the canal and were found to have several injuries upon them, and post-mortem examination was duly performed on their dead bodies. After the usual proceedings, the three accused persons were committed to stand their trial before the Court of the Sessions Judge at Satara where accused No. 1 was charged under Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code with the substantive offence of the murder of Madhav Buwa, accused No. 2 was charged under the same section with the substantive offence of the murder of Housabai, and alternatively, all the three accused were charged with the murder of Madhav Buwa as well as Housabai under Section 302 read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code. Accused No. 2 was also charged under Sections 323 and 506 of the Indian Penal Code with having voluntarily caused hurt as well as criminal intimidation to Macchindra, and accused No. 3 was further charged under Section 109 read with Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code with having abetted the commission of the offences of the murders of Madhav Buwa and Housabai by accused Nos. 1 and 2. The three accused were, in due course, tried by the Sessions Judge who by his judgment dated the 30th of August 1969 acquitted accused No. 3, but convicted accused Nos. 1 and 2, inter alia, under Section 302 read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code in respect of the murder of Housabai as well as of Madhav Buwa.

4. The prosecution evidence consists of the following:—

1. The evidence of eye-witness Macchindra, which the prosecution states is corroborated by the First Information Report (Exhibit 7).

2. Corroborative evidence in the form of,

- (a) medical evidence;
- (b) the oral evidence of Pujari Pandurang;
- (c) the evidence of Ramchandra Gadhave;
- (d) the evidence of Nivrutti Bartakke;
- (e) the finding of the iron bar from the house of accused Nos. 1 and 2 who, it may be stated, lived together, that iron bar being found, on chemical analysis, to be stained with human blood;
- (f) the statement of accused No. 1 and the production by him of an axe from a dung-pit near the house of accused Nos. 1 and 2 which, on chemical analysis, has been found to be blood-stained.

3 Evidence in regard to the alleged motive of the crime.

The above evidence is relied upon by the prosecution against both accused No 1 as well as accused No 2, but in addition to the same, the prosecution relies on one more piece of evidence as against accused No 2 and that is, the evidence in regard to his conduct subsequent to the alleged offence in absconding for a period of one week.

5. Before I proceed to deal with the above evidence, I may dispose of one submission which was made by Mr. Jethmalani on behalf of the accused, and that was, that the Court should be slow to convict on the testimony of a single witness. Reference may be made in this connection to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Vadivelu v. State of Madras, 1957 SCJ 527 = (AIR 1957 SC 614) in which an identical submission was advanced before the Supreme Court as being a rule of prudence. After referring to a decision of the Privy Council in an earlier case, the Supreme Court laid down (at p. 533 of SCJ) = (at p. 618 of AIR) that as a general rule, a Court can and may act on the testimony of a single witness though uncorroborated, that unless corroboration was insisted upon by statute the Court should not insist on corroboration except in cases where the nature of the testimony of the single witness itself required the same as a rule of prudence, as for example, in the case of a child witness or a witness in a position analogous to that of an accomplice, and that whether corroboration of the testimony of a single witness is or is not necessary must depend upon facts and circumstances of each case and much would depend upon the judicial discretion of the Judge concerned. The Supreme Court then proceeded (at p. 534 of SCJ) = (at p. 619 of AIR) to categorize witnesses into three classes, viz., (1) wholly reliable; (2) wholly unreliable and (3) neither wholly reliable nor wholly unreliable. It then laid down that the question of corroboration arises only in regard to the third category in which the Court was called upon to be circumspect. It is in the light of these principles laid down by the highest Court that I will now proceed to discuss the evidence of Macchindra in the present case.

6. Macchindra has deposed that he hailed originally from a village in Osmanabad district and that since about 2½ years prior to his giving evidence in Court he had been residing permanently in the Math at Pandharpur of which Madan Maharaj is the head. He has then deposed to the fact that Madhav Buwa and Housabai were also residing in the Math and to the respective duties performed by them to which it is unnecessary to refer. Macchindra then deposed that Housabai had told him that there was litigation about her landed property between her and her brothers-in-law, and she had succeeded in the litigation and obtained possession of her lands. She had further told him that she had sought police protection at the time of undertaking sowing operations on her lands. Macchindra has then proceeded to state in the course of his evidence that he and Madhav Buwa had accompanied Housabai who went to her lands at Nandgaon for the purpose of harvesting the crop that had grown upon it, and that they had put up at the house of witness Ramchandra Gadhave for 13 days, and had then moved to the house of witness Nivrutti Bartakke where they were required to live only for a day or two more for completing the harvesting work. Macchindra has then proceeded to the actual incident which occurred on the evening of the 19th of December 1968 in much the same terms in which I have set out the prosecution case at the beginning of this judgment. There are, no doubt, some contradictions which have been brought out in the evidence of the said Macchindra, and I must proceed to deal with them. In the course of his evidence in the trial Court Macchindra stated that accused No. 3 had twice incited accused Nos. 1 and 2 not to permit Macchindra to run away, but no such statement appears in the First Information Report (Exhibit 7) which Macchindra made on the 20th of December 1968 at Borgaon. Whilst I am not prepared to say that this is a major contradiction which should lead the Court to discredit the testimony of Macchindra altogether, it is certainly a contradiction which might well be in the nature of an improvement made by him in the trial Court and should, therefore, make the Court look for corroboration of the testimony of Macchindra. It is a sort of contradiction which would bring the case within the third category laid down by the Supreme Court in Vadivelu's case, 1957 SCJ 527 = (AIR 1957 SC 614) viz., of a witness who is neither wholly reliable nor wholly unreliable, and would make the Court circumspect and look for corroboration to the evidence of such witness. (His Lordship further considered the other alleged contradictions and held them to be minor and not material).

7. There are several other discrepancies on account of which Mr. Jethmalani has attacked the veracity of Macchindra, and I must proceed to deal with the same. Mr. Jethmalani has contended that Macchindra's description of the incident is contrary to the medical evidence and that we should, therefore, take the view that he has fabricated the story after consultation with Shīvajī at Satara, having had 24 hours' time within which to do so. As I will point out when I deal with the medical evidence, in my opinion, there is nothing in that evidence which would discredit the testimony of Macchindra. On the other hand, I take the view that it corroborates his evidence in the trial Court. The next point which was sought to be made by Mr. Jethmalani was that the First Information Report of Macchindra starts with what he has characterised as a proved falsehood viz., that Ramchandra had asked Housabai and her companion to leave his house because of threats given to him by her brothers-in-law, a fact which Macchindra himself has not, in terms, deposed to in the course of his evidence. If one turns to the evidence of Ramchandra, he has, however, stated that he had asked them to look for some other house for their stay, as they stayed much longer than expected. Merely because Ramchandra has not, in terms, referred to threats by the brother-in-law of Housabai it cannot be inferred that no such threats must have been given to him. Ramchandra has not been asked in cross-examination whether any threats had been given to him by her brother-in-law. If he had been so asked and had denied the same, there might have been a strong foundation for the comment which Mr. Jethmalani now seeks to make against Macchindra. It is true that the onus of proving guilt rests, throughout the trial, on the prosecution and never shifts on to the shoulders of the accused, but if the accused wants to rely on a particular fact for discrediting a prosecution witness, that fact must be adequately brought out in the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution. Without risking the asking of that question to Ramchandra in cross-examination, Mr. Jethmalani cannot be heard to say that the mere fact that Ramchandra has not referred to any such threat shows that Macchindra is not an honest witness. Mr. Jethmalani has also commented on the fact that, according to him, Macchindra has tried to increase the distance from the site of the offence to the temple at Borban by stating that it would require half-an hour to run that distance, whereas the distance is only about a mile, as the Police Sub-Inspector has stated in his evidence. It must not, however, be overlooked that the Police Sub-Inspector has stated that that is the distance "by a given in the First Information Report, and as given by Macchindra in the trial Court. I am afraid, however, there is no substance whatsoever in the distinction which he sought to draw, either in regard to the manner in which they were all walking when the incident occurred, or in regard to the reaction of Macchindra and Housabai when they saw Madhav Buwa being hit on the head by accused No. 1.

8. There is, however, one point urged by Mr. Jethmalani which needs consideration and that is that whilst Macchindra claims to have given the names of his assailants viz., the three accused, to all the three witnesses whom he met shortly thereafter viz., Pujari Pandurang, Ramchandra as well as Nivrutti, none of those witnesses bears him out as far as the actual giving of names of the assailants is concerned. In this connection it must, however, be pointed that the said three witnesses all state that Macchindra had told them that the assailants were the brothers-in-law of Housabai. Mr. Jethmalani has contended that it is unnatural that the said witnesses should not ask for the actual names of the assailants from Macchindra, but I fail to see any unnaturalness in the same. Housabai's husband had only two full brothers and if any of the said witnesses knew their names, they may not ask for the names. If on the other hand, they did not know the brothers-in-law of Housabai, or their names, they might not be interested in knowing their names, so long as Macchindra had told them who the assailants were by describing them as the brothers-in-law of Housabai. I also do not accept the contention of Mr. Jethmalani that since the actual names of the assailants were not given by Macchindra to Pandurang, Ramchandra, or Nivrutti their evidence could not be said to be corroborative of the evidence of Macchindra.

9. It was next contended by Mr. Jethmalani that to none of the said three witnesses viz., Pandurang, Ramchandra or Nivrutti, did Macchindra describe the assault on himself or the injuries suffered by him, though he claimed to have described the whole incident.

(His Lordship examined the contention and rejected it. His Lordship then continued)

nesses whose presence was necessary in the witness-box for the unfolding of the narrative on which the prosecution case was based. None of them claimed to have seen the incident at all, or to have had anything to do with it and, under those circumstances, no adverse inference can possibly be drawn by the Court from the fact that these witnesses have not been called. (Further examining the contention, His Lordship proceeded.)

Mr. Jethmalani next contended that the witnesses viz. Macchindra, Pandurang, Ramchandra and Nivrutti are all persons belonging to a spiritual brotherhood being all Varkaris, and that spiritual relationship like natural relationship makes them partisan witnesses. That contention has only to be stated to be rejected, for merely because persons may owe loyalty or respect to the same religious institution cannot make them partisan witnesses. In this connection judicial notice may be taken of the fact that there are lakhs of Varkaris in this country and it would be a curious situation indeed, if in any incident in which they are involved or with which they are connected, they should be dubbed partisan witnesses merely on that account. The last criticism of Mr. Jethmalani in regard to the evidence of Macchindra was that his version of the incident is inherently improbable as there was no reason why of all places the first accused should be hiding in a canal, but I am afraid there is no substance whatsoever in that contention of Mr. Jethmalani. The first accused, if he intended to surprise Housabai and her companions, had to hide somewhere, and he may very well have found the hump of the canal to be a safe hiding place from which to ambush them.

10. Having given anxious consideration to the various points raised by Mr. Jethmalani in regard to the credibility of Macchindra on whose testimony the decision of this case largely depends, I have come to the conclusion that he is a witness of truth and that none of the contradictions pointed out or criticism levelled by Mr. Jethmalani are such as to warrant my discarding his testimony altogether. As already stated by me, in view however, of the fact that he has introduced in his evidence in the trial Court the alleged incitement by accused No. 3 which does not find place in his First Information Report (Exhibit 7), in my opinion, it is necessary that the Court should be circumspect and should look for corroboration of his testimony.

11-12. There is ample corroborative evidence in this case. Turning, first and foremost, to the medical evidence which, Mr. Jethmalani has stated, contradicts Macchindra's evidence, I cannot help feeling that, far from contradicting the same, it substantially corroborates the testimony of Macchindra. (After considering the medical evidence, His Lordship proceeded). That finishes with the medical evidence in the case and disposes of the contention of Mr. Jethmalani in regard to the same in so far as, in my opinion, far from contradicting the evidence of Macchindra, it corroborates that evidence.

13. I must now turn to the corroborative evidence afforded by the testimony of Pujari Pandurang, Ramchandra Gadhave and Nivrutti Bartakke

14. Before, however, I deal with their evidence itself, I must consider the legal objection which was raised by Mr. Jethmalani in regard to the admissibility of the evidence of Ramchandra Gadhave and Nivrutti Bartakke. It was the contention of Mr. Jethmalani that the evidence of these two witnesses cannot be said to be admissible under Section 157 of the Evidence Act, because it is intended to be evidence of former statements made by Macchindra which, the prosecution claims, corroborates his testimony in the trial Court, and such former statements would be admissible under Section 157 only if they were made "at or about the time when the fact took place" to which they relate. Mr. Jethmalani has further submitted that the word "at" in Section 157 connote statements which were part of the res gestae, i.e., the event or the transaction itself, whereas the words "or about the time when the fact took place" connote statements made very soon after the transaction which constitutes the res gestae. Mr. Jethmalani has therefore, contended that whilst the statements alleged to have been made by Macchindra to Pujari Pandurang might be admissible as having been made "about the time when the fact took place", the alleged repetition of these statements by Macchindra subsequently to Ramchandra Gadhave and Nivrutti cannot be said to have been made "about the time when the fact took place" so as to fall within the terms of Section 157, and the evidence of the said two witnesses in regard to the same is, therefore, not admissible. The objection raised by Mr. Jethmalani has to be dealt with in the light of the law on the point as laid down by the Supreme Court in the case of Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54. The statement in question in that case was made by Mt. Purni to her mother about four hours after the incident had occurred, the reason for the delay being that her mother was not at home when she went there, and that statement was sought to be admitted in evidence for the particular purpose of corroboration under Section 157 of the Evidence Act. In regard to the question whether the statement having been made four hours after the incident, fulfilled the condition laid down by Section 157 viz. as having been made at or about the time of the incident, the Supreme Court observed as follows (paragraph 29):—

“The question is whether this delay fulfils the “at or about” condition. In my opinion, here also there can be no hard and fast rule. The main test is whether the statement was made as early as can reasonably be expected in the circumstances of the case and before there was opportunity for tutoring or concoction.”

The Supreme Court then proceeded to hold that, having regard to the facts of that case, the statement did fall within the ambit of Section 157 of the Evidence Act and was rightly admitted in evidence. Applying the test laid down by the Supreme Court in Rameshwar's case to the facts of the present case, the question that I must proceed to consider is whether the statements alleged to have been made by Machhindra to Ramchandra Gadhave and Nivrutti Bartakke were made as early as could reasonably be expected in the circumstances of the case and before there was opportunity for tutoring or concoction. Machhindra was stranger to the locality and after having been refused shelter in the temple, it would be natural for a person placed in the situation in which he was, to run to the houses of people with whom he and his two companions had been putting up in Targaon. He could not really have gone to them earlier than he actually did. His going first to the temple is explicable, because he probably thought that the accused person might find him out and do harm to him if he went to the place of Ramchandra or Nivrutti where he had been putting up, but would not expect to find him at the temple, or in any event may not dare to enter the temple and inflict injuries upon him in the presence of Pujari. Having been refused shelter in the temple, he had no alternative but to go to the only two persons who were known to him in Targaon. Having regard to these facts, in my opinion, the statements which he made to Ramchandra Gadhave and Nivrutti were made as early as might be expected, and there is not the least doubt that there was no opportunity for concoction in the interregnum between his running away from the site of the incident and his narrating the incident to the said two persons. I, therefore, overrule Mr. Jethmalani's objection to the admissibility of the statements of Macchindra which were deposed to by Ramchandra and Nivrutti and hold that the same are admissible as corroborative evidence under Section 157 of the Evidence Act. I will now turn to the corroborative evidence of Pandurang, Ramchandra and Nivrutti.

15-17. (His Lordship considered the evidence of Pujari Pandurang, Ramchandra and Nivrutti Bartakke and held that it substantially corroborated the evidence of Macchindra. His Lordship then continued.)

18. Mr. Jethmalani sought to contend that the fact that the police had chosen to record the statements of Pandurang and Nivrutti under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure shows that the police thought that these three witnesses were all unreliable. In support of that contention, he has relied upon the provisions of Section 155(l) of the Evidence Act which lay down that the credit of a witness may be impeached by the evidence of persons who testify that they, from their knowledge of the witness, believe him to be unworthy of credit. I am afraid that section has no application at all to the present case, for there is no question of anybody having gone into the witness-box to depose that these three witnesses, or any of them, were in his opinion unworthy of credit. If a witness goes into the box and makes such a statement there would be two safeguards: (1) the statement would be on oath and (2) it could be tested by cross-examination. In my opinion, to draw such an inference against the credibility of a witness without anybody going into the witness-box in the manner contemplated by Section 155(l) of the Evidence Act would not be legitimate. It would be a proposition which in some conceivable cases might be dangerous to accused persons themselves. Opinion evidence is, as a general rule, not admissible and Section 155(l) is exception to that rule. Since the matter does not fall within the terms of Section 155(l), or any of the other sections relating to opinion evidence, in my opinion, such an inference would not be legitimate or permissible. I must, therefore, reject this contention of Mr. Jethmalani also.

